Editorial

"It takes a little courage,
  And a little self-control,
And some grim determination,
  If you want to reach a goal.
It takes a deal of striving,
  And a firm and stern-set chin,
No matter what the battle,
  If you're really out to win."

To be a good Methodist is to be either consciously a Christian or a sincere seeker of religion. These are the only two classes that our General Rules recognize. Read them carefully and see if this is not true.

* * *

Bishop Charles H. Brent, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, recently made the trip from England to the United States as a steerage passenger on one of the great ocean liners. He gave as his reason that he thought a Bishop's place was among the common people, and that common people were seldom found among the first class passengers. The Bishop might have added that steerage rates are more in keeping with a minister's income than the first class rates.

There is just one part of the militant Church that will be in evidence in the world beyond—the souls of the redeemed. That Christian or minister who comes at last with a record of having done many wonderful things in the way of church building, money raising, social reforming, and the producing of thought-provoking books or sermons, but who has not led one soul to Christ, will have very little upon which to base a claim of having been a pillar in the house of God. The real church builder is the one who leads souls to Christ, for he is adding to the strength of the Church Triumphant.

CARNEGIE AND CHURCH SCHOOLS.

Mr. Carnegie has expressed the opinion that the Church ought not to have anything to do with education. Mr. Carnegie is an expert neither in the domain of education nor in that of religion.

If he were not backing his views with five hundred millions of dollars, they might be dismissed as the vagaries of an ill-informed doctrinaire. But whilst Mr. Carnegie himself is harmless, Mr. Carnegie plus five hundred millions of dollars is a great menace to religious education in America. With an enthusiasm worthier a better cause, this authority on steel and armor-plate is doing his utmost to thoroughly and completely secularize our schools.

That his course advertises his ignorance of the history of institutions in the United States does not in the least abash him. Education is a child of the Church, born into the arms of the Church, protected and fostered by the Church, and if religion should withdraw its divine support, it is very much to be doubted whether education would persist. Harvard University, William and Mary College, Yale University, and all the pioneer institutions of our land, were established by the Church, and were intended to foster and propagate the religion of Christ. The church school preceded both the State institution and the private foundation.

The reason alleged for Mr. Carnegie's opposition to church schools is, that in a spirit of narrowness they will fetter free investigation. This assumption is not borne out by the history of our institutions. In fact, they have been much broader and more catholic in spirit than Mr. Carnegie himself. Theology is a branch of human knowledge, and is of the supremest importance. So narrow is Mr. Carnegie that he will not place on his Foundation an institution that has a school of theology. His reason for not giving aid to one of our needy Southern institutions was, that there were too many young men there who were studying for the ministry. In proscription this ironmonger has shown more narrowness than the narrowest sect in the world.

As a matter of fact, there is more liberty of thought to-day in our church schools than anywhere else. State schools, and institutions privately endowed, frequently dismiss professors because of their teachings, but this seldom happens in an institution owned by the Church. Prof. E. A. Ross was dismissed from his professorship because of his views on Oriental immigration, but it was from "Leland Standford" that he got his walking papers. Dr. E. Benjamin Andrews taught Mr. Bryan's views on money at Brown University, and he lost his position because the trustees deemed him economically unsound. Prof. Bemis was dismissed from Chicago University because he taught government ownership of natural monopolies, especially the ownership of gas and electric light plants. State Universities are notoriously hampered and restrained.

If the State schools dared to teach the history of St. Bartholomew's massacre or of the Spanish Inquisition, the Roman Catholic patrons would seriously object. Our State institutions are constantly in commotion because of new administrations that insist upon teachers being in accord with prevailing economic views. The schools upon the private foundations have no more freedom. The teacher of economics in Chicago University, when he begins to discuss Mr. Rockefeller, and his part in our industrial development, is apt to put his foot on the soft pedal. Public sentiment in the institution, were there no other compelling force, would not allow him to criticise the methods of the man, whilst profiting by those methods.

Jesus Christ taught men to reverence the truth. He said, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall set you free." In the best colleges of the Church you will find greater reverence for the truth and a more eager desire to know it, and more freedom in its utterance when found, than in all other institutions, whether supported by the State or private benefactions. The masses do not fear for the freedom of education under Christian auspices, but they do fear the demoralizing and seductive influences of Mammon on educational ideals.

Mr. Carnegie is the greatest menace to educational freedom that we have to-day.

LOOK TO YOUR FENCE CORNERS.

At this season of the year the traveller through the country may see along the road tall weeds and tangled grass. A ragged fence-corner or a weedy corn or cotton field is not an inspiration to the sojourner, and such sights are seldom pointed out by real estate agents to prospective land buyers. That growth which maintains the life of humanity is the result of careful cultivation. The field that produces the greatest harvest is the one that has the fewest weeds in it. The best farmer is the man who cultivates his crops and not the one who simply tries to kill the weeds. It is almost as important to stir the ground about growing crops where there are no weeds as it is to kill the weeds where they are plentiful. There is but one time that the farmer should go forth solely on a weed-killing crusade, and that is when his crops are made and he is bent on preventing the seeding down of his land with the useless growths, so as to protect future growing crops.

In the field of Christian culture there are two reasons for attacking the sinful ways that beset us day by day. One is because of an inborn, or heavenly born, hatred of sin, and the other is because of the love of heavenly virtues. The man who protects his growing Christian influence by weeding out the harmful habits and sins of his life and spends his time trying to grow in grace will do infinitely more for the salvation of the world than that one who, forgetful of the growth of Christ-likeness in his own heart, ever sees the faults of others and thereby becomes an iconoclast. As growing crops and clean fields are a better advertisement of land than are clean fence-corners, so are high Christian virtues better aids to the evangelizing of the world than a fruitless life of abstemiousness.

The man who spends his waking hours doing good is certain not to need to lay awake at nights worrying over the bad effects of his life. But there is one time in a man's life when he should look to the fence-corners of his Christian influence, and that is when the habits of his own life, that to him are harmless, are apt to seed down some young heart and choke out all the growth of Christian character that is implanted therein. Many a church member, simply because an occasional toddy did not hurt him, has left an influence that sent younger and weaker men to drunkard's graves. Many a professed Christian who is firmly established in his own habits of life has, by playing a game of cards at home, or for the sake of being sociable, started another on the road to a gambler's ruin.

The weeds in the fence-corners that go to seed by the side of rich fields destroy the future growing crops. It is the mildly sinful habits of influential church members that furnish the excuse for the ultra-worldliness of young men and young women, and consequently the fruitlessness of many churches. Look to your fence-corners, you who have lived comparatively fruitful lives! There may be damaging sinful habits going to seed there!

SOME DUNKARDS, AND OTHERS.

Last week, in Roanoke County, amid the mountains and under tents met the old original German Dunkards. They are of the most rigid sect. There are but something like 100,000 of them in the whole world. They hold to the exact text of the Scriptures. They had a foot washing Communion service, following exactly the recorded example of the Savior, the rich humbling themselves before the poor. They illustrated idealism and chivalry in their highest meanings, the strong doing menial service for the weak. As a matter of cold fact, there are no poor among the Dunkards; but those who have prospered largely went on their knees and washed and wiped the feet of their brethren who had prospered less, and so expressed humility and respect for misfortune and dedicated themselves to helpfulness. By the rules of the Dunkard Church every member is required to pay his debts scrupulously, to the last penny, and to labor for his living.

They are narrow people. They do not add much to the advancing thought of the country; but in their own deliberate and Bible-guided way, they think and analyze, and their judgments of men and proposed measures is in wonderful accord with the decisions of the best thinkers. They looked at the telephone thoughtfully at the session last week, and decided at last that members might use it, provided they are discreet. They considered carefully the matter of clothing for their members and decided that the women should hold to the plain, untrimmed snood over their heads and that men should grow their beards and wear straight cut waistcoats and coats with skirts to the knee.

That is narrowness. Most of us laugh at it. Yet we must face the serious fact that no Dunkard girl ever has been given to the ranks of the white slaves, and that no Dunkard boy is in any jail or penitentiary or ever has been accused of violating any law. No Dunkard ever has taken benefit of the bankruptcy courts. No one has had a fire which has not been obviously honest and not one of them has had a claim against an insurance company. Their religion forbids insurance. According to their doctrine, fire is the act and ordinance of God, to be accepted and submitted to.

"Absurd," the business man calls that. Yet the Dunkard girls marry early and have no divorces and from their Dunkard husbands give crops of sturdy boys and girls. The children are clean blooded, clean living, powerful in strength and courage and in productive power. They inherit traditions of hard and faithful work on the ground, and they get results. A great people! They build churches and vote for schoolhouses and good roads, after prayer and consultation with their Maker. They add to everything and detract from nothing. Patience and obedience are vital parts of their religious belief and habit.

A few years ago this kind of religion was general. Here in the South we were very strict. We believed in certain things, such as a personal God, laws made by him under which we would be punished; actual redemption and remission through the suffering and blood of the Savior, a personal Devil and an eternity of punishment for the wicked and of happiness to reward the good and penitent. Then we swung into the new thought, the theory that Christianity was merely a code of ethics and that the Bible was to be interpreted and applied according to the notions of each reader. So we have fallen, as a people, into a manner of loose living. Women show their persons, frequently in blind following of the fashion and without thought of evil, so as to excite the passions of men. The men disregard the ethical codes, to which they were born and do not hesitate to connive at dirty things to gather in dollars for themselves, to promote their own pleasures and vices. The churches and pastors are taught to wink at these offenses. We are told of universal forgiveness and happiness in the future life and taught that we may live as we please and at the last moment or on some general line of good fellowship may expect peace and happiness in the life to come.

Somewhere between the Dunkards and their rules of rigid obedience to church ordinances and the free thinking and resulting dissolute action we have in our cities, is the right way. It is the broad, free-living, free-thinking people who have daughters in the divorce courts, the police courts, centers of scandal; and sons in the penitentiary or runaway from home under clouds. It is people like these Dunkards, narrow, strict, iron-walled as they are, who make the real substance, power, moral force, producing strength of the nation, in substance and in strong and clean and producing womanhood and manhood. The Dunkard woman never is in the newspapers, except the brief notices when she is married or dies, but she lives long and peacefully and gives the world and the country a little host of strapping and clean-living daughters and stalwart sons, makers of things and fathers of families.

The Dunkards at Roanoke discussed whether they might use telephones in their homes and "cry sales" at public auctions. Strong people as they are they may be too narrow and rigid for this time. The task and responsibility of thinking people is to find and follow a midway and right course. Between the Dunkards, making their church rules from year to year and living to the text of the Commandments, examples and precepts, and those who interpret Commandments and teachings to suit themselves, there is narrow but safe ground, and those who seek it with honest diligence and earnest conscience may find it. But when we err it is far better for us and the part of the world surrounding us, that we err toward the Dunkard rather than toward the free thinkers and livers—calling themselves free, but really in the worst and most shameful of all bondage.—The Richmond Virginian.

A LONG TIME AGO

In the Old Field.

By Rev. J. A. Parker, D. D.

Fifty-seven years ago this scribe began to exercise his "gifts and graces" (such as he had) in this vicinity as an exhorter in the M. E. Church, South.

One of his first efforts, though not in the line of his licensed duties, was in the defense of the Divinity of Christ, in reply to a tirade by a minister of the "Christian Church." While such work was by some considered out of my line of duty, I was not punished for my bold dash, nor reproved.

Now, after the lapse of fifty-seven years, that exhorter has the privilege of preaching to the grandchildren and great grandchildren of those who heard that first effort. Not one who was present at that time is here now. All have passed over the river and their bodies sleep "in the city of the dead," where lie the bodies of father, mother, sister, brother-in-law, and many loved ones of the past.

Since that "long time ago," not only people, but churches, schoolhouses, lodge buildings, homes, and farms, have all changed places—people to their graves, farms to woods, and woods to farms. The places of my boyhood have become to me terra incogniter.

After journeying something near three hundred miles in Alabama, not a preacher of that long time ago was seen. Rev. L. E. Crawford, son of the late Rev. R. B. Crawford, one of my classmates, allowed me to occupy his pulpit at Enterprise, Alabama, on Sunday, Jan. 9. Few of the old guard remain; and as far as can be ascertained from information available at present, only one or two of the 1860 Class now remain on earth. Of the older set, Drs. Hamilton, Mitchel, Summers, Allen, and Mark Andrews, Blue, McCarty, West, McCoy, and many others have been transferred to the New Jerusalem Conference.

The young men in the ministry whom I have met seem to be worthy sons of their noble fathers, and good "bishop timber" still remains in the old Alabama Conference. The District Conferences are being held, and plans laid for a lively spiritual campaign during the summer months.

It is unfortunate to live in the past, but the environments of the hour awake so many memories which have long slumbered, it makes your correspondent feel like a relic of antiquity. Think of being introduced to the grandchildren and great grandchildren of those who were themselves children within your manhood's memory!

How brief is life! So soon we pass away! The lone grave where the remains of Rev. Joseph Calloway were laid in 1857 is now surrounded with scores, perhaps hundreds of graves, where there "is no device nor knowledge, nor wisdom." What of those who were unprepared "to meet their God?" As long as we have something to do in the future, time "is as yesterday when it has past, and as a dream in the night;" but when we turn away from the future, and look back at the happenings of fifty years, it seems like "a long time ago!"

This backward look at "the long ago," brings up some precious memories, but there is a future, and unfortunate is he who has no plans of love for that future. Every day of service for God and humanity should close with plans and purposes for "one more day's work for Jesus."

TWO HURTFUL EXTREMES.

Dear Dr. Meek: John Wesley said that there were two extremes in almost everything. I find myself, oftentimes, jumping from one extreme to another, in spite of my very best efforts to keep in the middle of the road. I think one of the worst extreme measures ever taken in our Church in its itinerant system is to take a young man, even out of the best of colleges or universities, and start him at the top without a proper foundation under him. It often causes him to overestimate his real ability, and there is no other way for him to go but downward. How many lives have been ruined by such extreme methods eternity alone can tell!

A man should prove himself faithful in small things before he is trusted with large things. If he is not faithful in little things, to be sure he will not be a success in handling big things. A man's capacity to handle large things is developed by his willingness to do small things and to do them well. A boy must learn to chop with a hatchet before he can swing an ax. If you give him a large ax while he is yet in knee trousers, he is apt to cut off his toes or flay himself in the head. Perhaps George Washington's ability to lead the great armies of the United Colonies was developed by the use of his little hatchet. It is hurtful, indeed, to put a man above what his real ability warrants in any work of life, especially in that of the Christian ministry. He will surely go down, for there is no other course for him. Water seeks its own level, and men seek theirs also.

To spoil a boy while he is young is a bad policy. It may, yes, it is very apt to spoil him throughout his entire life. I do not speak of personal experiences. So far as I am concerned, it has always taken the greatest effort to do the small things. In fact, I have never developed but the poorest capacity to do even little things. If at the end of my life I shall realize that I have succeeded in doing a few small things here and yonder, I shall be happy forever. There has not been a day in my ministry but that I felt the need of some one who could do my work far better than I could. Many have been the times that I asked my Heavenly Father to forgive me for my inability to do even the smallest things for him. One of the strongest evidences I have that the Methodist Church is divine is contained in this thought: Some little success has attended my very poor efforts.

But the other extreme I started out to discuss is this: You may keep a good man so long on a low plane that he loses confidence in his real ability, and finally becomes indifferent. A good and successful preacher said to me a few years ago. "I have reached the point where I do not care." I said, "My dear brother, dismiss that thought from your mind or it will ruin your future ministry and your future happiness." Which of the two extremes is the more hurtful? I am unable to say, but in my humble opinion, a middle ground is better than either. Bishop Smith truly said: "Of all the work of life, whether it be here or yonder, the Christian ministry is the best." Let the rich man glory in his wealth, and the great man in his fame, but there is a joy that attends the Christian ministry that never comes to them. If at the end of my life it can be truly said, "Lord, thou gavest me one talent, and beside it I have gained one other talent," the reward will be full and shaken down.

PLACE OF EMBARKATION.

By W. Fred Long.

Friends of the Mississippians now en route to the World's Sunday School Convention will be glad to know that most of the party are here ready to begin the long journey. The writer, spent one day each in Memphis, Cincinnati, Detroit and Toronto. At the latter place I was privileged to attend the Annual Sunday school meeting of the Board of Directors of the Province of Ontario, and deliver an address which did the speaker good. "Amen"! The trip through Ohio and up the Little Miami Valley was interesting; for each group of people was discussing the late floods, and many thrilling experiences were related. Such disasters are used of God to bring our whole people closer together and more sympathy will be shown our fair Southland when the Mississippi reaches flood stage again. We pray that the government may prepare to aid our section of the country more.

At Cincinnati Monday the thermometer stood at 104 degrees. There were a few heat prostrations. Detroit is a beautiful and historic city. Michigan has produced some great men and played an important part in the history of our country. Toronto is a clean and moral city. You cannot help but be impressed with the atmosphere of the place. It was here that I first looked out of my sleeper window on foreign soil, and the first sleeper I saw was "Gulfport." I sent up a prayer for all Mississippi and Gulfport.

I went down to-day and inspected the Steamer Scotion, upon which 380 Sunday school workers will embark tomorrow. She weighs 10,491 tons, is 515 feet long, 60 feet wide, and accommodates 400 cabin passengers. The deck is free from obstruction and will give us plenty of space. The public rooms—dining, writing, music—are beautifully furnished. She can go 16 knots an hour, and make the trip from here to London in 8 days. We will go the Northern route, touching New Foundland, and will likely see icebergs. We will go down the St. Lawrence River 1000 miles, leaving only about 2700 miles sea voyage. I am expecting great sights between here and Quebec where we go into the ocean.

I must say a word about the historic city of Montreal. It has a population of over half a million, and lies at the base of the mountain after which it was named. It is called the National Port and Commercial Metropolis of Canada. I saw a monument which was erected to J. C. Young—1816 to 1878—who is given credit for the foresight and plans of making the town possible. (Some day Mississippi will erect one to Capt. Jones, perhaps.) Churches are plentiful and beautiful. The most historic, "Notre Dame," was established in 1642, was rebuilt in 1678, and again in 1829. The present building is magnificent and impresses one who sits quietly within her great walls.

I went on a trolley ride to-day around Mount Royal. Quite a few went to her top on the elevated railroad. In 1898, while at Chattanooga, I refused to go up Lookout Mountain, which is higher and more thrilling. We seen many historic places and enjoyed the ride, but the trip will always be remembered by the sad accident and our providential escape on a St. Catherine street car. Some linemen were working on the truck wagon, fixing the trolley wires, they being out on a temporary extended platform. The conductor of the car just ahead of us failed to lower the trolley and two men were knocked off, one of them being killed outright by a live wire, and the other one sustained broken bones and a crushed skull. He will probably die before morning. We were within 40 feet of the place at the time. I saw the man fall. Kind providence kept the wire from reaching our car, which was open, trimmed in brass, and was a steel framed car. Had the wire have struck our car, it would have been death to us all.

Montreal, Quebec, Canada, June 20, 1913.

THE ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Alexandria District Conference was held in the Methodist Church in the hospitable town of Columbia, La., on June 12-15, 1913. Rev. H. W. May, the popular presiding elder, presided with his characteristic dignity.

The attendance was small. Seven pastors did not attend at all and others stayed only one day, besides but very few laymen were present and but two of the local preachers, who were not serving as supplies, came.

The time of the Conference conflicted with the closing exercises of the Columbia High School, which was very much regretted by the Conference and the citizens of Columbia, for it prevented having preaching services two nights of the Conference and kept the citizens from attending, as they might have done, the Conference sessions and preaching services.

There was preaching each day at 11 o'clock and Saturday and Sunday nights and, although poorly attended, the services were all profitable. The preaching was done by Dr. S. H. Werlein, B. H. Sheppard, C. B. Carter, W. D. Kleinschmidt, A. S. J. Neill, and J. M. Alford, in the order named.

The visitors to the Conference were, Rev. P. H. Fontaine, manager of the Orphanage, at Ruston; Rev. C. V. Breithaupt, of our French Mission at Houma; Rev. P. O. Lowrey, the Conference Sunday School Missionary; and President R. E. Bobbitt, of Mansfield Female College, all of whom represented their interests. Rev. D. H. Colquette, a member of the Arkansas Conference, and, of course, Rev. Briscoe Carter, presiding elder of the Ruston District, were present.

One promising young man, Richard O. Coorpender, recommended by the quarterly conference of the Alexandria charge, was granted license to preach. A matter of gratification to the Conference was the statement made by President Bobbitt that "there were more students in Mansfield College last session from the Alexandria District than from any other District in the Louisiana Conference."

Steps were taken to meet a long felt need when a Board of District Trustees was elected, namely: L. B. Baynard, T. L. Owen, W. R. O'Neal, R. R. Reditt, L. M. Huey, James Robertson, Otis Collins, Dr. Haas, and Wm. Grisom. The Board was authorized to purchase the old West Alexandria parsonage for a District parsonage. This property was tendered the District by the Alexandria church at a very low price and, with some improvements, will make a very creditable District parsonage.

The Conference unanimously passed a resolution requesting Dr. Meek to continue as Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate until the full time for which he was elected expires. Also a resolution requesting the Bishop and Cabinet to re-district the Conference at its next session and form at least one new district.

The following delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: T. W. Holloman, J. E. Williams, J. W. Tooke, and R. R. Reditt. Alternates: H. H. White and S. M. Barr.

An impressive memorial service was held in memory of Dr. C. W. Carter, an honored superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, and a member of this District Conference, who passed away last December.

The Conference was not only comfortably and pleasantly entertained in the homes of the good people of Columbia, but was tendered a most enjoyable boat ride on the scenic Ouachita River and a delightful reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Reditt, all of which was highly appreciated, as was the untiring and thoughtful attentions given by the courteous and accommodating pastor, Rev. C. M. Thompson.

Opelousas was selected as the place of meeting next year. A. S. J. NEILL, Secretary.

THE SHREVEPORT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

This body met at Pleasant Hill, La., June 20, and closed June 23. T. H. Morris was elected Secretary, with G. E. Cameron and J. C. Rousseaux, assistants. Nearly all of the charges were represented, and the proceedings were enlivened by many hearty, but good-natured debates over matters of interest coming before the body.

A summary of the reports of the pastors showed the following facts, eighteen charges reporting: Number of accessions by certificate, 205; vows, 25; total, 230; number of conversions, 13; 66 per cent of the membership attend religious services; 52 per cent take the communion; 5 per cent have family prayers; Sunday schools of the district grade, according to the Standard of General Sunday School Board, at 47 per cent; number of Epworth Leagues, 10; membership, 370; 38 per cent of assessment for ministerial support has been paid, and 13 per cent of assessment for Conference collections has been paid. Three charges pay their pastor weekly, 3 pay monthly, and 10 pay quarterly. Two charges report three young men having been called to preach. The small number of conversions, as well as the small number of homes having family prayer, was humiliating to the members of the conference, and they went out from the session determined to make a better record before the next Annual Conference. A revival committee was appointed, consisting of John Franklin, S. S. Halliday, with the presiding elder a member ex-officio, and chairman.

A movement to raise a loan fund for needy students at Centenary College was projected, in charge of the following committee: Paul M. Brown, R. H. Wynn, W. R. Harvell, C. M. Morris, and H. T. Young. Prof. J. S. Johnston represented Centenary College, while President Bobbitt represented Mansfield College.

Fred Evans Few, from the Zwolle charge, was licensed to preach and recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

Dr. John L. Scales was elected Lay Leader for the district.

The following, on nomination of the presiding elder, were elected a Licensing Committee: G. E. Cameron, H. T. Young, O. M. Posey, V. L. Fulton, J. S. Johnston.

The following delegates to the Annual Conference were elected: J. S. Johnston, S. H. Porter, V. L. Fulton, and Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr. Alternates: W. A. McKennon and S. V. Jordan.

The presiding elder, Rev. Paul M. Brown, is very popular among the preachers and delegates, and a resolution asking his appointment to the District for another year was slipped by him and unanimously passed.

The next session of the Conference goes to Queensborough which defeated both Logansport and Mooringsport for the honor.

Brothers Lowrey, for the Sunday schools, and Fontaine, for the Orphanage, were on hand looking after their interests. A fair collection for the Orphanage was taken. The Conference refused to recommend an assessment for the support of a Sunday school secretary.

Pleasant Hill gave abundant and delightful hospitality to the visitors, and the session was declared to have been both pleasant and profitable. It is hard to conceive of a more delightful session. THOMAS H. MORRIS, Secretary.

The adherents of the Bahain faith in the United States are now said to number 12,000. The fifth Annual Convention of this sect assembled in New York City on April 28. It was reported that 300 delegates, three-fourths of whom were women, were in attendance. It is stated that the foundation of the first Bahain temple in this country has been laid in Chicago.

The property holdings of Trinity College, at Durham, N. C., are stated to be well past the $2,000,000 mark. The Southern Christian Advocate says: "Trinity is now the best endowed college in the South, and will shortly be the best university in the South." The blight of church ownership does not seem to have retarded the growth of this splendid institution.

Dr. F. M. Thomas, the accomplished presiding elder of the Louisville (Ky.) District, recently delivered at Columbus, Ohio, the Memorial Address on the occasion of the decoration of the graves of the Confederate soldiers who died in prison at Camp Chase. His effort is reported to have been a notably appropriate and brilliant one. It seems to be Dr. Thomas' habit to do well whatever he undertakes.

The Woman's Journal is authority for the statement that there are 7395 women preachers in the United States. This does not look like the female Methodist circuit rider is such an unthinkable thing as some of our enthusiastic laity rights advocates are given to affirming. If the woman's rights movement in the Church succeeds, we may have such sisters on our hands far sooner than we now deem possible.

The agitation about higher criticism and ethical, rather than specific, doctrinal teachings in the Sunday school lessons has influenced several of the Presbyterian bodies to withdraw from the Methodist, Congregational, and other uniform publications, and to unite in a series of their own. The International Series of Lessons will be held on to; the change relates only to the comments on the lessons. The branches enlisted in this movement include the regular Presbyterian Churches, North and South, in the United States, the United Presbyterians, both of the Reformed Churches, and the Presbyterians of Canada.

The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago has made arrangements to teach Italian as a part of its curriculum. Native Italians who need perfecting in their own language in order to do Christian work among their own people, as well as English-speaking students who are planning to work among Italians, will especially appreciate this course of study. An experienced teacher, who holds a diploma from one of the leading Normal Schools of Italy, has been secured, and his service, like that of all the other Institute teachers, will be given gratuitously to enrolled students. This addition of Italian to its regular Bible, Music, Missionary and Practical Work Courses, has been made by the Institute because of the large amount of Italian immigration to our shores during the past ten years.

"Methodist Fraternity and Federation" is the name of a new book by Bishop E. E. Hoss, which has just been issued by the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. It contains seven addresses delivered by the Bishop on important occasions in which other Methodist bodies, as well as our own, were interested. In the list are included his fraternal messages to the Canadian Methodist Church in 1894, the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1900, and the British Wesleyan Conference in 1903. It is needless to say that these utterances and also the others contained in this volume are of a high order. We are glad to see them gathered together in a way that will guarantee their preservation, and which, we hope, will give them a wide circulation. The book may be had by writing Smith and Lamar at Nashville, Tenn., or Dallas, Texas, or Rev. C. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss. The price is $1. No up-to-date Methodist preacher can afford to be without a copy in his library.

"MODERN CHURCH BUILDINGS."

There is a growing demand upon the part of the people which should be encouraged for the best in construction, accommodation, convenience and economy in church buildings. This is strongly indicated by the desire of pastors and building committees and congregations to study carefully the different styles of architecture and plans of buildings before reaching a decision in the choice of a house.

I suggested to Mr. John Gaisford, 409-410 Goodwyn Institute, Memphis, Tenn., a Methodist architect, that I believed our people would greatly appreciate steriopticon views of church and Sunday school buildings, these views to show the different styles of modern church and Sunday school buildings, plans, different stages of construction, etc.

I had hardly hoped that Mr. Gaisford could afford to take the time to give his attention to this matter, but am advised that he has acted upon the suggestion, purchased a steriopticon, prepared many slides, and will be glad to use same in his Conferences with building committees in their effort to decide upon the proper kind of structure.

A SUNDAY SCHOOL APPEAL.

From the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Board.

Dear Sunday School Workers of the Conference: On account of the expense incident to maintaining a Field Secretary and the small returns from our Children's Day collections, at the close of last year the treasury of our Sunday School Board showed a deficit of $748, which deficit is still unpaid. And since to draw from this year's income to meet this deficit would seriously involve our work, we must raise the amount apart from our Children's Day collections, or the subscriptions for this year's support.

On the round of District Sunday School Institutes recently conducted by Dr. and Mrs. Hamill this matter was discussed by the Sunday school workers present and it was agreed that this deficit should be prorated among the several Districts and that the Sunday schools be asked to pay it without affecting the contributions to the Board for this year. We need your practical co-operation in this matter and that you send our Treasurer a contribution as liberal and as immediate as it is convenient for you to make it.

In addition to the contributions from Sunday schools, our Field Secretary, Rev. P. O. Lowrey, is authorized to bring this matter to the attention of such individuals as may be considered interested in our Sunday school work, and we shall appreciate contributions from all such persons. While the amount is small and an average of $10 each from seventy-five persons would pay it, at the same time it will greatly hinder our work unless promptly met, and we shall depend upon the friends of our Sunday school cause for their sympathy and help.

While our colleges are endowed and our public schools are supported by ample taxation, our Sunday schools for the present depend upon the voluntary contributions of their friends for financial support, and in the aggressive policy our Sunday School Board is now maintaining we must lean upon you for backing, or else we shall be forced to retrench. Our note at the bank is due Aug. 1, and an immediate response to this call is very much to be desired. We feel sure that we can depend upon you.

H. L. BAKER, Chairman,
T. W. HOLLOMON, Treasurer,
La. Conference Sunday School Board.

VICTORY.

When you can bear with any discord, any annoyance, any irregularity, unpunctuality (of which you are not the cause)—that is victory.

When you are forgotten, or neglected, or purposely set at naught, and you smile inwardly, glorying in the insult or the oversight—that is victory.

When you can stand face to face with folly, extravagance, spiritual insensibility, contradiction of sinners, persecution, and endure it all as Jesus endured it—that is victory.

When you never care to refer to your self in conversation, nor to record your works, nor seek any commendation, when you can truly "love to be unknown"—that is Victory.

When your good is evil spoken of, when your wishes are crossed, your tastes offended, your advice disregarded, your notions ridiculed, and you take it all in patient and loving silence—that is Victory.—Onward.

About six years ago a number of States enacted laws requiring railroads to charge but two cents per mile on passenger trains. The railroads secured injunctions in the several States and have carried the litigation to the United States Supreme Court. Last week the Supreme Court handed down decisions on cases pending from four States, and in each case the two-cent rate was upheld.

San Francisco is now a "rebuilt city. In 1906 approximately $400,000,000 worth of property was destroyed by an earthquake and by fire. On June 25 a building permit was granted in that city for the erection of a cottage to be built at a cost of $500, which was the fifty-thousandth permit granted since the great disaster, and brought the total valuation of new buildings in that time up to $400,000,000.

The old St. Louis Hotel building in New Orleans is crumbling. Its walls are no longer safe and the building is not fit for further use. It is one of the most famous buildings in the Crescent City. In it some of the greatest men of the world have been entertained. For many years it was the seat of government for the State of Louisiana, and at one time it was the finest hotel in the South, having been built in 1836 at a cost of $1,500,000.

Kaiser William of Germany is exerting his influence to stir up interest among the youth of Germany in athletic sports. On June 8, he dedicated the great stadium at Grunewald, Germany, where the Olympic games will be played in 1916. At the close of his dedicatory speech there were released 8,000 carrier pigeons, each with a closely written copy of the Kaiser's speech tied about its neck. In this way the German ruler expects his speech to be published to the whole nation.

Those having on hand parcel postage stamps may now use them on letters, and regular stamps will be honored on parcel post packages. Postmaster General Burleson recently explained that the reason the special stamps were used was in order to test the actual income from that branch of service and thus see whether it was a paying adventure. It has already proved its worth to the country, and the special stamps will be no longer issued.

On June 20 Dr. J. A. Danna performed an operation at the Charity Hospital in New Orleans that was of unusual interest. A child, because of too small a cavity in the skull for the development of its brain, had grown physically but not mentally. Dr. Danna removed two pieces of bone from the skull, each the size of a dollar, thus enlarging the brain cavity and giving that organ room to grow. If the child recovers and becomes normal as the result of this operation, doubtless a great many other abnormal children will be subjected to similar surgical treatment.

On June 17 an autograph letter from the German Emperor recognizing the Mexican government under Huerta was placed in the hands of Provisional President Huerta by Herr von Karsdoff, the representative of Germany in Mexico City. One by one the European powers are recognizing the Huertan administration. But the United States continues to withhold recognition. In view of the activity of the rebel forces, it is evident that the present Mexican administration is by no means secure in its tenure, but at the same time the delay on the part of this Government in giving it recognition is causing many American property holders in Mexico to lose heavily.

The general arbitration treaty existing between the United States and Great Britain has been renewed for five years. Existing treaties with France, Spain, and Italy have also been renewed recently, and other important treaties will expire this year, among which are: treaties with Japan, Mexico, Norway, Sweden, Portugal, and Switzerland. Considerable interest is felt in what may result in the formation of a new treaty between this country and Japan and Mexico. If the Japanese treaty is renewed, Japan may be forced by the mere signing of it to ignore the recent California anti-Japanese legislation. If a treaty of any kind is entered into with Mexico, it will involve the recognition on the part of the United States of the Huertan Government.

The term of Senator John Sharp Williams of Mississippi will expire on March 4, 1917, and that of Senator Vardaman of the same State on March 4, 1919. If the old plan of having the State Legislature elect United States Senators, after being instructed in a general primary election, had continued in force, both Mr. Williams and Mr. Vardaman would have been before the people for renomination in 1915, since the Legislature then to be chosen will hold over until 1920. But since the amendment to the Federal Constitution providing for the election of Senators by a direct vote of the people has been adopted, Mr. Williams' successor will probably be chosen at the time of the congressional elections in the fall of 1916, and Mr. Vardaman's successor at the time of those held in the autumn of 1918. We suppose that the party nominations for Senator will be made in the antecedent primaries when the party candidates for the Lower House of Congress are named. If so, it is likely that a State law will be passed requiring all the congressional elections in Mississippi to be held on the same day, which is not done at present.

AUNT PUSS.

She was one of those personalities, who, for their helpfulness and trustworthiness, were held in high and kindly regard in the domestic life of the Old South—a "Black Mammy," and not very black either, as she was of a light or copper color. It was thought that the blood of Indian ancestry coursed through her veins.

At the close of the War between the States she was, or had been, a family servant in the home of my wife's father, Col. R. A. Baker, near Summerfield, Alabama. She had a kind heart and a cheerful disposition, and a friendly word and smile for all around her. After freedom came, she and her husband, "Uncle George," were, at different times and places, hired servants in the writer's family. Uncle George was a representative type of his race, a good servant, respectful and helpful—our man of all work—and possibly an official member of the Methodist Church. Aunt Puss was an intelligent and devout Christian. She was a Methodist, and loved her Church and all Christian people.

She and her husband were with us for the longest time at Verona, Miss., coming to us while I was in charge of the Verona Female College. She never seemed to be very strong, but she was most faithful and reliable. She had charge of the dining room; and with our bright colored cook, Janie Topp, in the kitchen, and Aunt Puss in the dining room, it would have been difficult to find two more capable and faithful domestics to feed and wait upon a lot of hungry school girls and a family of healthy children.

I do not know that Aunt Puss was even a regular nurse, but Mrs. M. A. Reynolds, the sole surviving member of Col. Baker's family, says that 'her crib had a place in the cabin of Aunt Puss.' She was kind and pleasant with the children, and having charge of the milking of our cows, more than one of our little fellows under her training became good milk-boys. When the baby and smaller children were left to her care, with the strong and willing arms of Janie Topp to help, we felt that they were in safe keeping; and the wife and mother, without anxious solicitude, could attend preaching on the Sabbath.

Aunt Puss was more than a faithful servant—she was a true friend to the family. I do not know that she could have been more careful and faithful if our home and the affairs of the family had all belonged to her; and our children, whose early lives were touched by her kind and gentle virtues, cherish for her a lasting and loving remembrance.

Her religion was not merely a Sunday religion, but was a part of her everyday life. It was a glad and joyous experience. She walked close to God. Her cup of joy often seemed to be full to the brim, and her lips ready to voice her kindly feelings and her faith in God by such expressions as, "Yes, honey. Bless the Lord."

Mrs. Reynolds, above mentioned, said that Aunt Puss was 92 years old at the time of her death. In the early July days of last year, 1912, at or near Verona, she passed away from the cares and toils of earth, to her heavenly home, as we hope—the "Black Mammy" transformed into a bright and shining saint. A SONG OF CHEER.

By Emma C. Dowd.

A singer sang a song of tears,
And the great world heard and wept
For the song of the sorrows of fleeting years,
And the hopes which the dead past kept:
And souls in anguish their burden bore,
And the world was sadder than ever before.

A singer sang a song of cheer,
And the great world listened and smiled,
For he sang of the love of a Father dear
And the trust of a little child:
And souls that before had forgotten to pray,
Looked up and went singing along the way.

THE ABERDEEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Few towns in northeastern Mississippi have made a more substantial contribution to Methodist history than classic Verona. The delightful hospitality which was dispensed by its clever people on the occasion of the session of the Aberdeen District Conference which has just adjourned added greatly to the obligation we owe to this cultured community. Not only were their splendid homes, blending the gentle elegance of the old with the modern comforts of the new, freely opened for our entertainment, but apparently with their houses went their hearts. The thoughtful attentions and courtesies shown the visitors were not made a snbstitute for attendance upon the sessions of the conference, as is all too often the case.

Rev. J. W. Bell, the capable presiding elder of the District, seemed perfectly at home in the chair, and demonstrated the fact that one may be vigorously virile and considerately courteous at the same time. He never hurried the proceedings along, and yet accomplished in two days what often requires the half as much time more. Several quasi-connectional brethren added to the enjoyment of the meeting, among them being Dr. Watkins, President of Millsaps College; Professor Sullivan, of the same institution; Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, representing the Board of Education, and Rev. W. C. Carlisle, for the Board of Church Extension. To this list should be added Brother Bachman, who had brought the books and parchments, and Rev. W. M. Williams, the man with the large family. The last named made a touching plea for the children committed to his care, and impressed his hearers that he was eminently the best man for his position.

Resolutions were passed providing for the establishment of a District loan fund for the education of young ministers, by the sagacious provisions of which the trustees may, if the occasion should arise, convert such funds as had been advanced a student into a gift, absolving him from obligation to refund the money in case it was seen that in the particular instance it would work a hardship; commending the editorial administration of Dr. Meek and expressing the hope that he may be retained in the editorship of the Advocate; urging upon our people the necessity of work among the Negroes, and accepting the apportionment of $10,000 which the District is asked to raise toward the erection of the Hospital projected to be built in Memphis.

John R. Murff, a promising young man, was licensed to preach, it being understood that he would prosecute studies leading to his entering the ministry as a life work. The credentials of W. G. N. Whitehead, a local preacher of the M. E. Church, were recognized, and it is not improbable that he may be given work as a supply. George J. Leftwich was elected Lay Leader, and P. W. Shell, W. M. Reeves, Dr. S. H. Lawrence, and Brother Leftwich were elected delegates to the Annual Conference. The invitation of Prairie was accepted, and the next session will be held there.

Excellent preaching was done by Rev. J. E. Gault, Rev. W. M. Williams and Rev. Dr. A. F. Watkins, while the opening sermon of Rev. R. M. Evans, which had been especially prepared for the occasion, was of an unusual order of merit and was followed by a general handshaking service. It was felt that no small part of the harmony and earnestness of the conference was due to this forceful and stimulating utterance.

Addresses were made by Mrs. Charles Roberts, Mrs. T. M. Clark and Mrs. Victoria T. Hoyle, representing the Woman's Missionary Society, and by Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, who urged greater Sunday school activity. The capital contribution of these ladies is not acknowledged at the end of this report because it was of least importance, but by way of climax. It is customary to follow the bread and meat with the cake.

HOLLY SPRINGS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Holly Springs District Conference was held at Tula, Miss., 16 miles in the country from Oxford, June 17-19. More than 50 delegates and visitors were met at Oxford on the 16th and carried to Tula by the hospitable people who entertained the Conference. Others came from the surroundings circuits and there were present continuously about 75 persons beside the local congregations which packed the house for all religious services and remained well for the business sessions. The one verdict from a veteran who has attended 39 Conferences to the youngest recruit in the service was: "The best district conference I ever saw."

President A. F. Watkins, of Millsaps College; Rev. W. L. Duren, President of the Board of Missions; Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, Conference Secretary of Education; Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, Field Secretary of the Sunday School Board; Rev. W. M. Williams, of the Orphans' Home; and Rev. W. C. Carlisle, representing the Board of Churcb Extension, had a full day for presenting their several causes and the time was well spent. Tbey brought information and inspiration. They all spoke to a full house and had good attention.

The business sessions were presided over by that hustling young presiding elder, Rev. R. A. Tucker, who already knew what every preacher and official was doing and let everybody else know as he gave direction to reports, now turning on the light where it was wanted, now where it was not. In every way the district shows material advancement, and all felt new zeal as they noted the progress of Zion. Rev. J. D. Wroten was the courteous and efficient secretary of the body. J. G. McGowen, M. G. DuBard, J. B. Cole and R. X. Williams were elected delegates to the Annual Conference. M. G. DuBard was elected District Lay Leader. Potts Camp was selected for the meeting place of the next District Conference. The presiding elder was authorized to raise a loan fund for assisting in the education of needy and worthy young persons, said fund to be in the hands of the presiding elder of this District together with the pastors at Oxford, Water Valley, Grenada, and Holly Springs. Should misfortune overtake the borrower, the committee may make a gift of the amount borrowed. Resolutions were passed commending the Editor of the Advocate and requesting him to continue in charge of the paper.

While good attendance, generous entertainment, business methods, and enlightening addresses from the "connectionals" helped to make a good conference, the crowning glory was found in the character of the religious services. Plenty of time was given to opening services and nothing was permitted to interfere with the preaching of the Word morning and evening. W. G. Burks, T. H. Lipscomp, A. F. Watkins, R. O. Brown, J. R. Countiss, W. L. Broom, and T. H. Dorsey preached the seven sermons of the conference. Six of them were earnest, Scriptural, inspiring and helpful, and when the writer preached "the interest was good—and the text." It was a season of prayer, especially such prayer as is heard of the Almighty rather than recorded on the phonograph. It was good to be there, and we confidently expect revival fires to burn and church work to prosper in this District for the remainder of the year.

A VISIT TO SUMMIT, LIBERTY, AND ELSEWHERE.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis.

About the 22nd of May, wife and I left Jackson to visit friends and relatives of the long ago. I preached in Summit the fourth Sunday in May, where I was pastor in 1894-5. I built a nice church in Summit in 1894. Through tbe courtesy of our Israelitish friends, we worshiped in the Jewish Synagogue for a year or more before our church was ready for use, during which time many of the Jews came out and joined us in our worship. Some of the same Jews were out to hear me again. I preached to good crowds both morning and evening. We had a good time.

We also visited McComb and Holmesville. I served the church in Holmesville for five years, beginning in 1873. It was while we lived near Holmesville that we buried our precious little Ada, and later our precious mother and father, two among the best people that ever lived in Holmesville. From McComb we went to Liberty, my last charge as a pastor, where I bad served three years, built a nice church, and was superannuated in 1909. What a treat it was to us to be with our Liberty brethren and friends once more for a few days. I preached to a full house the first Sunday in June and had a good time. After spending 12 or 14 days it was hard to bave to say good-bye.

The preachers where we went—Lewis of Summit, Clifford of McComb, Ellis of Liberty, and Lewis again of Crystal Springs—are doing good work (as they always do), and are well received. Brother Ellis has more on his hands than he can do justice to, a wife and eleven children, and all the Methodists from South McComb, via Middy Springs and Osyka to six or eight miles soutbwest of and north of Liberty—enough work for two or three ordinary men. He is a four-year man and equal to almost any emergency. If his people will stand by him nobly, which I feel sure they will, he will render them good service, thougb he is overworked. I can sympathize with any preacher who has such a charge on his hands as Brother Ellis has. For many years of my ministerial life we had from eight to fourteen in family. My salary never went beyond $800. How did we live? Well, God knows. We pulled through somehow, thanks to the Good One. We tried to keep humble, prayerful, and faithful. The good wine was saved for the last. We are in our old age, having, in many respects, the best time of our lives. A good home on North West street in Jackson, with all modern conveniences, all paid for. God bless my brethren.

WORKING TOGETHER.

A million little sunbeams
Can make a pleasant day;
A million little raindrops
Can frighten them away.

Now, if all the little children
Should sit down and cry together,
What should we do, what could we do,
In such a spell of weather?

The sun might blaze in bluest skies,
'Twould be a dreary place
Until we saw a happy smile
On every little face.

WHAT A LITTLE CLOCK DID.

A little clock in a jeweler's window in a certain Western town stopped one day for half an hour at fifteen minutes to nine. School children, noticing the time, stopped to play; people hurrying to the train, after a look at the clock, stopped to chat a minute with one another. And all were half an hour late, because one small clock stopped. Never had these people known how much they depended on that clock until it had led them astray.

You may think you have no influence, but you cannot go wrong in one little act without leading others astray.

TWO CHILDREN.

The two children were playing in the yard at the home of Constance. She remembered the teaching of her parents, but she wished to play a certain game, and Taylor desired to play another game.

"You ought to play my game," said Taylor, "because I'm your visitor, and you ought to do what I want to do."

Constance realized the truth of this, yet she did not wish to give in to her little friend.

"Let's go over to your house, Taylor," she said.

MAKING A CAMP FIRE.

"How do the Indians make a fire without matches?" asked a boy who loved to 'play Indian.' Most of us have heard the answer to this. "The Indians use a flint and steel, as our own fathers and mothers did one hundred years ago, and before they had flint and steel they used rubbing sticks." We all have read about bringing fire out of two sticks by rubbing them together; but I find that most persons look upon this as a sort of fairy tale. or if they believe it to be true, they think it so difficult as to be worth no second thought.

All woodcrafters, I find, are surprised and greatly interested to learn that it is not only possible but easy to make a friction fire if you know how. I have taught many boys and men to do it, and some have grown so expert that they make it almost as quickly as with an old fashioned sulphur match. When I first learned from Walter Hough, who learned from the Indians, it took me from five to ten minutes to get a blazing fire—not half an hour as some books have it. But later I got it down to a minute, then to thirty seconds from the time of taking up the rubbing sticks to having a fine blaze, the time in getting the first spark being six seconds.

"Cracked Jimmy," in "Two Little Savages," gives very practical directions for lighting a fire anywhere in the timbered part of America thus:

"First curl a birch bark as dry as it can be,
Then some twigs of soft wood, dead, but on the tree,
Last of all put some pine knots to make the kettle foam,
And there's a fire to make you think you're settin' right at home."

If you have no birch bark, it is a good plan to shave a dry soft wook stick, leaving all the shavings sticking on the end in a fuzz. Several of these make a sure fire-kindler. Fine splinters may be made quickly by hammering a small stick with the back of the ax. Always put out the fire on leaving camp. It is a crime to leave a burning fire. Use buckets of water if need be.—Ernest Thompson Seton, in "The Book of Woodcraft."

WHY CHINA CANNOT HAVE TYPEWRITERS.

It is said that while typewriters are now made for use in nearly a hundred different languages, and they are sold all over the world, there is still one great nation which has no typewriters that write its tongue. That nation is China, and the reason is very simple.

The English alphabet has 26 letters. The typewriter produced for the Russian market is the largest made; but no typewriter could be made that could begin to be big enough for the Chinese language, which is represented by sign characters, of which there are about 50,000.

Of the great number of words found in the English language, only a small proportion are used for the ordinary purposes of speech, and the same is true of the characters used in the Chinese language; but the number of Chinese characters commonly employed is still far greater than could be put on any typewriter. So this nation of 400,000,000 has no typewriter in its own tongue.

But that does not mean that no typewriters are sold in China. More and more Chinese are learning other languages besides their own, and many Chinese merchants use typewriters.—The Presbyterian.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Meridian District Conference was held at Shubuta, Miss., beginning Wednesday morning, May 28. and closing Friday, May 30, at noon. Rev. J. T. Leggett presided, with G. S. Harmon and R. S. Stewart at the Secretary's table. All the preachers in the District, eleven local preachers and a goodly representation of laymen were present.

The preachers were cheerful and hopeful in their reports, and several reported successful revivals. There were interesting programs on Sunday school work and missions, eliciting some spirited discussions; and all other interests of the Church were before the Conference.

The Woman's Missionary Society was represented by Mrs. R. E. Johnson, the recently elected Conference President. The Society is to be congratulated on finding this talented woman to head its work. She is a born leader, and has the work of the Society in both mind and heart. As a speaker she is composed, forceful, resourceful, earnest, and has the rare quality of knowing just what she wishes to say, and saying it without circumlocution or repetition. Mrs. C. R. McQueen, the very capable District Secretary, represented the work locally, and Miss Rosalie Edwards, of the Woman's College of Meridian, delivered an earnest, heart-searching address on Missions.

Others who visited and addressed the Conference were Revs. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College; I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College; L. L. Roberts, Financial Agent of Whitworth; Robert Selby, Conference Secretary of Education; H. M. Ellis, Field Agent of the Methodist Hospital; W. M. Williams, Manager of the Orphan's Home, and M. M. Black, Conference Missionary Secretary.

Eri Howell, Daniel B. Barnard and Julius D. Williams were granted license to preach.

Rev. Walter E. Harrison was received as a local preacher from the M. E. Church. and was recommended for Admission on Trial into the Annual Conference. Wm. Haywood was also recommended for Admission on Trial and for local deacon's orders, but will carry his recommendations to the South Georgia Conference.

The following Lay delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: L. P. Brown. D. S. Harmon, J. W. Beeson and D. W. Heidelberg. Alternates: T. G. Bennett, C. W. Cochran. President J. W. Beeson, of the Woman's College of Meridian, was elected District Lay Leader.

Rev. John Paul was elected District representative of the Methodist Hospital.

The presiding elder nominated and the Conference elected the following Licensing Committee: J. R. Jones, H. A. Gatlein, John Paul, G. S. Harmon, and the presiding elder as an ex-officio member.

DeKalb was unanimously chosen as the seat of the next Conference.

During one of the early sessions Rev. B. F. Jones, the Conference host, presented the chair, for use during the Conference, a gavel made from a piece of wood taken from the house where Bishop Robert Roberts held the session of the Mississippi Conference in 1816. Both the speeches of presentation and acceptance were spontaneous and felicitous.

Those who preached during the Conference were Revs. A. F. Watkins, L. L. Roberts, R. S. Stewart, W. M. Williams and J. R. Jones.

The Conference host was indefatigable in his attentions and the hospitality of the good people of Shubuta was royal. The Conference expressed its appreciation by a hearty vote of thanks.

Several resolutions bearing on live subjects were passed and ordered published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The constant courtesy, forbearance and brotherliness of the presiding officer won for him the appreciation and affection of the preachers and laymen.

G. S. HARMON, Secretary.

MOSES—A CHARACTER STUDY.

The Bible contains the records of men who have either triumphed over the trials and temptations of this world and received their reward or who have made a miserable wreck of their lives by falling into sin. A man who falls because of inefficiency or deliberate fool-hardiness commands the contempt of his fellow men. But the man who triumphs over every difficulty and masters every trying circumstance and at last wears a victor's crown is a hero and is as such worshiped or reverenced by his associates and admirers. Of the men spoken of in the Bible there are such as Judas Iscariot, Pilate, Ananias and others, whose names are never mentioned except with a feeling of contempt. The avariciousness of Judas, the moral cowardice of Pilate, and the hypocrisy of Ananias are characteristics to be despised.

But what of the heroes of the Bible? The eleventh chapter of Hebrews gives a long list of those "who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens." A few months ago the adults in the Sunday Schools, and all classes that do not use the Graded Series, began the study of these great heroes. First, the character of Abraham was portrayed and Sunday school students were given a lesson in faith. Then the strong elements in the lives of Isaac, Jacob, and Joseph were brought out in a number of lessons. In each of these lives was found certain fundamental elements of character that enabled them to stand in the face of tremendous odds and endure to the end. But this study of Bible heroes did not end with the story of Joseph. Beginning next Sunday, the greatest character of the Jews before the time of Christ, Moses, becomes the subject for study, and for many weeks the remarkable history of this remarkable man will be discussed.

The life and works of Moses have had more to do with the shaping of the history of the world than the life and works of any other man except the Son of God. As a writer of law, Blackstone, the great English commentator, credits him with being the greatest contributor to the science of jurisprudence. As a medium of divine miracle-working power, judging from the number of miracles performed, he was the greatest of all the sages and prophets of old. As a magnetic leader of the people, there is no recorded instance in sacred or profane history of any man who was his superior. He took a race of serfs, led them out of the land of their bondage, kept them together as a united band for forty years in the wilderness, during which time he transformed them from grumbling and panicky slaves into a nation of strong men and women, able to conquer and possess a warlike land. As an instrument in God's hands he was supple, bending to the will of God at almost every demand, and, as a result, through him, God wrought more for the uplift of humanity than he did through any other Old Testament character.

But there must be a reason for all the greatness of Moses. The brief account of his being found by the daughter of the Egyptian king and raised as her son, his unfortunate altercations with the Egyptian taskmaster and, the day following, with one of his own race, his hasty flight and final marriage to a daughter of a priest of Midian, and subsequent life for forty years as a shepherd, do not give us sufficient light, without careful study, to enable us to discover the secret of his greatness. Possibly the key to the mystery of his greatness lies in two things: First, his own mother was his nurse, and second, he was permitted to sit at the feet of the greatest masters of the world as a student.

Of the two forces that molded his character, the greater is unquestionably that of the privilege of having his own mother as his nurse. During his childhood he was taught to worship the living God, and so firmly was the faith of Abraham implanted in his heart that no prospect of royal preferment was able to tempt him to deny his race or religion. How beautiful is the brief comment of the author of Hebrews: "By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt." Such a character was none other than the result of the teachings of a godly mother. The name of Jochebed, the mother of Moses, should not be omitted from the list of the greatest mothers earth ever produced.

But it must be remembered that Moses enjoyed the privileges of a son of a royal mother, as well as the teachings of a godly mother. We dare say his knowledge of the sciences, of history, of tradition, as well as of law, was equal to any of his age. Great scholarship is a priceless heritage, provided it is acquired upon a foundation of unshaken faith in God. Moses, the scholar, was subsidiary to Moses, the man of God. Faith must ever take rank over knowledge. By learning man can grip the master achievements of earth's greatest men, but by faith man can grip the limitless creation of the King of kings. By learning man can command the secret forces of this earth and mount up to the pinnacle of earthly bliss, but by faith man can command the power of God and mount up to the heights of the glory of Heaven. By learning we have blessings in this world, but by faith we have blessings that increase in brilliancy as the days of life lessen and in the life beyond break upon the released soul of the saved with divine effulgence. Who would not prefer Moses the man of God to Moses the scholar? Who would not give the Christian mother a place in this world of greater importance than the professor of higher learning?

If the pastors, Sunday school superintendents, and teachers of classes fail to glorify God by bringing home to the hearts and minds of the scholars in our Sunday schools the great truths taught by the life of Moses, whose life they begin to study next Sunday, they will have neglected one of the greatest opportunities of their lives.

THE PREACHERS' INSTITUTE.

The news comes to this office of a splendid attendance at the Seashore Campground upon the occasion of the Preachers' Institute. The enrollment this year is gratifyingly large, and the character of the work is up to the mark. The preachers are loud in their praise of Prof. Cope, of Dr. Rice, and of Bishop Candler. The sermon last Sabbath by the Bishop was said to have been a great deliverance. Its effect was pentecostal. Bishop Candler has wonderful power in tearing the mask from shams, in puncturing the bubbles of pretense, and in bringing to bear upon the problems of life a genial common sense. Fads and faddists fear him. His homely wisdom has saved many of our younger men from wandering in erratic orbits. President Robert Selby, and the Treasurer, Rev. W. W. Holmes, both seemed happy over the prospects for the Divinity School.

LEGISLATION PLUS LAW ENFORCEMENT.

There are some social elements the Christian can seldom harmonize with, even on minor issues. We speak particularly about that element that derives its ideas and impulses from the manufacturers and sellers of intoxicating liquors. The saloon keeper may be big-hearted, liberal, and according to the ideas of the world, charitable. The brewer may be in his way a philanthropist. But the business of making and selling liquor is now so nearly in the hands of lawless men that to be the friend of the saloon business is to at the same time brand one's self as an enemy to law enforcement. There is scarcely a saloon keeper who does not regularly violate the known laws of the land, and the keeper of the dive and blind tiger, and the boot legger are recognized criminals.

To say that saloons should be kept open in order to prevent a worse condition of blind tigers, is to accuse the saloon element of being a lawless gang that has no respect for the statutes of the State. To say that it is impossible to enforce the law is to accuse the friends of temperance of being a crowd of weaklings whose cowardice is as contemptible as are the law violations of the lawless.

Louisiana, especially New Orleans and the southern portion of the State, is in the grip of the rum monster. There is a concerted movement on foot to legislate the saloon out of the State. That the people may have more confidence in the success of such a movement, let us in every parish in the State, organize a live law-enforcement league, that will compel the enforcement of the laws we now have. There is not a saloon in Louisiana that can keep its doors open and conduct its business on a profitable basis and keep the letter of the Gay-Shattuck Law. The friends of temperance who will not become active in enforcing the laws that now exist can not be depended on to enforce absolute prohibition. We confidently believe that the first duty of the forces that expect to rid this State of the liquor business is to command the confidence of the voting public by showing that existing laws can be enforced, and consequently additional laws will be enforced.

We believe in the great cause of temperance. We are constitutionally against the saloon and every auxiliary to its business. We believe that enforced prohibition is a duty that right living, strong men owe to their weaker brothers. We hail with pleasure the day when this whole land shall be free from the curse of the saloon. Our hats are off to the brave men who are leading the fight against the organized liquor traffic. But we would call the attention of the advancing hosts to the fact that the battle will not be entirely won when the ballots are counted. The greatest task of prohibition is the enforcement of the prohibitory laws, and now is a good time to develop the law enforcement forces by having them train their guns on the guilty saloon keepers.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. R. A. Meek, the Editor of the Advocate, has been out of his office since Saturday, June 21, having been called to North Mississippi by illness in his family. This will explain to his correspondents why their communications have remained unanswered.

Rev. E. S. Lewis, of West Point, Miss., attended the great Missionary Conference at Waynesville, N. C., last week.

Dr. S. H. Werlein, of Alexandria, La., was a pleasant caller at the Advocate office last Tuesday morning. He was in the city visiting relatives.

According to a secular news announcement, Rev. J. A. Wells, pastor of the Holmesville (Miss.) charge, will lead in a revival meeting that is to begin at Barto, Miss., on July 6.

Bishop Candler's new book entitled, "Practical Studies in The Fourth Gospel" is just issuing from our Publishing House at Nashville, Smith & Lamar, Agents. It is sold at $1 a copy post paid.

Dr. J. W. Moore, pastor of the First Methodist Church of New Orleans, will deliver the address at the laying of the corner-stone of the new church at Crowley, La., next Friday, July 4.

Rev. H. S. Spragins, the presiding elder of the Greenville District, was one of the North Mississippi representatives at the Missionary Conference that was held at Lake Junaluska, N. C., last week.

Dr. John T. Sawyer has been secured by the Pastor of Louisiana Avenue Church to fill his pulpit every Sunday in July at 11 a. m., and 7:45 p. m. Dr. Sutton will be absent at Seashore Camp Meeting during the month.

Rev. T. M. Bradley, the pastor, recently closed a helpful meeting at Rosedale, Miss., in which he had the able assistance of Rev. H. S. Spragins. There were six additions to the Church, and the entire membership was greatly strengthened.

Dr. J. T. Sawyer filled the pulpit at Felicity Street Church, New Orleans, last Sunday both morning and night. The Doctor is at home in "Old Felicity," as he calls it, for he served that congregation with great acceptability many years ago.

Brother C. J. Stapp is in great favor with his people at New Augusta, Miss., where he is enjoying what he chooses to call "the best year in his ministry." Some additional subscribers to the Advocate from his charge is increased evidence of the prosperity of Zion at New Augusta.

Rev. J. E. Sampley, who has been in Dallas, Tex., for the past two months drinking the Gill's Mineral Well water in an effort to regain his health, writes that he is greatly improved and thinks that he will be ready to resume regular work this fall. He left Dallas last week for Holland, Texas, which is his present address.

Rev. L. W. Cain, our pastor at Leland, Miss., has been engaged to do the preaching at the Oxford, (Miss.) camp meeting which begins on August 2. Brother Cain is one of the most successful pastor-evangelists in Mississippi and will no doubt lead the Oxford camp meeting hosts to victory this year.

Rev. F. R. Sweeney, the faithful shepherd of our Church at Wilson, La., has been voted a vacation by his official board. He passed through New Orleans last week en route to the Seashore Camp Ground, where he expects to remain for several days. While in the city he paid the Advocate office a pleasant call.

Rev. I. L. Peebles has had published in pamphlet form a very profitable discussion of the question of baptism under the title of "Sprinkling, Pouring and Immersion Discussed." The book sells regularly at ten cents a copy, but Brother Peebles will sell it in lots of one dozen or more to pastors for distribution at 4½ cents a copy.

Rev. Mr. Wakefield, a minister of the Northern Methodist Church and a member of the firm of The Baker, Wakefield Cypress Lumber Company of which Mr. H. L. Baker, President of the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Board, is the active manager, occupied the pulpit at the Parker Memorial Church last Sunday evening.

Rev. J. W. Booth and wife, Rev. A. S. Lutz and wife, Rev. H. N. Brown, and Rev. C. D. Atkinson composed the Lafayette (La.) District delegation at the Seashore Camp Ground this week. Brother Booth honored this office with a brief call on his way over and gave a good report of the works of our Church at Jeanerette.

Rev. S. D. Howard, the genial hearted pastor of the Baker (La.) charge, passed through New Orleans last Thursday on his way to Varnado, where he is now engaged in a revival meeting with the pastor, Rev. H. C. Murphy. Brother Howard favored the Advocate office with his presence for a few minutes, and gave a good account of his work at Baker.

Rev. R. O. Brown, the pastor, began a revival meeting at Holly Springs, Miss., last Sunday. On Tuesday he was joined by Rev. P. H. Davis, an evangelist of Franklin, Ky., who has held a large number of very successful meetings in the South during the past few years. Brother Brown has arranged for special music throughout the meeting, and a sweeping revival is anticipated.

A letter from Rev. W. W. Graves, of Lake, Miss., dated June 26, contained the names of three subscribers to the Advocate and the following cheering words "We are moving along fairly well up here in the midst of dry weather and the boll weevil." Things religiously are accustomed to moving along well where Brother Graves is the pastor, whether the weather is dry or wet.

In a personal letter from Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Birmingham, Ala., he states that his time is in such demand for revival meetings that it would require three men to fill the engagements. We are not surprised that this worthy brother finds his services in demand, for the one thing the average pastor always wants is a successful evangelist to lead his people in revival services.

The following message from Rev. W. W. Drake, of Baton Rouge, La., written on a postal card, dated June 29, and bearing the Waynesville, N. C., post mark, was received at the Advocate ofoffice Tuesday morning: "We are having a great Conference. It reached a climax this morning when a collection amounting to $105,000 was taken. This amount will certainly be increased to-morrow."

Rev. J. H. Foreman, of Bogue Chitto, Miss., and Rev. J. C. Lay, of Simmesboro, La., were callers at the Advocate office on June 25. They were on their way to attend the Divinity School at the Seashore Camp Ground. The Editor was unfortunate in that he was out at the time they were in and did not have the pleasure of meeting them, but the Publisher was present and extended to them the hospitality of the office.

Dr. J. C. Ballard, of Bay St. Louis, Miss., is the newly elected Lay Leader of the Seashore District. He has already proven his fitness for the work he has been called to do. On June 22 he made his first public appearance in his new capacity, and made a most favorable impression upon a large audience in our church at Biloxi. In the afternoon of the same day he delivered an address to the old soldiers at Beauvoir.

Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of Greenville, Miss., is assisting the pastor, Rev. L. W. Cain, in a revival which began at Leland last Sunday. Mr. I. N. Price, of Chattanooga, Tenn., is leading the music, and every plan has been carefully worked out to make it possible to have a great revival meeting. With Brother Lagrone, who was for some time the Conference Evangelist of the North Mississippi Conference, in the pulpit, and all arrangements in the hands of such a pastor as is Brother Cain, the results of the meeting are almost assured.

Rev. L. M. Broyles, formerly of Mississippi, but now a resident of Ft. Smith, Ark., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate complained that without the weekly visit of the home paper he became lonesome. We are glad there is a reason to cause Brother Broyles to continue to read his former Conference organ. The Publisher appreciates subscribers from any part of the Connection, and, indeed, the Editor is not unmindful of the fact when his former readers invite the paper to follow them into new fields.

At the recent session of the Holly Springs District Conference, a lucid account of which, written by Rev. J. R. Countiss, appears in another column of this issue, the following were granted license to preach: Wister D. Bennett, Rufus G. Moore, George W. Russell, and Walter B. Atkinson. Three of the licentiates are young men who plan ultimately to enter the regular traveling ministry. J. M. Carpenter and C. T. Floyd were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial at the same session.

Rev. C. C. Wier has a firm grip on the hearts of his people at Morgan City, La., where he is the popular pastor, and the work of our Church there is prospering. The Berwick congregation has had electric lights installed in the handsome new parsonage which was finished last year under the pastorate of Rev. H. N. Brown. The Morgan City Home Mission Society has on hand funds with which to install a complete bath room outfit. Both the Morgan City and Berwick Sunday schools recently celebrated Children's Day.

The old Gretna church property that has stood empty for many years was sold last week for the consideration of $1400. The money has been placed to the credit of the McDonoghville church, which, since the incorporation of Gretna and McDonoghville as one commonwealth, is now in position to serve both fields. A committee has been raised by the McDonoghville quarterly conference for the purpose of devising ways and means to enlarge the present church building and make it adequate to accommodate the congregations that now fill the house.

From a fine brotherly letter written to the Editor by Brother W. M. McIntosh from Okolona, Miss., we take the following: "We have just opened up here with Brother Holder and the other pastors in a union revival meeting. Our prospects are fine. The meeting began yesterday (June 15) and the revival spirit is here already. The Lord is blessing me these days. I have had some of the biggest meetings of my life this year." We are glad to learn that Brother McIntosh is being used of the Lord in winning many souls to Christ.

A farewell reception was tendered Dr. and Mrs. R. H. Wynn by the people of Crowley, La., on the evening of June 17 at the home of Mrs. Clark of that city. In addition to the ministers of all the churches in Crowley being present, Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir, the newly apointed presiding elder, was present by special invitation, and the occasion was more than a farewell to Brother Wynn, it was a welcome to Brother Hoffpauir. Reports from Crowley are to the effect that the evening was a most delightful one, and that the sorrow of giving up the old and much loved presiding elder was in a measure overcome by the presence and happy affability of the new one.

The following sad message reached our office last Monday, bearing the date of June 27, and signed by Rev. T. J. Hopper, of Cedar Bluff, Miss.: "We buried little Lois yesterday. She died Wednesday morning at six o'clock. We feel sad and lonely, and ask the prayers of the readers of the Advocate." We are indeed sorry to learn of this sad bereavement. The angel of death always comes into the home of love as an unwelcome visitor, but his advancing step cannot be halted. We can only grieve with those who lose their loved ones and point them to God whose consolation is their only help. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of Starkville.

On June 23 Sister Morehead, wife of Rev. H. C. Morehead, an honored superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference, who resides at Sidon, Miss., died. Her remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Grenada on June 25, an impressive funeral service being conducted by Rev. O. P. Armour, assisted by Rev. J. R. Countiss and Rev. J. A. Hall. She was a good woman and was loved by every one who knew her. Her husband is in deep sorrow. May God comfort him by his gracious presence and give him bodily strength and spiritual peace until that time when he chooses to call him to join his beloved companion on the other shore.

The following happy announcement, written by Rev. Robert W. Vaughan, of Mer Rouge, La., who was for four years the guiding hand of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage at Ruston, will bring a flutter of happiness to the heart of every Advocate reader in Louisiana: "I am sure that you will rejoice because of the donation of a Superintendent's Home for the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage by Mr. and Mrs. Lawson Higginbotham, of Mer Rouge, La. This home is to be erected at once and dedicated to the memory of their sweet little daughter, Edith, who was very suddenly taken from them by death in the early part of this year."

Bishop Mouzon, who was announced to preach on last Sunday morning at the First Methodist Church of New Orleans, passed through the city last Thursday and stated that other engagements rendered it impossible for him to remain in the Crescent City over Sunday. Dr. J. W. Moore, the pastor, filled the pulpit, and we are informed that he preached as big a sermon as a Bishop could have preached. His theme was "Christian Forgiveness," a subject which he informed his congregation that he felt it needed to hear at that time, in view of the fact that he had announced a Bishop to preach and then did the preaching himself.

Rev. J. B. King, pastor of the Deasonville (Miss.) charge, is now at Auburn, Miss., his boyhood home, taking a much needed rest. Before leaving his charge he attended a fine Children's Day service at Fletcher's Chapel, one of his appointments, and the collection amounted to $15.14. He reached Auburn in time to attend a similar service at King's Chapel, which he reports to have been a most successful occasion. During his absence from his charge, Rev. Hugh Castles, a local preacher, is filling his appointments. Brother King has not been in good health for some time, and we trust that his summer's vacation may afford him complete rest and recuperation.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson passed through New Orleans last Monday and favored the Advocate ofoffice with a brief call. He was returning from Nashville, Tenn., where he attended the Vanderbilt Biblical Institute, which he reported to be one of the best ever held there. On his return he stopped a few days at the Seashore Camp Ground where the Divinity School is enjoying a most profitable session. Brother Atkinson says that the walls of the new church which he is building at Crowley, La., are about half way up, and that the corner-stone will be laid next Friday, July 4. Bishop Candler was announced to deliver the sermon at the laying of the corner-stone, but on account of pressing duties demanding his presence elsewhere he was forced to cancel the Crowley engagement.

We take the following from the Texas Christian Advocate concerning Dr. Theo. Copeland, pastor of the Cabanne Methodist Church of St. Louis, Mo., and well known by Advocate readers because of the revival meetings he has held in Mississippi: "Dr. Theo. Copeland, of St. Louis, spent the past ten days or two weeks in Texas, visiting his old friend, Rev. J. S. Bowles, of Midland. While there he held a meeting for our Church in which there were forty or more conversions and accessions to the Church. Dr. Copeland is one of the able preachers and successful pastors in St. Louis, and a most brotherly man. We greatly enjoyed a visit from him on his return from Midland. We will always be glad to welcome him when he comes this way."

TRAINING THE JAPANESE CHILD.

According to Frances Little, author of "The Lady of the Decoration" and "The Lady and Sada San," Japanese mothers violate many of the theories of our modern child experts. In an article on "The Training of a Japanese Child" in the June Century, she says that the typical Japanese baby is an absolute autocrat in the family to which he comes, and his slightest wish is gratified the moment he expresses it. The little Oriental eats when and what he wants, and makes no pretense of obedience. He is idolized by the entire household, who think that everything he chooses to do is right. Yet this regime of lawlessness seems to agree with him, for he thrives and grows fat. But as he grows older, he is gradually taught strict discipline and dutiful respect for his elders.

STICK TO IT.

Too many of the young people of to-day will begin a task, no matter what it may be, from the preparation of a Latin lesson to the weeding of an onion bed, do perhaps half of it, then stop and begin something else, and probably never think of it again. It is a mistake for parents to allow such proceedings on the part of their children, but it is also a mistake for the young people to allow themselves to form such habits.

Boys, don't be quitters. Persevering people are the ones who win the golden laurels of success. The great men of our country, our lawyers, our statesmen, our inventors, and many of our presidents have achieved their greatness and built up their characters and reputations by persistently keeping at whatever they undertook. A person can never become a great writer or an orator without much perseverance in pursuing his vocation, and by setting high, and working for his aim in life.

When you have a lesson to be learned, keep at it until it is mastered. When you have a task set before you, stick to it until it is finished. Don't be a quitter!—The American Boy.

JAMES H. DULANEY was born in Jefferson County, Ala., on Oct. 18, 1826. He came to Mississippi in the year 1869. He professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Well's Chapel, on the New Albany Circuit, in the year 1877. Brother Dulaney lived a devoted Christian life until the day of his death. He was married to Mrs. E. A. Cole on Feb. 1, 1874. Brother Dulaney was a great lover of children, and all of the children of the community dearly loved him. He loved his Church, believed in its doctrines, and was a liberal supporter of the cause of Christ. Brother Dulaney was a great sufferer for eight years—almost an invalid for the greater part of the time; but no man ever bore his afflictions with more Christian fortitude than he did. He died on May 3, 1913, in the full triumph of the Christian faith, and went home to heaven. After the funeral service, conducted by the writer in the presence of the family and a great host of friends, all that was mortal of him was laid to rest in the cemetery at Well's Chapel to await the resurrection of the just. J. A. GOAD.

ALEX McKENZIE was born in Perry County, Miss., March 22, 1850, and died at his home near Mahued on June 17, 1913. His life was spent in his native county. He was a man of sterling qualities. He did his own thinking and had the courage to stand by his convictions. He was an efficient steward in our church at the time of his death, having joined the Church in early manhood. His home was always open to his pastor, and he never failed to let him know that he was interested in him and in the Church. In middle life he was married to Miss Alice Cook of Jasper County. They lived happily together until his death. He leaves a wife, two daughters, one son, three brothers, three sisters, and a host of friends to mourn his loss. But they are not without hope. He died as he had lived, with a strong and abiding faith in his Lord. As the end drew near he would talk about leaving us, but showed no signs of being afraid to meet his God. He was a good citizen, a true friend and brother, kind and devoted to his wife and children, and loyal and generous to his Church. We shall miss him here, but if we are true to God we shall see him again after awhile. C. J. STAPP, P. C.

THE REVIVAL AT MILLSAPS.

The annual revival services of the Young Men's Christian Association of Millsaps College were held this year early in April, instead of in November as heretofore. The preaching was done by Rev. H. B. Watkins, of Natchez, and the singing was led by Brother Seevers of Meridian. A gracious revival it was! While its effectiveness was not measured by the number of converts, yet it was a revival of those who were professing Christians. Scarcely have we known a meeting to do more good in bringing those who listened to the sermons into a deeper appreciation of the convicting power of God and his power to save. Brother Watkins was at his best, and preached soul-stirring sermons. The Young Men's Christian Association has done a good work this year, as it has in the past. There is no influence anywhere stronger or more effective than the college branch of this organization.

K. C. B. TEAM.

It has been our pleasure to come again within the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference where we started in the ministry. In response to a call from Brother J. B. Randolph we opened a meeting in Como the first of June and God gave us a great victory there. Brother Randolph is in high favor with his people. He has recently completed a most beautiful church, which is one of the best arranged that I have ever seen. Como has a very fine set of people, and under the able leadership of their pastor they are launching out into great things for the Master.

During the last week that we were at Como, Brother William J. Cambron, the advance man of our team, began a meeting at Sardis. Brother Cambron is a Baptist preacher of great power. All denominations are heartly co-operating, and from the first service God has blessed us with wonderful power and is sweeping the entire town. The church is revived to the point where many pray in public and do personal work who have heretofore been inactive. Brother Gladney has done faithful and deep work and is now reaping where he has sown. Time and again the testimony has been given in the congregation: "Under Brother Gladney's preaching I felt long ago that I should take this step," etc. Such testimonies encourage God's servants to preach the "whole truth." The young people have turned away from worldly amusements and have organized prayer meetings—one for the young men and one for the young ladies.

Our evangelistic company is known as the K. C. B. Team. We have associated together in order to unite all the Christian forces in a town for a clean sweep of the entire community. The manifest favor of God has been upon us in this movement. My permanent address is Nashville, Tenn. I shall be pleased to open correspondence with any brother in reference to a meeting. Brother Gladney and Brother Randolph will gladly answer inquiries in reference to our work. We open at Birmingham, Ala., June 29. G. A. KLEIN.

AMORY, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: Our Armory congregation has been doing some handsome things for the parsonage and the pastor and his family. The ladies of the Church projected the plan of the parsonage improvements, and the men took for their part half the expenses, and a large and well ventilated kitchen was built with a large pantry, and a back hall was closed in. They have contributed greatly to the comfort of the preacher and his family. They then proceeded to install a water-works and sewerage system for the parsonage home. This, together with some furnishings, cost more than $500. Immediately following all this the good women gave the parsonage home a pounding. Last Friday the work of the pounding began at about 10 a. m., and continued at intervals till 8 o'clock at night. This seemed to be a real means of grace to our people, and has contributed immensely to the comfort and profit of the preacher and his family. We are now in the midst of a meeting with Brother J. H. Felts, of Corinth, doing the preaching. We are expecting a good meeting. The services began last night with a splendid congregation.—W. M. Young, P. C.

Eden, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: On May 25 Brother Dan Kelley, our Conference Evangelist, came to us to assist our beloved pastor, Brother Lane, in a meeting. Brother Kelley came overflowing with the love of the Lord. He preached for us eight days. It was in many respects a great meeting. The church has been greatly revived and strengthened, and if we do not hold out it will not be because the preaching was not strong, practical, and spiritual. Brother Kelley is a grand man. The people fell in love with him, and wished that he would stay with us a week longer. He is a strong preacher and a tireless worker. He leaves nothing undone to lead sinners to Christ. Our membership was wonderfully revived. We feel much better prepared for our work and we hope to see greater results from our meeting.—Mrs. J. F. Wilson.

Pickens, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just closed a good meeting at Goodman. The preaching was done by Rev. T. W. Cain, our pastor at Leland. Brother Cain did us some splendid work. He preaches the old-time gospel in the old-time way. His sermons are full of power, and the Spirit of God takes his words to the hearts of his hearers. The results of the meeting can not be known. Only three joined the Church, but only a very few were out of the Church. One of the results was the organization of a men's prayer meeting. We had present at that meeting on the last Sunday of the services 37 men, all of whom promised to work to build up God's kingdom and the morals of the town. We expect to hear great things from them. The people spoke of Brother Cain in terms of highest praise. He will not soon be forgotten. We praise God for the meeting.—J. D. Simpson.

Auburn, Miss.

Mr. Editor: Our Children's Day exercise at Adam's Church was held last Sunday. We could not have it earlier on account of delay in receiving programs. We had an interesting and beautiful service, the program being carried out in every particular. The children acquitted themselves admirably. The Church was a bower of beauty, under the skilful fingers of the committee composed of Mrs. Walter Denman, Mrs. Ada Carruth, Mrs. John P. Carruth, and Mrs. J. S. Parker. The occasion was a big one in more ways than one. Several hundred people were present and there was dinner on the ground for all. In the afternoon the pastor preached a special sermon to the children and a large number came forward, expressing a desire to be saved, and pledged themselves to be Christians. After the sermon a meeting of the Epworth League was held, thus rounding out a full day's work for Jesus. The members of the Adam's Church know how to do things when they have the proper leadership.—J. S. Parker, P. C.

Lucedale, Miss.

Dear Doctor: We closed out a good meeting here on June 4. Brother J. L. Decell, of Mt. Olive, did the preaching and did it well. He possesses remarkable evangelistic powers and already ranks as one of the most gifted evangelists in our Conference. Our meeting lasted twelve days and there was not a dull service. Of course we did not accomplish everything we wished for, but some serious difficulties which existed in our church were eliminated, five people joined our Church on profession of faith, five came to us from the Presbyterians and three by certificate. Dr. I. L. Peebles came to us a week prior to the meeting and gave us a good start by preaching several able sermons and distributing quite a lot of his literature.

This account would not be complete if I failed to mention the very efficient help that Rev. W. S. Havlein, of the M. E. Church, rendered us. Brother Havlein is South for his health's sake, but he is by no means idle, as he preaches frequently (and he's a preacher, too), teaches one of our Adult classes in the Sunday school, and is my very helpful and brotherly critic and counselor.

Doctor, we have the best all-round Sunday school in this Conference, and sometime later I shall write you an account of it which will furnish the proofs.—F. L. Applewhite, P. C.

Washington Street, Vicksburg.

Our protracted meeting closed on last night. The house was packed to overflowing, the Holy Ghost filled the place, and the hearts of the people rejoiced. The meeting started with the sacrament of the Lord's Supper and closed with an old fashioned Love Feast, during which many testified that the Lord had done great things for them. Yesterday we received 62 into the Church and 8 last evening. Thirty-two were baptized and 30 came in by vows, restoration, certificate and from other Churches, making in all 74, and others will join later. In strength and spiritual power I feel sure that our church is more than doubled as a result of this meeting. When we build, we will have a real live church membership to put in the new house of worship.

Brother Dan Kelley is a first rate preacher and an evangelist of the true type. He preaches a gospel of sound doctrine—the fundamentals of Methodism—and people are moved to deep repentance under the Holy Ghost and the truth of the Gospel as it is in Christ Jesus. There is bound to be good come of this meeting. His preaching is of such a high type that he can hold a meeting in almost any place and succeed, if he can have the loyal support of the pastor and the officials of the church. His labors here have been a great benediction to this church. We are making arrangements to begin on our new church as soon as possible and hope to have it so we can worship in it before the Annual Conference meets in December.

I want to say something for Brother Kelley's comfort of mind, and something because it is right: When Brother Kelley is holding a meeting and has an appointment with another brother, and finds that he should remain over a few days longer to close the meeting and reap the results that should come, the other pastor should not get out of patience with him and close the meeting and quit, but let him stay till the meeting is done and hold on himself till he can get there.

I know that it worries him to know that a pastor is worrying, fretting, and fuming because he does not come on the spot. Sometimes I think it does good for the pastor to start the meeting and get a good strong hold on the situation. Brother C. M. Chapman, President of Port Gibson College, was with me the first three or four days of the meeting and gave us some of as good preaching as one would care to hear. Our people were delighted with him as a man and a preacher. He is a strong, clear, sound gospel preacher and he helped to lay the foundation for the results of this great meeting.—W. H. Saunders, P. C.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

The New Iberia Sunday school on June 1 wound up a "Seekers and Searchers" contest for new members with 216 present, this being 100 gain in membership—or at least in attendance—since the first of the year. On this same day the Children's Day program was rendered to an overflowing house.

The Sunday school of the Grace Church, Dallas, has a special class for its Secretaries that meets after the several Secretaries have made up their reports for the day. This would seem to be but just to this group of faithful servants of the school who otherwise might themselves grow up in ignorance of the Bible, and while their recitation period must of necessity be brief, still "a half loaf is better than no loaf," and we commend this provision of the Sunday school for its officers and teachers. This school also has a birthday secretary, who keeps up with all the pupils' birthdays, so that suitable remembrance may be made. Of course no count is made of how many the lady members of the school have had.

At the Monroe District Sunday School Institute held in Rayville in March Miss Pauline Glass Randle, whose father is our pastor at Mangham, was elected chairman of the Intermediate-Senior Department of our District Sunday School Conference, and her interest and plans for her work are seen in the following extract from a recent letter: "Saturday I got a copy of the Minutes down to see how many churches I have to work with. I shall write to each pastor in the District, and shall ask each Superintendent to give me the number of Senior and Intermediate classes in his Sunday school, together with the names and addresses of the teachers of each, and the number of pupils in each class. I shall also request the teachers to communicate with me concerning their class work. It seems to me that this will be the quickest way to get in touch with the conditions in my Department. I hope to have organized classes in my Department over all the District. They are an inspiration both to pupils and to teacher. I shall be at the institutes, and I hope by that time to have learned a great deal more and be of real service." We commend this zeal to all who have been given official responsibility in our District Sunday school organizations. The field for Sunday school work of this kind is white unto the harvest, and they that reap shall receive their wages.

The Journal of the Religious Educational Association for June contains a very fine article on the question of the Bible in the public schools by Prof. Vernon P. Squires of the University of North Dakota. His State has worked out a system by which the Bible forms one half-unit of the sixteen units of the regular High School course. The course is not taught in the school itself, but is marked out and is to be learned through the regular Sunday school, a special class, or individually, the one aim being to elevate the standard of Sunday school work by giving it a classical standing. The examination includes Bible geography and map drawing, biography of Biblical characters, narrations of biographical events, the life and times of Christ, the life and times of the early disciples as recorded in the Acts, including the mission work of Paul, grouping of the books of both the Old and the New Testaments, memorizing certain passages from each of the Testaments, etc. The examination is from the Bible alone, any version of which may be used, to suit either Catholic or Protestant. It is not to touch any question of sectarianism, but will deal only with the scolastic part of the Bible as literature and history, leaving the religious part to be taught in the class—at Sunday school or otherwise. It is the conviction of the Christian teachers who made and have tried this plan in the high schools of North Dakota that this is a satisfactory solution of the Bible-in-the-school question, and we see nothing wrong with it. What a change it would make in the estimate placed on Bible knowledge by our high school pupils if it took classical rank with their other studies! May something like it come to Louisiana.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Rev. B. F. Lewis.

The tour of Sunday School Institutes, planned by the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board at its last annual meeting in Hazlehurst, has just been completed. The touring party consisted of Brother E. E. French, Superintendent of Supplies at our Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.; Miss Daisy Magee, for the past three years Elementary Superintendent of our own Conference Board; Mrs. G. D. Cameron, recently elected Missionary Superintendent of the Board, and Mr. R. A. Maddox, Field Secretary and the Chairman of the Board.

The places visited were Canton Crystal Springs, Prentiss, Bond, Montrose and Shubuta. There were four sessions at each place, while on Sunday the party scattered, touching as many points as possible, and reassembled on Monday to continue the tour. A very conservative estimate places the total number of pastors present at between 15 and 20, three of whom rode over dusty roads from 10 to 20 miles to reach the institute. Between 150 and 200 Sunday school Superintendents, officers and teachers were in attendance, the greatest distance traveled by any one by private conveyance being 20 miles. Greater distances were traveled by rail.

In several places conditions were very favorable to successful work. Canton had already begun grading its school and is planning modern Sunday school rooms as an annex to the church. Shubuta already has a Committee appointed and tentative plans for an important annex, while Montrose is striving for a brand new church with modern outfit. Some of the pastors in attendance had long converse with the Chairman relative to Sunday school work, and two agreed to undertake at once an active campaign in the interest of the Sunday School Board. Two of our church schools are planning to introduce the Teachers' Training Course into their curriculum this next session and give diplomas upon the completion of the course. The benefits to be derived cannot be estimated. Altogether, the work done at the institutes was satisfactory.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Lebanon Sunday school has 100 on the roll, with an average of 75 in attendance.

The Ripley Circuit has four live schools and things are working well along all lines.

Mr. Foust reported one Sunday school that had made 100 per cent advance over last year.

Wheeler Charge has four good schools, and a possible fifth one is to be added to that list soon.

Courtesy in Sunday school work, as in everything else, pays big dividends in the lives of the investors.

Brother Davenport reports two good Sunday schools in his work, and an increased Sunday school interest.

There are three good Sunday schools in Hickory Flat Charge and one good Children's Day service has already been held.

Superintendent J. R. Brenion had fifteen fine young men in his class last Sunday and expects even better things as the days go by.

Mr. Ledyard's fine Sunday school at Tupelo had a beautiful Children's Day service on June 15. The children were well trained and an ideal day in every respect was enjoyed, but they always do things well in Tupelo.

A Chinese proverb says that "with time and patience the mulberry leaf becomes satin," and that same patience is one of the most difficult, as well as one of the most necessary, lessons to be learned in Sunday school work. A real Sunday school or class can not be built by merely contemplating what other classes have done or by receiving inspiration. It takes the pastor and superintendent and all the teachers in hearty co-operation and with untold patience to work out the real Sunday school.

Two splendid books have been added to the Adult Class Reading Course: "The Representative Men of the Bible," George Matheson—A keen analysis of the lives of sixteen of the great characters of the Old Testament from Adam to Job is given, and it is of special interest to Sunday school workers this year. The other book, "Higgins, A Man's Christian," by Norman Duncan, is a live, throbbing picture of the sort of ministry the Gospel of Jesus Christ makes possible in the lumber camps of Minnesota. These summer days such books should be read and enjoyed by the members of Adult Classes and also by all Sunday school teachers.

DURANT DIST. S. S. SUPTS., NOTICE.

Mr. Editor: Please allow me to say a word of encouragement to the superintendents of the Sunday schools of the Durant District, for I fear from what Brother Weaver writes me that but few are making arrangements to observe Children's Day. Brethren, I hope you will give the children a chance, and that the pastors will co-operate with the superintendents. Send to Mr. R. M. Weaver, Assistant Field Agent, Corinth, Miss., for programs. Surely this is one thing we can do, even if we do have to feed the boll weevil. W. S. SHIPMAN, P. E.

RESOLUTIONS OF LAYMEN

At a special session of the District Conference held at Wilson, La., last week by the laymen of the Baton Rouge District, the following resolutions were offered, and unanimously adopted:

"Whereas, The obligations of the individual or congregation to pay the salary of the pastor of the church, as assessed and fixed by the Board of Stewards of the various charges, are as binding upon the people as are the obligations to pay the grocery bill, the clothing bill, the doctor or any other bill contracted, and,

"Whereas, we recognize the fact that we have, as a people and Church, fallen far short of our duties and obligations in regard to this important matter, and in too many instances have caused pastors great embarrassment, if not actual suffering for the necessaries and comforts of life, therefore be it

"Resolved, by the laymen of the Baton Rouge District Conference of the M. E. Church, South, in session assembled at Wilson, La., that upon return to our respective homes we will take up with our people the question of devising plans to raise the funds with which to pay the pastor's salary in full, as well as all the other assessments of the Church; that we will call a meeting of the stewards and laymen of our respective churches and inaugurate plans or systems which will insure the raising of the funds necessary to this end.

"Be it further resolved, that we recognize the Bible doctrine of paying tithes to be as binding now as in any other age of the world, and according to the words of Malachi, we are "robbing God," and will be called upon to give an account of our stewardship."

Signed by W. T. Holland, J. R. Abels.

Upon motion made by Mr. J. R. Abels, it was ordered that the foregoing resolutions be published in The St. Helena Echo, and that all papers throughout the district, friendly to the cause, be requested to copy same.

"There is money enough in the hands of church members to sow every acre of the earth with the seed of truth."—Josiah Strong.

"And a Little Child Shall Lead them."

During the District Conference which convened at Centerville in April, Brother W. M. Williams spoke in behalf of our Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, Miss.

The appeal went right to the heart of the President of the Missionary Society, and it was not long before she asked the members if they would not like to have the privilege of clothing a little girl in this home. Did she ask in vain? No, indeed! for with shining faces these women gladly hailed the opportunity to render some help to one of Christ's little ones. Much love and many prayers have gone into each little garment. The richer gift is ours, for "inasmuch as ye have done it nnto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me." We recommend the plan to other societies.

We were filled with joy when our women here took np this work, for, in the past, their efforts had been directed to local work only—caring for the church and parsonage. Not one disparaging word would we utter, for they have worked well and faithfully; but they lost sight of the fact that the Master required a higher service from them. He so loved us that he gave his only son. Are we going to give that which costs us nothing? Are we willing to give only where we can derive some benefit ourselves? "He that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly."

We have taken the first outward step, and we pray that our women may have love so like the Savior's that they may see the world with the same vision which was ever before him.

Vashti Industrial School.

Prof. E. E. Bishop, Superintendent of this Home, in a recent article in the Nashville Christian Advocate says: "A nation's greatest asset is the children of the country. They are the strength and hope of onr land and of our civilization if rightly trained. On the other hand, if corrupted they become our greatest menace." He further states that if we want pure water we look to the protection of the stream at its source, and if we want good citizenship, we must look to the early training and protection of the young life.

This need of Vashti is greatest among the poorer class of people whose life is a mere existence, full of sorrow and pinched by many privations. When women, wearied in the battle of life, can no longer keep up the unequal struggle, their little ones are turned loose upon the world. To be cared for? No! to be shunned and degraded. It was for the protection of snch girls that the Vashti Home was founded. It took one of our deaconesses to see this great need. God bless this noble band of women! "The love of Christ constrains" them, and the good they have accomplished cannot be measured until Eternity reveals it.

Prof. Bishop says they receive three hundred applications per year, and accept about thirty. They haven't room for more. Such a short sentence, but its weight is heavy npon the hearts of those who have to turn aside these unprotected girls to such a fate as we can not know.

Some Startling Statements!

It costs about $100 per year to train and protect a girl, but she lives on a community at an expense of $1000 or more per year. We are allowing fifty thousand girls to go unprotected every year, and that means that many are falling into the vilest sin and degradation. It has been computed that the evils which follow in the track of this sin cost the public annually $2,675,000,000. This is an average of $30 per year for every man, woman and child in our land. The statement staggers us! Preventive work could be accomplished if each person gave only six and two-third cents per year. This small sum from every one would be sufficient to throw the arm of protection around fully 50,000 girls, the number now on the downward road to ruin and perdition. Every State could have its Vashti Home then. How long before we follow the example of Thomasville, Ga.?

GIRLS' MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

We acknowledge the receipt of a program for the Girls' Missionary Conference to be held in Booneville, Miss., July 12-14. Subjects of the deepest interest will be presented, and we doubt not that it will prove a "feast of good things." This Conference is for North Mississippi girls, but it is quite evident that the Mississippi Conference isn't going to be "behind the times," for we have received a letter from Mrs. A. E. Wyatt, our Conference second vice-president, and she is planning a like conference for the girls at a later date. These conferences are planned to help our girls so they may carry on their work more efficiently, and, above all, that they may have rich and abundant blessings in their hearts and lives; and that they may learn that the greatest blessing comes when they have helped to send, or have carried, the glad tidings to those who are lost in sin and in darkness.

Alexandria, La.

Mrs. Baynard, Press Superintendent of this auxiliary, writes encouragingly of the work in her society. They meet regularly once a month in the Church parlors. Mrs. Medlock is president, and makes the meetings profitable and pleasant—a happy combination! The study class is large, and meets twice a month at the homes of various members. All have enjoyed the book on China. They report that Mrs. H. E. Owens' Bible class has sent the Louisiana treasurer, through their auxiliary, $60 to support a Bible woman in the field of China, the woman to be in Miss Bomar's school. The society has also sent a large box of clothing to the Mary Werlein Mission in New Orleans.

Secretary of the Home Base.

Mrs. Bessie W. Lipscomb, of Mississippi, who was elected to this new position at the last Council meeting, began her duties the first of July. She will "conduct the correspondence with the Conference Secretaries of both the Foreign and Home Departments. She will receive the reports of Conference work. She will have charge of the distribution of all literature and supplies necessary for the conduct of the work. She will help to plan itinerations for Conference visitors, and will herself attend Conferences and other special meetings whenever possible." Note that all literature and supplies will now be furnished from this one office.

SECOND CHURCH, BATON ROUGE.

Dear Dr. Meek: On Sunday, May 15, Mothers' and Children's Day services were held in our church, and a very beautiful program was successfully executed at both hours. The services for mothers was at 11 a. m. and the children's service at 7:45 p. m. The church was beautifully decorated Sunday morning with white flowers in honor of the mothers of our Church. The choir sang several beautiful songs suitable for the occasion, such as "Meet mother in the skies," and "Tell mother I'll be there," etc. The Pastor made a short talk in honor of the mothers The following are some of the suggestions that he made: It has been said that the sweetest words in our language are mother, home and heaven, and one might almost say the word home includes them all; for who can think of home without remembering the gentle mother who sanctified it by her presence? And is not home the dearest name for heaven? We think of that better land as a home where brightness will never end in night. So, then, may our homes on earth be the centers of all our joys; may they be as green spots in the desert to which we can retire when weary of the cares and perplexities of life, and drink the clear waters of a love which we know to be sincere and always unfailing. Home will be such a place if in it there is a pure, noble, sweet mother. To have great men, we must have great mothers—mothers who love home. Such mothers will be proud of their sons and daughters. John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, whose name all Methodists love, had a great mother. So Geo. Washington and many other great men, of whom I have not space and time to speak, owed their success in life chiefly to their mothers. I don't believe in our mothers going to the polls to vote, but I do believe in them raising grand and noble sons to vote for them, and then I believe we would have pure politics and a great government.

Sunday evening the church was beautifully decorated and, as the evening hour was devoted to the children, everything showed to the best advantage under the soft glow of the incandescent lights. To the Superintendent, Brother O. H. Cline, and the teachers, as well as to the faithfulness of the pupils taking part, was due the perfect success of the occasion.

Our revival meeting began on Monday night, the 16th of May, the first sermon being preached by that sweet spirited man, Brother H. S. Johns. Brothers Drake and Johns were both with us part of the time during the meeting, and gave their kind and faithful assistance. On Tuesday, the 17th, the militant force of the church was augmented by the arrival of Rev. A. I. Townsley of Rayville, La., who came to assist in our revival. Brother Townsley is no stranger to our people, having been their pastor for two years. As was freely predicted before he arrived, the seating capacity of the auditorium was inadequate, the available space in the aisles and recesses were filled with chairs and still the congregations could not be comfortably accommodated. Twice a day for ten days Brother Townsley dug from the inexhaustible mine of Holy Writ treasures both new and old. The afternoon services were mainly addressed to Christians, and were calculated to brighten the way of the believer by assurances of the Divine oversight vouch-safed to those who love and serve the Lord. Hope in affliction, consolation in distress and sorrow, and the comforting certainty of God's presence at all times were the themes presented in pleasing style, and the audiences were impressed with an earnest conviction that no doubt of the reality of eternity and Heaven existed in the mind of the speaker. The evening sermons were powerful, evangelical exhortations to repentance and a Godly life, interspersed with many forcible illustrations of the uncertainty of human life and the awful necessity of being always ready. Brother Townsley's words of purest English flow in a torrent that sweeps his audience from the moorings of Atheism and infidelity and compels the drifting individuals to "lay hold" of the buoys and life rafts of God's mercy as the only means of salvation. The meeting closed on May 26. The last service was the best. Many shed tears while Brother Townsley preached about "Where is heaven and who goes there?" We rejoice at the helpful, energising influence imparted to every phase of our activities. The work of repairing our church received a very substantial boom, and we go most hopefully into the campaign for a modern building, which we hope to have ready for use by fall. To say the least of the meeting, it was a great success, and we expect to gather fruit all along during the year from the good seed that have been sown. This has been a very good year with us. We have received to date 27 members, have a fine Sunday school and Epworth League, and we are expecting to have a good report at the end of the year.—W. A. Mangum, P. C.

BY WIRELESS.

Long before that wonderful scientific triumph, the transmission of messages without the use of wires, another wireless method of carrying news was recognized.

Though notable chiefly for its inaccuracy as contrasted with the actual method of wireless communication it has also always been famous for the mysterious speed with which it travels.

The name of this wireless messenger is Rumor—sometimes called Gossip. It was even personified by the old Romans many centuries ago, into a goddess, so sure were they that Rumor traveled too fast for human agency.

Now in the olden days there was some excuse for the blind faith that was put in rumor because it was the only way people could get news; but surely there should be no excuse for it to-day. The printing press, the telephone, the telegraph and the advance of science even, make accuracy and truth so easily attainable by all that no one should depend on idle or malicious tales for their information concerning anything. For instance, why should anyone believe such tales as have been circulated from time to time by the ignorant, the malicious, the envious, or the credulous regarding the purity and wholesomeness of that delicious beverage, Coca-Cola.

Scientific investigation has disproved these stories one by one as they have appared; yet some persons cling perversely, either in ignorance or from downright maliciousness, to some of the fanciful rumors.

The Cola-Cola Company has issued much literature, not just of unsupported claims but proving by the words and testimony of some of the greatest scientists in the world, that Cola-Cola not only is pure and wholesome but that every single one of these rumors to the contrary is absolutely false.

It has been proved by scientific tests and experiments made by such men as Doctors Schmiedeberg, Hollingworth, H. C. Wood, Jr., and others that the caffeine in Coca-Cola and in tea, coffee, cocoa, etc., instead of being harmful, as claimed by "Rumor," is positively beneficial.

It is high time that we prove our advance over the old Romans and the credulous of ancient times by closing our ears to rumor and basing our judgment on facts.—Adv.

Whitworth College.

A LETTER FROM DR. DU BOSE

On revisiting Whitworth College, my surprise has been great and my delight genuine. First, I have been struck by the marked material improvements seen on the campus. The fine residence of the President, the spacious, classic and well-appointed auditorium, are special features of this improvement, and would do credit to institutions far more richly endowed than Whitworth. The large and refined audiences which, added to the student body, filled the new auditorium impressed me as being one of the evident signs of the school's wider and abiding influence upon the commonwealth.

I have also had opportunity to see some demonstrations of the class and department work done in the College. These have given me the confidence that the Faculty has been well chosen, and that its members are personally efficient, alert and zealously faithful in the instruction given. The academic and language work, the music and art directory, have all seemed to be worthy of a generous commendation. The presidency of Dr. Cooper has, as to its diligence, firmness and far-sightedness, passed into a proverb. It is to his personal and official direction that happy advances of recent years are due.

As an ex-Mississippian, and one to whose heart Mississippi and its Christian education are ever dear, I heartily commend Whitworth to parents who have daughters to educate. H. M. Du BOSE.

GOD ANSWERS PRAYER.

Jehovah, the loving God, distinctly promises to answer the prayers of his children. He that gave parents a love for their children, will he not listen to the cries of his own sons and daughters? He has wonders in store for them. What they never heard of, never saw or dreamed of, he will do for them. He will invent new blessings, if needful. He will ransack sea and land to feed them; he will send every angel out of heaven to succor them if their distress requires it. He will astonish them with his grace, and make them feel that it was never before done in this fashion. All he asks of them is that they call upon him.—Spurgeon.

THIS KIND GOETH OUT BY PRAYER.

There is food for thought in the Ninth Chapter of St. Mark's Gospel. While Christ was on the mount with three of his disciples, before whom he was transfigured, the others became entangled with the Scribes in a dispute. A certain man brought his ailing son to Christ to have him healed, and, Christ being away, permitted the disciples to try to heal him. In the presence of the scoffing Scribes they undertook, hastily, no doubt, to perform the miracle. The child was not cured, and the result was that the doubting crowd advanced upon the disciples and began disputing with them. That about which they contended is not certain, but there is reason to think that it was as to whether Christ had the power that he claimed to have.

This picture of disputing disciples is not an uncommon one. The real need of that hour was the healing of the invalid child, but the child was abandoned to its fate while the quarrel waxed hot. Many times communities are permitted to lie steeped in sin while different denominations wrangle over methods of doing Christ's work. Oftentimes improvements in churches are never completed because members can not agree as to how the work shall be done. Christ's explanation that the ailment called for prayer on the part of the disciples accounted for the cause of their failure. The things people usually quarrel about need to be prayed over; but too often a call to prayer in the presence of disputing parties is very embarrassing.

Christ ignored the contending Scribes and turned his attention to the dying child. But he met a strange condition in the mind of the father. Even after having brought his son to Christ, because of having witnessed the failure of the disciples, he doubted the ability of Christ. Many a man of this world has been driven to infidelity by the failures of professing Christians. Christ, however, did not regard the cause of his doubt as being sufficient ground to demand proof of his ability. He taught the doubting father that, in spite of the failure of the disciples, the salvation of his child depended on his faith. "If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth." It was not to be a test of Christ's ability, but of the man's faith. The members of the Church may be at fault, but God will at last demand of each individual a living faith in Christ.

The father of the afflicted child learned two things: First, he learned that no matter how willing disciples may be to do good, healing is never accomplished without the presence of Christ. The church that does not see results in the healing of sin-sick souls needs Christ, and the method of obtaining that healing power is by prayer. Every now and then some pastor gets too modern for the prayer meeting, but just as sure as the prayer life of a church or individual runs low, just so sure will the results of that church or individual in winning souls to Christ run low. We need a revival of prevailing prayer. Social service, systems of finance, models of architecture, and great learning are not to be thought of idly, but such things are impotent when it comes to the saving of a soul. Being born again is a miracle wrought by the power of God through Jesus Christ, and that power is not worked up by human agencies, but prayed down from on high by earnest loving Christians.

The second thing the father learned was that it was futile for him to ask for the life of his child and withhold himself. He saw that he was standing between his child and salvation and his prayer was, "Help thou my unbelief." In other words, "If the only thing that prevents the saving of my child is my condition, perform the first miracle on me." What a blessing it would be if more parents would learn that they need faith in order to rear their families!—A. J. G.

SABBATH DESECRATION.

Whether the time in which we are now living is any more evil than certain periods in the past history of the Church is a question answered by some in the negative and by others in the affirmative. On this question there is much difference of opinion. Whatever may be the correct answer to this query it nevertheless remains true that there is a departing from some of the old paths that should be noted with some concern. One instance of this is found in the matter of Sabbath desecration.

Selfishness is often at the bottom of Sabbath desecration. One on the way to take up his daily toil on the Sabbath will say that his business will suffer or that he will lose his position unless he uses the Lord's day for secular purposes. All of this merely means that his selfishness prompts him to engage in the prosecution of his regular business on the Sabbath. Yet, on the contrary, it would be entirely possible for him to find something else to do. The new occupation might possibly demand that greater effort be put forth, or it might not be quite so lucrative, but what matters this to the one who is alive to the sanctity of the Sabbath day?

Another contributing cause is that the desecrater is often in pursuit of some pleasure or some form of amusement. His excuse is that he has no other day for this pursuit, and he seems to think that this justifies every sort of dissipation and debauchery on the day that the Lord has set aside as being holy unto himself. Who gave these people the Sabbath and who made it possible for them to have this day thus to dissipate, unless it was God himself? No heathen people ever had such an institution as the Christian Sabbath. First, God gave it to the Hebrews; then he gave it to the Christian people. He gave it not as a burden, but as a blessing. It was given for the benefit of man's spiritual nature as well as for the benefit of his material nature. Those who use it as God intended that it should be used find it a great blessing that has come to us from God. But many take this blessing of God and make of it a curse for themselves and for others, just as is done with so many of the other blessings that have come to mankind out of the boundless goodness of God.

A parasite gains its life by sapping the life of another. In course of time this parasite will destroy the life of the one who made possible its own existence. Those who desecrate the Sabbath of the Lord are but parasites upon the society that has been made possible through the life-giving power of Christianity. They will not so sap the vitality of Christianity that it will cease to be a blessing to mankind, but the more this evil of desecrating the Sabbath day is indulged in the more the strength of Christianity in the lives of those who thus show their disregard for the holiness of the Sabbath will be lessened.

Some professing Christians fall into this practice. They run after all kinds of amusements on the Sabbath day and do not frequent the house of the Lord. One who has thus become a parasite upon the religion of Christ has become a backslider. In his essay on "Parasitism," Henry Drummond says: "The penalty of backsliding is not something unreal and vague, some unknown quantity which may be measured out to us disproportionately, or which perchance, since God is good, we may altogether evade. The consequences are already marked within the structure of the soul. So to speak, they are physiological. The thing affected by our indifference or by our indulgence is not the book of final judgment, but the present fabric of the soul." No man or woman can afford to do anything that will dull the fine sensibilities of the soul. In course of time this practice of desecrating the Sabbath, if persisted in, will destroy the spiritual life of the one who engages in it, and he will be left hard and empty and devoid of the beautiful life that might have been his had proper regard been given to God's day and to its holiness.

CORNER STONE LAYING AT CROWLEY.

On the Fourth of July, after a patriotic celebration of the Nation's birthday, a large audience assembled in the old church at Crowley, La., at 5 p. m., to hear an address by Dr. J. W. Moore of New Orleans, and to witness the impressive ceremony of laying the corner stone of our new church in that city, which also was conducted by Dr. Moore. The subject of the address was "The Church's Ideals—The Nation's Ideals." The large audience gave undivided attention to every word of the message, and many shed tears of joy during the impressive exercises. Those present report that the service was one of the most spiritual that they ever witnessed on such an occasion.

Brother C. D. Atkinson, the pastor, is reported to be in great favor with his people. He has a grip on the hearts of his members and commands the respect and love of the entire community. To his untiring energies and faithful perseverance are largely due the success of this most commendable building enterprise. The ladies of the church have secured $4000 of the $5000 they pledged. A large majority of the subscriptions made have already been paid. The walls of the building are well up, and Brother Atkinson is confident that the building will be in first-class shape for the session of the Louisiana Conference which is to assemble in Crowley next December.

THE GREAT MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

By Rev. W. W. Drake.

It has been my great privilege, during the past few days, to be in attendance on the Second General Missionary Conference of our Church, which was held on the beautiful Southern Assembly Grounds near Waynesville, N. C. Of these grounds and their purpose I have not the space now to speak further than to say that up here among the peaks of the Balsam Mountains the Laymen's Movement of our Church has secured a magnificent location for a general gathering place of Southern Methodism which will undoubtedly be a blessing to the Church throughout the years. It has been pronounced by some disinterested persons of wide observation to be the finest situation for the purpose to be found anywhere.

Here in this beautiful mountain region, with nothing to distract attention from the object of the gathering, the hosts of our Methodism, assembled from every direction—from the central and near-by Conferences, like the Virginia, Kentucky, and others, in crowds, and scattering representatives from far away localities, like Arizona, New Mexico, and Oklahoma. It was a great disappointment to me—greater and greater as the Conference increased in interest—that there was not a large representation from Louisiana instead of the less than half-dozen men and women present.

Two things in connection with the Conference were somewhat disappointing: the fact that the preparation of the grounds was, for reasons unforseen and unavoidable, incomplete, so that practically all had to be entertained in Waynesville involving constant coming and going. Again, the attendance, doubtless due in part to the uncertainty as to entertainment, was not as large as was anticipated by the Secretaries. I suppose that there were about as many delegates from abroad as at the New Orleans Conference. Frequently more than 2000 persons were in the auditorium at the sessions, and on Sunday morning Bishop McCoy's strong and inspiring sermon was heard by a magnificent audience of some 4000 people. To give an adequate and particular account of the Conference, would occupy more space than the Advocate could allot to it; so I shall try to point out certain salient and impressive features.

The opening service, with an address by Robert E. Speer, the well known missionary leader, on the relation of prayer to missions, set the key note for the Conference, which was emphasized by Dr. O. E. Brown's impressive talks each day at the "quiet hour," and in many addresses throughout the program. I wish I could convey to your readers the emphatic impression of the necessity of intercession as the great fundamental need of the missionary enterprise, which was created by these addresses and quiet talks. I am strengthened in a growing conviction that the Church upon its knees in definite supplication, rather than money or volunteers, is the supreme need of the hour.

The program was rich in information and inspiring discussions of the various phases and fields of our missionary work. I can not even mention in this article all of these addresses. The first day was devoted to a thorough discussion of the various problems of the home field. Of special value was the discussion of the immigrant problem by Dr. Peter Roberts of New York, himself an immigrant and Y. M. C. A. worker, and thoroughly familiar with that pressing problem. The second day was full of vital discussions of the present thrilling situation of need, opportunity, and responsibility in practically every foreign field, among which the most striking was that of Dr. Oldham, sometime Missionary Bishop of the M. E. Church in India, now Missionary Secretary of that Church, which left upon the audience a profound impression of the call of the Christian Church to great advance movements in connection with the "Council Hour in non-Christian Lands," as stated in Dr. Oldham's subject. As a fitting close of the day, the evening program included a masterful statement of the doctrine of "Stewardship" by Dr. Egbert W. Smith, of the Southern Presbyterian Board, followed by an address on "The Turning of the Nations" by that well known traveler, newspaper man, and citizen of the world, Wm. T. Ellis of Philadelphia.

Saturday was laymen's day and was full of excellent addresses, among which may be specially mentioned that of Mr. LaFlamme, Secretary of the Laymen's Movement, in which he set forth strikingly, practical plans for the missionary organization of the local church.

Among other inspiring features were the graphic appeals on Sunday afternoon for Africa by Dr. Morrison of the Southern Presbyterian mission in the Congo, and by Bishop Lambuth; the messages of missionaries, and of the six just appointed to our new African work, and addresses by Mr. Li, a brilliant Chinese Christian just arrived in this country for study in Vanderbilt University.

I might speak of many other features, such as the delightful Christian fellowship of the gathering, but I must close with reference to one great inspiring fact.

Many of us remember the inspiration and uplift that come to our entire Church and to American Christianity when the New Orleans Conference raised a great collection of $50,000 for missions. It has given new life to our work ever since. Our Secretaries had prayerfully decided that the time had come for another great advance and had posted lists of "Specials" sorely needed for buildings and equipment throughout all our fields, amounting to $250,000. On Saturday at noon, after a simple statement of these needs by Dr. Pinson, re-enforced by telling appeals from Bishop Hendrix, an offering was spontaneously begun, which grew to $106,000 in a short space of time. Individuals gave generously, as when Mr. Enochs of Mississippi offered $10,000; Sunday schools, churches, Districts, and various groups gave in all sorts of sums. In the afternoon, at a meeting of the women, nearly $10,000 was added; and on Sunday morning, at the close of a powerful sermon by Bishop McCoy, $26,000 more was added, and at the evening service the amount went beyond $151,000. And in connection with the money offering, three young men and three young women gave themselves. It was a great privilege to be there, and I wish that all our people from Mississippi and Louisiana could have been present to see the truly "hilarious" giving which registered a new high water mark in our history as a Church. It was a matter of personal regret to me that our people in Louisiana scarcely had a part in this great sacramental offering. I trust that the report of it will stir us to larger things.

Waynesville, N. C.

THE SECOND GENERAL MISSIONARY CONFERENCE TO THE CHURCH.

(The following message to the Church was unanimously adopted at the closing session of the Missionary Conference at Lake Junaluska. June 29, 1913:)

We rejoice to recognize the hand of God in this Conference now about to close. From the first hour to this closing hour, the Spirit of the Highest has hovered over us. Our hearts have burned within us as we have sat under the spell of his presence and the sway of the high and serious themes that have held our attention.

We have here seemed to catch a fresh vision of the divine purpose for our age and we can but feel that this Conference has been meant, and is now commissioned, to carry and interpret to the Church the inspiration and the purposes that have so mastered our own lives while here. The evangelistic and missionary life of the Church should feel the quickening impulse of this occasion, and the streams of benevolence should be swelled by the influence of the great offering made here.

We are brought face to face with a situation such as has not been since Pentecost. The blindness and prejudice of which we used to hear have changed into the call of the Orient and the awakening nations. The voices of execration and hate that used to greet the missionary, have been translated into Macedonian pleading and songs of welcome. God is testing his Church by a staggering task now laid bare and made ready to its hand.

The situation at home calls for a heroic and consecrated Church to sound the prophetic note in the face of an arrogant materialism and a soul-killing industrialism. Strong and Christly hands are needed to lift the curse of lust and greed from the weak and ignorant and poor, and a great faith and optimism to bring back the joy of hope to the under-world of despair.

The conviction has here been burnt into our souls that this marvelous day is the day of God's power and the day of the Church's supreme opportunity; that unless we rise above the dead level of our commonplace Christian living and unchristian giving, unless we shall take upon our prayers and into the vital center of our lives the crying need of the Christless millions in a way we have never yet done, it will be more tolerable in the day of judgement for Sodom and Gomorrah than for us. This conviction leads us to call upon our leaders, clerical and lay, to sound the note of awakening throughout the Church. Let us ring out again in the prophet's cry: "Awake, put on thy strength, O, Zion!"

No timid and hesitating policy will meet the needs of the day nor the expectations of our Lord. We must revive our easy-going standards of service and of giving, and with a new and Christly passion for men, courageously plan larger things for God while we confidently expect great things from God. Let us rally and utilize the hitherto latent resources of our beloved Church, that we may in some adequate measure answer the thrilling challenge that God has brought out of the restless heart of a changing world.

We believe that the time is ripe for a great step forward. Following the first General Missionary Conference held in New Orleans, began the real missionary awakening of the Church. The present Conference coincides with the great awakening of the nations, and comes at the end of a decade of assiduous missionary education and cultivation. It should mark the hour of fruition. The conditions abroad, the needs at home, and the yearning and expectancy in the heart of the Church unite to make possible the most signal and solid advance in our history. We therefore join hands and hearts in the purpose to realize this possibility. We see a cloud larger than a man's hand gathering on the horizon and catch a glimpse of the times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord that await the full awakening of the Church to her glorious opportunity.

We urge on the whole Church the first and supreme duty of the hour—to pray mightily to the Lord of the harvest that he may send forth laborers into his harvest and that the Church may be led to provide for their support and equipment. This Conference was conceived and planned in prayer; its opening hour brought a message in prayer, and its results are hailed as answers to prayer. It was therefore fitting that it should come to its close with glad thanksgiving to him whose is the Kingdom and the power and the glory forever. But, unless it is followed by a quickening of the prayer life of the Church and a united cry for his power and guidance it will fail of its highest possibilities.

To do great things, there must be united action, while for lack of it a great opportunity may be lost. We would pledge—to our Board of Missions and its officers—our united efforts in the plan to raise outside the regular collections, a fund of $250,000 for building and equipment; and with the foundations here laid, we feel that the Church should go far beyond that amount. We urge on the entire Church to concentrate on this plan, and, without diversion of interest or multiplication of objects, to do this one thing, do it speedily, and do it thoroughly.

MRS. HAMMOND AND NEGRO UPLIFT.

Speaking recently of a plan I have at heart for the better housing of the poorer Negroes, the New Orleans Christian Advocate says that I expect "to demonstrate that better-equipped houses and absolute segregation are the paramount needs of the Negro race." May I correct part of the above statement?

My plan has no more to do with segregation than with the fourth dimension. If I ever get the money—as I pray heaven I may—I want those houses, playground, settlement house and all, right down in the middle of where the poorer, more shiftless Negroes are already living. I want to prove for them, as Octavia Hill proved for fifty years for London's poorest criminal class, that the landlord can house such people in health and decency, get a fair business return on his investment, and re-create his tenants at the same time, provided he goes about it with common sense, and in a spirit of human brotherhood—the spirit of Jesus Christ.

Miss Hill, fifty years ago, bought two of the most evil tenements in London, filled with evil tenants. She replaced with new material the rotten wood and vermin-infested plaster of the halls, cut windows in them, and put water on every landing. (People must have water handy if they are to keep clean. I know so many "dirty" Negroes who must "tote" all theirs from hydrants half a block away: I'd be dirty myself under such circumstances.) She had the halls scrubbed every day, to preach their silent lesson of cleanliness to all who went in or out. She collected her own rents weekly, instead of sending a real-estate agent. This is where love came in.

At first they regarded her as their natural enemy, but inch by inch she won them. Then the rooms were renovated and let to the same tenants at the same rent as before. But now they took pride in keeping them clean. She helped them find work, and taught them to stick to it when they found it. She taught the mothers how to care for their children, the girls how to sew and cook, and all the children how to play clean games. She started the first penny savings bank. She was their landlord, inexorable about the rent; for she had to "make good" at the business end of her experiment; but she was also their friend. She belived in their possibilities for good; she believed God believed in them; and she transformed those people, bodies and souls and homes. That is what love is for; that is what it was created to do.

When last August she went, an old woman, to her heavenly reward, she left two or three hundred English women behind her doing this Christlike work. It is being done in New York and Philadelphia. "The Octavia Hill system of rent-collecting," as it is everywhere called, does three things: it makes possible the housing of this lowest, most dangerous class in sanitary houses; it pays the landlord a fair profit, and far, far more, it transforms the tenants themselves. So clearly has this long been recognized in England that Miss Hill, for years, has been overrun with requests to take over the management of tenement properties which no ordinary business methods could make profitable to their owners. She could have used many times the number of helpers at her command.

Negroes, like all the rest of us, are human first and racial afterward. What works with Slavs and Italians and Japs and Anglo-Saxons will work with Negroes of the same economic class. If it won't, there's some mistake about Love being the remedy for the sins of all the world.

So we want money to try this housing plan at Paine College. And we want to train, under white supervision, Negro women of education and character to do this kind of work for their own people. Such women, employed by white owners of Negro renting property, would cost no more than the ordinary real-estate agents, but would bring in far better returns to the landlord and the community. For, really and truly, however we Christians doubt it, Christ's way of doing business is both sensible and practical.

As to segregation, that's a horse of another color, and one we white folks are diligently trying to lead by the tail instead of the head. I hope to try my luck on the head some day, but not at this time and place.

L. H. HAMMOND.

PEACE HATH HER VICTORIES.

William Jennings Bryan is Secretary of State, and American diplomacy is an ally of Christianity. Our relations with Mr. Bryan have been sufficiently intimate to bring us under the spell of his religious character. As guest in our home he was asked to conduct family worship. He took the Bible and read the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians and then knelt as he led the prayer. He thanked God for life; he prayed for wisdom, that we might know the will of God, and for courage to do his will. The children who were at that family altar do not yet possess a clearly defined standard of greatness, but they speak of Mr. Bryan as a good man. In a conversation about a member of Congress who was our warm friend, Mr. Bryan told us to advise him not to drink: "Tell him the men who render the best service in Congress are sober men. Urge your friend to be a total abstainer."

In an address on "The Value of the Sunday School," delivered in Philadelphia, Pa., in April, Mr. Bryan said: "I do not know the day on which I first signed the pledge, but I guess it was the day when I first signed my name. I believe in signing the pledge. I am ready to sign one any time or anywhere if I can get a human being to sign it with me. When men tell me it is humiliating to sign a pledge to abstain from drinking liquor, I say it is no more humiliating than the vow taken at the marriage altar. I believe in the pledge, because it strengthens the man himself and because the example it sets strengthens others. My experience is that if there is one place where a man should not drink it is in public life. Nowhere are temptations greater, and for this reason a man must carefully hold himself in hand. After having been in public life a quarter of a century, I can testify that there has never been one day when I found that it would have been advantageous to me to drink. And I never found that I lost standing even among those who did drink. I have never heard one criticism made of my position as a total abstainer. In this respect I shall continue as I have been going. I'll not change even in my high office, where some persons think that in the interests of diplomacy this or that should be done which does not exactly square with their conscientious scruples. American diplomacy is not the kind in which you have to make a man drunk in order to deal with him."

At the first dinner given to the members of the diplomatic corps, he stood face to face with the social custom of serving wine. The seven other ambassadors in Washington and their wives were invited to meet Ambassador and Mrs. Bryce. As they sat at the table Mr. Bryan told his guests that Mrs. Bryan and himself had been total abstainers from their youth. He frankly stated that when offered the portfolio of State he discussed the custom of serving wine at State dinners with the President, and that he left the matter to Mr. Bryan's discretion. His guests applauded the statement. Millions of our American knights and ladies join the diplomats in their appreciation of Mr. Bryan's chivalrous stand, even if it should "upset the digestion and temper of some old-fashioned diplomat." We welcome the Bryan brand of diplomacy! He has fought many battles for our country. A revival of righteousness is in progress. Wrong will not rule the land, nor will justice sleep with such men as Woodrow Wilson in the White House and William Jennings Bryan in the Department of State—

"Tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty and in private thinking."

THE SEASHORE ASSEMBLY.

The annual session of the Seashore Epworth League Assembly will be held at the Seashore Camp Ground, Biloxi, Miss., July 17-27.

This institution has offered for the past fourteen years regular courses in systematic Bible study, Home and Foreign Missions, Personal Evangelism, and Methods of Epworth League work. It affords the finest possible atmosphere for religious influences and personal work and its sessions have always been characterized by the conversion of young men and women and the commitment to service of many of those who participate in its sessions. Volunteers who date their calling to the mission field from their attendance upon sessions of this Assembly are now filling important posts abroad, and young men are "making full proof of their ministry" who heard and answered their call at these sessions.

A fine opportunity for vacation enjoyment is offered in connection with the spiritual and educational advantages of the Assembly. Special rates are to be had to the Camp Ground and the cost of board and lodging is within the reach of those who must practice economy in making their arrangements for a summer vacation. Reservations may be had by addressing R. G. Price, Seashore Camp Ground, Biloxi, Miss.

The program will be in charge of Rev. C. N. Guice, of Canton, Miss. Leagues, Sunday schools, and Missionary Societies will do well to have delegates, who, after attending the session of the Assembly, may bring back results and inspiration to their home organizations. Pastors to whom League work has presented difficulties may overcome these largely by sending some of their brightest young people to be trained for League work.

FITZGERALD S. PARKER.

THAT MANSFIELD CHURCH PROPERTY.

My appeal for money to buy the old Methodist church property in Mansfield for Mansfield College continues to bear some fruit, though by no means as much as the importance of the effort demands, or as one would expect, considering that the movement has had the hearty endorsement of so many presiding elders and other ministers and laymen of prominence. Since my last report the following subscriptions have come to my hand:

E. A. Frost, Shreveport	$10.00
P. O. Rosenstream, New Orleans	10.00
Rev. A. H. Parker, Greenwood	10.00
V. L. Fulton, Shreveport	10.00
Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr., Keithville	10.00
Rev. F. J. McCoy, Shreveport (Queensborough)	10.00
Mrs. and Miss Bubenzer, Bunkie	10.00
Mrs. J. C. Armstrong, Pleasant Hill	5.00
Total	$ 75.00
Previously reported	452.00
Grand total	$527.00
Balance needed	$473.00

Mansfield College has closed a most prosperous session and has a most flattering outlook for next year; and this addition to her property holdings, together with an opportunity to beautify the campus by the removal of the old house of worship, will add much to the attractiveness of the institution and greatly help President Bobbitt in his great work. A new sidewalk has just been laid on the street in front of the college, and there would be a distinct advantage in being able to make as many improvements as possible before the opening of the next term of school. Send in your subscriptions. Mention the matter to your friends.

Very truly,

Mansfield, La.

Dr. Hall was for many years an officer in the Salvation Army, being confidential secretary to the Booths in London. During the past year Messrs. James B. Duke and B. N. Duke gave to Trinity College, Durham, N. C., $1,490,000, besides which the college received from the General Education Board $150,000. Trinity College is by far the most largely endowed college in the Connection, and it has reason to be thankful that its largest benefactors are such men as are the Dukes, who really give their money, instead of trying to place it in such a way as to dominate the money others have given.

There are 156,000 students in the universities of the world identified with the federations of student movements. The object of the several federations is to develop students in their Christian life and equip them for work in the home and foreign fields. More than a million dollars has been spent on buildings for student work, some of this money being used in Turkey. It is evident that the Christian religion has not yet been driven from the great universities of the world.

Rev. Dr. Curtis Lee Laws has resigned the pastorate of the Green Avenue Baptist Church of Brooklyn in order to give his entire time to editorial work on The Examiner, a religious paper published in New York City. Another important move in the field of religious journalism was the recent withdrawal of Mr. W. B. Howland and his two sons from the business management of The Outlook and their affiliation with The Independent, which is in some respects a rival publication.

Rev. Harry F. Ward, of Evanston, Ill., has been selected to fill the Chair of Social Service in the Boston University School of Theology. Dr. Ward is an Englishman by birth, but was educated in the United States. He has been for years engaged in settlement work in Chicago, and is known as one of the most successful industrial evangelists in the North. His selection for the position in Boston is in recognition of his practical ability as a social worker, rather than his theoretical ability, although he is by no means wanting in scholarship.

In comparing the attendance at seven of the well known colleges of Southern Methodism, Bishop Candler gives for them the following enrollment for the year 1912: Emory College, Oxford, Ga., 259; Hendrix College, Ark., 220; Emory and Henry College, Va., 206; Central College, Mo., 197; Randolph-Macon College, Va., 164; Kentucky Wesleyan College, 150, and Southern University, Ala., 125. Bishop Candler claims for Emory College the fifth place in point of attendance among all the male colleges of Southern Methodism, including Vanderbilt University.

Rev. J. Miles Carter, pastor of Grace Church, Bluefield, W. Va., is reported to have received into the Church since his last Conference more than 200 members. His congregation recently voted to increase his salary $200, and a little later gave $1000 to Emory and Henry College. One of the contributing causes to the success of his church work is the fact that he believes in circulating the church paper. The total membership of the Grace Church is about 900, and there are 225 copies of the Conference organ circulated among them.

A LONG TIME AGO—IN THE OLD FIELD.

Rev. J. A. Parker, D. D.

II.

St. Paul requested the brethren to pray for him, "that an abundant entrance be given" him. Doubtless the brethren have been praying for this scribe, for where ever he goes in the old field he finds this sort of entrance. In this part the changes in fifty years seem greater than in any place so far traversed. Where one rode through a pine forest for twenty or more miles then, there are now four thriving towns, having a population of from two to three or four thousand. A pine tree of the original forest is hard to find. The saw mills have cut them into lumber and it has been shipped to all points of the compass.

The cabins in which this writer had to dispense the gospel have, in many places, given way to handsome brick buildings. The increased capacity and comfort of the houses of worship have correspondingly increased the pastor's opportunities for doing good. More than ever I am convinced of the need of making our places of worship more comfortable and more attractive. Comfort and beauty in our houses of worship will catch many non-church goers.

Through this pine forest of fifty years ago, where the preacher had anywhere from one to seventeen appointments, and rode on horse back from one thousand to two thousand miles, the A. C. Line and Central Railroad of Georgia have built roads in all directions, and I am told that some of the young preachers feel afflicted when requested to fill more than three or four pulpits each month, and ride two or three hundred miles per annum.

This is to-day, contrasted with long ago. For much of this the people are, perhaps, responsible, by demanding Sunday preaching at every place or none at all. Not far away from where I am now writing, on a Friday night, I preached to a congregation of about twenty people where no religious service had before been held, and ten or twelve miles from any regular preaching place. When opportunity was afforded to those who desired to become members of the Church eleven persons came forward. A church was organized, and from that beginning a membership has grown, so I am informed, to a thriving church. We must not neglect the unoccupied places. It was to such places our Lord sent out his disciples.

The railroads have brought commercial and agricultural life into these ancient pine forests, and the people are learning how to farm. Lands considered worthless in "the long time ago," now have fine crops growing, and are sources of revenue to the energetic farmer. But, alas! Where will the next generation get lumber to build houses? "What fools we mortals be" in not conserving our natural resources! "A long time ago" one would have thought there was timber to supply the world, but if it is obtained here in the future the world will have to supply it. In the religious world, there has been prosperity, characterized by more preachers, more churches, more people in the pews, and more money in the Lord's treasury.

Since writing the above Mrs. Parker and I have moved on to Montgomery, Ala., where we find many kind people and many friends of the "long time ago," among whom is the venerable J. W. Shores, a presiding elder of my early ministry. Eighty-six years find him cheerful and full of memories of the past and ready to preach the Gospel when opportunity affords. Here, too, I found my old time friend and brother, Judge W. H. Parks, at the head of the Chancery Court—than whom no safer man could be found to decide questions of right and wrong without hair-splitting statutory technicalities.

Fifty-three years ago I was admitted into the Alabama Conference at Court Street Church, under the presidency of Bishop J. O. Andrew, and in the presence of Bishop Joshua Soule. Forty-three years ago, at the close of the Conference session, having been transferred by Bishop McTyeire to the Little Rock Conference, and at the close of the pastorate of the late Dr. John Mathews, I had the pleasure of preaching to the Court Street congregation, where I am booked to preach to-morrow (June 29) at 11 o'clock.

Methodism has kept well up with the growth of this city. Forty-three years ago we had Court Street Church and a mission. Now we have five churches.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

Ever since I accepted the presidency of Centenary College, I have been impressed with the importance of prayer as a necessary factor in its development. It is imperatively necessary that in the near future we plan a campaign for a minimum of one hundred thousand dollars. I want the preachers and laymen and women to join me in daily intercession that the Holy Spirit may guide in selecting the plans to be adopted to secure this money, and that he may open the heart of some person of means to make a large gift that will challenge a generous response from the entire Church in Louisiana. If you will join me in this prayer, drop me a line. R. H. WYNN.

However, the United States will not be ready to say to the world, "Pass through!" The one remaining big task yet to be done is the work of fortifying it, a task that will cost $2,600,000.

THE PATHFINDERS.

Bishop Walter R. Lambuth, having been appointed by the College of Bishops in charge of the mission to be opened in Central Africa, sailed from Antwerp, Belgium, October 14, 1911, accompanied by Prof. John W. Gilbert of the C. M. E. Church. After an ocean voyage of twenty-one days, and travel on the Congo, Kassal and Lulua Rivers for another three weeks they reached Luebo, the headquarters of the Southern Presbyterian mission, thirteen hundred miles from the sea.

Nothing could exceed the hospitality of the Presbyterian missionaries, white and colored, who welcomed them to Luebo and after a sojourn of a few days, provided the representatives of the two Methodisms with everything necessary for the equipment of a caravan for exploration in new and untried fields in the remote interior.

Three days before Christmas our pioneers started from Luebo upon a journey of exploration with sixty carriers who bore their tent, hammocks, provisions, cloth, salt, barter goods, medicine chest, etc. For nearly six weeks they traveled in an easterly direction through forests and jungles, through open veldts and across many streams. In one case a river was so swift and dangerous that the transfer from one side to the other was made over a bridge of vines. These were twisted together in three strong cables arranged in the shape of the letter V and smaller vines interlaced and woven with extraordinary skill.

While several cannibal tribes were encountered and the party was obliged to spend the night in the villages of some of these, as a rule, the leaders and their men had the hospitality of the villages extended to them by the chiefs and, in some cases, urgent invitations were given to remain for evangelistic work. Where evidences of hostility were manifested or there was unwillingness to receive any advances, a few lumps of salt to the warriors and a pound package to the chief settled the matter for the time being and enabled the travelers to go on their way.

The purpose held steadily in view from the beginning was the discovery of a tribe open to the gospel, and of a location for a mission which might meet the requirements of food supply, accessibility and health. On February 1, 1912, after forty-one days of marching on foot, they reached the village of the great chief, Wembo Niama. The Batatela, over which he rules, is a vigorous tribe of warriors nearly half a million strong. At first the chief was suspicious and not inclined to accept advances. Suddenly his whole demeanor changed. He discovered a long-lost friend in Mudimbi, the leading evangelist of the Presbyterian Church, who had volunteered to accompany Bishop Lambuth and Prof. Gilbert. The house of Wembo Niama was placed at their disposal, the sixty carriers abundantly supplied with Indian corn, millet, rice, yams, beans, plantains and bananas, and every possible assistance rendred in the matter of searching for a favorable site near by for a mission compound. A Providence, which is unmistakable, guided those who have thus pioneered the way into the heart of the Dark Continent and at the same time prepared the heart of the great heathen chief for the reception of God's messengers.

The Belgium Government has granted a permanent concession of land at Hibangu, Wembo Niama's village, nine days' journey from the Sankuru River by a more direct route, and three missionaries and their wives have been accepted for service. These are Rev. C. C. Bush, Dr. D. L. Humpower, and Mr. J. A. Stockwell. They will sail from Antwerp the first week in November in company with the Bishop upon his return from South America. The Church has nobly responded to the needs of the mission.

The only item unprovided for is the sum of $3,000 for the construction of the three missionary parsonages which should be built in January, 1914. This need was considered by the Board of Church Extension in Annual Session in Dallas, Texas, in May, as the following extract from the official minutes will show:

"On motion of Bishop W. R. Lambuth, the Corresponding Secretary was authorized to raise a special of $3,000 for building three parsonages in Africa, subject to the approval of the Board of Missions."

The Board of Missions approved the action the following week. I am sure there are hundreds of people in our Church who will count it a privilege to make a contribution toward housing our first missionaries in Africa. The entire amount of $3,000 should be in hand by the first of November, of which amount $369.35 has already been received.

Under direction of the Executive and Finance Committee of the Board, I have had prepared a beautiful photogravure of Bishop Lambuth and Prof. Gilbert. The picture is one which is suitable for framing, and is 11x14 inches in size. The Committee has instructed me to send a copy of this picture to every contributor as a souvenir of the part had in the erection of the first parsonages for our mission in Africa. Send a contribution without delay and receive by return mail our receipt and a copy of this beautiful picture entitled "The Pathfinders." This magnificent picture of our heroic and self-sacrificing Bishop as he appeared in the heart of Africa, will carry a blessing to every home it enters, and to every Sunday school class whose walls it adorns.

Bear in mind that Bishop Lambuth has raised the money with which to open the mission without cost to the Boards, denying himself the comfort of home and rest since his return to do this, except the $3,000 needed to build the parsonages. We will not disappoint him in the matter of housing the three faithful men who will go with him to the Dark Continent this fall. Send your contributions without delay.

ATTENTION, SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Up to date I have received Children's Day money from five charges in the Aberdeen District, ten from the Corinth, two from the Columbus, three from the Durant, five from the Greenville, six from the Holly Springs, six from the Winona, and thirteeen from the Sardis. The Sunday School Board borrowed $560 in January to make up a deficit of last year. This amount will be paid this week. So far our Field Secretary has not been paid either expense account or salary. There is not a man in the Conference that wants this efficient worker to have her wages withheld after the money has been collected.

EPWORTH LEAGUE PROGRESS.

An address to the Church from the Epworth League Board in session at Dallas, Texas, May 5th and 6th.

Growth.

It is gratifying to be able to publish figures showing a substantial increase in the number of chapters and the enrollment of members. From May 1912 to May 1913, two hundred and sixty-nine new societies were chartered, with a total membership of seven thousand one hundred and forty-three. By a fair estimate this gain should place the total enrollment of the Epworth League at approximately 140,000 members.

Financial.

The treasurer's report shows a deficit for the year of $1000. This is explained in part by the fact that the usual call for the ten cent assessment was reserved pending the result of Anniversary Day offering, on May 4. The fact is that a greater number of chapters contributed to the support of the Central Office for the year 1912-1913 than ever before in the history of the Epworth League. This consideration makes us sanguine of an early recovery of financial efficiency.

In connection with this question of finance, the Board has set in motion a memorial to the next General Conference pleading that Anniversary Day be made a part of the Church calendar, and that a record of the offering received on that day be inserted in the quarterly and Annual Conference minutes. Besides this, the Secretaries were instructed to conduct a canvass for personal subscriptions to the budget of the Central Office. Through this address the Board desires to urge all loyal supporters of the Epworth League to give heed to these provisions, and rally with promptness to the relief of the administration.

Changes in the Constitution:

Honorary Members.

A class of honorary members of the Epworth League was created. An honorary member must be above thirty years of age, and must have been an active member of the society previously to his advancement to honorary membership. He has all the privileges and obligations of an active member, except that of holding office in the chapter; provided, nevertheless, that, if in the judgment of the pastor, it is thought expedient that he should hold office, the honorary member may assume such responsibilities.

This action was taken for the purpose of trying to create a more normal and consistent movement of the membership through the successive stages of League work to timely graduation. The Board would pointedly emphasize the soundness of the principle involved and exhort the leaders in Epworth League work everywhere to make the act of practical effect.

The Junior League.

An amendment to the constitution was adopted providing that the First Department of the Senior chapter should be charged with the responsibility of promoting and conducting the Junior League. This was done in order to secure a closer and more vital bond between the Senior and Junior work. Every Senior chapter is, therefore, cautioned not to overlook or neglect this exceedingly important addition to its obligations.

Boys' Work.

The Commission appointed in the summer of 1912 to devise an attractive and practical scheme of work with boys, recommended the establishment of an order to be called The Knights of Szelah. The constitution of the Boys' League is to be changed to agree with the details of the proposed plan. The Commission was continued with instructions to prepare literature and promulgate the new order as rapidly as possible.

Conventions and Assemblies.

During the approaching summer twenty-five major League Conferences and institutes will be held, in fourteen States. The schedule of dates for these gatherings has been so arranged as to permit the Central Office to be represented at each Conference. A single theme has been adopted by nearly all the Conferences, and the program used will be as nearly uniform as local conditions allow.

New ventures in Epworth League Conference work will be made at Arcadia, Mo., and at Lake Junaluska, N. C. At the latter place, from August 6th to 17th the Epworth League, conjointly with the Sunday school, will conduct a Conference for the inspiration, instruction and training of its workers.

The members of the Board, with unanimous conviction, join the Secretaries in a plea to pastors and leaders to rally the young people in great companies to attend these Conferences during the summer.

The International Convention of the Epworth League, which should have fallen in this year, has, by common consent, been postponed until the summer of 1914. This agreement seemed appropriate in view of the fact that the meeting in 1914 will serve the purpose of celebrating the Quarter-Centenary of the history of the Epworth League. The time and place of the Convention will be determined by the Commission into whose hands these particulars are customarily relinquished.

In the winter of 1914, it has been determined to hold a great all-Southern Epworth League Convention in Havana, Cuba. A plan for promulgating the convention has been prepared in outline. The Board of Missions has endorsed the suggestion. Especially popular the idea has proved to be, in view of the enlarging support which the Epworth League is finding itself able to give to the Cuba Mission.

Missionary Activity.

In this connection, the Board rejoices to announce an increase of $6000 in the Epworth League's gifts to missions over last year. Of the total of $31,000 so applied, $10,000 went into the Cuba fund. The Young People's organization thus hastened to consummation the long delayed project of building Candler College at a cost of over $40,000.

A proposal came before the Board, and was concurred in, that all the Epworth Leagues in Mexico be unified under one administration.

Commission on Legislation.

"In anticipation of the next General Conference" a commission was constituted to prepare, in ample advance for thorough discussion, such "changes in the disciplinary charter of the Epworth League as may seem advisable." The commission is composed of Bishop J. H. McCoy, Dr. F. S. Parker, Miss Ada Trawick, Rev. R. W. Hood, Rev. Paul B. Kern, and Rev. J. Marvin Culbreth. All suggestions for the commission should be mailed to Dr. F. S. Parker, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

Invitation from Dallas.

The Epworth League Board feels a sincere pride in announcing to the Church at large the beautiful act of the Leaguers of Dallas in inviting the Epworth League to remove its official domicile to their fair and growing city. Knowledge of the magnificent way in which Dallas honored the Board at its recent meeting has already spread over the Connection, and it would be strange if there are not to be found some who are ready to confess a prejudice in favor of the Dallas proposal. J. H. McCOY.

SHALL WE HAVE NO KING BUT CAESAR?

Dear Brother Meek: As a member of the great M. E. Church, South, it has pained me that there should for a moment be the necessity of a discussion of the question of the theater in connection with the Church, the Bride of Christ; and I want to thank you for the firm and uncompromising stand you have taken. May God help the ministers of the Church to stand in a solid phalanx behind you, and give no uncertain sound in regard to this thing concerning which there should be no question whatever. We surely do not wish the Church to crucify Christ afresh, nor put him to an open shame; neither do we want to wound him in the house of his friends. There seems to be an inclination on the part of some to make the Church a great machine without power, gifts or graces. As such, its members would be but foolish virgins without sufficient oil to go in to the marriage supper.

Laying aside all these high and holy things that belong to the Bride of Christ, let us consider the question from the standpoint of those who do not search the Scriptures for eternal life, nor "pray without ceasing," but who have said, "We have no king but Caesar." Can our young people, or old ones, either, who attend the theater with its footlights, ballet dances, decollete gowns, excitement, late hours, and late suppers, grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ? Can they on this diet learn to relish the strong meat of the Word? Will they not remain babes in Christ, if not altogether strangers to him? Is it possible to see and hear plays, the plots of which no decent, and self-respecting person can discuss afterwards, and know the mind of Christ concerning us? The theater is reproducing numbers and numbers of plays to immense houses, in the order of the serials now appearing in a certain class of cheap periodicals. Now if there were not a taste for such plays and stories, they would not be reproduced nor written. Writers and players cater to the public appetite, and shall the Church join hands with them and bid them "godspeed?" Nay, verily!

Recently a minister of the North Mississippi Conference was on a visit to Nashville. He said he did not want hear-say on this thing, but wanted to judge for himself. Accordingly, he went to one of the leading theaters, where I suppose many of "the best people in the world go." He said he should have been ashamed to have sat through the performance with his wife. Shall the Bride of Christ lift the ban from this thing? Nay, verily!!

There is still another to consider: Do not the things of God, church services, prayer meeting, Children's Day exercises, etc., seem stale and uninteresting after an evening of excitement in these places of amusement? Does one accustomed to this kind of entertainment enjoy with a holy joy the services of the sanctuary? I fear not. Shall the Church be behind the great men of our Nation in keeping up the standard? Praise God for the men in high places who are not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ!! We ought to lift our hats to them and encourage and pray for them. We will not if we are theater, wine-supper Christians, though.

Now Brother Meek, continue to lift the standard high and let us not trail it in the dust, nor even incline it that way. With the Methodist Church admitting worldly amusements, and the Baptist Church joining hands with Jews and Roman Catholics to cut the school children out of hearing the Word daily, God would soon raise himself up another people to do his work here on earth. So let us stay in his service a while longer. It seems to me you can do no greater work than to stay by the Advocate. May our Father hold you up and you shall be safe!

Yours in His name,

A CHRISTIAN MOTHER.

HOW CHIPMUNK CAME BY HIS STRIPES.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The Merry Little Breezes of Old Mother West Wind are great friends of Striped Chipmunk. They hurry to call on him the very first thing every morning after Old Mother West Wind has brought them down from the purple hills. They always beg him to stop and play with them, and he always refuses. But he does it in such a merry way and with such a twinkle in his eyes that the Merry Little Breezes never get cross because he won't play. No, sir, they never get cross. If anything, they think just a little bit more of Striped Chipmunk because he won't play. You see they know that the reason he won't play is because he has work to do, and Striped Chipmunk believes and says:

"When there is work for me to do,
The sooner started, sooner through."

So every morning they ask him to play, and every morning they laugh when he says he has too much to do. Then they rumple up his hair and pull his whiskers, and give him last tag and race down to the Smiling Pool to see Grandfather Frog, and beg him for a story. Now Grandfather Frog is very old and very wise, and he knows all about the days when the world was young, and when he is feeling just right he dearly loves to tell about those long ago days.

One morning the Merry Little Breezes found Grandfather Frog sitting as usual on his big green lily-pad, and they knew by the way he folded his hands across his white and yellow waistcoat that it was full of foolish green flies.

"Oh, Grandfather Frog! Please do tell us why it is that Striped Chipmunk has such beautiful stripes on his coat," begged one of the Merry Little Breezes.

"Chugarum! They are stripes of honor," replied Grandfather Frog in his deep, gruff voice.

"Honor! Oh, how lovely! Do tell us about it; please do! begged the Merry Little Breezes.

"Chugarum!" began Grandfather Frog, his big goggly eyes twinkling. "Once upon a time, when the world was young, old Mr. Chipmunk, the grandfather a thousand times removed of Striped Chipmunk, lived very much as Striped Chipmunk does now. He was always very busy indeed, but it was always about his own affairs. 'By attending strictly to my own business, I have no time to meddle with the affairs of my neighbors, and so I keep out of trouble,' said old Mr. Chipmunk."

"Just what Striped Chipmunk says now," broke in one of the Merry Little Breezes.

"That shows that he is just as wise as was his grandfather a thousand times removed, about whom I am telling you," replied Grandfather Frog. "Old Mr. Chipmunk wore just a little plain brown coat. It didn't worry him a bit, not a bit, that his coat was just plain brown. It kept him just as warm as if it was a beautiful red like that of Mr. Fox, or handsome black and white like that of Mr. Skunk. He was perfectly satisfied with his little plain brown coat and took the best of care of it.

"One day as he was hurrying home to dinner he climbed up on an old stump to look around and make sure that the way was clear. Over in a little path in the meadow grass was walking old Mr. Meadow Mouse. He was strolling along as if there was nothing in the world to fear. Way back behind him in the same little path, and walking very fast but very quietly, was big Mr. Bob Cat. His eyes were yellow, and a hungry look was in them. He didn't see Mr. Meadow Mouse, but he would in a few minutes. Mr. Chipmunk saw that he would, and that there was no place for Mr. Meadow Mouse to hide.

"'Hump! I never meddle in other people's affairs and this is none of my business,' said little Mr. Chipmunk.

"But old Mr. Meadow Mouse was a friend. He thought a great deal of Mr. Meadow Mouse, did little Mr. Chipmunk. He couldn't bear to think of what would happen to Mr. Meadow Mouse if big Mr. Bob Cat should catch him. Then almost without realizing what he was doing, little Mr. Chipmunk began to shout at big Mr. Bob Cat and to call him names. Of course big Mr. Bob Cat looked up right away and saw little Mr. Chipmunk sitting on the old stump. His eyes grew yellower and yellower, and he drew his lips back from his long, sharp teeth in a very angry way, and his little bob tail twitched and twitched. Then with great leaps he came straight for the old stump on which little Mr. Chipmunk was sitting.

"Little Mr. Chipmunk didn't wait for him to get there. Oh, my, no! He took one good look at those fierce, hungry yellow eyes and long cruel teeth, and then he whisked into a hole in the old stump. You see there wasn't time to go anywhere else. Big Mr. Bob Cat found the hole in the stump right away. He snarled when he saw it. You see it was too small, very much too small for him to get into himself. But he could get one hand and arm in, and he did, feeling all around inside for little Mr. Chipmunk. Little Mr. Chipmunk was frightened almost to death. Yes, sir, he was frightened almost to death. He made himself just as flat as he could on the bottom of the hollow, and held his breath.

"'You better come out of there, Mr. Chipmunk, or I'll pull you out!' snarled Mr. Bob Cat.

"Little Mr. Chipmunk just snuggled down flatter than ever, and didn't say a word. Mr. Bob Cat felt 'round and 'round inside the hollow stump, and raked his long claws on the sides until little Mr. Chipmunk's hair fairly stood up. Yes, sir, it stood right up on end, he was so scared. When it did that it tickled the claws of Mr. Bob Cat. Mr. Bob Cat grinned. It was an ugly grin to see. Then he reached in a little farther, and made a grab for little Mr. Chipmunk. His wide-spread, sharp claws caught in little Mr. Chipmunk's coat near the neck, and tore little strips the whole length of it.

"Of course little Mr. Chimunk squealed with pain, for those claws hurt dreadfully, but he was glad that his coat tore, for if it hadn't Mr. Bob Cat would surely have pulled him out. After a long time Mr. Bob Cat gave up and went off growling and snarling. When he thought it was safe, little Mr. Chipmunk crawled out of the old stump and hurried home. He ached and smarted terribly, and his little plain brown coat was torn in long strips.

"'This is what I get for meddling in the affairs of other folks!' said little Mr. Chipmunk bitterly. 'If I'd just minded my own business it wouldn't have happened.'

"Just then he happened to look over to the house of Mr. Meadow Mouse. There was Mr. Meadow Mouse playing with his children. He didn't know a thing about what his neighbor, little Mr. Chipmunk, had done for him, for you remember he hadn't seen Mr. Bob Cat at all. Little Mr. Chipmunk grinned as well as he could for the pain.

"'I'm glad I did it,' he muttered. 'Yes, sir, I'm glad I did it, and I'm glad that Neighbor Meadow Mouse doesn't know about it. I'm glad that nobody knows about it.'

"'A kindly deed's most kindly done
In secret wrought and seen of none.'

"'And so I'm glad that no one knows.'

"Now just imagine how surprised little Mr. Chipmunk was when in the fall it came time to put on a new coat to have Old Mother Nature hand him out a beautiful striped coat instead of the little plain brown coat he had expected. Old Mother Nature's eyes twinkled as she said:

"'There's a stripe for every tear in your old coat, made by the claws of Mr. Bob Cat the day you saved Mr. Meadow Mouse. They are honor stripes, and hereafter you and your children and your children's children shall always wear stripes.'

"And that is how it happens that Striped Chipmunk comes by his striped coat, and why he is so proud of it and takes such good care of it," concluded Grandfather Frog.—The Peoples' Home Journal.

A CHANCE TO HELP.

The women of the Crowley Church are very anxious to secure subscriptions to the Ladies' Home Journal and Saturday Evening Post. They made the first considerable sum of money for the new church scheme through a bonus of several hundred dollars received from the Curtis Publishing Company several years ago. Any one desiring to favor them should send subscriptions to Mrs. H. H. Hawsey, Crowley, La.

Editorial.

WHY WE HAVE NOT SPOKEN OUT.

The reason that we have made no editorial comment upon the Carnegie-Kirkland transaction is not because we have the slightest tolerance for that discreditable procedure, but because we have been out of our office ever since the facts in the case became known. As we see it, this occurrence constitutes the most humiliating chapter in the history of our Church, and, so far as our knowledge extends, in the history of world-wide Methodism. Shameful as has been the course pursued by some other church institutions to get on the Carnegie Foundation, this affair is, we think the ugliest and most outrageous of them all. Indeed, taken in its complete setting and full significance it is nothing short of a public scandal, such as ought to stir the righteous indignation of every high-minded Christian gentleman, whether he be a Methodist or not.

Whatever may have been the intentions of those who conceived this scheme, as Bishops Candler and Hoss have intimated, in effect, it wears every aspect of an attempt to influence improperly the Supreme Court of Tennessee in the adjudication of the litigation for the control of the University now pending before that tribunal. We are not surprised to see individual members of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust rushing into print to assail the Bishops of the Church and, if possible, to confuse the public mind as to the true meaning of their negotiations with Mr. Carnegie. Callous indeed must be the conscience that could rest quiescent under the plain implications of this seemingly strategic maneuver. Nor are their apparent fears without foundation. The transaction is undoubtedly of a character to smirch and stain, and squirming under the consciousness of this fact is one of its legitimate and inevitable effects.

We do not mean to convey the impression that we think all the participants in it are to be held equally responsible. It is upon the shoulders of a few dominating leaders that the blame should principally rest. The little fellows on the Board who are flattered by the recognition given them and who are really incapable of being anything but an echo of somebody else should perhaps be more pitied than censured. It is certainly not right to expect more of a man than his meager capacity warrants. Sam Jones used to compare characters of this kind to a Shetland pony which had associated with the big horses and had fed alongside of them until he imagined that he was as large and sought to make as much noise as any of them. There are yet not a few of this variety of the human species extant. To hear persons who have had practically nothing to do with colleges except to walk through their halls on Commencement occasions, after having been complimented with a trusteeship, talking about great educational policies and what it takes to make and unmake institutions of learning—matching their opinions concerning such matters against those of the foremost men of the Church, men of great scholarship and large experience in this important field of service—is both amusing and pitiful.

But to us the most remarkable thing in connection with this shameful affair is that the majority of the Trustees should seemingly manifest surprise that all their statements have not been taken at once at their face value. That they should appear to expect this in the light of past events is astonishing beyond measure. These, in the main, are the same gentlemen who repeatedly affirmed that the Church owned Vanderbilt University, but who later filed a bill in the Chancery Court in which logically they utterly repudiated their own former declarations—the same who, through their leaders, asseverated that they had "accepted the findings of the Vanderbilt Commission and intended in good faith to be bound by them," but who subsequently averred that they had never had any such intention. The truth is, they have wiggled in and wiggled out, and have changed their position from time to time, as they thought the exigency of the situation demanded, with the most unblushing effrontery. How, in view of these facts, they could hope to get the Methodist public innocently to swallow their suave assurances, we fail to see. Perhaps the philosophy of these gentlemen is different from that of Abraham Lincoln and they think that the people can be fooled all the time. But their masks have been too completely torn from them to be again successfully assumed.

If any Southern Methodist is so guileless as to doubt for one moment what the real attitude of the majority of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust is toward the Church, let him procure a copy of the Vanderbilt Bulletin (really a catalogue) which was issued last February (the latest that we have seen) and read therein the general statement concerning the establishment of the University. What Commodore Vanderbilt and W. H. Vanderbilt, and Cornelius Vanderbilt, and W. K. Vanderbilt, and the citizens of Nashville, and various other private parties did for the institution is specifically mentioned, but from the first line to the last the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, nowhere appears. Nothing that she has done for the University, either in the beginning or since, is referred to at all. Not a word is said about the Memphis Convention out of which the University emerged. All that relates to the Church is wiped entirely out. If these gentlemen can write the history of Vanderbilt University and eliminate the Southern Methodist Church, who can longer question their hostility to her interests in the institution? If they have cast her out of their catalogue, who doubts that they will wholly eject her from any participation in the government of the University or any legal connection with its affairs, if only they can? Indeed, it is this that by devious methods they are now striving to do, even going to the extent of invoking the assistance of a millionaire agnostic, who is the greatest enemy to Christian education that can to-day be found in any land.

But enough for the present. These remarks are explanatory and are merely preliminary to what we shall later have to say. The real merits of this last phase of the Vanderbilt controversy, Providence permitting, we hope to discuss in the near future—probably in the next issue of the Advocate. And when we do, we shall strive to express our convictions without fear or favor, and to call things by their right names. The time for conventional restraints has, in our judgment, passed, and the hour has arrived when the plain, unvarnished truth needs to be set forth, without being softened by any words of excuse or apology. Courtesy is a fine thing in its place, but it should not be transformed into an altar upon which justice and right are immolated. When this is done, instead of a virtue to be commended, it becomes a weakness and hurtful hindrance.

ROMAN CATHOLIC EDUCATORS IN CONFERENCE.

The Roman Catholic Church closed a three days' educational convention in New Orleans last week, in which representatives of all the schools belonging to that Church in the United States were present. The convention was noteworthy, in that it expressed the opinion of a large Church on many timely topics. On July 4, the Resolution Committee presented the conclusions of the convention in the form of a series of resolutions which seemed to meet the unanimous approval of the body.

The following are some of the most important conclusions reached: Because of the disposition of pupils to leave school early, it was decided to shorten the course of study in the primary schools and permit pupils to enter high schools after but six years in the primary department, thus shortening the school life of students two years. The Association expressed itself unreservedly against accepting any funds from Mr. Carnegie, or any other person holding views concerning church control of educational institutions similar to those expressed by him, and protested against his money being used by the American Medical Association in connection with hospitals. Believing it to be the duty of parents, and them alone, to speak with children on the subjects of sexual morality, the Catholic educators unqualifiedly condemned teaching sex hygiene in the public schools.

AN URGENT CALL.

On another page of the Advocate appears an article entitled "Pathfinders," written by Dr. W. F. McMurry, the General Secretary of the Board of Church Extension. The article, besides being an interesting account of the locating of the site of our new mission in Africa, is a forceful appeal to the readers of the Advocate to help contribute $3000 for the erection of three parsonages for the use of the families of the three missionaries who will soon go to that distant field. One of these brethren is Mr. John A. Stockwell, of Lake Charles, La., whose wife is the daughter of Brother Howell, a local elder living at Lake Arthur, La. For this reason, if for no other, the Advocate's readers in Louisiana, especially, should count it a privilege to contribute toward the construction of these needed residences for our workers in Africa. It is to be hoped that this call will receive prompt consideration, and that Dr. McMurry will shortly have the necessary funds with which to make comfortable the home life of Southern Methodism's pioneer missionaries to the Dark Continent.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Hon. H. H. White, of Alexandria, La., who is a trustee of Vanderbilt University, was not present at the recent meeting of that Board.

Rev. H. W. Van Hook is optimistic concerning the outlook for the Seashore Campground School. He says that there is every reason to believe that the next session will be a most prosperous one.

We were pleased to note that the Founder's Medal in the Dental Department of Vanderbilt University was this year awarded to Mr. George M. Wheeler, of Greenville, Miss., who is a member of our church in that city. This is a distinction well worth striving for.

Rev. T. B. Holloman was booked to preach a missionary sermon for Rev. J. F. Campbell at Rocky Springs, Miss., on Sunday, June 29. We dare say that the discourse which he delivered was an able treatment of this great theme, and that it was well worth hearing.

Bishop and Mrs. W. B. Murrah will leave Jackson, Miss., for their long journey to the Orient on July 14. Their son, Mr. William Murrah, who is connected with the well known law firm of Memphis, Fitzhugh & Biggs (Mr. Fitzhugh is his uncle), will accompany his parents as far as England, where he will spend a month before returning to the United States.

The Leland (Miss.) Enterprise of July 5 contained an interesting reference to a series of revival services which are being conducted in that city by the pastor, Rev. L. W. Cain, assisted by Rev. W. S. Lagrone of Greenville. Brother Lagrone's pulpit work was highly commended, as was also the singing of Mr. I. N. Price. We trust that the labors of these brethren may result in the accomplishment of much good.

One of the young men who were awarded the degree of Bachelor of Divinity at the recent Vanderbilt Commencement was Mr. Joseph H. Brooks, of Boyle, Miss. He is an A.B. graduate of Millsaps College, and is a son of Rev. J. J. Brooks of the North Mississippi Conference and a grandson of Rev. J. H. Brooks, of hallowed memory. He is a young minister of much promise, and we pray that he may have a career of large usefulness.

From Carriere, Miss., under date of the 7th inst., Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., writes as follows: "We are now worshiping in our new church at Picayune, Miss., and expect to begin a revival there on July 18, with Rev. J. W. Campbell, of Raymond, Miss., to do the preaching. We desire the prayers of the Church in behalf of these services. We had a great meeting at Carriere the latter part of May, which resulted in many bright conversions and five additions to the Church."

Our worthy pastor at Rosedale, Miss., Rev. T. M. Bradley, sent us from New York a few days since a postal card which reads as follows: "My brother, Rev. O. W. Bradley, and I are having a delightful time. While on a trip to Gettysburg, we are taking in New York and Washington." We are pleased to know that these hustling young itinerants are having a brief respite from their labors, and that they are finding their sojourn at the National Capital and in the great American Metropolis so pleasant.

A card received from Rev. W. J. Porter, of Bienville, La., written from Denver, Colo., on the 5th inst., says: "I have been spending a few days in sight of the Rockies. I saw much on the way, and have greatly enjoyed a two weeks' stay in Bowlder, Colo. A mountain-top vision is worth while. The opening of the Chautauqua at Bowlder yesterday was an important affair. I am to join a party of one hundred Texans (including Bishop Mouzon and thirty preachers) on a trip to the Yellowstone Park on July 7."

It was the Editor's pleasure to worship with the congregation at Black Hawk, Miss., last Sunday morning. The sermon preached by the pastor, Rev. A. H. Williams, from the text, "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth," was a forceful and impressive one. Brother Williams will be assisted in his meeting at Black Hawk by Dr. H. G. Henderson of Lexington, and in the series of revival services which he is planning to conduct at Acona he will probably have with him Rev. J. E. Cunningham, of Greenwood.

The Hattiesburg District Conference is now in session at Mt. Olive, Miss. We are sorry that the extended notice of this conference which was sent to the Advocate reached our office last week after we had gone to press.

While the Mississippi Conference was not largely represented in the attendance upon the Missionary Conference at Lake Junaluska, N. C., last week, it has reason to be proud because of the princely gift of $10,000 to the missionary cause made by Mr. Enochs, an honored layman of Jackson.

Rev. T. J. Warlick, of Homer, La., sends us the following item of news from his choice charge: "Our Board of Stewards has given the pastor a month's vacation and a check to defray his expenses while taking it. Our good people here know how to do nice things for their pastor, and he duly appreciates them."

Rev. Martin Hebert, of New Iberia, has been spending the past few weeks on the Evangeline Mission assisting Rev. Louis Hoffpauir, the pastor, in revival meetings. According to a report from one who attended the meeting held at Pine Prairie, La., Brother Hebert has been preaching some splendid sermons and the results are most gratifying. He is now preaching at Gold Dust.

The total enrollment of ministers and others at the Seashore Divinity School this year was 118, which was one more than the total enrollment last year. Dr. McNeil, the Dean of the School, expressed himself as highly gratified with the results of this year's session. There were 39 diplomas given to under-graduates who took examinations on their Conference courses of study.

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb reports progress in the work of our Church at Donaldsonville, La., where he is a faithful pastor. He says that the attendance at prayer meeting outnumbers the membership of the church at that place. The good ladies have added an oil stove and an ice chest to the furnishings of the parsonage, both of which are much appreciated by Sister Lipscomb during this hot weather.

The following notice sent to the Advocate by Rev. James C. McElroy, our pastor at Slate Springs, Miss., is self-explanatory: "All former pastors are invited to be present at the dedication of our new church at Bethlehem, on the Slate Springs charge, North Mississippi Conference, on the first Sunday in August." We congratulate Brother McElroy and the excellent people of Bethlehem on having brought to completion this new house of worship.

Rev. C. A. Battle, pastor of the Felicity Street Church of New Orleans, was a welcome visitor at the Advocate office last Tuesday morning. He has recently returned from a visit to New York City and the great Missionary Conference at Lake Junaluska, N. C. His report of the Conference was most interesting. After hearing him tell of the great gathering, the spontaneous giving, the inspiring addresses, and the beautiful grounds, we could not but regret not having been present.

In an interesting letter to the Advocate office, Rev. C. M. Morris, our pastor at Mooringsport, La., says: "My brother, Rev. D. A. Morris, has just closed a revival at Gillam, La., which resulted in 21 accessions to the Church. He expects to hold meetings during the summer and autumn, and yet has some open dates. Any of the brethren desiring his services may write him at Mooringsport, La. Our work here is in a fairly prosperous condition. We have received 20 members into the Church since Conference."

On last Sunday Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, our pastor at Sardis, Miss., conducted the morning preaching service at 9 o'clock instead of 11 o'clock, and the Sunday school service followed the preaching service. Brother Gladney changed the hour of morning worship on account of the intense heat at mid-day. Whether this change will be continued through the summer months will depend upon how the congregation attends the early service, as compared with the attendance upon those hitherto held at the 11 o'clock hour.

The following brief report of the Richton, (Miss.) charge, written by the pastor, Rev. M. L. White, reached our office last week: "Everything is moving forward in our church here. Brother H. L. McGehee, the Hattiesburg District Lay Leader, held a really helpful service here on the third Sunday in June. Brother McGehee is one of our very best men, and will render valuable assistance to any pastor who may open the way for him to visit his charge. We also had a very fine Children's Day service on the same day."

The death of Mr. D. A. Saunders, which occurred at Starkville, Miss., on Saturday, June 28, took from our Church in that city one of its leading and most useful members, and from the State of Mississippi one of its worthiest and most enterprising citizens. His burial is reported to have been the most largely attended one that ever took place in Oktibbeha County. It was a matter of deep regret to the Editor that he could not be present. We shall have more to say concerning the translation of this choice man in a later issue of the Advocate.

Rev. J. E. Gray, of Fayette, Miss., favored our office with a brief call last week. The Editor regrets he was out of the city and missed seeing this faithful and efficient worker in the Master's service.

Rev. T. J. Warlick officiated at a double wedding on June 17, which took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. B. B. McCasland, in Homer, La. The two daughters of Brother and Sister McCasland were the happy brides. Dr. Edmond Moreland became the husband of Miss Angie McCasland, and Mr. Ellis Smith, of Homer, was married to Miss Ona. We extend congratulations and best wishes.

In a letter to the Editor, Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, our pastor at West Monroe, La., states that while the church at Grayson was completed this year, all the money for that structure, except about $150, was provided in cash and good subscriptions last year, when the work upon it was also commenced. At his request we give this statement a place in our columns, though we feel sure that in referring to the matter Brother May did not intend to take from any one any credit that may be due him for promoting the success of this commendable enterprise.

Rev. J. L. Sutton has been appointed temporary pastor of the Seashore Camp Ground for the month of July. He will arrange such services in the Tabernacle as he may deem best. Dr. W. H. Huntley, the presiding elder of the Seashore District, will appoint a spiritual leader at the Camp Ground for the month of August. This arrangement by which the presiding elders of the New Orleans and Seashore Districts plan the services at the Camp Ground relieves Rev. W. L. Linfield of that responsibility and gives him more time during the summer months to look after the interests of his splendid congregation in Biloxi.

The Western Methodist, of Little Rock, Ark., in commenting upon the munificent gifts of Major R. W. Millsaps to Millsaps College, in a recent issue, said: "One thing is clear—Major Millsaps has erected for himself a monument of most enviable character. It is an immortal thing that he has done, infinitely better than some men are doing with their money." This is true. And the beauty of it is that the Major's donations have been made without having any strings tied to them. He believes in the Church and is not afraid to trust it to administer his noble benefactions. The two Mississippi Conferences elect all the trustees of this splendid young institution.

ON TWO LIVE ISSUES.

(The following article, written by Dr. Chas. H. Briggs, presiding elder of the St. Joseph District, Missouri Conference, and published in the Western Methodist, is worthy a careful reading. Dr. Briggs has been a member of the last four General Conferences of our Church, being sent each time by the Southwest Missouri Conference, of which he was a life-long member until two years ago.)

The nearly unanimous vote which the Baltimore Conference gave against the proposed change of name sounds the death knell of that measure. We will not change a long name to one a little longer. I voted for that change in 1885, but without any enthusiasm. Could those who desire a change have agreed upon the change which was submitted by the General Conference of 1866 and which received almost a three-fourths majority in the Annual Conferences, they might hope to carry such a measure. But they objected that the name Episcopal Methodist put the emphasis on the wrong word and so we are likely to carry our suffix indefinitely. Well, I have worked under the old name for nearly forty-three years and I can stand it a few years longer. Last week a preacher remarked in my hearing that he would not vote for any man as a delegate to the General Conference who did not favor granting the rights of the laity to women, and then asked me how I stood. I replied that I was not a candidate. Having been transferred away from the Conference which sent me four times to the General Conference, I am not apprehensive that I will have to swelter through three hot weeks in Oklahoma City next May, but I would like to drop a suggestion here concerning an issue which others will have to meet next spring.

Years ago our brethren on the other side of the fence gave laity rights to the women. In their last General Conference there were 799 men, 7 women from foreign fields, 5 colored women, and 12 white women to represent the nearly two million white women in the M. E. Church in this country. I will not assail the logic of the advocates of reform, but what has logic to do with love, politics, or religion? It does not seem to occur to them that women have more votes than men in our Church now. There is only one body in our Church in which all the men have a vote—that is the Church Conference. But here the women have an equal vote with the men. Probably not one-tenth of our men have any vote in the quarterly conference or any higher body. But hundreds of thousands of our women have votes in their Missionary Societies where mere man has only the privilege of paying his money. For a third of a century in every charge of which I have been pastor the number of men who had votes anywhere in the church outside the Church Conference was exceeded several times by the number of women who had votes. And now we are asked not to put the two sexes on an equality, but to give the good women all the privileges the men have and let them still enjoy the advantage of voting by hundreds of thousands in organizations of their own.

If we are going to be logical let us be consistent and abolish all sex distinctions, and land in congregationalism, or better still, claim the larger liberty of the Quakers. If we are weary of our itinerant system, let us throw it away and adopt the independent plan where every church hires its own preacher and makes a contract which can be enforced by law. In such a system let everybody vote.

But with a semi-military system like ours, when the preacher has no rights that can be enforced by law, because no church makes a contract with him, our plan of selecting stewards is adapted to our system; and based upon long experience. I am free to say I am not willing to contend with boards of stewards either as pastor or presiding elder, as I sometimes have to contend with them, when women form a large part of such boards. I can argue with men, I never learned to argue with women, I merely surrender to them.

St. Joseph, Mo., June 18, 1913.

HON. J. C. KYLE DEAD.

Ex-Congressman John C. Kyle, of Sardis, Miss., died at his home in that city, after an illness covering a period of about two years, on Sunday afternoon, July 6. He was a stanch member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and a citizen of high ideals and most exemplary character. He was an able lawyer and served two terms in the lower House of Congress, where he displayed conspicuous ability as a legislator. He was especially honored for his unswerving integrity, which won for him the soubriquet of "Honest John Kyle." His decease will be mourned in every part of the commonwealth of Mississippi. We extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved.

Obituaries.

ISAAC GREEN YOUNG was born Feb. 8, 1836, and was reared to young manhood in the State of Alabama. He then came to Lee County, Miss., and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on probation, as was then the custom of our Church. He was received into full connection in the year of 1866 at old Shiloh and was transferred from there to Hebron, where he held his membership until he was called from labor to reward. On December 20, 1876, he was married to Miss Lucinda Turner. To them were born eleven children, one of whom preceded her father to the glory land. The other ten, with their aged mother, survive him. Two of his sons are preachers in our Church, preaching the Gospel that their father so dearly loved. His home and life had been so thoroughly dedicated to God and his Church that the children had all been brought to Christ in early youth. As a citizen and Mason, husband and father, he was above the average, and was always loyal to his God and his cause. True to his pastor, his zeal was such that he always seemed to forget self for the salvation of others. He had suffered affliction for years, but on the morning of April 5, 1913, God took him to himself almost without suffering. We miss him, but thank God we know where to find him.

His Pastor, M. L. WORD.

The many friends of Mrs. MATTIE WILLIAMS MOREHEAD were greatly shocked to learn of her death at her home in Sidon, Miss., on Monday, June 23, 1913. The remains were interred at Grenada on Tuesday, the funeral services being conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. A. Hall and Rev. O. P. Armour. She was well reared and added to her natural gifts many graces of culture and refinement. Nearly twenty-five years ago she was happily married to Rev. H. C. Morehead, a prominent member of the North Mississippi Conference. As he filled circuit, station, and district, she was the faithful and devout keeper of the parsonage home, doing much by her tact and discretion to preserve harmony in church and community and to contribute to the success of her husband. She taught in the Sunday school, wrought in the mission societies, and lent her influence to every good cause. She will be sadly missed in the community where she had lived and worked for the past seven or eight years. Her devotion to the children of the home was beautiful to see, and it is pleasant to note that it was appreciated and reciprocated by them. Their own mother could scarcely have shown more interest or given more tender care. How much her presence will be missed by these children and the sorrowing husband, none outside the family can know. May the heavenly father comfort them, the aged mother, and other grief-stricken ones in these sad hours of bereavement.

J. R. COUNTISS.

On the morning of June 12, 1913, in the hospital at New Orleans, La., the death angel claimed the spirit of Sister NANCY C. YOUNG (nee Fountain). She was born in Covington, La., and was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Amite City during September of 1889, and married J. L. Young on Nov. 6, 1889. To this happy couple four children were born. One girl preceded her to the glory land, and three boys are living to adorn her training. She rose above the ordinary and so magnified her Christian character as to impress every one with the beauties of that life. As a wife, mother, neighbor, and Christian she was all that could be expected of any one. Her undaunted faith was the foundation of a cheerful hope to the end of life. When death came upon her she began repeating the Lord's prayer. After a few words, breath failed and her cousin (Mrs. Lillie Meekins of the Werlein mission) took up the prayer and concluded it, to which she responded with, "amen." Then she began to quote from Isaac Watt's hymn: "Jesus can make a dying bed, feel soft as downy pillows are, while on his breast I lean my head, and breathe my life out sweetly there." After resting quietly awhile, she began the 23d Psalm and quoted until she gave down again and her cousin helped her to complete it. Then she said to her husband, "It is all right with me;" and last of all she said, "tell them." So let us tell the world how to live that we may meet her.

Her pastor, J. S. RUTLEDGE.

On June 21, the body of Mrs. ADDIE STEWART was laid to rest in the cemetery at Pisgah Church—a large crowd of relatives and friends attending the funeral service which was conducted by her pastor, Rev. F. N. Sweeney, of Wilson, La. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Saunders Stanley. From her father she inherited her wonderful energy and her ability to plan and carry to a successful finish everything she attempted. Addie was the moving spirit in her home, making it bright and attractive for the family and giving a cordial welcome to all visiting friends, more especially if the visitor chanced to be a preacher. Four years ago, she married the man of her choice—Charles Stewart, of Clinton. Two years ago she began to suffer from a distressing malady of the bones that caused intense suffering. Her last moments were very peaceful, however, and free from pain, and we have no doubt that when she heard the call: "Come ye blessed of my Father" she was willing to go. She died at the home of her mother who nursed her very tenderly. May God comfort the heart-broken husband, and send love and joy into the lives of her two little girls that they may not miss too keenly the loss of mother love.

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

A NEW CHURCH BUILDING IN PROSPECT.

Dear Dr. Meek: I feel like writing a short letter concerning the affairs of our Church in Columbia, Miss., one of the most cultured and prosperous little cities in all Mississippi.

We ave a church here of about 400 actual resident members, which will compare favorably with any church in our Conference in all that is essential to church life. Withal it is a growing church, having had a net gain of about 50 members within the last six months. Its Sunday school is the largest in proportion to church membership that I know anything about. The time has come when we need a new church building and we realize the need, and have begun to move in that direction. The last quarterly conference authorized the pastor to appoint a committee to take under consideration the building of a new church and to take such action in the matter as might be deemed advisable.

After due deliberation such a committee was appointed, consisting of eleven prominent laymen. This committee, having been announced on a recent Sunday, met a few days later, and the subject was taken up after temporary organization. It was the unanimous opinion of the committee that a new church was needed, and must be built at an early date. It was also the decision of the committee that the sum of $20,000 should be raised and expended on the building and furnishings.

A sub-committee, consisting of J. N. Worthy, Henry Mounger and W. E. Barnes, was appointed to consider plans for the building and report at the next meeting.

A union revival conducted by Rev. George Cates, evangelist, has lately been held here. The religious life of the city was greatly quickened. As the result many of the members of our church re-pledged themselves for service, and about 30 thus far have been added to our number, making above 75 since Conference.

ROCKY SPRINGS (MISS.) CHARGE.

T. W. Adams, our P. E., came
Our quarterly conference to hold;
A mighty throng, of old and young
Came to greet this "war-horse" bold.

Conference was held on June the fourth,
A day in the week you know;
But people came out, just the same,
For to Church they like to go.

Some thought the Elder was Goliath,
Or a Solomon would be;
But when he came forth with the sling,
He was David to a T.

We sung an hymn and had a prayer,
Then he read the Book Divine;
A song was next, then came the text:
First Corinthians, three, nine.

The Gospel Banner he held up
And told the story to men;
Of home above, and Jesus' love,
And denounced all forms of sin.

He bored the cronic complainer,
And those who "boll-weevil" cry;
Then next he hit the hypocrite
Right spank between the eyes.

A preacher who'll waste precious time
With a fish-hook line and rod,
And folk who'll go to picture shows,
Are not laboring with God.

Then hit the stingy Methodist,
And all of their kith and kin;
Then turned to me, as if to say,
"Now, why don't you say 'Amen.'"

This dear old man, this "war-horse" bold,
Gave the good old "Gospel pill;"
How he did preach, exhort and beseech!
Like Paul of old on Mars Hill.

He preached, and preached, and preached, and preached,
And a line of pearls he strung;
And then at last, at twelve, half-past,
The Doxology was sung.

Then on the ground dinner was spread,
Of bread, of cakes, pies and meat;
The folk at "Skutch," have very much
Of all kinds good things to eat.

Conference was called at half-past two,
The Church business to attend;
But some had gone back to their home,
And the crowd was very thin.

The Pastor's report number one,
Leagues and Sunday schools you know,
Were very fine, and at this time
Better than a year ago.

After reports were read and passed,
The Stewards' report, if you please,
Was fairly good, we knew it would,
Being in hands of men like these.

The Mission work was looked into,
And gratifying to say,
Some progress made and money paid,
And planning for Rally Day.

Some facts are found, not only here,
But are true of every charge;
For all won't shirk, some are alert,
And are working mighty hard.

Now for the District and her boys,
Let only history tell,
Our Elder true, let all of you
Call out the District yell:

Hur-rah-rix! Port Gibson District!
The boys! The boys! Sis! Boom! Bah!
The man who'll come! And "make things hum!"
Elder! Elder! 'Rah! 'Rah! 'Rah!

J. F. CAMPBELL, Pastor.

REVIVAL AT SARDIS, MISS.

We have been blessed with a genuine and deep work of grace in Sardis. Religion has been the topic of conversation around the fireside and upon the streets.

The young men and women each have a prayer meeting that bids fair to accomplish great good.

Our church received nineteen new members, and the other churches have received an equal number. The best of all is, many people in the church discovered the fact that they were without God, and made haste to find him. God surprised the most faithful by doing far more than they asked or expected.

Dr. William J. Cambron did the preaching the first week with great acceptability. Rev. G. A. Klein, of Nashville, Tenn., preached during the two weeks following. Brother Klein has a message—not a new message, but a message out of a new heart, a message that compels attention, a message that grips and sticks. Brother Klein is a prophet of God. His contribution to me and to my church is the greatest I have known. Brother P. M. Boyd is a gospel singer of rare power. These three men make a great team and their labors must bear much fruit.

R. H. B. GLADNEY.

COMMENDS THE ADVOCATE

Dear Dr. Meek: An old farmer, after hearing Daniel Webster deliver one of his great speeches, exclaimed, "Every word weighed a ton!" It would not be out of place to apply these words to the recent article in the Advocate by Bishop Candler, "The Church vs. the Theater." This, with the several editorials on the same subject, brings comfort to the heart of the man who is against worldliness in the Church; I can't speak for the churchman who favors the theater.

And the articles just referred to are not the only ones that ought to feed and steady the Christian heart. In running through the files, beginning with September (1912) numbers, I have been made to realize more than before, how many good things have been appearing in the Advocate. The paper can not be too highly commended for its stand for orthodoxy and against all forms of sin and worldliness. No one likes a straddler. Everybody wants a paper to be decided in its stand on one or the other side of a question. This is one of the things that has commended the New Orleans Christian Advocate to me and caused me to choose it from among a number of periodicals for regular reading.

It is to be hoped that the plea against retrenchment in New Orleans will be heeded. "Should a retreat be sounded?" (May 1 issue) should be answered with an emphatic negative. No more strategic point for the advance of Methodism could be found. The stream of Methodists flowing into the city will be increased when the Panama Canal is opened; they ought to be provided for, and a strenuous effort should be made to reach the tide of the unchurched. The city is making great progress and will make still greater; the Church ought to keep step with the material progress.

Every Methodist preacher should be glad to push the Advocate and every Methodist layman ought to be glad to have it in his home.

Yours fraternally,
W. E. HARRISON.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By R. A. Maddox.

During the month of July the Field Secretary will work on the Fannin, Deasonville, Utica, and Forest charges.

The Rexford Sunday school, five miles in the country, has two organized Bible classes—one Senior and one Adult. This is only a sample of what can be done in the country. You can have a teacher-training class also if you want it.

This is a splendid time to have some special day in your Sunday school to hold the boys and girls during the protracted meetings and the "all-day singings." Put on a contest between them on attendance and such other things as will appeal to them. At the close of the summer give rewards, but not prizes.

The Conference workers, assisted by Brother E. E. French, of Nashville, Tenn., have just closed a two weeks' series of Institutes, which were enjoyed by all who attended, and we hope that much and lasting good was accomplished. Brother French is a very fine Sunday School man and is strictly practical.

While making mention of Children's Day services, I cannot fail to mention the Newton and Montrose charge, which has had Children's Day, and has also taken the 3 cent assessment collection, amounting to over $27. Brother Tolle is another one that does not do things by halves. He has 10 organized classes in his Sunday school.

News comes from Brother W. L. Blackwell, on the Hermanville charge, that he has held successful Children's Day services at three appointments. But that is the way Blackwell and the Hermanville people do things. He reports as follows on collections: Sarepta, $5.50; Pattison (Martin) Church, $3; Hermanville Church, $8; total, $16.50, and this is in the boll weevil district.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Mr. A. J. Johnson, of Tula, has a fine mixed class and is planning to do better things.

Stonewall Jackson said: "I never use liquor, I am more afraid of it than I am of Yankee bullets."

Hon. Lem Seawright, of Ackerman, has a large class of men and women—50 on the roll—with an average attendance of 35 to 37.

Mr. Ellis Young and family and Rev. J. H. Felts and family, with Mr. Young's fine class of Teen-Age boys which Mr. Felts lately organized, are out for a week-end camp.

Superintendent W. W. Stamps, of Collierville, Tenn., will have 50 questions on the year's Sunday school lessons answered at his fine Sunday school rally, giving suitable awards for the best answers. This is a splendid idea.

Mr. Hot-Weather-Slump will be making his appearance in your Sunday schools shortly. Give him a cool reception by having something different doing each Sunday. He will not tarry if he cannot put your school to sleep.

Colorado has 294 Adult Classes and Mississippi, 298; and that good State has telegraphed this message to the Mississippi Adult Classes, "Watch Colorado pass Mississippi." It is to be hoped many Wesley Classes will swell this number and that Colorado will not pass Mississippi—this means classes organized and registered. How many, oh! how many classes fail to do both!

AN ARTICLE OF VALUE FREE.

Readers of this paper who are troubled with burns, bruises, boils, carbuncles, old sores, ulcers, felons, poisonous bites or from skin diseases of any nature, will welcome the following news. Dr W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn., manufacturers of the celebrated Gray's Ointment, will be pleased to send a free sample of this preparation to anyone who will write, in order that those suffering may test personally and without cost the great value of the ointment in relieving such troubles. Mr G. S. Byrd of Williamsburg, Ky., says this of Gray's Ointment: "My wife suffered for more than three years with chronic sores on her lower limbs. She tried a number of doctors without benefit. One advised scraping the bone as the only cure. We purchased and used one box of Gray's Ointment and the one box cured the sores entirely." This is strong evidence, but more convincing proof is an actual trial, so send for free sample. Regular size-25c at druggists or by mail from the above company.—Advertisement.

HOW IS THE $2000 TO BE USED?

Mrs. Neill, the Publicity Superintendent of the Mississippi Conference, gives some interesting items relative to the $2000 pledged to the Home Department at the recent annual meeting of the Society. It is to be divided as follows: $500 to the Council undirected; $500 to the Wesley House at Meridian, which has just been completed and has a small debt which should be paid promptly; and $1000 to be paid on the purchase price of the Wesley House at Biloxi.

Each one of these objects is of great importance, especially the latter, which is housed upon rented property with no improvements, and any money expended for this purpose would be an unwise outlay, unless the property is bought. We are urged to pay these pledges promptly so that the first payment can be made during the summer months, and all be in readiness for the fall work.

Most of the money is in hand for the Day Nursery which is in contemplation for the Wesley House at Biloxi. These foreign children need the religious training which they receive from the night school, kindergarten and Sunday school. It would not be theirs, were it not for Miss Long and the Wesley House.

Girls' Dormitory at Paine College.

The new dormitory for girls at Paine College is nearing completion. This is gratifying news, because it has been greatly needed for several years. Many who have applied for entrance have been turned away because of lack of room. "Now let us as women of the Mississippi Conference allow not a single opportunity to pass, especially among the negro servants in our homes, in which we can tell of the needs of this College and of the good derived from it by those who attend."

Minutes of the Second Annual Conference.

The minutes of the Second Annual Conference of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference have been published and several copies have been sent to each auxiliary. If any auxiliary needs more than were sent they should write Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, Hazlehurst, at once, stating the number needed. These proceedings are not published for the purpose of having them thrown aside, but we urge your prayerful study of same, and also that they receive your consideration at one Auxiliary meeting. They contain your "marching orders" for the year. If you neglect them, your work is sure to suffer.

NOTICE.

By the ruling of the last Council, each Adult Auxiliary is to receive three Bulletins. These are to be sent by the Conference Superintendent to the Auxiliary Superintendent, who must keep one for her own use in presenting the news to the auxiliaries, and hand one to the President of the Society and the other to the 2nd Vice President of the Adult Auxiliary for use in the Young People's Society. Is there a more important office in all the work than that of Publicity Superintendent? This officer is entrusted by the General office with the monthly news message, and its success or failure depends on her. If one single Superintendent fails to give these Bulletins to her President and 2nd Vice President, she robs the church of that which rightly belongs to it, and the work of God is hindered. It therefore behooves every Auxiliary to elect efficient and dependable women as its Publicity Superintendent, or its work will suffer because of a lack of information.

July, the First.

This was the date when all reports should have been sent to Conference officers. Was your auxiliary among the ones that reported "on time?" Have you a Publicity Superintendent? Every office unfilled means the loss of a report from that department. Can you afford to neglect so important a matter?

Mrs. W. D. Kirkland Called to Her Reward.

On May 24 Mrs. W. D. Kirkland entered into rest. She was buried in Spartanburg, S. C., by the side of her husband, Dr. Welburn Davies Kirkland. In 1896 Mrs. Kirkland became the General Treasurer of the Woman's Board of Home Missions, and served in this capacity for thirteen years. Ill health forced her to resign in 1910, but her interest in the work never lagged. She was greatly loved by her co-workers, and was a woman who was sincere, gentle, liberal of thought, and with a high sense of justice. During her years of service in the work the collections increased from $18,000 to $182,569.87 a year.

Who Will Support a Day School in China?

It takes one hundred and fifty dollars to support one of these schools, and their need is very great. In fact, no phase of the work is claiming more attention just now than the day schools in both China and Korea. Just recently men from some of the country districts in Korea appealed to our missionaries to open day schools for girls in connection with the country and village churches. Well equipped day schools are needed all over the Huchow District. Huchow is located in the Chin-kiang Province and has a population of three millions of people. Among this number there are nearly five thousand Christians. Virginia School is their hope for a Christian education. Are we going to gather these souls for the Master, and then refuse them education under Christian influences? May the great need for these Christian day schools be brought home to our women of America! Let us hasten the day when China shall enjoy the same privileges which we do.

Scarritt Endowment.

The Treasurer's Report for the first quarter of 1913 shows that $36.15 has been paid on this endowment fund by our three Conferences—a pro rata of twelve dollars per Conference. Have we been conscientious in the discharge of our duty for this phase of the work? Answer the question on your knees!

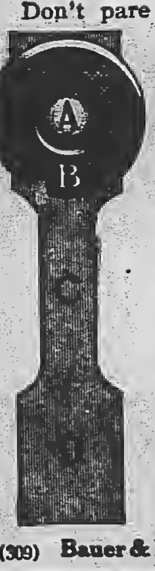
Don't Try to Cheat Your Feet



Don't pare the corn a little and think the corn will go.
Don't daub it with liquids, or use an old-time pad or plaster.
That's fooling with a corn.
A famous chemist found a way to take out corns completely. Now we own his method.
We call it Blue-jay. It's a little plaster, applied in a jiffy. The moment you use it, all pain is stopped.
You forget the corn. In 48 hours take off the plaster and the corns come out. Not a whit of the corn is left.
All this is done without any pain or soreness. Every month a million corns are now removed like this. Try it on one of yours.
A in the picture is the soft B & B wax. It loosens the corn.
B stops the pain and keeps the wax from spreading.
C wraps around the toe. It is narrowed to be comfortable.
D is rubber adhesive to fasten the plaster on.

Read these Letters from Members of the New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club

---

They tell of the wonderful saving in price, the convenient terms, the satisfactory dealings and the superior quality of the pianos and player pianos---in tone, action, finish and durability. These are but a few of the hundreds of commendatory letters which have been received by the Management of the Club, but they will give you a good idea of how and why the Club can be of immense benefit and assistance to you.

Although several hundred members have already joined the Club and have received their pianos, not a single complaint has been made. Everybody has been pleased, and the great majority of the members have taken the trouble to write to the Management expressing their hearty thanks and enthusiastic commendation.

Blowing Rock, N. C., Dec. 29, 1912.

Ludden & Bates, Atlanta, Ga.

Your letter received some days ago, and will say that I will be only too glad to recommend my Piano to the highest. I could not wish for more in a Piano. The woodwork is beautiful and the tone is as sweet as can be. Every day I am prouder of it. I would not be without it for anything.

As to your Club plan, I certainly think it is the very best way in which the Pianos could be sold, and I feel, by joining the club, I got a much better Piano for the money than I could have anywhere else.

Thanking you for your kindness, and for the beautiful Calendar I received from you, I am

MISS ROSE EDNA BROWN.

Brunswick, Ga., Jan. 1, 1913.

Ludden & Bates, Atlanta, Ga.

I purchased a Club Piano from you last April, and am very much pleased with it, and your plan of doing business. Everyone who has seen the Piano admires it very much. Several musicians of ability have played on it, and have pronounced it one of exceptional sweetness and clearness of tone. I can conscientiously and gladly recommend them. R. A. BURFORD.

Canon, Ga., Dec. 1912.

Ludden & Bates, Atlanta, Ga.

The Ludden & Bates Piano I bought of you is O. K., and I would not have any other make. All of the musicians who have tried it think it has the sweetest tone of any they have ever heard. Mine is the only Ludden & Bates in town, and everybody thinks it is the best in town.

I would advise all who want a high-grade Piano at a low price and good terms to buy a Ludden & Bates Club. I think the Club Plan is a good way for poor people to get a piano.

The Piano is a treasure, and everyone remarks on the sweetness of tone, and it has been so much pleasure to the family.

Accept my sincere thanks for your courteous treatment.

We are delighted with your Piano. It is beautifully finished and has such a sweet tone. All our friends, including a musician, pronounced it a most splendid Piano.

I am very much pleased with the Club Plan, because it enables people of moderate means to obtain a fine Piano at a small cost each month.

In regard to the Piano, I am perfectly delighted with it, and everyone that has heard it, or has played on it says they never heard a finer tone, and I can observe such a vast difference in this one and others that are in the community, that have been placed by agents.

Every one, even those that know nothing about music, can tell the superiority of this Piano over others. Wishing you much success, I am

TO THE FRIENDS OF MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

It has become evident that the greatest need of Millsaps College is the erection of more and better buildings, and, especially, more adequate buildings for the housing of its students.

It has been always the ideal of the institution to provide the very best educational advantages at a cost so low that the boy of small means could avail himself of them. With this end in view, the cost of tuition has been placed at a figure lower than that of any similar institution in the country, thus enabling us to compete with institutions that charge no tuition fees. But our purpose cannot be fully accomplished until, by the erection of suitable dormitories, we shall be able to reduce the cost of board and lodging to the very lowest point.

Impressed with these considerations, the Board of Trustees at its recent meeting decided to proceed at once to provide a College Dormitory to cost not less than Fifty Thousand Dollars. Such a building will accommodate from one hundred to one hundred twenty-five boys, and will so supplement our present resources as to meet our present needs.

We are making to the loyal and liberal Methodists of the State, and to our friends generally, an appeal for help, and we are confident that they will supply this imperative need of an institution, whose success means so much to the cause of Christian Education in the South.

Why should not some large hearted Mississippian erect this building as an expression of his gratitude to God for his abounding blessings upon him? Let him make it a memorial of his honored father, or let it bear the name of some other loved one. What monument more fitting than one that will stand a perpetual blessing to the youth of the land! But if one hand be not stretched out to bestow this needed blessing, then let the thousands of hands of good men and women in Mississippi unite in this great work.

The recent gift of $150,000 made by Major Millsaps to the Endowment Fund should inspire us with the desire to show ourselves worthy of so generous a friend and benefactor. Let our friends everywhere rally to our help in this hour of the College's need, and let the response be so prompt and so generous that the opening of the next session may see the enterprise fairly under way.

To our presiding elders we would appeal for such enthusiastic co-operation that the remotest circuits of their Districts shall be impressed with this great need.

To our pastors we would appeal for such active sympathy that at every fireside and from every pulpit this cause shall be made known.

To our people at large we would appeal for such disinterested zeal, that, without delay, their contributions, whether large or small, shall be sent forward for this work.

This year marks the centennial anniversary of the beginning of Methodism in Mississippi. Such an event should call forth some expression of gratitude from the members of our great Church in the State. What could be more appropriate than that we should concentrate upon this immediate and compelling need of Millsaps College?

Yours fraternally,
W. B. MURRAH,
A. F. WATKINS.

AN APPEAL FROM THE SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD.

To Presiding Elders, Preachers in Charge, and Sunday School Superintendents and Teachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The Sunday School Board notes with profound gratitude the steady increase in the efficiency of the Sunday school as an agency for the religious training of the young. We believe that a larger proportion of our Sunday school superintendents and teachers are conscientiously and intelligently devoted to their work to-day than at any other time in our history. And their labor in the Lord is not in vain. Thousands are won to Christ every year through their instrumentality.

But while gratefully recognizing the invaluable service that is being rendered by these consecrated and faithful workers, we feel constrained to call attention to a fact which deserves the most serious consideration. While more than four-fifths of our converts come directly from the Sunday school, we are assured by those who have investigated the matter that sixty per cent of the pupils drop out of the Sunday school without having been won to a saving faith in Christ and brought into the membership of the Church. It is impossible for us, as Sunday school workers, to be satisfied so long as this appalling loss stares us in the face. Excepting fathers and mothers, there is no other class of Christians whose opportunity for soul-winning are so favorable as those of the Sunday school teacher. His work is, for the most part, with the young, and hence with those who are open to the gracious influences of religious truth and Christian character. It is his rare privilege not only to teach his pupils the message of life once every week, but also to come into close personal contact and cultivate intimate personal relations with them. It does seem that under such conditions, if his life is what it should be, his teaching sincere and vital, and his purpose to save his pupils definite and strong, he ought to be able to win more than forty per cent of them.

It may be that the estimated loss is somewhat exaggerated; but it is certainly large enough to justify an earnest appeal to Sunday school superintendents and teachers to make special effort during the coming year in behalf of the unsaved in their schools. The primary mission of the Sunday school is to win to a living faith in Christ those who are brought under its influence, and if it fails in this, all its machinery and equipment and labor are in vain. For what avail our elegant buildings, our fine literature and our expert teaching if our pupils by and by leave us and go out into the world unsaved?

Let us consider that this call is first of all a call to deeper personal consecration. Our words, however wisely and fitly spoken, will amount to but little unless they are re-enforced by our characters. If, therefore, we sincerely purpose and desire to make our work more effective, the best way to begin is by a definite renewal of our own spiritual life. Let the pastor and Sunday school superintendent in each congregation call the teachers and officers together for consultation. Let them talk over their religious experiences one with another after the manner of the old-time class meeting. Then let them unite in prayer for the cleansing and renewing of the Holy Spirit. Sunday school teachers, as well as preachers, need this enduement of power from on high.

Along with prayer there should go counsel with regard to methods of work. Teachers should honestly face the question as to whether or not they have kept before them, as the guiding aim in all their work, the conversion of their pupils, and whether, with a view to this, they have been conscientious in their preparation and clear and forceful in their teaching. And it should be remembered that the teacher's preparation must include prayer for spiritual guidance and knowledge of his pupils as well as study of the lessons. The teacher who would bring his pupils to Christ must, in the first place, definitely aim to do so, and then he must intelligently and conscientiously set about fulfilling the conditions required for accomplishing this aim. Frank discussion of these matters between pastor, superintendent and teachers cannot fail to be helpful in removing difficulties, enabling all to realize more clearly their opportunities and responsibilities, and in increasing the zeal and efficiency of each individual worker. We advise, therefore, that meetings for prayer and conference be held regularly in all our Sunday schools and that presiding elders in their quarterly conferences take special pains to emphasize the importance of evangelistic effort in the Sunday school, at least during the remainder of this year.

As the organized Bible class is one of the most effective evangelistic agencies in the Sunday school, we advise that the leaders of all Wesley classes be urged to take large part in the meetings for prayer and conference.

We confidently believe that such a plan as we here suggest, consistently and faithfully carried out, will result in a great spiritual awakening throughout our Church and a great ingathering of men and women and boys and girls who have thereby been brought to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ. And if such be the case, then our Sunday school workers face an opportunity and a responsibility which they cannot afford either to ignore or to treat lightly. We earnestly pray and trust that they may show themselves equal to the great duty to which they are providentially called.

REPLY TO MR. WHITEFOORD COLE.

By Bishop E. E. Hoss.

In the Banner of June 19 Mr. Whitefoord R. Cole, for whom, as well as for his honored father before him, I have always entertained feelings of kindly respect, characterizes my recent communication to the same paper as an "outbreak." I shall not assume that, in the use of such a term, he meant to be offensive, but I am forced to say that if he had any other intention he was not discriminating in his choice of words.

The natural inference from Mr. Cole's rather critical comments is that I, of my own accord, and without having any special right or duty in the premises, have thrust myself into the affairs of Vanderbilt University. If this intention were true I should be justly censurable for immodesty. But it is not true. By the very terms of the charter I hold a definite position as a supervisor of the university. Of the provision in the charter which makes me a supervisor Mr. Cole has a poor opinion. According to his view, which he has not been careful to withhold, it is "mere surplusage, and null and void." But the Chancery Court, which has thoroughly considered the whole matter, does not agree with him. I may be pardoned if I attach more weight to the terms of the charter and the decree of the court, than to the judgment of Mr. Cole, though I beg to assure him that in expressing this preference I do not desire to cast any reflection on the general soundness of his mental processes. If the Supreme Court should reverse the Chancellor and sustain Mr. Cole, I should, of course, be compelled to submit. But I have not the slightest apprehension that any such result will take place. As matters stand at the present time both the charter and the court give me an official status in the organization of the university; and I shall not renounce this status upon the diction of even so wise a man as Mr. Cole.

Mr. Cole denies my statement that the medical department of the university is proposed to be turned over, "without restriction or limitation of any kind," to a governing board; and undertakes to make good his denial by publishing certain "rules and regulations" adopted by the Board of Trustees in the premises. It would have been more pertinent if Mr. Cole had published the contract with Mr. Carnegie. That contract, once made, cannot be in the least altered or amended by any subsequent action of the Board of Trustees. I now assert that neither in the original appeal which the Executive Committee of the trustees made to Mr. Carnegie, nor in his reply to that appeal, nor in the resolutions passed by the trustees formally accepting his proposed gift, nor in any of the actions which make up the contract between him and them, is there contained the slightest hint or suggestion of any limitation or restriction upon the power and authority of the proposed Governing Board. If Mr. Cole will show it to me, I shall act like an honest man, and retract what I have said, but not otherwise. The resolutions that Mr. Cole publishes as "conditions of the gift" were not conditions of the gift. Not one word of them is mentioned in the correspondence with Mr. Carnegie. Does Mr. Carnegie understand that, after all, the Governing Board is a mere shadow, a sort of "committee of the Board of Trust," without any real power to act? If he does, then he is not quite so canny a Scot as he is reputed to be. A governing board that simply obeys and does not govern has very narrow functions. It is not many years since Chancellor Kirkland, over his own signature, declared the Board of Trustees to be "a committee of the General Conference." In the exercise of his inalienable rights as an American citizen he has since changed his mind completely on that point. Who can tell but that, if an emergency should again arise, he might also change on this? The Chancellor's "committee of the General Conference" has turned out to be supreme, holding everything in its hands, and simply tolerating the Church as a kind of dependent hanger-on. What this other committee may become in time it is difficult to forecast.

Mr. Cole explains that the Board of Trustees refused to spread the protest of the minority on its journal because it is insulting to Mr. Carnegie and to the board. As the document has been published, the public itself may judge how far his accusation is correct. The names of the protestants, however, ought to be a sufficient refutation of such a charge. The four gentlemen concerned stand as high as any four men in the Southern States. To assail them even by implication is to invite new responsibilities. Chancellor Kirkland calls their protest "puerile." Seeing that it was prepared under the eye of such lawyers as Mr. Percy D. Maddin, Col. N. E. Harris, Mr. G. T. Fitzhugh and Judge E. C. O'Rear, the presumption is that it does not lack force. The Chancellor's own experience with these gentlemen, if he will only give his memory fair play, will be quite sufficient to convince him that, whatever else they may be, they are not puerile.

In dealing with my second objection to Mr. Carnegie's gift, Mr. Cole is not clear, or, perhaps, I ought to say that I failed to make myself clear to him. I shall try, therefore, to speak more plainly. Mr. Carnegie's attitude toward denominational schools—he chooses to call them sectarian, in the face of their rejection of the terms—is well known. He will have nothing to do with them. He does not ask whether they do honest work or dishonest. He makes no inquiry about their merits. The mere fact that they are denominational puts them beyond his bounty. I am not questioning his legal right to take the position which he occupies. Under the law of the land, a man may do what he will with his own. I shall not just now undertake to prove that his opinions are unwise. Later on I may touch that question, but not yet.

Now, when I heard that Mr. Carnegie had given $1,000,000 to Vandebilt University, I knew without being told that he had suspended it on conditions inimical to the rights of the Methodist Church. It was no surprise to me when I found out the fact to be so. To be plain-spoken, Mr. Carnegie has not given Vanderbilt University a million dollars. The money proposed to be given is to "establish" a medical college in the City of Nashville. I use his own words on certain expressed conditions. Two hundred thousand dollars of it is to be forthcoming as soon as the medical department of Vanderbilt University is turned over to a governing board as a foundation of the enterprise, and the other $800,000 is "reserved" to await the outcome of the suit pending between the Board of Trust of the university and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The meaning of Mr. Carnegie's language is not doubtful. Indeed, it cannot be charged against him that he is given to the pernicious habit of using words in a double sense. Let it be set down to his credit that he is at least frank and open. He tells the board very clearly that he does not intend to stand on the same platform with the Methodist Church, but that if the Church is crowded off then he is willing to climb on. The Board of Trust, being already engaged in a very vigorous effort to crowd the Church off, listens to his proposal very contentedly and gives him all the assurance it can of its sympathy with him.

But the Church is not quite so compliant. Instead of joyfully jumping off, she says, "No, I was here first, and see no reason for being displaced, even to make room for Mr. Carnegie." That is the language of good sense and self-respect. The Church is as good company as Mr. Carnegie claims to be. It makes no assault on him; it is willing that he should settle all questions arising out of his possession of an enormous estate to suit his own will; it claims no right to touch a dollar that belongs to him. But it does resent the patronizing tone in which he affirms that denominational schools are a hindrance both to religion and to education, and it does decline to believe that there is anything in his natural or acquired abilities which qualifies him to utter dramatic judgment on matters such as these.

A million dollars is a great deal of money. Many people are dazzled by it. They think that it is narrow and wicked for the Methodist Church to interpose any objection to the coming of such a gift to the City of Nashville. That is to say, they want the Methodist Church to give up over $3,000,000 in order that Nashville may get one million more. It does not seem to occur to them that such a demand on the Church is rather cool. Would anybody make such a demand on any individual, firm, or corporation in the city? If it were made of my good friend, Mr. Cole, what would he say?

But the whole strength of the case is not stated yet. The condition of Mr. Carnegie's gift, by challenging the right of the Chuch to engage in educational work, interferes with her immemorial policy, and weakens her efforts everywhere. If the Church ought not to be in Vanderbilt, she ought not to be in any institution of learning, and if she consents to be driven from her position there, then she cannot maintain herself anywhere. For this and a thousand other good reasons, she fights on the front line, not seeking what she does not believe to be honestly her own, but refusing to be dispossessed of what in sound law and good morals belong to her. She declines to make way for Mr. Carnegie, because he stipulates that if he is to enter she must go out.

The interests at stake are large and growing larger. It may surprise some of my readers to know that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has ninety-seven schools and colleges, with grounds and buildings worth $10,859,000, a gain of nearly $7,000,000 in the past sixteen years, with endowments of $4,952,000, a gain of $2,500,000 in the same period, and with 20,595 students, a gain of nearly 12,000. The average annual increase in property values for sixteen years has been $560,250, and the annual assessments laid upon the Conferences for the support of these institutions is $231,956. That any Church would be willing to consent to a movement that means the beginning of the end of such an enterprise as this is not to be dreamed of.

To be brief, the veto of the Bishops is not so much the turning down of Mr. Carnegie and his million dollars as it is the declining to be turned down by him.

Mr. Cole makes several flings at Bishop Candler and myself in particular, and several others against the Bishops in general. He says that we are trying to spoil the plans of Chancellor Kirkland and Mr. Carnegie without offering anything in the place of them. I must confess that the Bishops are not in a position to promise much money out of their own pockets to the university. It has not, heretofore, in the South, been considered any discredit to a man that he has followed a vocation which brings no large financial returns, and makes it impossible for him to give away much money to the cause which he would like to help. If I were minded to retort I would truthfully say that no great school in America has received a more economical support from its trustees than has Vanderbilt University. If anyone of them has ever done anything for it on a really liberal scale, I am not aware of the fact. On one occasion they asked the Church to give $300,000, and failed to get anything—failed, largely, because no one of them set the example and led the way. More than that, it is not reasonable to suppose that the Church will rush to the support of an institution which she has thought she owned for many years, but which it is now contended does not belong to her. If the courts should finally decree the Church her rights in the matter, and a proper appeal be made to her, she will no doubt respond, as she has done and is doing in the case of other schools. Mr. Cole will find out also that the Bishops, though not men of fortune, are far from being so impotent to help large enterprises as he supposes. They have hitherto counted for something in the history of Methodism, and are not yet an altogether negligible quantity.

There is another matter which I scarcely thought Mr. Cole would care to bring up, namely, the acquisition of the old Peabody campus. If the process by which this property was secured is to be taken as an illustration of the financial capacity of the board, then I can only say that I am not wonderfully impressed by it. The facts are these: When it came to the knowledge of the Bishops that it was proposed to dismember and disfigure the great Vanderbilt campus by selling off 12 or 14 acres of the best of it, including the former home of Bishop McTyeire, for the pitiable sum of $125,000, and then to buy the old Peabody property for $155,000 (I think my figures are exact), they were amazed, and asked for an injunction to prevent the transaction. While the matter of the injunction was pending before the Chancery Court, the solemn assurance was given them through their lawyers that two gifts amounting to $300,000 were dependent on the completion of this transaction. On the ground of this assurance solely, they withdrew their opposition, and consented, much against their wishes, to let the injunction drop. Personally I had my doubts, and voted in the negative to the end. Later on the correspondence touching the gifts of $300,000 was presented for their inspection and they discovered that it contained no such conditions as had been claimed, but it was then too late to do anything. The Nashville public will remember how it was said that that particular part of the Vanderbilt campus was necessary for the erection of the chief building of the new Peabody College, that out of the close juxtaposition of the two institutions we were to get "virtually one school," "the Harvard of the South," et cetera.

Well, something or other happened. President Payne of Peabody and his Board of Trustees did not see fit to follow out the program which had been arranged for them. Very wisely, as I think, they announced that they would run on their own independent lines. They would not erect their chief buildings on the ground procured from Vanderbilt. The projected Harvard fell to the ground. Who is to blame for the misunderstanding? I do not know. But if those gifts of $300,000 were conditioned, as Mr. Cole intimates, on the success of the scheme, then they are surely due to be handed back to the donors. I have not heard that the Trustees are taking any steps in that direction. But it is a matter of common knowledge that they are trying, or have been trying, to buy back their lost acres, and are very indignant because the Peabody Trustees, as shrewd business men who have made a good bargain, are not willing to let it go without a profit. And in the face of all throw it up to the Bishops that they sought to stop this folly and were hindered from doing so only by solemn assurances which turned out to have no foundation in fact.

I have just seen the article of Chancellor Kirkland in the Banner of June 21. It is as characteristic as anything that ever came from his pen.

He says: "The Bishops might well have postponed their action until the court had given them a final decree. And had they then desired to reject Mr. Carnegie's proposition, the university would have been the gainer by $200,000, invested in a building, and the annual income of $800,000 in the meantime." The ethical implications of this paragraph are such that I forbear to discuss them; but can only say that the Bishops do not wish to get one dollar or one cent from Mr. Carnegie by any plan that involves the use of sharp dealing. They wish him to know their exact attitude, and to act in accordance with that knowledge. If they had kept silent till they were sure of his $200,000 and then have spoken out, they would have violated one of the most elementary principles of Christian morals.

The Chancellor's references to Mr. Vanderbilt are equally unfortunate. He knows that every one of Mr. Vanderbilt's gifts has been made upon the terms and conditions of the existing charter. On that charter the Bishops stand. Any intimation that they are seeking to introduce a new order of things into the university is utterly incorrect. It is the trustees who are assailing the charter and the Bishops who are defending it. What representations have been made to Mr. Vanderbilt, I do not know. The Bishops have never yet said one word to him, being content to bide their time. When that time comes they will be able to show him that they have been faithful to the charter under which the university was founded, and to the trust which that charter puts into their hands. When anybody denies the validity of a charter it devolves upon him to sustain his denial. The trustees have so far failed in the attempt. But Mr. Cole and the Chancellor may still have something up their sleeves.—Nashville Banner.

THE OLD FAMILY PEW.

One sometimes hears a deal of nonsense about the danger of creating a prejudice against religion in the mind of a child by making him attend church once a week. The danger would seem to be about one-tenth as great as that of arousing a prejudice against education by sending him to school twice a day. In both cases the remedy lies in the good sense of the parents and their estimate of the value of religion and education carefully instilled into the child's mind. The strength of the Church has been in the old-fashioned family pew, with father at one end and mother at the other, and a stairway of more or less restless children between. From that pew have gone out the upright, devout, consecrated men and women who have loved the Church and maintained her worship and done her work in their several generations. For the sake of the Church, and especially for the sake of the children, let it be restored. —Southern Churchman.

CONFERENCE OF THE PRESIDENTS OF OUR COLLEGES FOR YOUNG WOMEN.

At the annual meeting of the Board of Education at Dallas, Texas, the following resolution was adopted:

"Whereas, it appears that there is an increasing desire among educators engaged in training the young women of our Church that greater liberty be given in preparing the courses of instruction in our girls' schools, both in the matter of required and elective subjects, and the credits allowed for the same, than is now provided for by the Commission on Education: therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the presidents of our female colleges or some representative appointed by them be constituted a committee to investigate the whole subject of a proper curriculum for our girls' schools and report their findings to the Executive Committee of the Board by October 1, 1913, for transmission to the Commission at its next meeting. And the Secretary of this Board is hereby authorized and requested to call the above-constituted committee together at such time and place as may be determined upon after correspondence with the various members thereof."

After conference by correspondence with the presidents of our colleges for girls, August 5-6 has been fixed as the time for the Conference of College Presidents. The Conference will be held at Nashville. Further notice will be given as to entertainment and the place of holding the sessions of the Conference. Respectfully,

STONEWALL ANDERSON.

We give above, with their names underneath, a group picture of Rev. H. P. Lewis of Jackson, Miss., and five of his sons who are in the itinerant ministry. Four of these, like their honored father, belong to the Mississippi Conference. The other son, Rev. John Tillerry Lewis, is a member of the North Mississippi Conference, and is now completing a successful quarennium of service at Clarksdale. Every one of these young men is an efficient worker for the Master and a credit to the Methodist itinerancy. Not the least serviceable of their gifts is their musical talent, all of them being unusually good singers. Those who have read the interesting sketches of his life work which, from time to time, have appeared in the Advocate, have also probably noticed that the wondrous power of sacred song was much used by the veteran father of these young gentlemen in his pastoral labors. The mother of these five young preachers, Mrs. Rebecca Ann Tillerry Lewis, was translated to the heavenly home several years ago. She is said to have been a remarkable woman, forceful in personality and possessing a beautiful Christian character. She and Brother Lewis certainly wrought well, and through their children, reared in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, their influence will be multiplied in the coming years. In saving others, they did not forget to save their own; and in the circle seated around their own fireside they found their noblest opportunity to honor their Lord and bless future generations. Undoubtedly the Christian home is the place of mightiest power.

To Brother Lewis we are indebted for the following leading events of his long and useful life: "I was born on Ten Mile Creek, in Marion County, Miss., on April 1, 1836. My parents, Quinca and Martha (Speare) Lewis moved from North Carolina to Mississippi about 1820, and settled on Pearl River. I was converted on May 5, 1855, and was licensed to preach in Holmesville, Miss., in July 1856, by Rev. John G. Jones, P. E. In November, 1857, I was admitted on trial into the Mississippi Conference, and was sent by Bishop Early to Black Creek Mission, which embraced nearly all of Harrison County and a good part of Perry and Marion Counties. I had a good year, receiving about 100 persons on 'probation.' For 52 years I was in the regular work, three of which I spent on the Paulding (now the Seashore) District. I married Rebecca Ann Tillerry in Nov., 1859. She gave me eleven children, nine of whom yet live—six sons and three daughters. Five of these sons are in the Methodist ministry, and one daughter, Mrs. Walter A. Terry, is the wife of a Methodist preacher. My wife died in August, 1904. In January, 1907, I was married to Mrs. L. C. Langston, widow of the Rev. J. M. Langston, late of the North Texas Conference. We are now living in Jackson, Miss., in a beautiful and comfortable home at 826 N. West Street. I am now in my 78th year. I enjoy preaching as much as I ever did, and can preach twice on Sunday and feel pretty well Monday. I am the only one of the Mississippi Conference class of 1857 (17 in all) yet living. Rev. Geo. Jackson, late of the Louisiana Conference, was a member of this class."

In the issue of the Texas Christian Advocate of July 3, Bishop E. E. Hoss straightened out a correspondent of that journal in regard to a bit of Tennessee history. The writer referred to had stated that Blount County, in the Volunteer State, was named for Governor Willie (pronounced Wiley) Blount, the fourth Governor of that commonwealth. The Bishop, however, showed that this was a mistake and that it was named for William Blount, an elder brother of the Chief Executive, who was never Governor of Tennessee after its admission into the Union, but who was Governor of the territory out of which that State was formed, by appointment of General Washington. Bishop Hoss's store of information is encyclopedic in its range, and his ability to give it out either with tongue or pen is almost unrivaled.

EARLY TIMES OF METHODISM IN NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. G. W. Bachman.

III

One of the noteworthy preachers of the early times was Elijah Steele who served the "Seneasha Mission" in 1836. He was born of respectable parents in Williamson County, Tenn., on April 3, 1814. When he was twelve years old the family—a widowed mother and her children—moved to Marion County, Miss., and settled on a farm, which they cultivated with their own hands, having no other means of support. The facilities for education in those days were scant and poor, but Elijah's mother was able to send him to school two months in the year for four years, by which means he acquired a fairly good knowledge of reading, writing, and common arithmetic.

When about twenty years old, having by industry and economy saved up a little money, he, with his mother's consent, put himself in school for a few months. When about sixteen years of age, he was converted and joined the Methodist Church, soon after which he felt the divine call to preach the gospel, which he had found by experience to be "the power of God unto salvation." After some time of struggling with this conviction, he yielded and was licensed to preach in 1835 by Rev. B. M. Drake, presiding elder of the Natchez District, and was placed as junior preacher, with Jesse Guice, on the Amite Circuit for a few months until Conference, which met in Woodville, Nov. 25, 1835, when he was received on trial into the travelling connection. When his appointment was announced to "Seneasha Mission" his looks and conduct were highly interesting and were characteristic of the man. He had never heard the name of the place before, and knew not its locality or even direction. No sooner was the Conference dismissed than he was urgent upon every one around him to tell him where his appointment was. He looked as if he was uncertain in which quarter of the globe it was to be found. With saddlebags on his arm and whip in hand, he seemed anxious to set out, but uncertain to what point of the compass he should bend his course. He seemed almost impatient with all around him because they could not tell him quick enough which way to set out.

To his new presiding elder, Rev. John G. Jones, of the Choctaw District, he said: "Brother Jones, where on earth is Seneasha Mission? I am perfectly willing to go there and do the best I can, but don't know where it is nor how to get there." "From that hour all his thoughts centered on his prospective new field of labor; the rest of the world seemed to become a blank to him. Yes, he would go to Seneasha Mission (not station) and do the very best he could—not to get an increase of salary and live at ease, but to get up just as many appointments among the new settlers as he could fill and to have revivals and save souls." Thus wrote eyewitnesses and close friends of the young itinerant.

"Seneasha Mission lay on three forks of Pearl River and was scattered over Rankin, Leake, Neshoba and Attala Counties, extending to Big Black River on the west." All of Attala County was included in it. The creeks he had to cross were many and most of them large and dangerous when swollen; and the only means of crossing them was to swim his horse either by the side of a canoe or sitting on him. His rides were long, and the Indian traces or newly made paths difficult to find. But none of these things deterred him and he failed to meet but few, if any, of his appointments during the year. The people received him kindly as one sent to them from the Lord, and heard his gospel messages with eagerness and appreciation. Though at first he felt like a stranger in a strange land, he soon found fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters who cheered him in his ardous labors for their spiritual welfare. He approached no half-finished log cabin or newly erected camp without receiving a hearty welcome and the best fare their scanty means afforded.

Let it be borne in mind that the country occupied by Mr. Steele's circuit had but recently been vacated by the Choctaw Indians, most of whom had moved west to their new possessions in the Indian Territory, and that the white people were just beginning to settle in the "New Purchase." Consequently the population was sparse and the settlements often far apart. The field was large and many difficulties confronted the new preacher, but he had soon surveyed the whole ground, planned the work, and was under full headway making the rounds, establishing preaching places, and organizing societies. There was much to discourage him in the beginning, but "the Lord was with him" and gave him victory over all and a year of great success.

To his faithful friend and former presiding elder, Rev. B. M. Drake, he wrote on Aug. 8, 1836: "Soon after I wrote you last I attended a two days' meeting on my circuit where I had the happiness to witness the signal displays of the power of our Heavenly Father in the conviction and conversion of four prodigal sinners. Seven were added to the Church. Soon after, we had a three days' meeting. Although we had unfavorable weather and were disappointed in preachers whom we expected, we were not disappointed in manifestations of God's power. Sixteen were added to the Church; some of them were happily brought from darkness to light and the rest are earnestly groaning for redemption in the blood of Jesus. The labors of our third quarterly meeting closed last night. We had one of the best love feasts I have attended this year. Four were added to the Church. Brother Jones preached with his usual warmth and energy. He has had some good times on his district. From what I have seen and felt, I can say, though with humility, that times are getting better on my circuit, which is no small consolation to one who has been weeping between the porch and the altar.

"I am more than ever convinced of the necessity of holiness in order to usefulness. I am also more than ever resolved to devote the best energies of my soul and body to the Church of God. I feel that I am not my own but God's; and my desire is, to act in all things as a son in the gospel. * * * I have had hard times, but nothing in comparison with the pioneers of Methodism in this western wilderness."

Again he wrote to the same friend on October 25: "The camp meeting on my circuit, though smaller than any of the others in number, (we had attended several in other charges), was truly interesting on account of the presence of God in the conviction and conversion of souls. Our number of hearers on Sunday was not more than 150. At the close of our meeting we numbered fifteen converts, all of whom promise future usefulness to the Church."

Dr. Drake, in commenting on this, says: "That the state of religion was much improved on his circuit may be readily gathered from the result of his camp meeting. One out of every ten who attended on the Sabbath day were made subjects of saving grace. It is rare to hear of such a proportion. One hundred probationers were received into the Church by him this year. This, when we consider the scattered state of the population and the many other disadvantages under which he labored, was a most extraordinary increase; most of them, too, it would seem, were converted."

If there is any person living who can tell me where the above mentioned camp meeting was held, I shall be glad to hear from him (or her). Was it at old Spring Ridge, in Attala County?

During the following years Mr. Steele's appointments were: Port Gibson and Grand Gulch, Washington, Woodville, and Poydras Street, New Orleans. While on the last named charge, on Sept. 6, 1841, he was stricken with yellow fever which terminated in his death on Sept. 10. His last audible words were, "I am safe." He was a young man of extraordinary powers of mind and surpassing eloquence, of deep consecration and intense zeal for the Lord's work. We are indebted for these facts to Drake's "Life of Elijah Steele," Jones' "History of Methodism, etc.," and to the Conference Minutes.

The Southern Pacific Steamship Company, whose passenger boats plying between New Orleans and New York and Cuba are deservedly popular, has announced that it will build and place in operation two new passenger ships equal to the largest it now has in use, and also one new freight boat. New Orleans is fortunate to have the promise of these new ships. Their construction is one of the advance echoes of the opening of the Panama Canal.

The Superintendent of Weights and Measures at Washington says that the loss to the consumer who buys by measure is as much as one-third on some things. Two examples are given out officially to show why all fruit and vegetables should be sold by weight instead of by measure: Turnips vary from 42 to 60 pounds per bushel measure, and dried peaches vary from 28 to 40 pounds per bushel measure. He suggests that consumers insist on buying hy weight instead of by measure.

Dr. William J. Mayo, perhaps the most famous and successful surgeon in the United States, has startled scientists by the announcement that cancer of the stomach can be cured. He has treated 1,000 cases within the last eighteen years; and of these 378 were permanently cured; 246 were greatly improved and the lives of the patients prolonged, and 376 were pronounced hopeless. Such an announcement from Dr. Mayo will carry some weight, and the world may take hope that this most fatal disease is soon to be entirely conquered.

It is stated authoritatively that "Liberty Bell," the most famous bell in the world, will be taken from Philadelphia to San Francisco in 1915 and placed on exhibition during the World's Fair there. The inscription, "Proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof," was placed on the bell in 1751, at which time it was given to Philadelphia—the occasion being the fifteenth anniversary of the act by William Penn granting civil liberty to that city. The words were suggested by a man by the name of Morris and were taken from Leviticus 25:10.

The present National Administration can well be called strictly a temperate one. At a public meeting in one of Washington's leading churches recently, Secretary of the Navy Daniels delivered an address on Temperance in which he credited the saloon with most of the lawlessness of this age. He condemned moderate drinking and placed himself squarely in favor of temperance. With Bryan a total abstainer, and President Wilson strictly temperate, and Mr. Daniels opposed to the liquor business, it appears that the reign of the brewer and distiller will find little favor with the Government at Washington for the next four years.

Figures recently compiled show that within the last ten years the United States has accumulated an export balance of $4,700,000,000, and that one year's shipping cost paid for carrying American grown and made merchandise in foreign vessels amounts to enough to build a great commercial fleet. During 1912 it cost American shippers $35,000,000 to carry on their trade in French vessels alone, and they paid foreigners $25,000,000 for the privilege of trading with South America. It looks like American business men would look far enough ahead to see that the one thing this country needs is more American vessels in which to carry to foreign countries American goods.

The Republic of Mexico recently gave an order to the Japanese Government for a number of battleships. At the same time Japan gave an order to the ship builders in England for a number of battleships of the latest pattern. It is evident that Japan expects to keep herself free from the burden of old and out-of-date naval equipment. Japan has come in for additional newspaper comment during the past week on account of a letter written by ex-President Roosevelt in which he says that the American people will never consent to the naturalization of the Japanese coming to this country, and also because of an opinion given out by Hon. Chauncey M. DePew to the effect that this country and Japan will become involved in war within ten years' time.

THE SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

By Rev. W. H. Saunders.

The session of the Seashore Divinity School for the year 1913 is now a thing of the past. There were about 127 preachers in attendance and in many respects this was the most satisfactory session yet held. Brother Selby and his associates in the management of this institution deserve great credit for what they have made it. Dr. McNeil of the Alabama Conference, the Dean of the School, is the right man in the right place; and the men associated with him in the faculty of instructors are men of a high quality. The young men who fall into the hands of this company of teachers are fortunate indeed.

Everybody loves Dr. McNeil, and Dr. McNeil loves everybody. Park and Cunningham, two choice men of the North Mississippi Conference, represent their end of the Magnolia State, and they have Jaco and Mitchell to make things even up. C. C. Miller and W. W. Holmes of the Louisiana Conference (may their kind never grow less in number) were supported by Dr. Henry, Brother Schuhle and others, and Louisiana stood high. Brothers Ellison and Roberts of the Alabama Conference, associated with Dr. McNeil and others from that grand old State (I like Alabama, for my mother was born there) brought her up to the top notch.

Well, we Mississippi fellows were on hand and did our part as best we could, and nearly every body said, "Amen."

A spirit of brotherly kindness prevailed; the hreeze from the Gulf was ideal; the fare at Keller Lodge was satisfactory, and everybody seemed to have a delightful time.

Every young man who received instruction expressed great satisfaction and said that he was more than paid for his time and expense.

Dr. Henry F. Cope's lectures on the various subjects discussed were the best of the kind it has been my pleasure to hear, and should be given in every community in the nation. His gifts, scholarship, and sparkling wit enable him to hold the attention of his audiences from start to finish and they go away instructed.

Dr. Rice brought to us the message of the Prophets, and he charmed us, instructed us, and drew us closer to God. May the Methodist ministry ever remember that we are the successors of the Prophets and that we are called of God to carry a real message to the people, God's message of salvation! A priesthood usually belongs to the people and are too often more anxious to please the people than they are to please God. There was only one Prophet in the world when Jesus was born, the first that had appeared within nearly four hundred years, and he was soon put out of the way. And when Jesus commenced his public service the priests began to plan to put him out the way, and finally succeeded. A real Prophet is as true to the people as he is to God, though they do not always see it that way.

Well, the last of all, Bishop Candler was there, and his sermons, for sermons they were, thrilled, inspired and filled every heart. His sermon on Sunday morning was, I think, the greatest it has ever been my pleasure to hear. As he unfolded the purposes of God's will, springing from the compassionate heart of God, the Holy Spirit came down and filled the place, and it was certainly good to be there. The first time it was my pleasure to hear this matchless preacher I said that his discourses could not be better, but in some way he seems to grow from time to time and to reach a little higher. Out of his great intellect and heart, warmed and inspired by the Spirit of God, he gave to us the deep and uplifting truths of the Divine Word. This kind of preaching does the heart of a pastor good when he has been under the load of care and anxiety of a heavy pastorate, and he goes home stronger and more resolute to perform the work of the ministry. May this great Georgian come this way often!

This school has proven itself worthy of the support of the four patronizing Conferences and should have a much larger attendance, though in this respect it has measured fully up to the expectation of its founders. All the management asks is for the brethren to come and see and judge for themselves. Larger things are heing planned in the future, and there is every reason to believe that the Seashore Divinity School will soon become one of the most valuable institutions of its kind within the bounds of Southern Methodism.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

I desire to say to the brethren that Brother I. L. Peebles is in excellent health, and doing good work as opportunity presents. He undertook the evangelistic work this year rather reluctantly, but believed he could be of service to the Church in this field, and is out under the sanction of the Board of Missions. Brother Peebles is especially gifted and particularly strong in doctrinal preaching; there is no man among us stronger. Call him and use him, and when you use him pay him well. He has no income except what he derives from meetings. He is a modest man and would go unpaid rather than stress the finances in a meeting. G. S. HARMON.

ROCKY SPRINGS, TOMMIE OWEN, AND ELSE.

On Sunday, June 29. this writer had the fulfillment of a dream of forty years. It was in the summer, just forty years ago, that Hyram R. Singleton, the pastor of the Rocky Springs (Miss.) congregation, helped Rev. Ira B. Robertson in a series of meetings on what was then known as North Warren Circuit. This writer was a boy, just returned from school, and was wavering between the call to the ministry and the choosing of some profession. During that series of meetings the final decision was made, and how much may he ascribed to the youthful pastor of Rocky Springs must be left to the yet unread record. Any how, he and I became close personal friends, and it was his wont to say that he "dug me up in the hills of Old Yazoo." From that day forward it has been my oft-deferred wish to visit Rocky Springs, the former pastorate of my now sainted friend. At the request of the present pastor, Rev. J. F. Campbell, our district Lay Leader, Brother M. M. Satterfield, and I assisted in a missionary rally in this neighhorhood on June 29. Brother Campbell had worked up an interest in the meeting which resulted in the gathering together of a congregation that filled the old brick church. Though antedating the ravages of the Civil War the building is in perfect repair, is neatly finished, and comfortably furnished. Although there are marked evidences of the demoralizations which have come from the presence of the boll weevil, there are equally noticeahle indications that the house of the Lord has not heen forsaken, and that those who remain are worthy descendants of those who sleep in the holy ground just to the rear of the church. Two doors at each end and a large window in the rear of the pulpit, with a corresponding one in the opposite end of the house, at once suggests the age of its architecture.

One feature in the building attracted special attention—something we do not remember ever to have seen: the great windows on the sides consisted of two sashes each, and in each window were sixty-six panes of glass. During the noon hour we visited the grave of "Uncle Tommie Owen" in a grove of cedars, some two hundred yards to the rear of the home which he built and occupied for more than thirty years. There are a half dozen other graves near by. It is said that Mr. Owen requested to be huried on this spot, and that his grave be left unmarked, and that the friendly cattle be allowed to make the spot their resting place. If such a request was made, it was not obeyed, for within an enclosure of iron, 15 by 15 feet, there stands a six-foot shaft on one side of which is inscribed, "Thomas Owen" on the other, "Rebecca Owen," and on the face, "Mark the perfect man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace." A truer application of Scripture was never made to mortal man, according to the reports of those who knew him as a minister, a neighhor, and a friend. The table, upon which was spread the dinner, was beneath the shadow of a large pecan tree which, doubtless, this provident man of God planted with his own hands. The large cedars in the front and rear of the residence were also of his planting. It was a source of regret to all that some unappreciative axman had cut, here and there, a tree and thus marred the order of their setting. The hrick cellar near by and the deep cistern, with the once comfortable two story dwelling, now unoccupied and rapidly decaying, produced two opposite feelings: one, in which we deplored the loss of so much toil and care; the other, in which we rejoiced that the man of God had been so comfortable in his declining years. In his day "little Tommie Owen." as his brethren familiarly called him, was a unique character, always seeing the brighter and humorous side of every thing. Indeed, our historian says that the Conference, when he applied for admission (and, by the way, it was the memorable session which was held at Newet Vick's, Nov. 1, just one hundred years ago), hesitated to receive him "because of his unusual flow of wit and humor, and of his apparent ill health and extreme bodily weakness." One tradition we remember to have heard of him, showing the exceeding humorous side of his nature, grew out of a charge at Conference condemning his too great levity. It was decided that the presiding Bishop should publicly reprimand the preacher of overflowing, hubbling spirit. Having delivered the reprimand the Bishop called to prayer and asked Brother Owen please to lead. The substance of the prayer, to the amazement of the Conference, was, "O, Lord! this world is all a whirligig! a whirligig! amen." Never again was Tommie Owen given the henefit of a public reprimand. We were told that Rocky Springs was once the center of a prosperous community, but in these latter days it has lost its prestige, and evidences of decline and depression are on every hand. Yet, we could not refrain from saying to the providers of the necessities of the dinner occasion, "If this is evidence of what can be done in the face of the boll weevil, what was your custom before he came?" While I have not accepted fully that this pest is a "blessing in disguise," I am convinced that where man does his part, God has never quite forsaken any country he ever made. But what of the Missionary rally? Well, that must be left to the future for its fruitage. This writer occupied the pulpit in the forenoon, and the Lay Leader gave a most excellent address on tithing and our obligations to extend the Kingdom of God in the afternoon. The long desire satisfied we returned to our place, grateful for the opportunity to meet the good people of Rocky Springs, and with an earnest prayer for our young brother, the pastor, who seems to have found a warm place in the affections of his people. He will douhtless do them much good by his ministrations. Of the mistress of the parsonage I should say some word: It is enough that she is clearly the right person in the position she has heen called to by this young itinerant.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

THREE COMMENCEMENTS.

Having been connected with the management of Grenada College for a quarter of a century it was indeed gratifying to me to know that the past session was in all respects the hest one of its eventful history. In native ability, scholarly attainments, wise judgment, financial skill and exalted character the President of no school for girls in all the land excels J. R. Countiss. All these qualities were emphasized in the work of the past session, and the recent brilliant and sane Commencement.

If the constituents of our girls' school will measure up to their duty in a degree at all approaching the wisdom and devotion of Brother Countiss we shall see there a great institution, growing with the passing years.

The wisdom of electing Dr. A. F. Watkins to succeed to the presidency of Millsaps College, when its first great president was made Bishop, found ample justification during his conduct of our great school for boys in the session which came to a brilliant close in June.

It is enough to say of Bishop Kilgo's commencement sermon that it met expectation. He held and thrilled the immense audience for an hour.

The commencement address of Hon. G. T. Fitzhugh was of extraordinary ability and charm. Mr. Fitzhugh is a thinker, a scholar and an orator—a rare combination in any age. The large henefaction of Major Millsaps adds much to our resources, and guarantees a more substantial and more rapid growth. Only eternity will reveal fully the good of his large generosity.

It was a great pleasure and lasting henefit to hear Dr. Gladden at Vanderhilt. His sermon was easily understood by the ordinary hearer, while great men were pleased and edified.

I was sorry not to hear Hon. John Temple Graves, who was absent on account of sickness. Years ago I heard him on the "Reign of the Demagogue," on whom he inflicted wounds that remained red and rankling for many moons. His paddle is needed now, in church no less than in politics.

To know of Chancellor Kirkland's work is to realize that he has no superior as the administrator of a great educational trust. To know him is to know a man of great brain and greater heart. Vanderbilt is rich in the broad acres of her beautiful campus, rich in her large endowment, rich in her great buildings, rich in her large and distinguished alumni, but richest in her noble Chancellor, who is her greatest asset.

If there is a patient, courteous, considerate, able and godly company of men on the earth, that company is found in the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University.

Grenada, Millsaps, Vanderbilt—these three—but the greatest of these is Vanderbilt.

Baby with the curls of gold,
What's your hurry?
Time enough for growing old,

Man's foolish flurry?

A TRUTHFUL BOY.

How people do trust a truthful boy! We never worry about him when he is out of sight. We never say: "I wonder where he is; I wish I knew what he is doing." We know that he is all right, and that when he comes home we will know all about it and get it straight. We don't have to ask him where he is going, or how long he will be gone every time he leaves the house. We don't have to call him back and make him "solemnly promise" the same thing over and over. When he says, "Yes, I will," or "No, I won't," just once, that settles it.—Robert Burdette.

WE ARE HIS HELPERS.

"Mamma," asked Walter one day after his radishes and onions were growing nicely, "what if we had not put the brown seeds and bulbs into the ground, but had left them in the paper sacks?"

What, indeed! And mamma explained to him that they would never have been anything better than brown seeds and onion "sets."

Walter's eyes grew large with wonder.

"And would they never have been plants at all?" he asked.

"Never," was the reply; "and some time, after long months or years, it may be, of waiting vainly to be planted, the life within them would have died out entirely."

"I'm so glad we helped God right away," he exclaimed as he ran back to his garden, leaving mamma to reflect upon this evidence that we are designed to be His helpers. All nature proclaims it, and to shirk is but to thwart our own interest. God might easily have made the useful seeds to develop for us unaided. He did not, because he expects, demands our work, our co-operation in his plan.—Bessie L. Putnam.

A PAUSE IN PRAYER.

"If I should die 'fore I wake," said Donny, kneeling at grandmother's knee; "'f I should die 'fore I wake—"

"I pray," prompted the gentle voice. "Go on, Donny."

"Wait a minute," interposed the small boy, scrambling to his feet and hurrying away down stairs. In a brief space he was back again, and dropping down in his place took up his petition where he had left off. But when the little white-gowned form was safely tucked in bed the grandmother questioned with loving rebuke concerning the interruption.

"But I did think what I was sayin', grandmother; that's why I had to stop. You see, I'd upset Ted's menagerie and stood all his wooden soldiers on their heads, just to see how he'd tear around in the mornin'. 'f I should die 'fore I wake, why—I didn't want him to find 'em that way, so I had to go down and fix 'em right. There's lots of things that seem funny if you're goin' to keep on livin', but you don't want 'em that way if you should die 'fore you wake."

"That was right, dear; it was right," commended the voice with its tender quaver. "A good many of our prayers would not be hurt by stopping in the middle of them to undo a wrong."—Wellspring.

AT WHOSE HOME.

A beautiful little canary came flying by and settled down on a branch of the honey-suckle. "I'm so tired," he said. "I haven't found a really happy home yet. I'm quite sure, though, that no one would be unkind or unhappy in such a charming place as this. I think I'll make my home here."

But just then a dog came around the corner of the porch, limping and crying, for a boy was running after him striking him cruelly with a big stick.

"Oh! oh!" said the bird, and away he flew. "I couldn't stay there. That boy would surely be unkind to me." And he flew to a window sill of a fine house in a beautiful garden.

"What a lovely home! I'm sure I can stay here." But there were sounds of crying from the room within, and peering in, he saw two little sisters quarreling over a doll.

"Let go! That's my doll." "No, you sha'n't have it! I want to play with it," and in the struggle the poor little doll was torn to pieces.

"Dear! Oh, dear!" chirped the poor little bird. "They might try to do that to me. I don't want to live here."

On he flew, from home to home, finding unkindness so often that at last he sank down, worn out, on a porch, to die, his poor little heart almost broken with sadness. Suddenly he felt a warm hand close over him, and a soft kind little voice said: "Why, you poor little thing! Oh, mother, see this dear little bird! Please let me keep him. I'll take good care of him, and not let a thing hurt him!"

"Very well, dear, you may. Now, go and feed him."

And the little canary found happiness and kindness at last, and sang and made the little child happy who had been so good to him.

Do you suppose any little birds would have to fly away sorrowfully from your home?—The Child's Gem.

CONCERNING GRENADA COLLEGE.

The slogan, A HUNDRED BOARDING PUPILS FOR GRENADA COLLEGE NEXT SESSION, should touch a responsive chord in the heart of every loyal Methodist in North Mississippi. With my name in the alumnae roster of this school, I feel sure that I am able to speak from the inside, and knowing the school as I do, it is very, very singular that such a campaign needs to be conducted—that the number of applicants does not far exceed this hundred mark. It would be hardly fair to say that the work of the school is not appreciated. The important places filled by its graduates would refute such a statement. And yet there is an indifference shown by the Methodists of our Conference that is far from justifiable.

If questioned as to the strongest point of Grenada College, I should unhesitatingly answer, the faculty. Probably nowhere in the South can a school of the same standard boast of a faculty superior to Grenada. It is a body composed of specialists—women of splendid intellect and Christian character, trained to their work, and with a vital interest in the girls. The close and friendly association between teacher and pupil is a great factor in college life. Grenada offers this—something that is unknown in larger schools, and something that is very dear to the heart of a school girl. There is no department in the school that is neglected. Parents can safely place their daughters at this institution, with the assurance that all their talents will be fully developed. The music faculty is exceptionally strong. It is composed of women who have studied abroad and who have a thorough knowledge of their work. This is no less true in the other departments.

The life of the girls at the college is wholesome and congenial. Everything is done for their comfort and happiness, and each year finds a choice and refined crowd of girls on the campus. The Y. W. C. A. is a strong factor in the religious life of the school. The girls take hold of this branch of activity with zeal and interest, and it contributes much to their spiritual development.

It is needless to say that Mr. Countiss is pre-eminently the man for the place. The growth of the school, the new heating system which has been provided for the buildings, and the improved campus, all attest to this. Both he and his congenial wife are tireless in their efforts in behalf of "their" girls.

The Methodists must awake to a higher appreciation of the opportunities afforded at Grenada; and the inducements that she offers. They should recognize the fact that their daughters may safely be sent there for a well rounded education—for the development of a Christian character and a perfect womanhood.

Sallis, Miss. MAUDE LOUISE ROGERS.

Editorial.

The Psalmist said, "I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." He knew the Church and appreciated its associations and privileges. Many modern educators, by their actions, assert that they had rather pick up the tid-bits in Carnegie's pie-kitchen than to live in fellowship with the saints in the sanctuary of the Most High.

* * *

In speaking of Presbyterian organic union, the Western Christian Advocate says, "The Northern, or largest body of all, stands ready to take both of them in when the proper time comes." "Taking them in" is the last word that should be used with reference to the union of denominations. There is another Church whose headquarters are north of the Ohio River that seems to be ready to "take in" a Church or two and call it "organic union."

* * *

A Texas paper, published in the interest of musicians, advocates the turning of all church services over to the choir leader, that dignitary to introduce the preacher as the speaker of the occasion at such a time as he might need him. We would suggest along the line of such a "reform" that the official board of churches under the leadership of the choir master might use a phonograph and dispense with the minister entirely. In that way the chorister could more nearly regulate the length of the discourse.

Our Cotton Exchanges are very much disturbed over a tax that Congress proposes laying on "future contracts." The tax is levelled against the illegitimate use of the exchanges which has made them the great gambling hells of America. A sudden interest in the down-trodden farmer on the part of these gamblers is quite amusing. Repeatedly the farmers have requested Congress to give them protection against these gamblers. The law of supply and demand does not at present control the price of this commodity, but the manipulations of designing men send the staple up or depress it in price to suit the exigencies of the pocket-book of the manipulator. At the grave of the "Future Market" no farmer's tears are going to be shed.

CONFERENCE RIGHTS.

Local self-government is a cardinal tenet in our American political creed. The largest liberty to the local unit consistent with the common good is a fundamental principle of statecraft. The results of this policy have been good. It has tended to develop local interest in and responsibility for the laws and for their enforcement; it has allowed room for experiments on a small scale, which, finally, having proved useful, have been adopted universally. It would take a chapter to relate all of its advantages.

This same principle is equally applicable in the government of the Church. The largest liberty should be allowed the various Conferences in the management of their affairs. Every effort should be put forth to increase local responsibility, and to develop Conference initiative and action. On the contrary, however, since the Civil War there has been a gradual trenching on the rights of the Conference and a gradual growth in the powers granted or claimed by our General Boards. We are now in danger of building up and fostering a bureaucracy which will in time modify the genius of the Church.

Do the facts bear out this assertion? Let us trace the rise and development of this tendency in two of our representative Boards. This brief historical review is intended to be in no sense a criticism of these Boards or their officers, but to trace the rise of a power in the Church that is affecting and will vitally affect her economy.

At the beginning of our missionary operations as a Church we formed a "Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," to which the Conference Missionary Societies were auxiliary. Each Conference Missionary Society was entitled to a delegate who it elected as a vice-president of the General Society or Board. The several Conferences as such had, therefore, a voice in the General Missionary Board.

In fact, this connectional society was established, as the Discipline of 1850 asserts, "for the purpose of affording to the several Annual Conferences of said Church, the facilities of a common organization, under the control of the General Conference, for carrying on their missionary labors, at home and in foreign countries."

In 1866 the famous General Conference met in the City of New Orleans. McTyeire and Doggett and Wightman and Keener and Duncan were delegates. The members of this body were reared in the atmosphere of statesmanship, so that they became great ecclesiastical statesmen. That Conference wrote the constitution of a "Home Mission Board." Article V says, "Each Annual Conference shall have charge of the Domestic Missions within its bounds." Article VIII further announces, "The Board shall have power to grant assistance from its funds to such Annual Conference Boards as are not able to support the Domestic Missions within their own bounds."

To-day our Board has so developed that it is no longer in any sense a child of the Annual Conference Boards, but their monitor. The General Board can come into the territory of an Annual Conference, without consultation with the Conference Board, and establish any kind of work that seems to them fit. So greatly has their power been strengthened that they can say whom the Bishop shall not appoint to a pastoral charge which they support. The man appointed must be accepted by the Board of Missions. From being a collecting agency, intended to assist the Conferences in their missionary enterprises, the Board now gives advice to the Bishops as to the way in which they shall perform their duties on the field. A part of this power is acquired by assumption, a part presumption, and a large part through legislation. Much of this legislation is wise, some of it, otherwise.

But no greater illustration of this subordination of the Conferences could be given than by the claims recently made by the Secretary of Education. That he is not alone in his claims will become apparent from the following deliverance of the Board, made at its recent meeting in Dallas:

"Resolved, That the Commission on Education be required to work out requirements and standards for a class of institutions to be known as 'Junior Colleges.'

"That these Junior Colleges shall consist of those now on the unclassified list and those under the title above indicated (as per the May Bulletion of 1912, pages 52-53) which give as much as two years of college work and do not confer baccalaureate degrees.

"That the institutions in said list which confer baccalureate degrees, but do not meet the requirements of the Commission for colleges within a year of the adjournment of said Commission, either take their places as Junior Colleges or raise their standards and enlarge their equipment and income so as to meet the requirements of college classification.

"That the Annual Conference Boards be advised that they are not at liberty, under the law of the Church, after the above readjustment shall have been consummated, to make appropriations to institutions which have not been properly classified by this Board."

In a recent letter Dr. Anderson defends the action of the Board of Education as follows:

"2. Par. 413 of the Discipline provides that the Conference Boards of Education shall be auxiliary to the General Board. Since they are auxiliary they are not at liberty to inaugurate independent plans and policies and educational systems for themselves. While Par. 414 of the Discipline provides that each Annual Conference may foster such educational work as it may desire, still, as an auxiliary to the General Board, this must be interpreted, I take it, to mean that the educational work which it fosters, so far as an educational policy and system are concerned, must be in line with the work of the General Board of Education. In Par. 417 it is provided that the General Board shall, through its members, agents, and Boards of Education of the Annual Conferences, seek to increase endowment and otherwise to strengthen our institutions in harmony with the general educational policy of the Church, to correlate existing institutions, and to originate new ones where they can be judiciously established and maintained. You will notice that in this paragraph the Board of Education is made the supreme superintending power in the educational department of the Church, and that the Boards of Education of the Annual Conferences are made sub-ordinate agencies through which the General Board is to exercise superintendency, and to effect correlation, etc., and this is all to be done according to this paragraph, in harmony with the general educational policy of the Church. You will notice that here it is assumed that there is one educational policy of the Church, and not many."

Was there ever in the history of Methodism such a denial of the rights of an Annual Conference or such an assumption of power? In the absence of specific law an old omnibus charter is found. These charters usually give privileges varying from the digging of a ditch to the engineering of canals on Mars. The Annual Conferences have toiled and labored to build up these institutions of learning and know the needs of the people and they will not easily surrender their management to a coterie of men, however wise, who live at a distance and do not know the local conditions. According to Dr. Anderson's conception, the Board of Education is the "supreme superintending power, and the Conference Boards of Education are subordinate agencies through which the General Board is to exercise superintendency." They are the pipes through which the clear crystal water of superior knowledge flows to the Church. If the Secretary of Education be correct in his interpretation of the law, the wisdom of the meetings of the Conference Boards is not apparent, unless it be to plan how to make the ex cathedra utterances of their superiors most effective.

If the Annual Conference deems the establishment of other schools wise, they will continue to establish such schools. They will continue to raise money for the schools they have established, without reference to whether they have been "properly classified by the Board of Education."

Our next General Conference needs to mark out the limits of the authority of all of our Boards. The rights of the Annual Conference are being trenched upon and, in the view of some, the constitutional prerogatives of the Bishops assailed. It is time for the assertion of the wisdom of that old-time policy which made much of the Annual Conference.

At our last General Conference it was seriously proposed and pertinaciously urged that the right to pass on the intellectual attainments of those applying for entrance into the Conference, and for ordination, should be turned over to the Correspondence School at Nashville. The same proposal will doubtless come before the next General Conference. The right of admitting to membership is one of the most sacred a Conference can possess, and no outside agency should be allowed to have any voice, whatsoever. The Conference has rights and these ought to be stoutly maintained. The centralization of power in our Boards has gone too far. The average Methodist preacher ought to have a greater voice through Conference initiative and control. The contemplated action of the Board of Education has made "Conference Rights" one of the vital questions of the Church.

WHERE SHALL WE SEND OUR CHILDREN?

To the Editor of the Advocate,
New Orleans, La.

Dear Sir: I am a man of moderate means, but thoroughly alive to the importance of education. I have a son and daughter, both of whom are ready to enter college. I am in doubt as to the kind of institution in which I should place them. The State institutions furnish most excellent advantages and are convenient. I am a member of the Methodist Church and, I trust, am alive to the spiritual well-being of my household. Why should I at some sacrifice send my children to an institution of the Church? I would be grateful for any help that you may be able to afford me on this problem. Sincerely yours, J. M.

The Advocate is quite happy to answer this query of J. M., and hopes to be of assistance to others beside our correspondent.

We are glad to learn that you are alive to the necessity of an education and are desirous of giving your children the very best in that line. Too many people are controlled in this matter by chance likes and dislikes, or by the unreasoning whims of the student himself. It is refreshing to come across parents who are making the question of schools a matter of investigation and of prayer.

The very first problem that presents itself to us is this: "What is education?" The answer to this question is contained etymologically in the word itself. It is the "leading out" and harmonious development of all the faculties of the soul. To develop only a part of these faculties is to produce the lop-sided man and the crank. "Ephraim is a cake unturned," says Holy Writ. Ephraim was burnt on one side and raw on the other side and nauseating on both sides. Reason, over-developed, will give us a logical machine, a brain as mechanical and as cold as the adding machine of the counting room. Imagination over-developed will produce the vagarist, the sentimentalist, the wild-eyed dreamer. Develop these faculties coordinately and each will hold the other in check and will give us the balanced mind.

Now, let us suppose that an institution should send its representative to you and should say, "At our institution we teach the languages, we teach political economy and mental and moral science, but we have no mathematics in our institution.

Owing to conflicting mathematical theories we have eliminated this great branch." Your immediate reply to this agent would be, "There are faculties of the soul that mathematics is supposed to develop and its facts are of the greatest importance to my child. I like your school, but it only educates in part and I feel compelled to send my child elsewhere in order that he may receive a full education."

Your reply would be both wise and apt. The State institutions have limited themselves and give only a partial education. It is good as far as it goes, but stops far short of educating the whole man. Faith, hope, and love are all faculties of the soul and most important faculties. On their development depends the character of your child and his immortal destiny. Without these graces all the rest will be of but little avail. The beauty and poetry of life has flown.

The church schools will give to your child a full education. Jesus Christ as the Son of God is mentioned with love and reverence. The finer sentiments of the soul are cultivated as carefully as the rational nature. The question you have to answer, then, is quite simple. Briefly, it is this: "Do I wish all the faculties which God has implanted in the soul of my children developed or only a part of them?" The answer that you will make is obvious. The only course, then, for you to pursue is to send your child to some church institution where the whole being of your children will be symmetrically developed.

There are other reasons that might be urged, but let this suffice for the present.

Reports that come to the Advocate office indicate that the Seashore Camp Meeting is being unusually well attended this year. On last Sabbath there was an especially large crowd. For miles up and down the L. and N. Railroad the crowds came, filling the capacious auditorium to its capacity. The preaching this year has been worthy the best traditions of the Camp Ground. You would have to travel far to find a better trio than Doctor John M. Moore, Dr. Simpson, of Birmingham, and Dr. Mathews of Georgia. More and more the Camp Meeting is leaving its impression on the Coast Country, and Protestantism is growing rapidly.

In planting Methodism in that soil, the Camp Meetings have been an important factor. Slowly but surely the leaven is working. The singing of the Lewis brothers has been quite a feature of the services. Seldom do you find so many in one family as gifted in song, as are these brothers. In addition to this gift they are, also, popular and successful preachers.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. R. M. Brown, after a two weeks' stay at the Seashore Camp Ground, returned home last week and occupied his pulpit in Algiers last Sunday.

The opening session of the Seashore Assembly will be held on Friday, the 18th of July, instead of on Thursday, the 17th, as is stated on the printed programs.

Mr. R. A. Maddox, the Field Secretary of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board, who has been residing at Mendenhall, Miss., has moved to Jackson, Miss. His present address is Jackson, Miss., Route 2, to which place all his mail should be sent.

The new parsonage at McDonoghville will be consecrated next Friday evening at 8 o'clock. The address of the occasion will be delivered by Dr. J. W. Moore, who will also consecrate the building. The parsonage was built at a cost of about $2500 and is paid for.

In our last week's issue we stated that Mr. Enochs of Jackson, Miss., gave $10,000 to the cause of missions at Lake Junaluska during the great Missionary Conference there. We were in error. The handsome gift was made by Mr. P. H. Enochs, of Fernwood, Miss.

Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College, was a pleasant caller at the Advocate office on Wednesday of last week. He is busy campaigning for pupils for the splendid institution with which he is connected, and reports the outlook for a good attendance next session as most encouraging.

The Seashore Camp Meeting closed on Wednesday night. The meeting this year was one of the most successful that has been held on the Camp Ground in many years. The weather was ideal, the attendance was large, and the preaching was as good as the most exacting listener could demand.

We received the following telegram last Tuesday from Rev. J. E. Williams, our pastor at Hickory, Miss.: "My baby is very sick. I request the prayers of the brethren." We are sorry to learn of the illness of the little one, and trust that God may have it in his gracious keeping and restore it in health to its anxious parents.

A revival meeting is now in progress at the First Methodist Church of New Orleans, in which Dr. J. W. Moore, the pastor, is being assisted by Rev. Charles McGee. Brother McGee is a young man, whose church membership is at the First Church, and who has been attending Vanderbilt University preparing himself for the work of the ministry.

We have in hand a report of a revival meeting recently held at Amory, Miss., in which the pastor, Rev. W. M. Young, was assisted by Rev. J. H. Felts. The meeting resulted in 14 accessions to the Church, and the general spiritual uplift of the entire membership. Brother Felts gave great satisfaction. We hope to allow Brother Young to tell of the meeting in our "From the Field" department next week.

In a short business letter to this office, written by Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, the efficient Sunday School Field Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, from Jacksonville, Fla., where she is filling engagements on the Chautauqua platform, she says, 'We have had great crowds and fine enthusiasm." Those who have heard Miss Kilpatrick are not surprised that great enthusiasm resulted when she spoke to a large crowd.

The Alexandria District Sunday School Institute was conducted at Pineville on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. An attractive program had been arranged for the occasion, which included addresses by the presiding elder, Rev. H. W. May, Mr. T. W. Holloman, Prof. T. Parish, and Rev. P. O. Lowrey. Besides the set addresses a number of papers and discussions were given by leading laymen and women of the District.

Brother James Hand, of Purvis, Miss., sent the Advocate a check last week for $5, and instructed us to advance his subscription one year and apply the $3.50 balance toward sending the Advocate to worn-out preachers or the widows of preachers. We are thankful for this act of generosity on the part of Mr. Hand, and commend his example to the consideration of other readers of the Advocate who may have the ability to emulate it.

On June 18, at the home of the bride's father, Rev. H. C. Morehead, in Sidon, Miss., Mr. John D. Penn, of Nashville, Tenn., and Miss Lucile Morehead were happily married, the ceremony being performed by Rev. H. C. Morehead. The bride is the youngest daughter of Brother Morehead, and is an accomplished young woman. We extend congratulatious to the happy couple, and wish for them many pleasant days together.

A revival meeting is now in progress at Talisheek, La., in which the pastor, Rev. T. V. Peters, is being assisted by Rev. T. J. Norsworthy. The meeting began with unusual promise. There were 18 conversions and six accessions to the Church during the first three days of the meeting. The song services are in charge of Mr. Robert Harmon, son of Rev. G. S. Harmon, of Yazoo City, Miss., who is reported to be giving perfect satisfaction.

Dr. W. F. McMurray, Secretary of the General Board of Church Extension, was in New Orleans last Saturday, and, in company with Rev. J. G. Snelling, pastor of the Carrollton Avenue Church, honored this office with a brief visit, which was highly enjoyed. Dr. McMurry found time while in the city to hold a business session with the official members of the Carrollton Avenue Church and help them plan the new edifice which they hope to begin building within a few months.

Glowing reports have reached this office concerning the work of the Central Church of Meridian, Miss., of which Rev. J. R. Jones is the accomplished pastor. There have been 160 new members added to the Church since Conference, and Brother Jones is preaching to crowded houses at his regular services, in spite of the warm weather. The congregation, led by its pastor, is now attempting to raise funds for a new church building, which its increased prosperity has rendered imperative.

Rev. J. W. Booth, of Jeanerette, La., together with his wife and little son, passed through New Orleans last Tuesday on their way to Monteagle, Tenn., where they will remain for the next three or four weeks. Brother Booth's congregation at Jeanerette voted to him a month's vacation, but he says before he was granted his vacation about sixty per cent of his congregation took theirs without a vote. From the reports at hand, the Jeanerette congregation is little different from a great many others during this hot weather.

Rev. J. B. Williams, pastor of the Clinton (La.) charge, is now in Colorado City, Colo., with his wife, who, we regret to say, is not in good health. They have been in the West for two weeks, and Brother Williams reports that Sister Williams shows signs of improvement. He hopes to be able to return to his work in about ten days. He says the climate in Colorado is great, and that he is enjoying it to the limit of his ability. We trust that Sister Williams may find that the change of climate is the thing most needed to help her in recovering her health, and that she may soon return to Louisiana free from all disease.

On June the 12th, at 7 p. m., at the home of Rev. H. P. Lewis, who is an uncle of the bride, in Jackson, Miss., Rev. G. W. Eichelberger, D. D., and Miss Mattye Alford were married by Rev. N. E. Alford, the father of the bride. Dr. Eichelberger is the Superintendent of the Mississippi State Anti-Saloon League, and the bride is a lady of rare culture and charming graces. We extend congratulations and best wishes to the happy couple, and pray that their lives together may inspire each to do greater things in that field of human uplift to which they have consecrated themselves.

In a letter dated June 9, Rev. L. W. Cain, the pastor, writes as follows from Leland, Miss.: "We closed a glorious revival here last night. It was far-reaching in its good effects. Twelve new members were added to our Church. That nobleman, Rev. W. S. Lagrone, preached strong sermons with power to large and appreciative congregations. The service on Sunday afternoon for men and boys only was great. There were 90 present, and practically all of them pledged themselves to live better lives. Prof. I. N. Price, of Chattanooga, Tenn., led the singing to the satisfaction and delight of the people generally."

Rev. A. F. Moore, pastor of the Lake Cormorant and Hinds Circuit, North Mississippi Conference, sent us the following brief report of his work, together with a subscription to the Advocate: "We are doing well, we think, with our small congregations. We have a very good Sunday school at each church. We have had two Children's Day services, with a total collection of $15.50. Our hope of a gracious year is high." Whether Brother Moore's congregations are small or not, we are not prepared to state, but those who know him and the character of the work that he does, would be surprised if they stayed small for a very long time under the influence of his ministry.

The members of our Church and their families living within the bounds of the St. Helena (La.) charge celebrated the Fourth of July this year by holding an all-day picnic at Day's Chapel, one of the churches on that circuit. The pastor, Rev. H. B. Perritt, was master of ceremonies, and the speakers of the occasion were Messrs. W. T. Holland and W. L. Tillery, two official members. We are not informed as to how high the tide of patriotism arose, but the needs of the St. Helena Circuit were not forgotten. The celebration resulted in the organization of The Laymen's Movement of the St. Helena Charge. After electing officers, the new organization resolved to call to its assistance as many ladies as there are stewards on the charge, the duty of the ladies to be to assist the stewards in collecting the funds for maintaining the different churches.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, the pastor of our Church at Ruston, La., passed through New Orleans last week on his return from the Seashore Divinity School. We are sorry that we missed seeing him. We take pleasure in giving the following report of his Sunday school, which he kindly sent us, and hope that it may tend to stimulate to increased activity some schools whose custom it is to go into summer quarters during the hot weather: "We had an average attendance of 413 2-5 for the month of June, and had we not have had one rainy Sunday our attendance for June would have been equal to that of May, which averaged 417 1-4. The attendance for July thus far is up to the high standard. The average attendance of officers and teachers is 99 per cent. One adult class had 113 present last Sunday. I have never seen a finer school when it comes to the doing of real hard work."

ELIZABETH DUNCAN ELDER, daughter of Thomas C. and Elizabeth Duncan, was born at Cockrum, DeSoto County, Miss., Feb. 8, 1872, and died in the Baptist Memorial Hospital at Memphis, April 4, 1913. On Nov. 4, 1891, she was happily married to A. D. Elder of Coldwater, Miss. To this blissful union were born six children—three sons and three daughters, all of whom survive their mother. In the life of Sister Elder were exhibited the noblest traits of Christian womanhood. Her home life was strikingly beautiful. As a wife she was true and faithful, as a mother loving and devoted. She was justly proud of her children, and was always glad to give them her personal attention. While the home has lost its central character, the loved ones are not deprived of the memory and influence of an examplary life. As a neighbor she was good and kind to every one, and especially to the poor, the sick, and the aged. In this capacity she impressed her many friends as being all that could be expected of any one. Sister Elder professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the early age of fourteen. She was one of the best and most loyal Christians I ever knew. In pure, unselfish service, she was a true disciple of her Lord and Savior. Patience and forbearance characterized her daily walk, and her unshaken faith in her Lord inspired hope and kept love aflame unto the end. Her life is not lost and can not be lost to the world, for she possessed that love which "never faileth." Through all the trying scenes of life she magnified the grace of God and bore witness to its sufficiency in health and in sickness. A strange and mysterious providence has removed her from our midst, but we will not murmur at our loss, for in the light of an eternal day we shall understand. Her going away has left many a heart sad and lonely, yet richer in the heritage of a holy influence upon their lives. Her pastor, Rev. W. H. Mounger, assisted by the writer, conducted the funeral service in the presence of a large audience of friends. Besides her husband and children, she leaves behind two brothers and four sisters—J. B. Duncan, of England, Ark., T. C. Duncan, of Sardis, Miss., Mrs. M. W. Mosbey, of Sunflower, Miss., Mrs. C. R. Thompson, of Coldwater, Miss., Mrs. P. B. Pounders and Mrs. H. F. Byers, of Senatobia, Miss. May the God of all grace sustain the stricken ones whom she leaves behind, and bring them with her to the saint's everlasting home. W. N. DUNCAN.

Mr. THOMAS WHITE was born in Wilkinson County, Miss., on Oct. 2, 1836, and died April 6, 1913. He was first married to Amanda Boland. To them were given four children. His second marriage was to Elizabeth Helmer, who became the mother of twelve children. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1856, and served as steward and trustee for more than forty years. He was a faithful soldier in the Civil War. He belonged to Co. D., 38th Miss. Regiment. He went through the siege of Vicksburg, as well as through other bloody battles. He was at one time a member of the Board of Supervisors, and, for a number of years, served as Magistrate in the Third District in Wilkinson County, Miss. He was a good and faithful citizen all his life. He has answered the last roll call and has gone to claim the reward which awaits him above. His remains were interred in the White Burial Ground, Rev. J. M. Massey officiating. May God's blessings rest upon the wife, children, and friends of the deceased, until the day of happy reunion, in the sweet by and by. J. M. MASSEY.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

(Unanimously adopted by a rising vote at the Second Quarterly Conference of the Monticello (Miss.) Charge).

1. That we fully realize that the Church has suffered a great loss.

"2. That he was one of our best and most influential members.

"3. That we bow in submission to the will of the Great Head of the Church, and pray God's blessings upon his loved ones.

"4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent the family of Dr. Catchings, a copy spread upon the minutes of this Conference, and a copy sent the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

THE THEATER.

A great deal has been said and written recently on the subject of the theater. I am very greatly surprised at one of our preachers taking a stand kindly favoring the professional play. While our Discipline does not use the word "theater," it does forbid self-indulgence. We are forbidden the doing of what we know to be not for the glory of God—also the taking such "diversions as cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus." My Bible teaches me to "love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him." No one will dare say that the theater is not of the world, for it is too manifestly so. The Psalmist says, "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful." When we go to the theater we step onto the sinner's territory, and thereby we get in his way. We will never put down sin, so long as we tolerate this form of amusement. The Apostle Paul said, "If eating meat maketh my brother to offend, I will eat no meat while the world standeth." Neither the Bible, nor the Discipline forbids the use of tobacco. (That is, they do not use the word "tobacco); but the Discipline does forbid "softness, or needless, self-indulgence." And again, the Apostle says, "Abstain from all appearance of evil." If the theater does not have the appearance of evil, please tell me what does! As Bishop Candler has plainly shown, in all his references to the theater, it not only puts on the appearance of evil, but the grossest of sins are the result of it. Did you ever read of a soul being brought to Christ through the theater? Where would one rather be found, at a prayer meeting or the theater when Christ calls? Hear the language of the Master in St. John 12:26: "If any man serve me, let him follow me; and where I am, there shall also my servant be. If any man serve me, him will my Father honor."

The Savior here plainly says, "And where I am, there shall also my servant be." Now, if the servants of our Lord will only wait for him to lead the way, he then has a perfect right to go, but we have no right to go to any place to which we cannot ask our Lord to accompany us. God bless the Editor and his work.

Tidings From the Field

New Augusta, Miss.

Everything goes well on the New Augusta Circuit. The congregations are larger than at any time within the last eighteen months. The attendance and offerings at the Sunday schools have advanced not less than fifty per cent. We have held two meetings, in which Brothers G. H. Galloway and W. T. Griffin were my able assistants. As a result of the meetings two have been added to the Church, five were converted, and twenty or more were reclaimed. We are expecting others to unite with the Church. I hope to send in more subscriptions soon.—C. J. Stapp.

Washington, Miss.

After having read the many references to Children's Day exercises, I am constrained to send the Advocate a line concerning the Children's Day exercise conducted by the Washington Sunday school. The attendance was large, the program was most exellent, and the collection was very satisfactory. Along with the $3.55 which was the amount of the collection, we sent $1.20 for Sunday school extension work. The latter amount was given in response to an appeal made by Field Secretary Maddox at the last District Conference.—L. C. Marsh, Supt. of Sunday School.

Oloh, Miss.

We are getting along very well on the Oloh charge. We held one revival which, we think, did a great deal of good. There were ten additions to our Church and some eight or ten who were converted that either have or will unite with some other Church. The meeting also resulted in a large increase in the pledges for pastoral support. We have celebrated Children's Day at three places, and are planning to celebrate at two other places. We have five Sunday schools, three of which are doing good work; the other two are new schools and are not doing much yet. Pray for us.—A. H. Steele.

Senatobia, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have recently closed a very successful meeting. Rev. L. A. McKeown, our pastor at Cleveland, was with us and preached for us eight days. He impressed our people with his beautiful spirit of humility, with his genuine piety, and with his remarkable gifts for preaching. His methods are plain, pleasing, and effective. He preaches in a most forceful manner the pure Word of God. His work abides and is fruitful of great good to the Church. The pastor, the membership, and the people of the entire community were blessed by his ministry. We wish for his return.—W. N. Duncan, P. C.

Clinton, La.

I have just closed two good revival meetings. One was held at Wadesboro, La., where we had to preach in a dance hall. The man who built the hall was glad to let me have it. We had large crowds, and baptized ten infants. A large number of Roman Catholics attended the meeting. The people there say they are going to build a new Church. Brother Abels, of Ponchatoula, is pushing the work, and I have been invited to come back in September and preach in the new building. The other meeting was held at Lee's Landing. Five joined our Church there, one of whom was a young lady that had formerly belonged to the Roman Catholic Church. She certainly did get happy. We baptized three children there. I ask all to pray for me.—W. T. Currie.

Logansport, La.

The Logansport charge is moving along steadily. We closed our meeting at Logansport on Friday night, July 4. Rev. R. W. Vaughan assisted me. He did some excellent preaching, but we had some things to hinder the progress of the meeting and therefore did not accomplish what we had hoped to. It rained almost every day, and there was much sickness in the neighborhood, but, in the opinion of the writer, and also some of our best people, the most damaging thing to our meeting was a new thing in town known as a moving picture show. However, in spite of the hindrances, the meeting did some good, the full extent of which we may not know until the day of Judgment when the secrets of all hearts shall be revealed. I am trying to impress our people with the necessity of every family taking the Advocate. Pray for us in our work.—Francis R. Power.

Lisbon, La.

Dear Advocate: Time advances with unconscious rapidity. The spring is past and the summer is here. Up to date, we have had what is generally said to be a good year. My work takes in considerable territory and makes it almost impossible for one pastor to do all that needs to be done. Lisbon charge has five churches on it and four good Sunday schools. Especially are we gratified with the work at one of these churches, which has been practically no church for several years. Possibly it is the germination of the good seed sown by my predecessors. We now have at this place an excellent Sunday school, good congregations, and everybody is in high spirits. They have already paid over half of their assessments, and they consider that it will be a light task to pay up the balance.

At the other churches the work is well organized. We have lost no ground, but I think there has been a steady step forward. To one of these Sunday schools has been added an Adult Bible Class. Children's Day has been observed at each church. If we count an overflowing congregation, fine dinner, excellent programs, etc., success, we had it at each point. On July 17, my first revival will begin. Then the others will come one after another until September. I have endeavored to procure the very best help possible. Revs. R. W. Tucker, J. C. Rousseaux, T. J. Warlick, and Briscoe Carter are to help me fight the battles. My people are praying for great revivals, and we earnestly solicit the prayers of all who are interested in this great work.

A word for you and the Advocate, Mr. Editor. I consider the Advocate an excellent paper; so do my people. I enjoyed your recent editorial concerning Mr. Carnegie's $1,000,000 offer to the Medical Department of Vanderbilt University. If Mr. Carnegie wants a Medical school in the South let him build it, we are not asking him for his money. Your general sayings in the paper are good, strong and inspiring and are building up the great cause you represent. The Advocate is a blessing on my work.—J. C. Price.

SPECIAL SCHOOL FOR FEEBLE MINDED CHILDREN.

Parents and guardians of children of arrested mental development will be interested in the work of the Stewart Home and School, a private institution for the care and training of children of backward mental development. The school accepts children of any age above five years and provides mental and physical training under teachers who have been specially trained for this particular class of work. SHOES AT WHOLESALE
NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE Readers are SAVING from ONE to TWO DOLLARS a PAIR by Ordering Their Shoes DIRECT FROM FACTORY BY PARCEL POST.

Would the cutting of your FAMILY SHOE BILL one-third or more mean a very big yearly saving to you? Figure it out. The present high cost of shoes is due to two things, the Middlemen's profits which the consumer must pay and the enormous decrease in raw materials. The new Parcel Post System gave us an idea. By selling our shoes direct to the wearer, cutting out the middlemen entirely, we could save the consumer fully a third on every pair of shoes and still make our usual wholesale profit. The plan is a great success. New Orleans Christian Advocate readers are realizing the opportunity of saving and great numbers are writing for our catalog which is sent free to anyone on request. It tells how cheaply high quality shoes can really be bought under this fair method of selling. Every shoe sold is guaranteed perfect in fit, material and workmanship—your money will be refunded if unsatisfactory. Write for your catalog to-day. A trial order will please and result in our getting your entire shoe trade. PARCEL POST SHOE CO., 258 Meeting Street, Charleston, South Carolina.

"STRAINING AT A GNAT SWALLOWING A CAMEL."

Chemical analysis of coffee, tea and Coca-Cola as served in the home, at restaurants and at soda fountains, shows that coffee and tea contain approximately twice as much caffeine as does Coca-Cola. In other words, two glasses of Coca-Cola are approximately equivalent to one cup of tea or coffee so far as the amount of caffeine is concerned.

The only other material difference in chemical composition is that both tea and coffee contain tannic acid, a substance found quite generally in plants, whereas Coca-Cola does not. Coca-Cola may therefore be described as an "Improved caffeine-containing beverage" in which the tannic acid has been left out, the caffeine reduced in quantity and a delightful combination of fruit flavors added. To use tea or coffee and eschew Coca-Cola is therefore a case of "straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel."—Adv.

CONCERNING THE SEAMEN'S BETHEL.

Whereas, the Woman's Missionary Council at its recent meeting in Birmingham, Ala., as a result of a resolution adopted by the Mississippi Conference Board of Missions, decided to discontinue the appropriation to the Seamen's Bethel at Gulfport, and

Whereas, the work of the present Superintendent, Rev. W. T. Griffin, has been highly satisfactory, and

Whereas, in view of the increasing importance of Gulfport as a shipping point and seaport, the need of Mission work among the sailors there is even more imperative now than when the Bethel was first established.

Therefore, Be it Resolved, 1st, That we deeply regret this action of the Woman's Council and of our General Board, and secondly, that we respectfully request our Annual Conference Board of Missions to take such steps as may be necessary to continue said mission, not only until our ensuing Annual Conference, but permanently.

EASTERN RELIGION IN WESTERN LANDS.

One of the most startling facts is that Buddhism, which has such a strong hold in Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles is rapidly propagating itself from these centers. Buddhist temples have been erected at enormous cost, and cultured priests administer the rites and ceremonies of this Eastern religion. Through a series of lectures large numbers of American women are being reached, they being more susceptible to these Old World cults. Thousands of Hindus have recently come to the United States. Mohammedanism reports twenty-four organizations with 1280 adherents in this country. Trained leaders are employed to teach these followers. Parseeism has also been revived and has headquarters in Chicago. We are even taking up the long neglected Egyptian worship of Isis. The weird and unusual seem to appeal strongly to our women, and these priests are well versed in every art which will attract and please. Why this unrest among our women?

WHAT OUR CHILDREN'S AUXILIARY IS DOING.

The Children's Auxiliary of Winona, under the efficient management of Mrs. T. H. Spencer, is going forward with leaps and bounds. They have a membership of 38 with eight subscriptions to the Young Christian Worker. Mrs. Spencer uses the programs given in the Young Christian Worker, interspersed with music and readings. Some of the little tots will respond with sentence prayer. At the end of each quarter she has a public meeting in her home, or on the lawn (this quarter she carried them to the woods for a picnic lunch), and has a mite box opening. Last quarter they realized $10 from mite boxes. Their pledge for 1913 is $10. They have also raised $5 toward the purchase of a piano for the Sunday school room of the church.—North Mississippi Bulletin.

Mrs. Spencer has surely heard the words of the Master, "Feed my lambs," for this splendid society of children could not go forward so steadily if they were not receiving both material and spiritual force. Let more of our women heed the Master's injunction!

THE SUE BENNETT SCHOOL, (LONDON, KY.)

The June Missionary Bulletin contains some interesting facts about this school. It was established in 1892, and now has property valued at $80,000. Five schools were conducted last year: a graded school with 170 students; a high school with 69 students; a commercial school with 69 students; normal, with 173 students, and a music school with 192 students, making a total of 633 enrolled in the various departments. Some students covered two departments, so there were really only 424 individual students. Fifteen teachers are employed. A co-operative kitchen and dining room have been added, and students who were unable to meet the payment of board in the new dormitory were thus enabled to conduct a boarding department for themselves at a very small cost. The Bible class has furnished special interest. Sufficient money has not been collected to build Lucinda B. Helm Hall, and, in the meantime, the school has no chapel and the classrooms are inadequate. An assembly hall is a necessity for so large a school. Ten thousand dollars, in addition to the amount already in hand, is needed before this new building can be erected.

COLLECTIONS FOR THE FIRST QUARTER OF 1913.

Home Department.

Received from Conference Societies, $32,723.96; from other sources, $10,953.09; Total, $43,677.02. During the first quarter of 1912, from the same sources, the collections amounted to $36,319.70. This makes an increase for the quarter of $7,357.35.

Let us work, pray, and give, so that the increase may continue through each quarter of the year. At the recent session of the Woman's Missionary Council some of our work had to be curtailed for the lack of sufficient funds. Don't let this experience again confront our women. "And Jesus sat over against the treasury, and beheld how the people cast money into the treasury." Did it ever occur to you, sister, that Christ is observing your method of giving? He sees every gift and knows what proportion it bears to your entire possessions.

A MEMORABLE HOUR.

It was a memorable hour in the meeting of the Board of Missions in Dallas, when Bishop Lambuth made his report on his African trip, and the location of the new mission. When he told his wonderful story of adventure and of his reception by that heathen and cannibal people, he called to the platform beside him the three young men, who, with their wives, are soon to go to this far-away land. The look of perfect surrender which their faces revealed was far more eloquent than any word which could have been uttered by any of our gifted Bishops. Bishop Candler presided at this meeting, and after the candidates had taken their places, he poured forth a prayer which came from the very depths of his heart, and then lead the congregation in singing "Amazing Grace." The words of the prayer and hymn were wafted straight to the Father's throne, and every one in that audience felt the Divine presence. The congregation with one accord moved forward to press the hands of those who have volunteered to "go down while we hold the ropes."

Who are the three men? The names of these three men who go back to Africa with Bishop Lambuth are: Dr. J. L. Mumpower, of Missouri; Rev. C. E. Bush, of Virginia, and Mr. J. A. Stockwell, of Louisiana.

Do we not feel honored that God has put it into the heart of a Louisiana man to respond to this call and to be one of the pioneers in African Mission work? Shall we not join in one fervent volume of prayer that the Holy Spirit may come in great power to him?

Location of the Mission.

This mission is to be located in Central Africa. The Belgian government has granted a permanent concession of land at Hibangu. The missionaries will sail from Antwerp the first week in November, in company with Bishop Lambuth. The funds for projecting this mission have been raised through the indefatigable efforts of Bishop Lambuth. Only one need has been unprovided for, and that is homes for the three missionaries. It will take $3000 for this purpose, and surely there are many women in Southern Methodism who will consider it a great privilege to be allowed to contribute to this fund. These men and women are heeding the call, "Go ye," and we must do all we can to lighten their labors and add comfort to their lives.

Sunday School

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

From an attendance of less than 30 at the beginning of the year, the Sunday school at Jennings has reached an attendance of 70.

The Adult Bible class at the Bethel church, on the Evangeline Mission, has been organized into the "Truth Seekers" Class, with Mr. A. A. Overstreet as teacher, Mr. J. M. Deare, President, and Mrs. J. S. Baker, Secretary-Treasurer.

Mr. W. A. Baker of Garland, who is a steward and has served as Sunday school superintendent, furnishes a good per cent of the church members and Sunday school scholars for the Bethel church from his children and grandchildren, there being thirty-seven in all. On Children's Day seven joined the Church, five of them being members of Brother Baker's family. Here is one family, at least, that seems to be in no danger of extinction.

Dr. Henry F. Cope, Secretary of the Religious Educational Association, while in conversation with the writer recently, commended, among others, the following books as being especially helpful to Sunday school teachers, or for use in Teacher-training classes: "Books of the Bible and Their Place in History," by Hagard Fowler; Weigles' "The Teacher and The Child;" "Efficiency in the Sunday school," by Cope. We are sure that these books are worth an examination by progressive Sunday school workers.

The value of early training is seen in animals. The colt that is handled with kindness and intelligence when young, "will not depart from it" when he is old. But the wild horse of the Texas ranch must be lassoed and brought into subjection through the process of a "Broncho Busting," and can never be trusted like the home raised animal. Likewise, if the habit of Sunday school and church attendance and doing Christian service is not formed in early life, its practice will not be easy and joyous in later life; and if there is a break in the habit, to re-established it is like trying to overcome the bad effect on a team that was once stalled —it can hardly be trusted again. As a wise teamster guards against the first runaway and the first stall, so should the wise parent or teacher see that there comes no let-downs in the regular habits of piety or the performance of religious duties in children. To stop that teen-age leak is the task of a skilled workman, but to keep possession of the heart of a youth who is already in the line of religious duty is easier than to retake it if once lost. "Horse sense" in the training of children is as valuable as in the training of animals.

Rev. A. W. Turner, Superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, believes that there should be some program for Temperance Sunday in the Sunday school that will contribute toward the establishment of sobriety and prohibition in our State, by seeking to get the scholars lined up for a forward movement that will count. He also suggests that every Adult Bible class have a committee on Civic Righteousness, "whose duty it shall be to see that every male member twenty-one years old and over pays his pole tax and registers. We must have our best people to vote." All of this we approve, and we hope that our Sunday schools will take notice of these suggestions. We submit the following as a suitable Sunday school Temperance Rally Cry, which has been evolved from an International Association program:

Leader—"The children of the Sunday school."

Children respond in concert—"Will try, try, try."

Leader—"To lift the prohibition standard."

Response—"High, high, high."

Leader—"To foster public sentiment."

Response—"That by and by."

Leader—"We'll make our State and nation."

Response—"Dry, Dry, Dry!"

Leader—"Who'll work and pray for that glad day?"

Response (with Chatauqua salute) —"I, I, I."

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

"Our lives are not levels but grades. If we don't go up, we must go down."

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb is out on a camp with his Boy Scouts—the first patrol. These youngsters are enthusiastic and will live by the Scout law, which, after all, would be a wonderfully good law for us all to live by.

The first men's class ever organized in Tula, Miss., was launched June 22, as a result of the session held in the interest of the Sunday school on an afternoon of the Holly Springs District Conference, which was held in that hospitable town.

Bishop Vincent once said, "It is possible to place too great a value on the Sunday school as a pedagogical opportunity. It should be more than an educational opportunity—it must be tremendously evangelistic. To fulfil its mission, the atmosphere of a school must be surcharged with prayer and earnest desire. A Decision Day crystallizes this effort.

Rev. R. W. Lovett, pastor of the Mathiston Circuit, has certainly made fine progress along Sunday school lines. When he was sent to this charge, he found one Sunday school; now he has four live, "up-to-now" (to use his expression) Sunday schools, one of which has adopted "We never sleep," as its motto. The La Grange Sunday school will soon have every department organized and will be doing a very fine grade of work. Such reports are encouraging, and go far to prove that we have no rural problem. The problem is to awaken people to the necessity of doing good work and doing it enthusiastically and well.

THE DISCIPLES MOST NEEDED.

Never has there been a great and useful Christian who was not much given to prayer. This has been the secret of power with all the men of might in the divine kingdom. It was one of the most outstanding characteristics of our Lord himself when he tabernacled in the flesh. The Scriptures have much more to say of his praying than of his preaching. He sometimes spent whole nights in solitary communion with the Father. No part of St. Paul's writings are more remarkable than his prayers. They give us an insight into his heart and a conception of him that can nowhere else be found. John Wesley also tarried much before the throne of grace; he well knew and oft trod the way into the Master's presence. Herein largely lies the explanation of his extraordinary spirituality and marvelous ministry.

How comparatively few there are in this age who really know how to pray! This is the lesson that thousands of professed disciples of Jesus most need to learn. Nor is this as slight a task as many imagine. It costs vastly more in the way of heart-searching, penitence, confession, and self-renunciation and self-surrender than most persons are willing to pay. The effectual, fervent prayer that availeth much usually springs from a righteous heart. So in reality to become mighty in prayer is to become a holy man or woman; hence it is no quick and easy acquirement. But it is one well worth striving for. It will irradiate a person's own life, transform and enrich his character, give him the key to the storehouse of divine power, and open the way to large usefulness. The Church to-day needs nothing so much as she does members who know how to reach the eternal throne and prevail with Him who sits upon it. Such disciples, though they may be poor in purse, are worth more than multi-millionaires to Zion.

LEND THEM A HELPING HAND.

The representatives of our several schools in Louisiana and Mississippi are now busy campaigning for pupils for their next sessions. This is a most important work, and in it they should have the active assistance of every Methodist pastor in the two States. Look your field carefully over, brother, and send to those in charge of our institutions of learning the names of any young people who are going off to college, or who ought to go. Do not procrastinate, but do this at once. Also talk up our schools—they are worthy of your commendation. There is no good reason why a Louisiana or Mississippi Methodist should send his son or daughter to some other State to be educated when such excellent opportunities may be had within his own commonwealth.

One thing more: Beware of educational poachers who promise to do so much for so little. Education that is too cheap, like everything else of that kind, is almost sure to prove inferior and unsatisfactory. Do not take chances when the priceless interests of your child are at stake. A reasonable price must be paid for the best care and instruction.

BOY SCOUT HEROES.

The following dispatch from Jasper, Ala., to a secular daily, bearing date of July 16, is well worth reading:

"The local troop of Boy Scouts rendered valuable aid to Dr. J. A. Goodwin Monday night. On his way to see a young lady, who had fallen from a cliff, he missed the way and drove his car down the mountain to where the Boy Scouts were in camp. The scout master sent four boys to assist the doctor on a hike across the mountain to where the wounded lady was camping, and, on returning and attempting to climb the mountain with his car, the gasoline would not flow to the engine. He walked back to the camp and made known his plight, and the scout master called up the scouts, who, in their night shirts and bare feet, crossed the river and pushed the doctor's car near the top of the mountain, where it was level enough for the gasoline to flow to the engine."

Such incidents as this show that heroes do not, as some seem to imagine, belong wholly to the past. They also demonstrate that true heroism can be exemplified in times of peace as well as war, and in the opening years of life as well as in the days of its maturity. In inspiring our youth with such ideals and in inciting them to such deeds, the Boy Scouts Movement must necessarily do great good. All honor to these gallant young knights of the twentieth century! They help to make us, amid the many discouraging problems and perplexities of this age, hopeful of the future.

MR. CARNEGIE'S ATTITUDE TOWARD CONFEDERATE SOLDIERS.

The July number of The Confederate Veteran contains an interesting correspondence between Col. A. K. McClure, formerly the brilliant Editor of the Philadelphia Times, and Mr. Andrew Carnegie concerning the question of assisting the needy veterans of the lost cause. The circumstances which gave rise to this correspondence were as follows: Mr. Carnegie, having become enormously wealthy by his operations as a steel monopolist, was scattering his money promiscuously about; so in 1901, two distinguished Union soldiers, Col. Sylvester Bonnaffon, Jr., and Adjutant John Hayes, addressed to him the following letter:

"Dear Sir—Having served on the Union side in the War of the Rebellion, we thoroughly tested the bravery of our opponents from the Southern States. It made the contest a terrible one, but it demonstrated the strength of free government. It advanced this country's force, in the opinion of the word's powers, more than a hundred years of peaceful rule would have advanced it. It has given the government of this country a commanding position. Many of the men we fought against are maimed and poverty-stricken veterans, living in their old age upon the meager charity of an impoverished people. They are American citizens, but for obvious reasons the general government cannot pension them nor create soldiers' homes for them. We therefore respectfully suggest the propriety of placing a trust fund in the hands of capable Southern gentlemen for the purpose of assisting the poor, deserving, and maimed soldiers of the Southern army by pensions and by soldiers' homes. We believe many wealthy gentlemen of the North would cheerfully contribute to such a fund, but we first call it to your attention. We feel sure that lasting good to the country and donors would result from such a movement."

Learning of this action upon the part of these two magnanimous men who fought upon the Federal side in the War between the States, Col. McClure, who, though a Northern man, was a true friend of the South, and who had been intimately associated with Mr. Carnegie, sought to re-enforce their appeal by writing him a letter on the subject. This led to the exchange of communications between the two gentlemen which the Confederate Veteran has recently given to the public. Mr. Carnegie's last letter is, in part, as follows:

"My Dear Friend—I have forgiven the Southern soldier, but I could not bring myself to give for his support as such. I have forgiven Gen. Lee for his blunder, but I do not like to see his statue in the Hall of Fame. These people made a sad mistake, having struck at their country. I am afraid that I forgive, but do not forget, which the humorist says is trying to settle with the Lord at 50 per cent on the dollar."

From the foregoing it is manifest that the cause of Christian education is not the only good thing that has failed to command the appreciation of this noted agnostic multi-millionaire. But this should not be in the least surprising. The lofty devotion to principle, the uncomplaining self-sacrifice, and the splendid courage of the Confederate soldier are not qualities that could be expected to appeal to a man of the sordid and grasping type of Mr. Carnegie. What could there be in common between such a character and the peerless Robert E. Lee, whom money was powerless to influence?

The Confederate soldier, we are glad to say, has never asked Mr. Carnegie or anybody else for a pension. Even the meager assistance which the Southern States have given him has come to him unsought. Sublime as was his bravery in battle, and splendid as was the heroism with which he set his hand to the task of rehabilitating the devastated South, grander still has been his unmurmuring endurance of misfortune and poverty. "He has earned and kept the company of his own self-respect." Standing a few weeks ago within the base of the Confederate monument on the Old Capitol grounds at Jackson, Miss., we copied from the wall on a slip of paper the following words which Mr. Carnegie and others like him would do well to study:

"All is lost! but by the graves
Where martyred heroes rest,
He wins the most who honor saves—
Success is not the test."

CHANCELLOR KIRKLAND'S LETTER.

By Dr. James Cannon.

It is only just that Chancellor Kirkland should be given the opportunity to make reply to the Bishops and the four minority trustees and so his reply as given in the Nashville Banner is published below. (Most of our clerical readers saw this letter in the Nashville Advocate.—The Editor.)

But a careful reading will show that Chancellor Kirkland ignores the main issue and tries to minimize what the Church and the Bishops have done for Vanderbilt, and then to encourage the idea in the local Nashville and Tennessee public that the Vanderbilt University is not the product of Methodism or dependent upon Methodism for its life and success. It is the old story of the Bible, "Jeshurun waxed fat and kicked." The Methodist Church founded Vanderbilt University, and for nearly forty years it has fostered it, and now that it has grown strong under the Church's fostering care, the Chancellor and the local community are ready like Jeshurun to kick off the Church and become a "civic" Nashville institution.

There is only one real issue in this matter, and this Chancellor Kirkland ignores: Can the Vanderbilt University accept Mr. Carnegie's money and remain, as in the past, under the control of the Church? It cannot, even if Mr. Carnegie would give his money to Vanderbilt in case the suit is decided in favor of the Church—the Church can not accept his money in the face of his insulting letter. A gift can be accepted without loss of self-respect if given in the proper way, but Southern Methodism cannot retain her independence and self-respect before the world and before God, if the gift of Mr. Carnegie is accepted by her representatives with the insult in his letter not withdrawn. It is time that Chancellor Kirkland and the Nashville papers had learned that Southern Methodism is greater than the Vanderbilt University and Nashville combined, and that the Church will maintain her independence and self-respect, if Vanderbilt never gets a dollar from Mr. Carnegie, or if the Church loses the suit in the courts of Tennessee, or if the local Nashville community deserts the Church for dollars.

If local sentiment in Nashville prefers Carnegie money to Southern Methodist institutions, and if the Church loses her case in the Tennessee courts, then the M. E. Church, South, should sell the Publishing House and move the connectional offices to some other city which will not lose all its self-respect and gratitude at the mere prospect of a million dollars.

Certainly the Carnegie million has been a searchlight, revealing the true attitude of Chancellor Kirkland and the Nashville dailies. The statement in Chancellor Kirkland's letter that the Bishops should have kept quiet till the suit was settled, so that the University might get $200,000 from Mr. Carnegie and have it even should the Church win, is an amazing revelation. How could a self-respecting Church agree to take such a course, and how money must blind one who would suggest it!

The Church can afford to lose Carnegie's million. She cannot afford to sell her independence and self-respect. If the Church wins the suit, men should be put in charge of Vanderbilt who believe that the Church is commissioned by God to educate, and that she is equal to the task. If the Church loses the suit, then she should withdraw all patronage and support of every kind from the University, and should move all her offices away from a city which is willing to sell out the Church for money.—From the Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate.

A WORD FROM THE MIDLAND METHODIST.

Says the Midland Methodist (published at Nashville): "There is no true education which is divorced from the Christ of the ages and the Master of life and destiny. The Church of Christ has been a champion of education from its beginning, and out of her interest in it the foundation has been laid; and to conclude that, since the Church has created and fostered schools, the mother is to be rejected by the daughter whose very life has depended on that mother is the lowest type of ingratitude. It is not strange that some of those are among the membership of our Churches who look on all rejections of money for these institutions the Church has founded as narrow and little, when they can see nothing more in the Church than a club where the respectable can be respected and which is so poverty-stricken as to bite at any bait of money, regardless of loyalty to their Master and Lord. Thank God, the day has not yet come in our Church when our Bishops and real leaders will sell out for cash! 'The gates of hell shall not prevail against the Church,' much less the financiers and critics whose eyes and hearts are metallized."

AN APPEAL TO THE CHURCH.

(Adopted by the Board of Missions at a called Meeting held on July 8, 1913.)

It is a well known fact that the income of this Board has for years been barely sufficient to sustain the mission work we have undertaken. The slow increase in this income falls far short of the growth of the necessary demands on the field. Hence the Board is forced to appropriate to the fullest limit allowed by its laws in order to meet the immediate and urgent requirements of its work. On the basis of the increased income for 1911 the Board made the largest appropriation in its history. This appropriation was for the year 1913 and must be paid out of the income of this year. Last year there was a decrease in the income for foreign missions. Unless there is a great increase therefore in the regular income between now and December 31, there will be a deficit for this year of a considerable sum.

The great offering made at the recent General Missionary Conference cannot apply to our current appropriations, because it was specially directed to the Building and Equipment Fund and other definite objects. The necessary increase must be made up by a united effort which will swell the contribution that comes through our regular channels. A deficit for this year is not the only danger we face. The appropriations to be paid in 1915 must be made on the basis of this year's income. Without the increase referred to therefore we shall be compelled to hold the appropriations at the hurting point, to which we had to reduce them for the year 1914, and that in the face of the sore and growing needs and thrilling opportunities of the hour.

We dare not contemplate such a disaster. We must not permit the Church to so far fail of her duty and privilege. We therefore most earnestly urge upon all our pastors that for the remaining months of the year they make unusual effort to swell the income for missions; that the assessment in no case be made the measure of our gifts, but that the ideal and aim in every instance be according as God hath prospered every one; that all available funds for specials shall be gathered in and reported; and that surpluses which have been or may be undertaken shall be pressed to the fullest possible measure.

The hour and the cause call for united, persistent and vigorous effort. It is no ordinary condition and no ordinary difficulty that confronts us. Ordinary means and methods therefore will not adequately meet the situation. The heart of the Church is stirring with response to the missionary appeal and we believe the time is ripe and the people ready to be led in a great advance. We confidently count on our leaders in this hour of great opportunity and of great responsibility.

THE CHURCH SCHOOLS AND THE MINISTRY.

The kindly feeling that laymen have for preachers, as preachers, is often responsible for a lack of frankness where it is most needed. So in the beginning of this article, I wish to disclaim any personal feeling or any desire to wound the most sensitive one? My house has ever been open to preachers, even those teaching, and the times were never too hard for me to find a bit of food and other refreshments for the weary laborer in the vineyard of the Lord. Love for my Church and her institutions calls forth these observations.

We all claim to believe in a called ministry. No belief is more universal in the Methodist Church. I recall only one preacher who frankly confessed that he was not called to the holy work, and he did as little as he conscientiously could to hold his appointment. To me no honor could be so great as this. To feel that my Heavenly Father had use for me in his plans for the salvation of the race, would be an almost unbelievable distinction. For him to say, "Go preach my gospel!" is the greatest possible token of his love and confidence. A man the recipient of this unquestioned honor, should reject with disdain an offer to take the presidency of a college, and personally I fail to see how any one could do otherwise. In fact, I cannot see how he has the right to take a school when called to the highest of earthly professions. Yet many use all sorts of plans to get schools.

It is a well known fact that very few of our church schools are doing the work that we as laymen have the right to expect of them. With our large membership, Centenary, Millsaps, Emory, Wofford, and Hendrix ought each to have at least 800 to 1000 pupils. Not a single school, male or female, has one-fourth of the pupils that THE CHURCH NEEDS FOR IT TO HAVE. Never has the Church needed men and women educated in heart and head as she does now, and the schools she looks to for them are failing to supply the demand. Why is this so? Below you will find the reasons as I see them:

(1) There is a deep-seated but practically universal prejudice against "preacher-teachers." This is one of the principal reasons why our schools, and those of other denominations, are so poorly endowed. Private and semi-private schools easily attract the attention and money of the liberally disposed, and the daily papers report donation after donation aggregating millions, while the church schools struggle along with poor equipments and inferior buildings. Yet the country sorely needs the men and women they ought to send out. This prejudice is not entirely confined to the laymen and the general public—preachers have it too. I recall a president of a church school for girls who sent his sons to the State University. Few men were ever more highly honored by their Church than he by his Conference. Yet the fact speaks for itself. At a recent district conference the writer heard two splendid ministers make substantially the following utterance: "No preacher has a right to teach school at all."

(2) It is conceded that some ministers have made a moderate success as presidents of church colleges—not because it was right for them to leave their pulpits, but because God needed that work done, and in his wisdom over-ruled the mistake of the trustees. But the number of failures is so glaring and frequent that the successful "preacher-teacher" is a rare and brilliant exception—such a shining one that the Church usually makes a Bishop of him. For example, let me mention a case or two—I could mention scores. In a certain Conference were two men who were eminently successful as pastor and presiding elder, and who were in every way men whom their brethren delighted to honor. Wherever they went, their popularity was unbounded. In an evil hour one accepted the presidency of a college for men, and the other one for women. "The Advocate" voiced the opinion of the people when it commended the wisdom (?) of the trustees. Both men were apparently eminently suited for this work; yet each recorded a pitiful failure. Returning to their God-called employ, they again achieved that success they so greatly merited, and their "latter years" were their best.

(3) Another reason why our schools are not more successful, is the lack of loyalty to them that their trustees so often show. One instance will show what I mean. A certain school under the control of the Methodist Church was in need of an assistant professor. The salary was small, and the place not particularly attractive. Among the applicants for the place was the son of a superannuated Methodist preacher, a graduate "Cum Laude" of one of our best schools, with three years' successful experience in the work of teaching. There were three other applicants, but none so well indorsed, or with so much experience. All were graduates of Methodist schools except one—he was from a Baptist family and school—though he was not actually a member of that Church. One of the young men spoke of his prospects to me, and felt assured that he or the "Emory" man would get the place. He was shocked when I suggested that the Baptist college man would get the place—a prophecy that I am sorry to say came true. The successful one was neither so well educated nor recommended as the others.

In conclusion, let me say that it is worse than useless for trustees to ignore this feeling. It does exist, and will continue to do so as long as we Methodists believe in a called ministry, and may God grant that we never lose that precious ideal! Our Church is full of consecrated laymen who are ready to serve their Church at any time, yet who are too polite to tell trustees the reason why the rolls of our schools are so meager and why their endowment is so entirely inadequate for the times. When the State and private schools have in their employ so many laymen of deep piety, clean lives, and ripe scholarship, it seems folly for trustees to continue the suicidal policy that they have so long pursued. Let them awake to the fact that our schools are not meeting the demands of the Church, and return the preachers to the pulpits where they can be of service to God and the Church. The laymen can do this work well, and they will do it too, if given a chance.

A METHODIST LAYMAN.

FREE SCHOLARSHIPS FOR YOUNG PREACHERS AT VANDERBILT.

Young preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who are college graduates, can secure free scholarships that will cover the cost of board in the Biblical Department of Vanderbilt University. A loan fund is available for those who cannot secure scholarships. Tuition and room rent are free. An Employment Bureau aids students in seeking remunerative work such as may be carried on in connection with their University studies. There were one hundred and seven ministerial students at Vanderbilt University last year, thirteen of this number being students in the Academic Department. Of the ninety-four theological students in the University last year, fifty-six held academic degrees, and twenty others had college training, though they were not graduates. Thirty-seven colleges and universities were represented in the student body. About eight hundred former students of the University are now preaching in the various Annual Conferences of Southern Methodism, or are teaching in the schools of the Church. A large proportion of the foreign missionaries of the Church are former Vanderbilt students.

The large number of courses of Biblical and theological study offered to students, the many distinguished preachers and lecturers that annually visit Nashville, the splendid opportunities offered by Nashville for studying the problems of the modern city, the commodious and well arranged building of the Biblical Department (Wesley Hall), and the ample and beautifully wooded campus of over sixty acres, the opportunity to come in social contact and daily fellowship with a hundred or more young ministers from all the Conferences and colleges of Southern Methodism and to study all the great connectional interests of the Church that are centered in Nashville—these are some of the many reasons that make it desirable for every young preacher of the Methodist Church, South, to spend, if possible, from one to three years at Vanderbilt University. Let every young minister of the Church who desires the help of a University in preparing himself for more effective service in the ministry, write to the Dean of the Biblical Dpartment, Dr. W. F. Tillett, Nashville, Tenn.

FROM DR. WYNN.

The interest in Centenary College in the Shreveport District is very encouraging. At the recent District Conference, a movement was set on foot to raise a Loan Fund to assist worthy students, and it was resolved to have in hand by the opening of the session a minimum of $1000. This will at the same time help in the maintenance of the school.

The prospect, so far, for a good opening is very good indeed. I am traveling as much as possible during the summer on the lookout for students, and I shall appreciate very much any help from the brethren.

The vacancy in the Faculty occasioned by the resignation of Mr. Rouse, has been filled by the election of Prof. Buford D. Battle, brother of Rev. C. A. Battle of New Orleans, to the chair of Latin and German.

At this writing I am in Grand Cane, where Rev. T. H. Morris, of Mansfield, is most ably assisting Brother Harvell in a revival meeting. The prospect for a successful revival is excellent.

R. H. WYNN.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE NOTES.

Drs. Watkins and Sullivan have been engaged most of the time since the close of the session in canvassing for the college. They report that prospects for the college were never brighter.

There are about twelve young men attending the summer school making up work. The faculty for the summer school may be enlarged next year in order to accommodate a larger attendance. The demand for summer work is constantly growing and provision should be made to satisfy it.

Mrs. Joyce, the efficient matron of the Preparatory School, left the campus a few days ago to spend the summer in Gulfport.

The new Preparatory School building is nearing completion, and presents an imposing appearance on the site of the old edifice which was destroyed by fire last January. It occupies the most beautiful location on the grounds.

The new Millsaps Buliding in the city, which was recently given by Major Millsaps to the College, is nearing completion. That structure, as it lifts its several stories above the other buildings in its section, stands as a mighty challenge to the Methodists of Mississippi. Why will not the Methodists of the State say to Major Millsaps: "Turn about is fair play. We will now duplicate your generosity and add another $150,000 to the endowment fund of Millsaps College?"

Misses Elizabeth and Olive Watkins have returned to the campus after a visit to Hattiesburg.

The following members of the faculty may be found on the campus during the summer: Profs. Ricketts, Huddleston, Noble, E. Y. Burton and Harrell. Dr. Kern is attending the conference of Y. M. C. A. workers which is being held in Arkansas. Prof. J. M. Burton is at his home in Culpepper, Va., from whence he will go this fall to Johns Hopkins University for a year's graduate work. Prof. Lin is in New Orleans doing some special work. Dr. Swartz is spending the vacation in Potsdam, N. Y.

One of the most pleasant events of the Commencement season occurred just before the members of the faculty took their departure for the summer, when President and Mrs. Watkins entertained them at tea on the evening of June 11. The time of departure came all too soon, and all left declaring that it had been the most delightful faculty meeting of the entire year.

Bishop and Mrs. Murrah left Jackson on July 14 for New York, from whence they sailed on the 19th for Europe on the newest and largest vessel afloat, "The Imperator."

Jackson, Miss. G. L. HARRELL.

HOW A DISTINGUISHED MAN WAS CONVERTED.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

The following striking story of the conversion of Rev. W. G. McCoy, the father of Bishop McCoy, through the influence of a Bible while an inmate of a Federal prison, is related: He fought on the Southern side with "Quantrell's Guerrillas," an independent band that did the Federal Army all the harm it could by the "bushwhacking" method of warfare. This organization was not officially connected with the Confederate Army. The noted James boys were members of the same band. While enduring the hardships of the prison life into which he fell, young McCoy chanced to pick up a piece of paper containing the address of the American Bible Society, and not knowing the nature of its benevolence, he by post asked for some clothes, but instead received "such as they had"—a Bible; and it was while spending the dreary hours reading this that he was converted, and put on the "robes of righteousness," instead of the clothes for which he had asked. Being outlawed by the predominance of Union sentiment in Missouri where his band had operated, he migrated to Alabama, and while in a despondent and homeless state, after nightfall one evening he espied a light in the distance to which he went, and found there a kind-hearted widow who needed a young man on her farm. He was employed by her, and through her continued kindness he obtained his education and preparation for the ministry.

Here was a case where the "quick and powerful Word" without even some one to teach, as in the case of the Eunuch, a soul made "wise unto salvation." Surely the entrance of this Word dispels darkness and "giveth light."

Dr. S. A. Steel is not only a brilliant preacher and lecturer, but he is also given to holding communion with the Muses. Bishop W. R. Lambuth was due to sail for Brazil on July 12. After finishing his work in South America, he will proceed to Africa to complete the task of establishing a Southern Methodist Mission in that country, taking with him the little band that he has chosen to have charge of this important work. Who can tell what far-reaching results may spring out of this now small movement in the coming years?

Rev. C. N. Broadhurst is closing a successful year's work as pastor of the Park Street Church of Hannibal, Mo. Although he has conducted no special revival meeting, he has received 100 into the Church. Four young men from his Sunday school are planning to enter the itinerancy, and one young lady has volunteered to become a deaconess. Such spiritual results are evidence that God is owning the work of this pastor.

Dean N. A. Pattillo, acting President of the Randolph-Macon Woman's College, has announced the selection of Dr. E. B. Dr. Crooks is a native of Kentucky and a son of a Methodist preacher. He is a graduate of Central College of Missouri and of Vanderbilt University, having received the A. The Editors and Publishers of Southern Methodist papers held a meeting during the Missionary Conference in Lake Junaluska recently and effected the organization of the Southern Methodist Press Association. Dr. E. G. B. Mann, of the Central Methodist, is the President; Rev. H. M. Blair, of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, is Vice President, and Dr. James A. Anderson, of the Western Methodist, is the Secretary. These, with Dr. James Cannon, Jr., of the Baltimore and Richmond Advocate, and Mr. W. L. Blaylock, of the Texas Christian Advocate, constitute the Executive Committee.

Representatives of the Kentucky Conference have bought a beautiful lot at Lake Junaluska, which has a frontage of 200 feet and is located on a fine elevation, overlooking the lake. It is stated that a stock company will be formed and that steps will be speedily taken to erect on this site a commodious house of fifty rooms to lodge members of the Kentucky Conference who in the future may attend gatherings held on the Assembly Grounds. This strikes us as a wise and timely movement, that might well be imitated by many other Annual Conferences. With Mr. J. R. Pepper and Dr. James Cannon directing its affairs, Lake Junaluska is destined to become one of the foremost of American chautauquas.

CAPT. S. B. McCUTCHEON DEAD.

Dear Dr. Meek: I write to inform you that at two o'clock this afternoon, in this city, Captain S. B. McCutcheon died.

Captain McCutcheon was one of the oldest citizens of Shreveport, having resided here since before the War, and I doubt if any man in Methodism has done more for the cause in Louisiana than has Captain McCutcheon. He was a member of the Joint Board of Finance of our Conference, I think, for 36 years. He had been a member of the Official Board of the First M. E. Church of this city for 41 years. I doubt if there is a preacher in the Louisiana Conference that will not learn with regret of the death of this great and good man.

W. A. McKENNON.

Shreveport, La., July 16, 1913.

We greatly regret to be informed of the death of this noble layman, whose influence has long been so potentially felt for good in Louisiana. The Methodism of the entire State has in his translation sustained an appreciable loss. He wrought worthily, and doubtless he has passed to a rich reward. We extend to the bereaved our deepest sympathy.—Editor of the Advocate.

THE SEASHORE CAMP MEETING.

The forty-second Seashore Camp Meeting was held at the Seashore Camp Ground, closing on Wednesday, July 16, 1913. Dr. J. M. Henry, presiding elder of the New Orleans District (La.), Dr. J. S. Frazier, presiding elder of the Mobile District (Ala.), and Rev. W. H. Huntley, presiding elder of the Seashore District (Miss.), had the Seashore Camp Meeting in charge. The eminent ministers who gave the word of God interpretation were Dr. John M. Moore, of Nashville, Tenn., Dr. J. D. Simpson, of Birmingham, Ala., and Dr. G. W. Mathews, of Fitzgerald, Ga. Prayer service was held every morning at 7 o'clock. At 9 a. m., 11 a. m., and 8 p. m., a sermon was preached by one of the three ministers mentioned above.

The Camp Meeting opened on Wednesday evening, July 9, at 8 o'clock. Dr. J. M. Henry made the announcements and closed by saying, "We look to God to convert the unconverted." The first sermon was delivered by Dr. John M. Moore, whose discourses had a tendency toward a larger outlook for humanity, whom God is perfecting according to his good purpose. He held that man should know his limitations, and in faith rely upon God, his Father; that when a man thinks, or feels, his heart ought to appeal to God, and that religion is for his spiritual development. Through all his utterances ran the aspiring strain of belief in Jesus Christ.

The sermons of Dr. J. D. Simpson were as leading lights in the Christian's pathway to a higher attainments of spirituality and marked with compassion for those without the fold, and also by an endeavor to lead them by love to accept salvation.

The discourses of Dr. G. W. Mathews were in keeping with the tenets of the Old Testament. The finest was on the "Pentecostal Feast," which conveyed the impression that the power of the Holy Ghost might still come upon people in the days of conscious need of the Divine Spirit.

The last sermon was preached by Rev. J. D. Simpson, Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. The text was John 6:68, 69. Dr. Simpson delivered unto us the words of eternal life and emphasized the value of the firm foundation that is gained by the individual when becoming a member of the Church. The sacrament was solemnly administered; thirty-five ministers gathered 'round the altar. The large congregation (600 or more) partook of the Lord's Supper in remembrance of Jesus.

Though the Seashore Camp Meetings of olden days were as revivals to save the souls of sinners, in this new era the success or failure of a camp meeting cannot be measured by the number of sinners kneeling at the altar. With the advance of civilization conditions have changed. Through the constant ministrations of the clergy, it is God's good pleasure that man should receive a spirituality of being that will lift him above the sordid materialism of earth. These ideas were set forth forcibly by Dr. J. M. Moore, Dr. J. D. Simpson, and Dr. G. W. Mathews. The truth of these statements is evident, as to-day the majority of people who attend the Seashore Camp Meeting (as it has been for the last four or five years) are Christians and the children of Christian fathers and mothers. It should be borne in mind that when children scarcely in their teens are led to profess religion they are delivered from sin, and grow up under the guidance of the Church, receiving a certain degree of spirituality that fits them to enjoy a religious atmosphere in which the presence of God seems to abide.

Such conditions are extant on the Seashore Camp Ground, and the forty-second Seashore Camp Meeting was in keeping with the times. It was a revival of faith and grace among the Church members who attended the services. The congregations were always good, and on Sunday the Tabernacle was crowded, 1200 or more being present. Many came from the cities of Mobile, New Orleans, Moss Point and other points, to remain through the camp meeting. It is said by the campers, that the attendance this year was larger than it was last year.

R. D. PENNINGTON.

CONCERNING REVIVALS.

We, the undersigned committee, appointed by the Shreveport District Conference, at its recent session, as a Committee on Revivals, submit the following report:

We find that most of our preachers in the Shreveport District failed to report satisfactorily concerning the spiritual condition of their churches, and since we believe the great work of the Church and of our ministry should be to get people saved from sin and keep them saved, we do therefore respectfully declare it to be our opinion that if our pastors would address themselves more energetically to this end, it would not be necessary to call for the assistance of evangelists to accomplish the results of a revival. On the contrary, we believe that we would have an ever-growing revival all the year round. We have no particular objection to special revivalists, but the above suggestion is made because we believe that if it is followed out, it will save to the Church both time and expense.

Then, again, we find that our pastors are weakened by a tendency to compromise with worldly-minded people. Our Discipline is plain in its utterances against worldliness, and we believe if it were strictly enforced, our Church would soon be rid of an element that is now a detriment to it. People who play cards, dance, play pool, attend theaters, and drink whiskey must be made to know that if they do not quit such things they must withdraw from church membership. This, in our opinion, would be one of the most effective moves toward bringing about a great revival.

And lastly, we would urge the pastors and people to begin praying in earnest for a gracious revival of religion during the remainder of this year, and that we may be so baptized with the Holy Spirit that the fire may continue to burn until Christ shall reign in the hearts of the people everywhere.

Respectfully submitted,
JOHN FRANKLIN,
S. S. HOLLADAY,
Committee.

A writer in the New York Sun recently compiled statistics showing the expenditure in America for music to be nearly $600,000,000 annually. Of this amount $220,000,000 is spent for musical education, $170,000,000 for musical instruments, $70,000,000 for musical sundries, $30,000,000 for military bands, $25,000,000 for the theater, $25,000,000 for concerts, $20,000,000 for church music, and $8,000,000 for the opera. It is interesting to note how insignificant is the amount spent for church music in comparison with what is spent for worldly music.

Twenty-four nations were represented at a conference held at The Hague recently, at which it was proposed that all nations withdraw from all direct or indirect interest in trade in habit-forming drugs. Twenty-two of the nations represented have signified their willingness to ratify the action of the convention, Germany and Great Britain alone refusing. Another convention will be held in December, and it is possible that the two recalcitrant nations, together with others, will fall in line at that time. If such an action should become unanimous among the nations of the world, the alcohol, opium and all other narcotic problems would soon be solved.

Much ado is now being made about the salaries that are received by Federal office holders. Mr. Bryan has announced that he can not live on $12,000 a year and pay expenses, and that he must resort to the lecture platform in order to help out. At the same time Ambassador Page, the American representative at the Court of St. James, who receives $17,000 per year, has rented a house which costs him $20,000 annually. The question of whether the respective salaries of the two above-mentioned officials and many others is enough for them to live on is a little hard for a Methodist preacher to answer. Personally, we could worry along on either amount. But it remains true that both Mr. Bryan and Mr. Page are representing the United States Government, and we see no reason why they should not be paid enough to enable them to fill creditably the positions they hold without personal financial loss.

CHURCH DESTROYED.

Dear Dr. Meek: The church building at Fitler's was destroyed by a storm on the 6th instant. I held the first service in this church on the fourth Sunday in last March. The people, few in number and of small means, had united without regard to denominational differences, and built this church. It was a touching scene that we witnessed at the opening service—Methodists, Baptists, Catholics, Presbyterians and Jews united in grateful praise that they had a house of worship in their midst. Now they are in distress. They exhausted their means in building—and find that they are without a house, and have no money to rebuild.

This section of the Delta has been visited by three disastrous floods since April of last year. The condition is serious. Unless some money for rebuilding should come to us from without this section, the work cannot be accomplished. I know of no section within the bounds of our Conference that is more worthily in need of help from the Church than Issaquena County. May the Lord touch the hearts of some who are able to help!

We greatly need to continue our work at Fitler. It is the center of all the section of Issaquena County, south of Mayersville. Money sent to me for this purpose will be applied at once to the work of rebuilding.

SOME WORDS OF EXHORTATION.

Dear Brethren of the Shreveport District: I beg to remind you that the reports to the recent District Conference indicated that we had hardly made a beginning upon the great work on our hands for the Conference year. I do not feel that this was due to any indifference or negligence on our part, but rather to the fact that the early part of the year with us was largely given to sowing. This being so, our fields ought to be ready for the sickle and this quarter ought to be one of abundant reaping. Let me remind you that this will be in direct proportion to our faith.

While much of our time will be devoted to revival work, let us not forget that Question 18 will be asked on this round. The fact that both of our Conference schools are within the bounds of our District should make this subject one of absorbing interest to us. There can be no better way to conserve our revival results than to give ourselves diligently to the promotion of Christian Education. Personally, I feel if I could not give my hearty support to Centenary and Mansfield Colleges, that my place in the ranks of the Shreveport District would be uncomfortable in the extreme. Let us all read again and ponder Dr. J. W. Moore's article on this subject in a recent issue of our Advocate.

I hope also to have carefully prepared answers to Question 23. Please read Hebrews: Chap. 13: Vs. 20 and 21.

Your obedient servant,

PAUL M. BROWN.

AS A CORRESPONDENT SEES IT.

A brilliant correspondent writes as follows:

"Bishop Hoss' pen has lost none of its art. Junius might well have been proud of the Bishop's reply to Mr. Cole, Chancellor Kirkland and the Trustees of Vanderbilt University. These gentlemen were flayed, but it was done so artistically that they may well be proud of the fact. To have been the patient in a brilliant surgical operation has some glory attached to it. In one of the old tales we are told of a skilled Saracen, who was so adept as a swordsman that he cut a man's head off without the man knowing it until he attempted to spit. Brother Cole and the Chancellor may not know as yet that their heads are severed from their bodies, but we would suggest to them to attempt the experiment of spitting. The letter of Bishop Hoss was incisive, dignified and written with a restraint that added to its brilliancy and power. Brother Cole and Dr. Kirkland ought to be thankful that it was such a glittering spear that impaled them. Admiration for the brilliance of the weapon and the skill of the wielder almost calls the attention away from their pitiable plight."

IN MEMORIAM.

Agnes Pennington Harp, wife of Rev. R. J. Harp, of Shreveport, La., was taken from this present life into life eternal at 2:30 o'clock on June 10, 1913.

She was born in Princeton, Ind., Oct. 23, 1843. The daughter of Dr. John J. Pennington and Ann Elizabeth Snethen Pennington, she was the heir to the loyal devotion to God that was handed down through a long line of godly men, both ministers and physicians.

Her mother's father was the illustrious N. C. Snethen, who was called by Bishop Asbury the "Silver Trumpet of Methodism," and whose words of loyalty to God and his Word often brought his hearers to their feet, and made them move, as in a body, to the altar. Her father's father was the Rev. Walter Pennington of Mecklinburg, Va.

Unusual gifts of fluency in exposition and argument were the inheritance bequeathed to this well beloved daughter of that royal line of forebears who, as torch bearers of the truth, either by Gospel story or scientific research, were "as kings and priests unto God." Mrs. Harp's clear, analytical mind was ever ready to give not one but many reasons for the hope that glowed in her loving heart and filled her with a burning desire to share its blessedness with all who came within the reach of her magnetic personality, and the loving-kindness that illuminated and made so eminently successful her teaching, whether in the Sunday school or her art classes.

As an ardent student in her chosen profession of art, she reveled in nature's color harmonies, catching and holding them with reverent hands, while looking beyond the mysteries of the lustrious spectrum bands, and recognizing her Heavenly Father's gift of beauty as but another token that "God so loved the world." It can be most truly said of this dear woman that God was in all her thoughts. She weighed events, incidents, human life, at real values; nothing was insignificant to her, for she could always find enfolded in story or incident a seed-pearl of truth, and no labor seemed too great to her loving patience, if, by its endurance, she might but win a blessing for others. Living this life of love and service from fairest girlhood to a radiant old age, her path along life's highway had been so strewn with the munificent offerings of her warm, unselfish nature that the results can never be estimated till the Angel who writes opens his record book. Like the glowing current in the wire, love for Christ and his work energized and thrilled her daily life and conversation, and caused all who knew her to remember and realize the meaning of St. John's sweet words: "Beloved, let us love one another, for love is of God."

As the wife of a prominent preacher she was loved by all, even as she loved all; and, in every move, from charge to charge, she went with the grace of a perfect Christian woman. She was married to Rev. Robert J. Harp, Sept. 23, 1869, and joined the Felicity Street Church, in New Orleans, under the pastorate of Dr. Linus Parker. Only her love for God was greater than her love for her husband, her children, her friends, and her Church. Her Sunday school scholars, scattered over the State, most of them grown men and women now, she loved deeply and never forgot. To her art pupils she never failed to try to teach the higher art of living for eternity.

Her husband, who is well known throughout Methodist circles in the State, is the only surviving charter member of the Louisiana Conference, and was the first pastor of the J. S. Noel, Jr. Memorial Church, and the first stationed preacher of the First Methodist Church, of Shreveport, La. Thank God for the inspiration that wells up, pure and life-giving, from such lives as his and hers. Their separation will be brief, and their reunion will be complete in the realization of "the things that God hath prepared for them that love him."

In his infinite tenderness, her Divine Master had willed that pain should not cloud the last hours of this beloved disciple; and, thus it was that, through the depths of peaceful sleep, softly penetrating those calm profundities, came his call, "Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Angelic messengers transported her, gently sleeping, in one bright moment's glancing flight, to waken with enraptured surprise in "the Christian's Home in Glory."

"Oh how sweet it will be, in that beautiful Land,
So free from all sorrow and pain,
With songs on our lips, and with harps in our hands,
To meet one another again!"

E. B. HARDING.

NEWTON DISTRICT.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D. D.

The "second round" closed with my longest trip. I left the railroad at Forest and after buggy drives of seventy-five miles, six sermons and two quarterly conferences, I reached it again at Kosciusko, in the North Mississippi Conference, ten miles beyond the limit of my field. On the Fourth of July I preached at Pleasant Hill to an overflowing congregation. It was a perspirational sermon followed by a perspirational quarterly conference. I expected the people on that day to be off fishing or at picnics, but as usual in that county they were hungry for the gospel. Moore and Pickett, in charge of the Walnut Grove and Carthage Circuits, are toiling faithfully, and looking with strong faith for resultful revivals.

My notes for my "First Round" concerning the Morton and Pelahatchie, the Lake, and possibly some of the other charges, were by some mishap lost, and did not reach the printer. So it is that what I had to say of some of them remains to be told. J. T. Abney at Morton and Pelahatchie has large plans for new churches at both places; and when his revivals have enheartened the people these plans will materialize. An effort to disconnect his country churches from the charge met a vigorous protest and plea that they preferred Abney's Sunday afternoon ministrations to the Sunday morning sermons of anybody else. I am expecting their salary payments to quadrate with that plea. W. W. Graves has a peculiarly difficult field at Lake; but his sunny nature, wise foresight, indomitable energy, and force in the pulpit and out of it will win. We have no better worker than he.

There are more than ten thousand Methodists in this District. They are served by twenty-three pastors and six assistants; and yet the demand for preaching is not met. Two of these pastors serve twelve and thirteen congregations each. One of these on a recent Sunday drove forty-five miles and preached three times. This man, like a Hardshell Baptist, works for his living all the week, and preaches on Sunday; but also like an old-fashioned Methodist, preaches often "on week nights." Revivals are being held and souls saved.

There are at least twenty-six young men in this District looking toward the Methodist itinerancy. Some of these have been at Millsaps—more of them at Montrose—a few are not yet in school. Three young people in one church's Epworth League—one fine girl and two noble boys—are looking to the foreign field.

This reminds me to say that one of the pastors here is organizing Epworth Leagues on his big country circuit. Why is it that some preachers cannot run a League anywhere? This Epworth Lague pastor in Newton District is Rev. C. C. Griffin, the ever-young pastor of Shiloh Circuit—ever-young, yet he is a grandfather.

No man in the Mississippi Conference has wrought more faithfully and successfully than has Dr. J. M. Weems; and his quadrennium at Laurel has possibly been the most fruitful period of his life, to which possibility the splendid new Fifth Avenue Church there stands in enduring evidence, "a thing of beauty" and the finest church in that growing city. It is a great grief to the Doctor, to his people there, to his friends everywhere, and to his presiding elder, that he is compelled to give up his work five months before his quadrennium closes and seek rest and health in quietude; but no man ever bore a grief more bravely.

One circuit straddles a mountain range with each foot on a railroad—one foot at Meehan, the name-place, and the other at Suqualena on the new M. & M. R. R. But Dickens, the pastor, straddles nothing: he stands "four-square," climbs the mountain, is happy with his job, and popular with his folks.

J. E. Williams at Hickory and Chunky has three towns and two parsonages, fills his pastorate full, and helps the brethren in revivals.

I must stop here, lest your space, Mr. Editor, and the readers' patience wane.

REAL FUN.

Victoria, in her girlhood, was spending the day with an aunt, who, wondering how to entertain the child, made a rash offer:

"Victoria, you shall amuse yourself just as you want to amuse yourself to-day. Choose anything and you shall do it if it is possible."

The small guest took in the gravity of the situation, meditated carefully, and announced her decision:

"I have always wanted to wash windows."

A NOVEL ORPHAN ASYLUM.

By Anna D. Walker.

A pretty little bantam hen had become the proud mother of six chickens, and was most faithful to her little brood till one morning, when she saw in a large box placed close beside her small one, a crowd of incubator chickens. Immediately her attention was directed towards the motherless babies. She fidgeted, fluttered and clucked, and at length jumped from her box into the other one, so large and filled with such a screeching, fluttering multitude.

Her own six babies began to cry loudly for their mother's return, but she did not go back to them. Instead, she tried to hover over the orphans. The owner, seeing the situation, finally picked up the abandoned babies and put them in with the adopted ones, saying to the tiny bantam, "Here, if you want them all, take them."

Bantam clucked forth her satisfaction and tried to cover as many of the peepers as possible. And mother them all she does, brooding all she can, the tiny chickens seeming to take turns in getting mothered by her. She stretches her wings to their utmost capacity, and those who cannot get under this little mother run up and down her back and crowd up to her side.

While all this was going on, a hen left her chickens because she was disgusted to hatch so few—only three left to her after her long sitting and looking after them. No other hen would take them, but little bantam clucked forth her welcome and tucked them up—when there was a vacancy—under her wing. Now she is engaged in the task of caring for almost a hundred chickens and loves them all tenderly. Do you wonder then that she has been named "Orphan Asylum"?—Christian Intelligencer.

BOB'S BEAUTIFUL HANDS.

"Oh, mamma! I am going to have the most beautiful hands you really ever saw. Miss Grace showed us how we could and we are all going to start right away to make them handsome!" And Bob whirled in from school like a tiny cyclone.

"Isn't that splendid! I suppose Miss Grace has told you how to keep your hands clean and your nails neat, as I have tried so hard to do," and mamma took the little fat hands in hers.

"Oh, no! Not that way at all, though of course we must keep them clean; but I'll tell you how we are going to do it.

"We had a lesson about hands to-day around our little table and we learned a lot of things.

"Miss Grace had us all show our right hand, then our left. Some of the children did not know which was which, but I did.

"Then we played 'Pretend,' and we had lots of fun. We played the piano and beat drums, we washed clothes and our faces and hands, we sowed seed and gathered flowers, we made snowballs and had a snowball fight, we gathered oranges and figs and lemons and picked strawberries, we swept snow from our shoes and picked up chips and rang bells.

"Then, while we rested, we told what use our hands and arms were to us and what they did for us.

"They help us dress and comb our hair, they carry our books and help us write and play all our games.

"Miss Grace wondered if we could not make our hands of some use to other people, too, and all the children said they would try and have their hands do something for somebody.

"One little girl said she would look after baby, one boy said he would carry in the wood for mamma, another would run mamma's errands.

"Then we learned the prettiest verse from the blackboard:

" 'Beautiful hands are those that do
Work that is earnest, kind and true
Moment by moment the whole day through.'

"Can't you see, mamma, if we do that, it will make our hands all perfectly beautiful?"

And mamma was very sure it would.—My Lesson.

A MATTER OF PRESSING IMPORTANCE.

The New Orleans Advocate of July 10 contained a statement concerning the finances of the Sunday School Board of the North Mississippi Conference made by the Treasurer, Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, of Sardis, Miss., which merits attention. After announcing that at that time only about 44 charges had reported the observance of Children's Day and had remitted the collections taken, Brother Gladney added: "The Board borrowed $560 to make up a deficit last year. This amount will be paid this week. So far our Field Secretary has not been paid either her expense account or salary."

This is certainly a most regrettable condition of affairs. The Field Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference is one of the most capable and faithful that can be found anywhere in the connection; she is in great demand both within and without the territory that she serves, and adequate provision for her support should be promptly forth-coming. As is well known, at the time she accepted her present positon, she was commanding a good salary as a public school instructor; and though she may be willing to sacrifice much in order to promote the Master's cause, she should not be allowed to have added to the other privations of this work the burden of a considerable financial loss. It was thought for a time at the last session of the North Mississippi Conference that it would be necessary to discontinue the field agency because of the depleted condition of the treasury of the Sunday School Board; but it was finally determined to undertake to maintain it for at least twelve months longer. It is to be feared, however, from the present trend of things that this work will have to be stopped after next December, though we hope not, since the loss of the splendid service which Miss Kilpatrick is rendering would be a very great one and most hurtful to this important interest of the Church.

What can be done to obviate this apparently approaching necessity? First, let the utmost possible effort be made to swell the Children's Day collection. Every church in the Conference, unless it be impossible, should observe the day; and where this cannot be done an offering should be taken notwithstanding. And as soon as any funds are in hand, forward them to the Treasurer. They are too urgently needed to be withheld.

But the receipts from Children's Day are not alone large enough to finance the present operations of the Sunday School Board. Therefore, under the leadership of Mr. R. M. Weaver, of Corinth, Miss. (who is the Assistant-Field Secretary, but who receives no remuneration at all for his services), the following plan for raising additional funds has been adopted: Thirty laymen in each District are requested to subscribe $5 each for this work for the year 1913, payable at any time they like, said amount to be credited to the local Sunday school of which the donor is a member. The receipts issued to each contributor is in the form of a Certificate of Stock, which is both appropriate and attractive.

This plan, in our humble opinion, is an admirable one, and it ought to work. Let the laymen at once begin to send to Brother Weaver their names, accompanied by the cash or a pledge to pay $5 between now and the meeting of the Annual Conference. The preachers are not asked for money for this cause, but there is no objection to them lending a helping hand. Why not have your Sunday school raise the $5 as a special, if it cannot be otherwise secured? We must not, for one moment, think of letting our Field Agent be retired. One of our sister denominations is said to be maintaining three workers in the same territory that we now have one. The clear call to us is not to retreat, but to go forward. We hope that Brother Weaver will tell us from time to time how the Districts of the North Mississippi Conference are responding to this needed appeal from the Sunday School Board of the North Mississippi Conference, that credit may be given to whom credit is due.—Editor of the Advocate.

THE VERDICT AGAINST BARON YUN.

The press dispatches report that Baron T. H. Yun, along with five other Koreans, has been adjudged by the Court of Appeals guilty of the charge of having conspired to assassinate Governor-General Terauchi in 1910, and that he has been sentenced to a term of six years' imprisonment. Our missionaries in the Orient who know Mr. Yun well thoroughly believe in his innocence and the uprightness of his character. He is reported to be suffering from tuberculosis, and it is feared that confinement may prove exceedingly injurious to his health. It should be remembered that some of the noblest men in history have been misjudged and made to suffer for alleged crimes, as Robert Emmett and Sir William Wallace, for instance. Let Christians everywhere continue to remember our distinguished fellow-disciple across the wide seas at the throne of grace. The Divine Arm has opened prison doors in response to prayer in the past, and it may do so again in this day. Sometimes we fear that in this materialistic age we are too much disposed to ignore God as a mighty factor in every-day human affairs.

A NOTE THAT WE DO NOT LIKE.

We frequently notice in the accounts of revival services statements that the ministers conducting them made no effort to stir the emotions of the people. We frankly confess that we do not like to see such affirmations. They are both unwesleyan and unscriptural. There has never yet in the world's history been a great religious awakening which did not profoundly excite the feelings of those who came under its influence. To be sure, it is not enough to make the unsaved sorrow and weep, and stop with that; but "a broken and contrite heart" must precede salvation. The most effective way of reaching the consciences and influencing the wills of men is through the affections. Therefore, we say that the preaching that finds its way to the heart of the hearer is the most apt to bring him to Christ and revolutionize his life. In our opinion, comparatively few persons are reasoned into the kingdom. Love surpasses logic as an agency for rescuing the perishing. And because of this fact, men of a tender, sympathetic nature, whose souls are aflame with a mighty passion to recover the lost, make the best evangelists. We need more of the impassioned fervor of the old-style exhorter in our pulpit work. Take fire, brother, and you will set others afire. Appeal to the hearts of your auditors and do not be afraid of getting up an arousement. Likely vastly more would be accomplished for the Master if you should. It will not hurt anything for the penitential tear to flow and the shouts of praise to be heard in our temples of worship. On the contrary, it is the lack of these that should alarm us.

REALLY AMUSING.

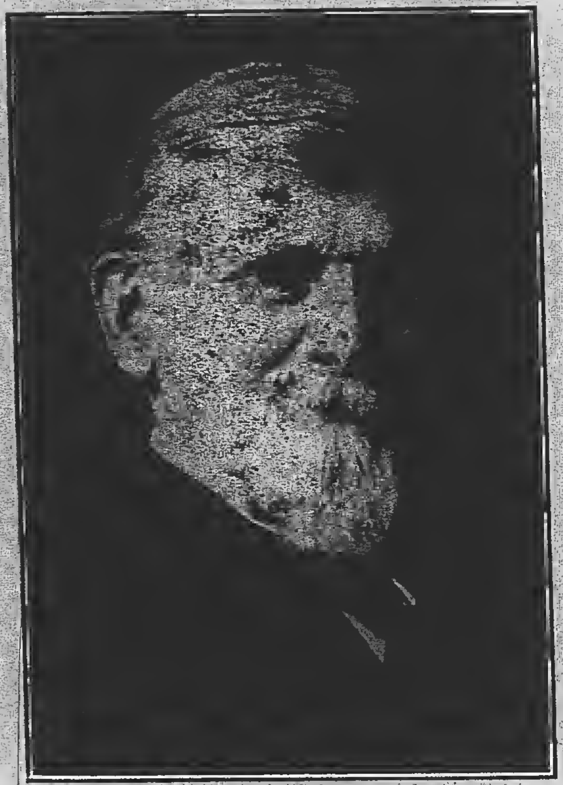
Some of the secular dailies represent Mr. Carnegie as having touched on Vanderbilt matters in London a few days since. Here is their account of how he feels: "The proper authorities have accepted Mr. Carnegie's gift, and he has, therefore, nothing to say. He never gives to sectarian educational institutions, for the reason that he feels that no one should be barred from receiving an education, medical or otherwise, because of his theological views."

This is rich, rare, and racy. Even the Vanderbilt Board of Trust, with all of its inventive ingenuity, cannot name a single church school, of any denomination, that ever refused admittance to any student in any department because of his religious views. They cordially welcome all of every faith, and of no faith, for that matter. If Mr. Carnegie does not know any more about denominational schools than this, he is much to be pitied. But by way of palliation, it should be remembered that he is reputed to have viewed the Churches and their work chiefly from afar. Or can it be that he got this impression from his correspondence and interviews with members of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust? What some of these gentlemen are now saying about Bishops and the Church in the field of education is quite enough to make even a cool, calculating man like the Laird of Skibo Castle imagine that they are the horned beasts mentioned in the Book of Revelation.

THEIR LOYALTY COULD NOT BE SHAKEN

Some Words of Commendation

At the recent meeting of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust, there were four men who stood conspicuously out as champions of the rights of the Church in the handling of the Carnegie-Kirkland proposition. These were Dr. E. B. Cappell, the able Sunday School Secretary of the M. E. Church, South; Dr. W. J. Young, one of the worthiest and most useful members of the Virginia Conference, now stationed at Centenary Church, Richmond; Major R. W. Millsaps, of Jackson, Miss., and Mr. John R. Pepper, of Memphis, Tenn. We give on this page the pictures of the two gentlemen last named, who perhaps are the two foremost laymen of the Southern Methodist Church.



Major R. W. Millsaps, of Jackson, Miss.

Though a self-made man, Major Millsaps is a graduate of old Asbury College (now DePauw University) at Green Castle, Indiana, and of the Harvard University Law School. He is one of the ablest financiers in the South, having amassed a large fortune, and is especially noted for his good judgment and sagacity and for his comprehensive grasp of any question that he may consider. But best of all, he is a man of irreproachable life and character. He is a generous and high-minded philanthropist, and is easily the first citizen of his State. He has done many noble things in his life, but nothing which reflected more credit upon himself and Mississippi Methodism than his recent brave and manly fight for the sacred interests of the Church which were about to be trampled ruthlessly under foot by the majority of the Vanderbilt Board of Trustees.

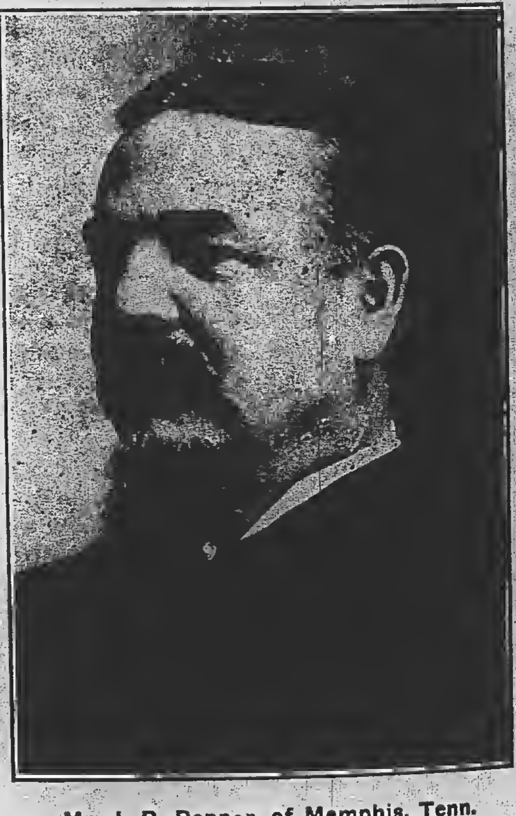
Of Mr. J. R. Pepper, who stood resolutely by Major Millsaps' side in the contest, we do not need to write. He is known for his high character and good works all over the United States and in other lands. A son of Virginia, his career has been almost wholly spent in Tennessee; but every part of Southern Methodism has felt the touch of his helpful influence. He is perhaps the best Sunday school superintendent in the Southern States, and his assistance in various kinds of Christian work is perhaps more sought after than any other layman in our Church. He is also a man of large financial affairs, being a banker, a wholesale merchant, and having, besides, a number of other property interests. He is generally recognized as one of the first business men of the Volunteer State. When he and Major Millsaps have examined a proposition and pronounced it unsafe and unworthy, it may well be let alone. There is no need to talk about waiting for "Reason to resume her throne." These are men who never lose their heads, not even when confronted with the glitter of gold—men who, Gibraltar-like, adhere to the right,

> "While frantic good men, worldly wise,
> Chase the rainbow of compromise."

And while touching upon this subject, it may not be amiss to give the names of the Executive Committee of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust—the men who opened up and conducted the negotiations with Mr. Carnegie. It is composed of the following gentlemen: Judge W. C. Ratcliffe, W. R. Cole, James H. Kirkland, G. B. Winton, William Hughes, Nathaniel Baxter, and G. M. Neely, all residing in Nashville except Judge Ratcliffe, of Arkansas, and Mr. Hughes, who lives a few miles away from the Tennessee Capital. Thus it will be seen that it was a pretty close corporation in which this scheme to take Mr. Carnegie into partnership was matured. It is proper that the names of these gentlemen should be made generally known, that they may be held responsible for their course by the Church at large. One of the most unfortunate things about our church government is that it is representative to so slight a degree. When a man runs for a civil office he has to tell publicly for what he stands, and after his election his record is closely scrutinized. If he fails to keep faith with his constituents he is at once taken to task and understands that he need nevermore aspire to public place. But in the Church it is different: it is considered improper to ask a man what his views are on pending issues; and if he is elected to the Annual or General Conference and misrepresents the Methodist people who repose their trust in him, little is said about it.

We are not disposed to advocate the introduction of politics into the Church; but we do say that this is a time when our people need to look over, and over again, the persons who are being considered as their possible representative in any capacity. Personal preferences and prejudices should have no weight in such matters—what men stand for, their trustworthiness, and their capacity to carry out their principles are the things that should be considered. Especially do our people need to beware of the men who take little interest in church affairs except in the years when delegates are to be chosen to the General Conference. Some of these are already beginning to be in evidence.

But most of all, do we need to be careful at this particular juncture not to pin our faith to men who have been chiefly allied as patrons and trustees with State schools. They are pretty sure not to believe whole-heartedly in the cause of Christian education. The paramount question before us to-day is that of the right of the Church to establish, maintain, and control religious institutions of learning. Here is the outstanding line of battle, and we should be certain not to place the sword in any hand that cannot be depended upon to wield it rightly. For this reason, we need to beware of the "fence-rider" and the "very discreet" man who is afraid to speak boldly out. Our gravest danger in this really great crisis is that of being slipped up on and betrayed. Impelled by a sense of duty to the Church, we write these words at the risk of being called "a demagogue." But however much our motives may be misunderstood, we shall continue fearlessly to speak the truth, as God gives us to see it. Less than this would be unworthy of us.



Mr. J. R. Pepper, of Memphis, Tenn.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. O. W. [illegible]ley, of Winona, was announced to fill the [illegible] of the First Methodist Church of Jackson, Miss., last Sunday, in the absence of the pastor, Dr. A. F. Smith.

Rev. A. S. Brisco states that his work is moving on smoothly in the Smithville (Miss.) charge. He was due to start his revival campaign last Sunday, with Rev. J. R. James to assist him in the first meeting.

Rev. H. B. Perritt, the pastor, began a series of revival services last week at Wesley Chapel, one of the churches on the Greensburg (La.) Circuit. He is being assisted by his father, Rev. H. C. Perritt, of Mississippi.

Rev. J. T. McCafferty is in the midst of a good meeting at Eupora, Miss., in which he is being assisted by Rev. J. L. Morris, of Texas. So writes Brother Bachman, who left Winona last Monday, to be with these brethren in their work.

Rev. Ollie L. Tucker, our pastor at Dodson, La., has been engaged in a revival meeting for the past two weeks at that place. He has had the able assistance of his father, Rev. R. W. Tucker, of Leesville, La., and the results of the meeting have been very satisfactory.

We acknowledge our indebtedness to Rev. M. B. Sharborough for a club of 5 subscribers, forwarded on the 17th inst. No interest of the Church suffers in the hands of this wide-awake and faithful under-shepherd. Things are going steadily forward at Columbia under his guiding hand.

A profitable revival, in which the pastor, Rev. L. L. Roberts, did the preaching, was brought to a close at the South Wesson (Miss.) Church last week. According to reports from that place, the sermons by Brother Roberts were highly enjoyed and the community was greatly benefited by the services.

Rev. Frank Singleton, of Texas, reached New Orleans week before last and on July 13 occupied the pulpit at the Parker Memorial Church. He will remain in charge of that congregation until his brother, Rev. H. R. Singleton, who is now in Europe, returns. He will find an abundant welcome among the Methodists of the Crescent City during his stay here.

We clip the following from the Times-Democrat of July 15: "An interesting series of services has just closed at the M. E. Church, South, of this place (Florence, Miss.). Rev. C. M. Chapman, of Port Gibson, did the preachiug and large congregations attended each service. There were three accessions to the Church."

A night telegraphic letter, received from Rev. J. J. Brooks, of Boyla, Miss., last Tuesday morning, reads as follows "We closed a sweeping revival here yesterday (Sunday, July 20.). The whole town was benefited—many professions and reclamations—16 added to our Church, fathers and mothers among the number. Rev. L. W. Cain, pastor-evangelist of Leland, Miss., conducted the services. Rejoice with us!"

Prof. Buford D. Battle, of Oxford, Ga., has been elected to the Chair of Latin and German in Centenary College, to take the place made vacant by the resignation of Prof. Rouse. Prof. Battle is a brother of Rev. C. A. Battle of New Orleans, and is both a B. A. and an M. A. of Emory College. He is a teacher of experience, having been Principal of the public schools in Oxford, Ga., for some time.

Rev. J. S. Purcell, our capable pastor at Rolling Fork, Miss., favored us with a club of 5 subscribers on July 14. In his brief letter he jotted down the following items of interest: "Our church at Cary was damaged by a storm on Sunday, July 6. Our meeting will begin at Rolling Fork on July 21; Rev. J. L. Decell, of Mt. Olive, Miss., will do the preaching. The work is progressing very well in this charge."

Rev. E. S. Lewis, of West Point, Miss., writes: "Yesterday we buried Mrs. Annie Peyton White, one of the finest young women in our West Point congregation. She was a sister of our present Mayor, Mr. David Cottrell. Her life was one of goodness and joy. All West Point mourns at her going. She leaves a husband, one little boy, a large circle of close relatives, and a multitude of sympathetic friends." We are pained to hear of the decease of this choice and useful young Christian, and we extend to the stricken loved ones our sincere sympathy.

The Girls' Missionary Conference, which was held at Boonville, Miss., July 13-15, was a marked success. This unique gathering was suggested and planned by our pastor in that city, the Rev. S. A. Brown, and many think it was epochal in its significance. It was presided over by Mrs. Victoria T. Hoyle, the accomplished president of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference, and a number of spiritual and uplifting addresses were made. Delegates were in attendance from various points in Northeast Mississippi, and at one of the services 20 girls volunteered to go into whatever mission work the Lord may want them to undertake.

Rev. Geo. C. Cates, the noted Baptist evangelist, of Louisville, Ky., will soon begin in Memphis a revival campaign which is expected to last a month.

The Seashore Assembly of Christian workers began its annual session at the Seashore Camp Ground last Friday. According to the reports reaching us, an excellent program is being rendered.

Dr. A. F. Watkins is showing commendable activity in promoting the interests of Millsaps College. Both by traveling over the State and by correspondence, he is pressing its claims upon our preachers and people and the general public. Such work is bound to yield gracious results.

The Times-Democrat of July 15 contained the following dispatch from Bay St. Louis, Miss.: "The Rev. Dr. Moffatt, a misionary to China who is here on a vacation, delivered an illustrated lecture at the Methodist Church last Sunday night on the mode of travel, customs, and manner of living in that country."

Mr. Albert H. Whitfield, Jr., a son of former Chief Justice A. H. Whitfield of Mississippi, who is now one of the law professors of Millsaps College, died of Bright's disease, in Jackson, Miss., on July 14. He was a graduate of Millsaps College and a young lawyer of much promise. His death is greatly deplored.

The catalogue of Centenary College of Louisiana for 1912-1913 is on our table, and a most attractive one it is. The last session was a good one in every respect. This historic institution has a highly creditable record, but its best days are yet to be. We like the way that Dr. R. H. Wynn has taken hold of his work. What he has to say has the right ring. Write him at Shreveport for a copy of this interesting catalogue.

Read the editorial utterance, entitled "A Matter of Pressing Importance," which appears on Page 7 of this week's Advocate. The facts therein set forth ought to stir the church workers of North Mississippi to immediate action. For them not to remedy the situation therein described speedily, will truly be a lasting reproach.

The press dispatches state that the aged mother of Dr. A. F. Smith, of Jackson, Miss., died at her home in Charleston, Mo., on Saturday, July 19. She had been seriously ill for some time and Dr. Smith was called to her bedside some days ago, but she improved, and he had returned home when the sad news announcing her departure came. Upon the reception of this message he left immediately for Charleston to be with the other stricken relatives and to attend the obsequies of her who was so much to him. Dr. Smith will have the tender sympathy and prayers of a host of friends in this hour of bereavement and sorrow.

During the past three or four weeks the Editor, because of illness in his family, has been very little in touch with the Advocate. We have been indebted during this period to Dr. J. W. Moore and Rev. A. J. Gearheard for helpful service rendered in preparing copy for the printers. Brother Chalmers also has kindly done much more than his usual share of the work. We are grateful to these brethren for their generous assistance. We hope from now on to be able to remain steadily at our post and soon to catch up with our work.

Rev. A. W. O'Bryant, of Taylorville, Miss., under date of July 18, writes as follows "We are in a great meeting at Mize. Dr. I. L. Peebles is doing the preaching in his usual strong way. Up to the present 25 have joined the Church, 21 of whom are to be received by baptism. I wish all the brethren could have Brother Peebles to hold a meeting for them, for he is not only an able expounder of our doctrines, but also a really great revivalist." We scarcely need to say that we are glad to hear of this gracious awakening. There is no news that we like so much to chronicle as that which tells of the Holy Spirit's work in the salvation of the lost. It rejoices, we are told, even the angels in the presence of God.

The press dispatches state that the Baptists of Starkville, Miss., will remodel their church at a cost of about $6000. Rev. W. A. Jordan is the pastor of this enterprising congregation.

On the eve of his departure for his new field at Laurel, Miss., Rev. J. L. Neill remembered us with a club of six subscribers, for which we extend him our hearty thanks. We congratulate our Fifth Avenue Congregation of Laurel upon having secured the services of this faithful and gifted young minister, since they had to give up Dr. Weems; and we pray that his labors in his new charge may be fruitful in spiritual results.

Rev. T. J. Norsworthy recently assisted Rev. T. V. Peters in a successful meeting at Talisheek, La., an account of which appears upon another page. At the last service, at the suggestion of Brother Norsworthy, the congregation presented Brother Peters with the money to purchase a new set of harness for his horse. The Advocate was also remembered by the evangelist, and as a result of his words of commendation three new names have been entered on our books. There is no better time to secure subscriptions to the Conference organ than during a good revival meeting and the wonder is why such an effort is not oftener made. Surely, it is important to put the Church paper in the hands of new members and get them started right.

Brother W. S. Cook, the President of the Hennington Camp Meeting Association, of Crystal Springs, Miss., sends us the following announcement: "The 41st Annual Session of our camp meeting will begin on August 14, and continue eight days. The services will be conducted by the great evangelist, Rev. J. B. Andrews, of Siloam Springs, Ark., assisted by the celebrated singer, the Rev. Mr. Smith, of Chicago. Free cottages are offered families who may desire to attend. The hotel accomodations are ample to take care of all transients who may desire to attend the 'feast of the tabernacle.' For further information, write to me, or to Mr. W. H. Thompson, Secretary." The Editor has heard Rev. J. B. Andrews, and predicts that with him to do the preaching this occasion will be a memorable one. It always gratifies us when we see it announced that he is to conduct a meeting anywhere in our patronizing territory.

Dr. H. W. Featherstun, presiding elder of the Newton District, sends us the following statement: "Our beloved brother and fellow laborer, Rev. J. M. Weems, D. D., pastor of the Fifth Avenue Church of Laurel, Miss., within five months of the close of his quadrennium at that church, has been compelled on account of ill health to give up the pastorate and seek restoration by taking a rest. He will reside in his own home at Newton. Rev. J. L. Neill, of the Broad Street Church of Hattiesburg, will succeed Dr. Weems at Laurel, and the Rev. Mr. Harrison, a local preacher, will take Brother Neill's place at Hattiesburg." We greatly regret to be informed of the ill health and enforced retirement of Dr. Weems, and we trust a brief season of rest will completely restore his physical vigor, that he may resume his loved employ. He is one of the choice men of the Mississippi Conference, and the magnificent new church which he leaves behind at Laurel eloquently attests his zeal and efficiency in the pastorate.

Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, our pastor at Gloster, Miss., brought us under obligations to him for a list of 5 subscribers a few days since. Among other things, he said: "Brother W. Y. (Uncle Billie) Webb, whose renewal is included in this number, has been a subscriber to the Advocate for 40 years, during which time he has had only two notices of the expiration of his subscription sent to him, the first of these being due to a mistake, and the last one—this year—being caused by the pastor waiting to get up a club before sending his name in. He would not attempt to keep house without the Advocate, and considers it the best paper in the world." This is indeed a fine record. Would that the Advocate had more friends and readers as loyal as Uncle Billie!

JOHN BYRON DIXON was born in Winnfield, La., on May 7, 1860, and died in Shreveport, La., June 13, 1913. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1884 under the ministry of Rev. Wm. Monroe. He was a Christian from the day of his conversion until the day of his death. He loved his Heavenly Father, his Redeemer and his fellow man. He was a model husband, a father who is worthy to be followed, and a man who thought always of others rather than of himself. He suffered much during his last illness, which was of long duration, but amid it all, like the faithful old Job, he maintained his integrity and looked forth with hope to the "last day" and the sight of his Redeemer. May the God of his hope comfort his dear wife and children and friends who mourn his departure, and may the mercy and grace of God join them together on the shining shore of God's eternal kingdom.

A FRIEND.

Mrs. PERLA GIVENS SMITH was born April 1, 1891, near Tilton, Miss., and died June 27, 1913. At the age of 12 years she joined the Baptist Church, and then, at the age of 20, united with the Methodist Church. She was married on Dec. 17, 1912, to Mr. J. Eddie Smith, who mourns her going. She was a sufferer for five months, during which time all was done for her that could be done. She was beloved by all who knew her, and especially so by those who knew her best. She was the idol of her home both before and after her marriage. She was converted under the ministry of Rev. J. V. Bennett, and if he has no other stars in his crown, we are sure that he has one whose brightness can not be excelled. She leaves a husband, father, mother, and three brothers to mourn their loss. Perla is gone, but not forgotten. Weep not, husband, father, mother, brothers, Perla is gone never to return; but, thank God, he has made a way for us to go to her—if we only will.

L. G., D. L., and O. B.

WILLIAM HESLEP, son of Mr. and Mrs. Moses Williams, of West Point, Miss., was born Aug. 14, 1902, and went away to the spirit land April 21, 1913. Billy was one of the finest boys I ever knew. He was mature far beyond his years. A bright bow of promise spanned his future. He possessed those traits of mind and heart that attract men everywhere—was polite and unselfish. He joined the Church when but seven years old. To him religion was a real fact and force. God was an ever-present God with him, a God who could hear prayer and a God of love. But Billy was not to stay with us. He was found with a serious heart trouble and for six months he lingered and suffered till the silver cord was loosed and the golden bowl broken. His star went not down behind the darkened west, but melted away into the light of heaven. This little boy bore the names of his two distinguished grandfathers, both members now of the Church triumphant. We buried his mortal remains at Aberdeen, Miss., but his pure spirit has gone on to God to await our final coming. Good-by, Billy, but we will see you again!

E. S. LEWIS.

NILES TRUMAN REEVES was born Sept. 16, 1907. He was 5 years 9 months and 2 days old when his gentle spirit caught the sweet strains of celestial music and joined the singing hosts above. Truman was a sweet little boy, the only child of a devoted father and mother. He was exceptionally bright for a child so young. He often astonished his mother by utterances that gave evidence of intelligence that would have done credit to a boy three times his age. He was of an inquiring mind. He sought the explanation of things he did not understand, and it was necessary to answer him fully. No half explained things satisfied him. He was industrious. He loved to help his mother in everything to be done in the home, and knew how to help her with marked efficiency for a child so young. He loved his parents. His devotion to his mother was remarkable. He was a general favorite in the community. He was loved by all. Yes, this sweet little boy of less than six years had already in his possession the cardinal elements of a great and good man. What glorious prospects lay before him and his happy parents! But, alas! the grim reaper has thrust in the cycle so early in the spring time. But is he really dead? No! Thank God. He has just commenced to live. Why weep, dear parents? The little bud has been plucked from the earthly flower garden only to be transplanted in that higher garden where it will be unmolested and bloom and unfold into all of the beauty and glory in the mind of Him who planted it.

Simsboro, La. J. L. LAY.

SAMUEL MADISON BARNES.

Samuel Madison Barnes was born near Myles, Miss., on December 30, 1881, in the homestead which had sheltered the Barnes family for generations—a pleasant place on the hills overlooking the fertile Bayou Pierre Valley.

On February 27, 1913, the whole country was shocked to hear of his tragic death, caused by a train near Myles, and everyone came to offer what consolation he could, and mingle his tears with those of the heart-broken mother.

Sam (or Buchie, as he was familiarly called) was the third of four grown sons. He had always stayed at the old home with his mother, and she depended on him as the stay of her declining years. But how inscrutable are the ways of Providence! How desolate and dreary the once happy home, and how pathetic the cry of her hungry heart, "O! for the touch of a vanished hand and the sound of a voice that is still!"

His mother and father (for whom he was named) were church workers, and Buchie early in life attended the services and connected himself with old Burtonton Church, of which he lived a consistent member. He was a splendid specimen of manhood, large and handsome, but with the most beautiful blending of manly dignity and childlike simplicity.

He was very fond of children and his love was returned, for every child trusted him and loved him. His deference to age was something beautiful and so unobtrusive. He never spoke unkindly of any one, and was ever cheerful and pleasant whenever one met him. He was fond of music and possessed a splendid voice, and he played the organ and sang a great deal. Many pastors will remember his voice, and the welcome always found in the hospitable home of this family. The most beautiful trait of character was his great charity, without which we become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. He knew and lived the Golden Rule.

God only can comfort the bereaved ones, especially the heart-broken mother, now nearing the sunset of life. May she be enabled to thank Him for the dear life that was spared her so long and to trust Him to the end, looking forward to a reunion with the loved ones gone before.

ONE WHO LOVED HIM.

Tidings From the Field

Queensborough Church, Shreveport.

Dear Mr. Editor: On Sunday, July 6, we entered our new Church at Queensborough. The opening sermon was delivered by Rev. P. M. Brown, our presiding elder, to a large and interested audience. At four o'clock we laid the corner stone with our regular order of service. Rev. G. E. Cameron gave the principal address, the First Church choir furnishing the music.

Our church is a gem of beauty, both in architecture and finish. The seating capacity is 270, which we hope to have comfortably filled soon. Our Sunday school is alive and growing. On the day of the opening we had 129 present. On last Sunday we expected a slump, but were surprised to find 115 in attendance. You will remember that this Church is in the fifth year of its life. We have received 35 members since Conference, giving us an enrollment of 140. We will have the honor of entertaining the Shreveport District Conference next year.

Queensborough is the most attractive part of the city of Shreveport. It is growing and becoming a great residential section. We are so far the only organized church in this part, and expect to hold the fort. We are now engaged in a series of tent revival services, which is the third held in the city. The preaching is being done by the resident pastors. There have been several conversions "in the good old-fashioned way." These services are largely attended by all classes of church folk. It is perhaps known that this campaign was started under the Methodist Preachers' Association of this city. It has for its aim the glory of God and the uplift of humanity. Will all readers of this paper pray for our tent services?—F. J. McCoy, P. C.

Marksville, La.

Dear Brother Meek: In justice to the good people of Marksville charge I feel that a short report of the work is necessary.

We have just closed the most successful meeting that has ever been held in the town of Marksville. Brother F. M. Freeman, of Bunkie, did the preaching and we feel that with his earnest preaching and consecrated life he has done a great work for Methodism in this section. We had fourteen accessions to the Church on profession of faith and the church members were greatly blessed.

The people at Bay Hill Church claimed that Sunday, July 29, was the greatest day that that Church has ever witnessed. We had Children's Day service. Some of the young ladies of the community had charge of the program, and, while the writer has been an attendant on Children's Day services for a number of years, he is sure that he has not attended a more delightful service than this one. In connection with the program, we had Mrs. Motte Martin (nee Bessie Senteli), a returned Missionary of the Presbyterian Church from Africa. She had with her a little native girl, and it was wonderful to hear her sing our hymns in her native tongue. The program closed with an able address by our adult Bible class teacher, Brother J. E. Williams, of Bunkie.

We have three other appointments on this charge: Simmesport, one of the oldest congregations in Southern Louisiana, where live some of the most loyal people to Methodism, who are working hard for the upbuilding of Christ's cause and Church; Evergreen, another old church, with a few loyal people, who still stand as firm Methodists; and Effie, a badly overflown section of our charge, which will have a beautiful new country church completed by the first Sunday in August, at which date we expect to begin our revival meetings at that place. Bro. L. N. Hoffpauir, of Jennings, is to be with us at Bay Hill in a ten days revival, beginning July 17. We believe that there is a revival wave throughout this section and we are praying that preacher and people may put themselves entirely in God's hands to be used in his service.—W. B. Perritt, P. C.

MY REPORT.

Brother Meek: This is July 15, and high time for my mid-year report. It is a genuine summer day; a very nice breeze is blowing. The sky is almost cloudless and "old Sol" is doing his level best to heat us up. Out here in the pine woods we disdain the conventionalities of city life, and doff our coats, vests, collars, and ties, and give the breezes a chance. Of course, Dr. R. A. Meek, and the entire Christian Advocate crew, right in the heart of our Southern Metropolis, dare not enjoy our freedom in this respect, but with due regard for environments, sit and swelter, as "stiff as steelyards," each in his place.

I am just in from the lot and poultry yard. Not many eggs this hot day, but the white Wyandottes and Rhode Island Reds are beauties. Here is a pretty Jersey calf lying broadside in the sun. and he is panting like a lizard. The barn and a shade tree are close by, but the little beast seems to prefer the sun. "There is no accounting for tastes." Back in my house and in my study, I find books and papers galore. The St. Louis, Nashville, and New Orleans Christian Advocates, and the Christian Herald and the Pentecostal Herald. What a treat!

Can any one beat my five? I do not preach much this year. I have one regular appointment—at Urania—and besides I fill appointments for my pastor and others. I filled the pulpit here last Sunday for a Free Methodist. My health is very poor this summer, but it might be worse. My pastor, Brother J. M. Alford, says that I can out-walk him. This superannuate's better half has fine health, and being very domestic, is an indispensable adjunct to household affairs.

The pastor has recently held a successful meeting in Standard, with J. H. Holder assisting. Brother Alford is an able preacher, very spiritual, and is giving his work his best efforts.

Now, as to next year's report, to one like the writer, it is very uncertain. The Lord only knows. His will be done. God bless you!

H. ARMSTRONG.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Mr. Holloman, the Treasurer of our Sunday School Board, reports the following Children's Day collections not mentioned in last report:

Morgan City, $11.06; Patterson, $5.45; Henry and Perry, $7.25; St. Francisville, $3.75; Pine Ridge, $2.75; Zwolle, $10.36; Choudrant, $5.80; Cooper's Chapel, $1.20; Parker Memorial, $19.59; Sulphur, $6.10; Shreveport Mission, $3.90; Bunkie, $12.26; Hughes' Spur, $4; Greensburg, $3.15; Colfax, $8.70; Atlanta, $1.30; Mermentau, $2.40; Merryville, $4.45; Lawtelle, $1.50; Perry Point, $2.25; Minden, $14.57; Bayou Lachute, $4; Red Oak, $6; Marion, $5.40. Total to July 10, $792.52.

The Sunday school at Mansfield, under the leadership of Mr. J. H. Thatcher, had an attendance on the first Sunday in July of 171, which was more than twice the number present the same Sunday last year. To offset the drop-back from the effect of the college closing, the superintendent is making much use of the mails, having his workers enlisted with him to send out various forms and styles of cards and letters. "Boosting" in this case is bearing an abundance of fruit.

For many years we have felt the need of some simpler way of receiving children into the Church than by the ritualistic form that has been in vogue since the beginning of our denominational life. To have children take a vow in terms of "the vain pomp and glory of this world," and "the carnal desires of the flesh," is a travesty on the simplicity of childhood, and for some years it has been our custom to receive them in a language of our own that they understood. But now Dr. Hamill comes to the rescue with a proposed beautiful ritual for their reception that we are sure will be for the most part adopted by the next General Conference. We cast three votes for this long needed justice to the religion of our children!

Our pastors should by all means give attention to observing Decision Day in their Sunday schools, along with their revivals that are being so generally held at this season of the year. The child feels that the preaching is done for adults and that it is they who are expected to join the Church, and there is need for the pastor, the teacher and the evangelist to co-operate in making it plain to the child that there is an obligation on all who love the Lord to confess him and enlist in the active membership of the Church. It would be well for the pastor to have such a class under his own instruction for several afternoons during the week preceding their reception. And after the vows are taken and while yet at the altar of the Church, the teachers, parents and other members of the family should come forward and the children be given the communion with them, and thus be taught from the first that they have rights at the Lord's table. These lambs should thus be fed and nurtured up into the full stature of men in Christ.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Mr. R. A. Maddox.

Sunday school teacher, are you leading your pupils to Christ? That is a part of your work.

Don't forget to address the Field Secretary at Jackson, Miss., R. No. 2, instead of Mendenhall.

Say, Mr. Superintendent, what are you doing in your Sunday school to hold and interest the boys and girls, and to get hold of the old people? If you can't do anything else, change your program and put on a pleasant look.

Last year there were 12 charges in the Jackson District that did not report on Children's Day. The presiding elder, Rev. Paul Hardin, says there will not be but about two that will not observe the day this year. May those two be so ashamed that they will take the collection even if they don't have the program!

Things are picking up on the Fannin Charge, under the leadership of Rev. Hugh McKee. This man never tires of his work. He has a Sunday school at every appointment; three organized Bible classes, and one teacher-training class with a membership of about 20. They meet every Friday evening. This is another country charge. He has also raised over $15 for the support of the Sunday school work of the Conference.

On the first Sunday in July, the Field Secretary was with Rev. J. B. King at Deasonville, and had a great day. That everybody seemed to enjoy and apreciate it, was evidenced by their liberal contribution of $12.15 for the support of the Sunday school work in the Mississippi Conference. Brother King and the people on his charge do things in the right way. This is a country charge in the boll weevil district, yet they have given over $30 to carry on the work of the Sunday School Board.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The Wesley Adult Classes had best keep an eye on Brother Woollard and the First Church of Columbus, for they are doing things and growing with pleasing rapidity. Several Sundays ago that clever pastor conceived the idea of sending out telegrams to quite a number of men desired in this class, and 43 men were secured. The telegrams were all different, the one to the sheriff being so realistic that he went out after his man and brought him to the class. The men of this great class are wide awake, and we may expect great things of them.

Three requisites are given here for a Teen-Age Class of boys as given by an expert in this line of work: 1. The teacher should be a man, young in spirit, interesting; a Christian, alive, sympathetic; a good talker, and he must know the boy, the Bible, his job and should be on it and be practical and cheerful. 2. The class should be composed of eager fellows, a willing, natural gang. It should be organized and have a president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer. It should have the following committees: Athletic, Social, Literary, Membership, and Devotional, and should have a definite object. 3. The lesson should be made interesting, attractive, and practical, and be applied to daily life. Biblical lessons without lesson helps, written in understandable English and graded to meet the mental capacity of the boy should be used. Christ must be the real trainer of every boy's life.

It has been demonstrated time and again that, instead of there being a rural problem and a boy and girl problem, the real problem is the securing of trained leaders. The glorious Fourth was utilized to exemplify the truth of the above at New Chapel, on the Nettleton charge, of which Brother Burns is the pastor. All the superintendents on his charge, many of his teachers, and a large and enthusiastic crowd joined in making his Children's Day service a very helpful, as well as beautiful, occasion. The service opened at 9 a. m., under a shady arbor, and the platform was decorated with plenty of flowers and everything to make the speaker comfortable. Mr. Norbin Sumner had charge of the program, and certainly made a splendid success of it; for in no city school could a smoother, better prepared program have been rendered. The children were all well trained, and were at ease and delighted every one. They were drilled by Mr. Sumner, Mr. L. M. Elliott, Miss M. L. McCarty, and Miss Daisy Riley. Mr. J. H. Neal is the capable superintendent of this school of 147 pupils. The music was furnished by the Evergreen Band, from the Evergreen Sunday school on the same charge. The Children's Day service was first enjoyed; then followed an address by the Field Secretary, after which Rev. W. M. Young, of Amory, delivered a splendid sermon. Then followed a bountiful dinner and a great address by that fine layman, Mr. J. A. Lowe, of Nettleton. Hon. G. W. Leftwich, a consecrated layman, and the superintendent of the Aberdeen Sunday school, made the closing address. The day was ideal in every respect, and though New Chapel is located 12 miles from any railroad, the success of this occasion exemplified the truth that you can have a good Sunday school in the country as well as in the town.

Brother R. H. B. Gladney writes of a heroic deed of some of his boy scouts. Three of them rescued a man from drowning, and that at a great personal risk. He has 24 boys enrolled as Scouts, and 29 members of the Camp Fire Girls. Sunday school enthusiasm and hard work assure success, and Brother Gladney has both.

REVIVAL AT TALISHEEK, LA.

On the night of the ninth instant we began a revival campaign here with Rev. Timothy V. Peters. From the very beginning the deepest interest has been manifest, and notwithstanding the very unusually hot weather which has prevailed, large congregations have attended all the services and much good has been accomplished. Up to date ten persons have been received into the Church on profession of faith; there are several yet to he received, and the end is not yet.

Brother Peters has wrought well in this field and is in high favor with all the people. The splendid new church in which the meeting is being conducted is the result of his labors, and several others, I am informed, are in course of construction on the charge.

From here we go to Mississippi for a number of meetings, after which we will return to Louisiana for much work in the fall. I have with me as chorister Mr. Robert H. Harmon, son of Rev. N. B. Harmon, the pastor of our church in Yazoo City, Miss. Brother Robert is a fine character and does good work in leading the song service. We have just a little open time which we should be pleased to give to pastors needing our assistance. We may he addressed at Yazoo City, Miss. Enclosed herewith please find a list of subscribers to the Advocate.

Fraternally,

THOS. J. NORSWORTHY.

Talisheek, La., July 18, 1913.

CHARLESTON, MISS.

Our third quarterly meeting came off about a month ago. It was encouraging in every particular. Brother Dorman was at his best. He remained with us four days, preaching as I never heard him before. All the interests of the Church were carefully looked after. Everything is advancing. Brother Dorman preached the first four sermons of our protracted meeting, which commenced at this time. Then Brother V. C. Curtis came and preached for us ten days, to the delight of all our people. His sermons were heart-searching and soul-stirring. It was the beginning of a great awakening in the church or churches of the town, which was followed up by the Baptists, the preaching in their meeting being done by Brother Leavell, of Oxford, Miss. The singing was led by a Brother Schofield. They continued one day longer than we did. Some of the results of these services were 12 additions to our membership and to theirs 28, and a better feeling among us as different branches of Christ's Church than we had hefore. None of our preachers need to have any hesitancy in risking Brother Curtis in a meeting; he is an all-round revivalist who never loses any ground, or his temper. He grows on the people at every service, and leaves them wishing he could stay longer. Our Sunday school has increased until our church is too small to accommodate the pupils. Our prayer meeting is flourishing. The Woman's Missionary Society is moving up; they have 44 on roll. Our people are gaining in interest for the Orphans' Home and every other financial interest of the Church. We expect to make a good report at Conference.—D. W. Bahb, P. C.

MINISTER SENDS HIS PRAISE.

Rev. J. H. Pearcy, Newsome, Va., writes: "About twenty-five years ago, when a student at Richmond College, Gray's Ointment was recommended to me by a lady of culture who has given two sons to the medical profession. It did all that you claim and I got well. Since then I have tried various ointments and salves, but found no substitute for your Gray's Ointment. Please send me a box by return mail, as I do not care to be without it. I do not hesitate to recommend Gray's Ointment unreservedly for boils, sores, carbuncles, etc." Gray's Ointment is most dependable in cases of cuts, burns, briuses, boils, carbuncles, insect bites, poison oak; old sores, blood poison, etc. You can prove its remarkable efficiency without cost by writing Dr. W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn., they will send you a free sample postpaid. 25c a box at druggists or by mail from the manufacturer.

THE EVANGELINE MISSION, LA. CONF.

Dear Editor: We have just returned from the Pine Prairie and Chicot appointments, the two places that we are serving together on the second Sunday. We had a record-breaking crowd at Chicot Sunday night, when over a hundred gathered for the evening service. We have had some accessions on profession of faith, and also some by letter. The Lord is blessing our labors, and the work is progressing nicely. Our church building at Ville Platte has just been completed, and is the most beautiful little church in Evangeline Parish. The work has paid, up to date, more than double the amount paid last year, and we are expecting to bring up our collections in full. The prospects and opportunities are better here in this field of labor than we have ever seen at any other place, and we ask an interest in the prayers of those who are interested in the mission work of Louisiana.

A REVIVAL AT AMORY, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: We had Rev. J. H. Felts with us in a meeting here at Amory for nearly two weeks during the hottest weather that we have had, so far, this season—the last week in June and the first week in July. We had remarkably fine congregations from the very first service to the end. The meeting was a good, uplifting revival, and there were 11 accessions to the Church on profession of faith and three by letter. This makes about 20 that we have received this year at Amory. Brother Felts did splendid preaching and is immensely popular with our Amory people. All in all, we had a good meeting, hut fell short of our desires and needs.—W. M. Young, P. C.

Laredo Seminary—The Opposite Bank.

For thirty years the Laredo Seminary, at Laredo, Texas, has been under our Foreign Mission Board—owned and supported by it. A recent ruling of the Board of Missions classes all the work done within the borders of the United States as Home Mission work and all outside as Foreign Mission work. Thus this great school for missions on the banks of the Rio Grande, while still the property of the Foreign Department, must now be run by the Home Department. If it were on the opposite bank of the river (two hundred yards further would place it on Mexican soil), it would be called a Foreign Mission enterprise, though reaching the very same children that it now reaches. May this not demonstrate to us the folly of our almost childish weakness of contending for our own pet phrase as to the kind of mission work that we will do? May this not show us conclusively that the work of missions is the work of redeeming souls that sit in darkness, no matter what human department they happen to fall under? May this not remind us of the patience and long suffering of our Lord and Master, who bears with us in our petty contentions to have our own way, our own will, our own pet method? Our once foreign work now becomes our home work. And so it is all round the world—merely a matter of going or sending, no matter where—just so His lost little ones may be found. Let us thank God that our foolish human differences are fading away and that we are standing in the unity of strength and numbers for the redemption of a lost world, no matter on which "side of the river" it may be found.

The Misses Holding.

With the transfer of the school, the Misses Holding have retired from the work and have returned to their home in Kentucky to spend their remaining years among their native hills. For thirty years these noble lives have been poured out for the salvation of the Mexicans. The love of these dark-skinned people for "Miss Nannie" is like unto that of a child for its mother, and the pathos of their silent devotion as expressed in their soft brown eyes, bedimmed with tears, at the thought of the coming separation is almost heart-breaking. For thirty years she has been their friend and counselor. For thirty years she has taught them of the Father's love. For thirty years she has comforted them in their sorrows and befriended them in their troubles. For thirty years she has lifted them from their dark and despairing life unto one of eternal hope. No wonder their hearts ache as she now leaves them! Long will "Miss Nannie" and "Miss Delia" be held in loving remembrance in Mexico, as also in the home land.

The New Principal.

The Home Department has been exceedingly fortunate in sending as successor to the Misses Holding, Dr. J. H. Skinner, of West Virginia, a Christian and an educator of whom the best things are spoken. Dr. Skinner holds the B. A. degree from the University of West Virginia, and the M. A. and Ph. D. degrees from the Illinois Wesleyan University. His methods are up-to-date. Some one has said of him: "His work was always so much above and beyond the commonplace as to command both admiration and imitation on the part of his associates." Mr. Bandi, the Second Vice President of the First National Bank of Gulfport, Miss., says of him: "I know no man for whom I have a higher regard both as to moral character and efficiency as a teacher and manager of schools." Prof. C. H. Amhler, Professor of History in Randolph-Macon College, says: "He is a man of scholarly attainments, straightforward manliness and courage to stand for the right." Dr. Skinner was a lay member of the last General Conference, having been elected on the first ballot by his Conference.

Mrs. Skinner.

As women, we will be interested in the "good woman of the house" who is to be a real power behind the throne of our work at Laredo. That we may come to know her at once, we quote only a few of the splendid things we hear of her. Mr. Bandi (quoted above) says: "Mrs. Skinner is one of the most estimable women I have ever met. She has the faculty of making friends and takes great interest in her husband's work." Dr. Shaw, late President of Morris-Harvey College, says: "Dr. Skinner's rare qualities, combined with the cheery personality and unusual home-making ability of Mrs. Skinner, forms a power for administering comfort and creating high ideals in all." We are indeed grateful that God has given us this well equipped, consecrated man and woman to step into this rather critical situation at Laredo now. With Mexico in an upheavel and our schools there in confusion, this school on the border occupies a strategic place for us and for them. We will not fail to uphold them with our prayers and our material aid.

Wanted for Laredo at Once.

200 sheets, three-quarter size; 36 sheets, regular size; 12 counterpanes, regular size; 12 counterpanes, single-bed size; 200 pillow-slips, 18 x 28; 20 table cloths, 4 yards long; 36 linen dinner napkins; 24 guest towels; 24 plain towels; 48 roller towels; 48 white aprons for serving in dining-room; 48 gingham aprons for dish washers.

A Linen Shower.

We are now ready for this linen shower (or cotton?) for this mission school just beginning housekeeping under a new administration. If we do not supply these things this way, they will have to be bought out of our funds. By this kind of united effort we can save a cash output when it is so needed elsewhere. This replenishing must be done quickly to be ready for the opening of school. What auxiliary will respond first? Write Dr. J. M. Skinner of Laredo, Texas; tell him your auxiliary will send a box or barrel, and when and what will be in it. If you send now you will have time to send by freight and thus the transportation will cost very little.

An Empty Pantry Also.

What a lovely and helpful thing it would be to ship canned or pressed fruits and vegetables also! Such a little thing for an auxiliary and yet such a help to the mission. "Many hands make light work." Altogether now—quick—to lift this burden.

Write the editor of this column when you send, that she may keep a list on this page. Report the donation also to your Conference Superintendent of Supplies.

MORGAN SCHOOL
FAYETTEVILLE, TENN.

To determine the wants as well as the aptitudes of the inividual, and, through constant personal aid, so strengthen and develop his best qualities, that when the student enters college or business life he may have something more than ordinary qualities to depend upon—this is the aim of Morgan School.

Such training demands the closest individual attention of teachers of the highest moral and intellectual character. It is also important that the student have access to the teachers at all times, and that the instructors be in perfect sympathy and accord with the boy. This system prevails at Morgan school.

The equipment measures well with the School's standard. A new school building is in process of construction and a new steam heated, electric lighted dormitory was recently erected at a cost of $15,000. The homelife of the dormitory is safe and wholesome, and the strong moral and religious tone of the school is second to none.

The course of study comprises a thorough preparatory training in English, Latin, Greek, German, French, History, Civil Government, Mathematics and Sciences. Certificates of graduation admit without examination to the leading colleges and universities. Advanced course for students not intending to enter college. Special teachers' course.

Morgan School encourages the practice of manly sports and athletics, and for this purpose maintains a splendid eight-acre athletic field; has basketball, football and baseball teams, tennis, etc.

Free catalogue and announcement will be sent upon request addressed to

IN MEMORY OF MR. D. A. SAUNDERS.

In token of our esteem, confidence, and affection for our friend, Mr. D. A. Saunders, who departed this life on the 28th day of June, the W. S. Harrison Bible Class of the Starkville Methodist Sunday School adopted the following resolutions:

"1. We express our sincere sorrow at his death, while accepting with resignation the decree of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well. Our friend is gone. We shall miss his wise counsel, his generous friendship, his cheerful optimism, his serene confidence in the vital things of the spiritual life.

"2. We shall ever cherish in memory his many virtues, his excellencies of character, his unostentatious charity, and his simple faith, relying ourselves upon the immortality of the soul, in the firm hope and the confident belief that we shall meet him again in the 'City whose builder and maker is God.'

"3. We deeply deplore his death at a time when it seemed that by force of circumstances and the decision of his own life, its best opportunities for peace, pleasure, and happiness with his family and friends, for consecrated service, and for usefulness in the church and community had but just come to him.

"4. We most sincerely sympathize with his wife, children, and other loved ones in the loss of him whose love has shielded them so securely in the years that have passed."

Peace be to thy ashes, comrade and friend, until we shall meet thee again.

A VALUABLE REPORT FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS.

After a serious delay on account of the floods at Dayton, Ohio, the printed Minutes of the Third Annual Meeting of the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations for the United States and Canada are at last available. This important report contains the complete findings of the Council, representing twenty-nine denominations, touching such matters as Sunday school standards, exhibits, lesson courses and summer schools for Sunday school workers, together with the reports of officers, sections and committees and a complete membership roll of the Council by denominations. The statistical table printed in the report shows that in ten of the twenty-nine denominations the Sunday school enrollment exceeds the total number of communicants in numbers varying from five to fifty per cent of the total number of communicants. In the remaining nineteen denominations the number of communicants exceeds the Sunday school enrollment by percentages varying from eight to 130. Altogether the eighty pages of the report are crowded with valuable information regarding Sunday school work viewed from the interdenominational standpoint. Pastors and Sunday school workers of evangelical churches can obtain the report by sending their application accompanied by ten cents in stamps to the Secretary of the Council, Henry H. Meyer, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York.

COMMENDING THE EDITOR.

Inasmuch as Dr. Meek, the present Editor of our Conference organ, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, has indicated his desire to retire from the tripod at an early date, and,

Inasmuch as we feel that his so doing would be at present a loss to the Church and the cause for which we stand, and,

Further, feeling that he has given satisfaction and ably discharged his duty, giving us a wholesome paper, strong and forceful, uncompromising in its attitude toward sin and clear in its position, and wherein disagreeing from the view point of some, always kind and charitable; therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the members of the Alexandria District Conference of the Louisiana Annual Conference, assembled in Columbia, La., on the 13th day of June, 1913, do request Dr. Meek to withdraw his resignation, continuing his present relation with the Advocate until the full time for which he is elected shall have elapsed.

PRAY FOR YOUR PREACHER.

We once somewhere saw the statement that the late Dr. Charles H. Spurgeon usually went from a season of prayer with the deacons of his church to the pulpit. Who can tell how much this brief prayer meeting may have contributed to the success of this truly remarkable minister? The spiritual state of a congregation and what it accomplishes for the Master by no means depend upon the preacher alone. On the contrary, these are largely determined by the attitude of the people toward him and the extent to which they co-operate with him and sustain him. They can criticise him until his influence is reduced to a minimum, or they can increase his efficiency by praying for him and seeking in every possible way to re-enforce him.

In a recent issue the Southern Churchman touched upon this important subject in the following impressive manner: "Jonathan Edwards remarked at one time, 'If some Christians that have been complaining of their preachers had said and acted less before men and had applied themselves with all their might to cry to God for these ministers, had, as it were, risen and stormed heaven with humble, fervent, and incessant prayers for them, they would have been much more in the way of success.' It is to be regretted that the practice of praying specifically for the minister has fallen somewhat into disuse. Some ministers may not desire it, perhaps look upon it as superfluous, and may even regard the custom in the light of a disparagement, as though it implied personal inefficiency, or an acknowledgment of weakness. However we believe that the vast majority of ministers not only appreciate such prayers, but really crave them. * * * * The holier a person is, the more certain it is that he values prayer. Paul believed in intercessory prayer for the ministry; yea, more, he strongly advocated it, and earnestly and repeatedly solicited it for himself and co-laborers, as we find from reading his Epistles to the Churches."

We believe that a revival of this much neglected practice would bring a rich blessing both to our pastors and flocks. We too little appreciate in this day the tremendous power of intercessory prayer upon which the early Christains so much relied; and certainly the minister, who holds so responsible a position, should be largely remembered in such supplications. No matter what his other equipment may be, unless he is clothed with power from above, he is wholly insufficient for the work of his high calling.

CRITICISING "BILLY" SUNDAY.

The critics are barking fiercely at the heels of Rev. William A. Sunday, America's foremost evangelist. He is paying the price which most men who achieve phenomenal success in any line of work have to pay—that of being found fault with. But, so long as his converts are numbered by the thousands and one of his meetings in a city marks an epoch in its history, Mr. Sunday can afford to endure with patience the attacks which are being made upon him. The criticisms that are being lodged against this distinguished revivalist are much the same as those which were heard against Sam Jones in the early days of his remarkable career. It is declared that he lacks dignity; that he uses slang and says sensational and improper things in his sermons, and that he accepts too much money for his services. Some of Mr. Sunday's methods are, indeed, unusual and some of his expressions are startling, not to say questionable; but the good in his ministry so far outweighs the debatable features of it that we think it ill befits those who claim to be interested in the extension of the divine kingdom to join the ranks of his detractors.

And why complain of the large amounts of money that he receives? If the people who have been stirred by his trumpet calls to repentance and righteousness wish to give him thousands of dollars, who has any right to object? Can it be shown that he is piling it up like a miser or using any of it improperly? We dare say that if a calculation were made showing what the evangelist receives per capita for every soul that is converted in his meetings, and that if the same rule were applied to the ministry and financial compensation of some of his conspicuous critics, it would not be Mr. Sunday who would suffer by the comparison. We have known some preachers who drew good salaries year after year for quite a considerable period who could scarcely point to a single person that they had led into the kingdom, as their "joy and crown."

For our part, we shall not, for the present at least, echo through our columns any of the notes intended to disparage "Billy" Sunday and his work. The literature of that kind that has reached our desk has quickly found its way into the waste-basket. When John Wesley, high churchman that he was, heard that Maxfield, the first of his lay helpers, whom he had only authorized to exhort, had (though unlicensed and unordained) really begun to preach in London, he was indignant and hurried back, intending to rebuke and stop him; but his great mother gently laid her hand upon his arm and said: "John, take care what you do with respect to that young man, for he is as surely called by God to preach as you are. Examine what have been the fruits of his preaching and hear him for yourself." After listening, watching, and meditating, Mr. Wesley said: "It is the Lord; let him do what seemeth good."

The renowned Dr. W. H. Fitchett, of Australia, says, "The sermon that converts men has written upon it the signature of God's approval." "By their fruits, ye shall know them," was the test laid down by our Lord himself, and measured by that standard, Mr. Sunday certainly seems to be a man of God. After his extraordinary meeting in Columbus, Ohio, last winter, the Methodist preachers of that place, who had had abundant opportunity to observe the man and his methods, gave him a strong general endorsement.

We are not much concerned for the maintenance of the stateliness and dignity of the pulpit—we are far more anxious that it shall be evangelical and effective. We like correct grammar; but we think it is vastly more important for a preacher to have a burning message that shall reach the hearts and stir the consciences of men, than it is for him to guard against split infinitives and to be able to trill out Anglo-Saxon U's. The following story is related of the late Dwight L. Moody:

"In Moody's early days an over-zealous critic, who was not an over-active worker, took him to task for his defects in speech. 'You oughn't to attempt to speak in public, Moody; you make so many mistakes in grammar,' he said. 'I know I make mistakes,' said Moody, 'and I lack a great many things; but I am doing the best I can with what I've got. But, look here, my friend, you've got grammar enough; what are you doing with it for Jesus?'"

One of John Wesley's biographer's says of him: "He regarded learning only as the instrument of usefulness." We fear that this is a conception that obtains too little among the ministry in this day. The seeking of self-culture, that one may shine like a star chiefly for his own glory, is too low an ideal for one who claims to have been divinely called to preach the "glorious gospel of the son of God." The Master sought not reputation—"he went about doing good." So should his ambassadors do in this day. Intellectual strength and knowledge are of religious value only as they are turned to account in Christian service—only as they are made to assist in lifting fallen humanity Godward and heavenward. A ministry that is spiritually fruitful, is the one that most honors the Master and which will command the richest reward in eternity, whether it be odd and eccentric, or after the usual type and pattern. The precious sheaves are what the Lord of the harvest wants.

HOW CAN HE WRITE SO SACRELEGIOUSLY?

Commenting upon the "Junior Hop" and "Senior German" given by the students in connection with the recent Commencement of Vanderbilt University, the Alabama Christian Advocate says:

"In the name of Methodism and in the name of God, let the 'German Hop' features of the Vanderbilt Commencement program be cut out forever. If this is a church school, let the Church assert herself, and remove this blot from her fair name. We cannot allow one of our schools to stand for such worldliness. We need some backbone of the Woodrow Wilson type."

Go slow, Brother Editor, go slow! Do you not know that the majority of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust are men of great godliness and piety, the Chancellor being particularly so? Evidently these naughty students must have stolen a march upon these saintly gentlemen. Be charitable, Brother Glenn, and allow something for accidental happenings. College students are pretty crafty, you know.

WORK A DUTY AND PRIVILEGE.

"Shall I not work?
Shall it be said—he took from all the world
Of its accumulated countless wealth,
As much as he could hold, and never gave?
Spiritless beggar! pauper! parasite!
Life is not long enough to let me work
As I desire; but all the years shall hold,
Shall I pour forth. Perhaps it may be mine
To do some deed was never done before,
And clear my obligation to the world."

POWER.

You want power? Well, the desire is legitimate, and its realization possible. But what kind of power? Physical? Then stop fretting. Take exercise. Avoid excesses. Form regular habits. Eat nourishing food. Sleep long and soundly. That means a sound body.

Mental power? All right. Use your brain. Think. Think systematically. Think persistently. Think below the surface. Grapple with the great thoughts which others have put into books. That will give fiber and grip to your mental life.

Or is it moral power that you are after? Very good. It may be had. Think pure thoughts. Look at lofty ideals. Live right. Crucify self. Loathe all vileness. Develop the Good Samaritan side of your life. That will promote a high morality.

But there is something higher. It is spiritual power. Ah! that is it. The foot of the ladder is on the earth, but its top is in heaven. Climb! Do you say, "It is high, I can not attain unto it?" No, no! Read the First Chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. Then to your knees. Look up. Turn your back upon the bad past. Surrender utterly to God. Lose your will in his. Plead the promises. Believe, believe! Claim the Pentecostal gift. Receive ye the Holy Ghost!—Bishop Berry.

A MOST RIGHTEOUS FIGHT.

The College of Bishops of the Methodist Church, South, has read a much needed lesson to Andrew Carnegie. The latter offered what was tantamount to a million dollar bribe to induce the Methodist Church, South, to take his view of education. We already have referred to the circumstances attending the proffered bribe which Bishop Candler of the Methodist Church has characterized as "the impudent proposal of an agnostic steelmonger." The Vanderbilt University of Tennessee belongs to the Methodist Church, South. Its ownership having been questioned, the Chancery Court of Tennessee decided every point in favor of the Methodist Church. Thereupon an appeal was made to the Supreme Court of the State. Whilst this appeal was pending, the multi-millionaire ironmaster stepped in and offered to endow a medical college for the Vanderbilt Unievrsity on condition that it should be completely divorced from all Methodist influence.

"The agnostic steelmonger," to employ Bishop Candler's characterization, hoped to kill two birds with one stone. The University of the South, which is affiliated with the Episcopal Church, was about to establish a Medical College at Nashville, Tenn. Carnegie's million dollar gift to the Vanderbilt University, if accepted, would at one time and the same time remove the proposed Medical College at Nashville from sectarian influence and prevent the founding of a similar institution which, if it came into existence, would be under Episcopalian auspices.

It was a million dollar campaign having for its object the elimination of religion from education. It was prompted by the same motive that caused Carnegie to establish a fund for pensioning college professors, always provided that they had not placed their talents at the service of educational institutiona with church affiliations. It was an indirect method of depriving these institutions of teaching talent. It was setting a premium upon godless education. It is impossible to withhold a tribute of admiration for the Methodist Bishops for the manner in which they turn their backs upon the million dollar temptation to prove faithless to their trust. In a statement to the public they declare: "The conditions attached to this gift and the letter accompanying it, which must be taken as expository of the conditions, are such as lead us to believe it cannot be accepted without a breach of trust, and without dishonor to the Church."

The Methodist Bishops then notify Carnegie that there are things in this world of inestimably greater value than money. The person who never crossed the threshold of a college as a student, and who yet would dictate to our universities and colleges in a vital matter, hears from the official representatives of the Methodist Church this language bringing out the nature of the heinous insult embodied in Carnegie's proffered bribe: "We know how to endure poverty, but we have not learned, nor are we ready to be taught, how to accept gifts to which are annexed conditions that require the sacrifice of our self-respect, the defeat of the founders of the University, the renunciation of principles which we hold in common with all the Churches, and the abdication of the mission of the Church of God in the field of Christian education."

We have a definite purpose in dwelling on a subject which, on the surface, appears to be of small interest to Catholics. A little reflection, however, will convince us that the proffered bribe to the Vanderbilt University concerns not only Methodists and Episcopalians, but all who appreciate the vital importance of Christian education. It would be an incalculable national calamity if American universities and colleges should become Carnegieized. From these seats of learning stream out influences which have much to do with moulding public opinion. If the money of "the agnostic steelmonger" should be permitted to play a part in shaping these influences in their inception, the consequences would be immeasurably disastrous.

A godless generation will not add to the strength of the Republic. It was but the other day we celebrated the Declaration of Independence, the work of men who believed in God. If they had been agnostics, they would not have been able to base their righteous demands on this appeal to Christian principles: "We hold these truths to be self evident; that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights." If Harvard and Yale and Princeton and other colleges of Colonial times had been de-Christianized in the manner Carnegie aims at de-Christianize our educational institutions of to-day, the men who framed the charter of our liberties would not have made the appeal that went straight to the hearts of a Christian people. If the latter had been imbued with agnostic principles, such an appeal would not have evoked the outburst of patriotism that carried the American Revolution to a successful issue. The men who laid the foundations of the Nation had ever before them, in public as well as private affairs, a standard of righteousness such as bald atheism or doubting agnosticism cannot erect. That standard a Carnegieized system of education would seek to overthrow.

We see, then, the nature of the fight the College of Bishops of the Methodist Church, South, is making to save an educational institution from the terrible calamity of being vitiated by Carnegie's money. Let us hope that victory will crown the efforts of the Methodist Bishops to stem the progress of the attempt to empty our educational system of all Christian principles.—New York Freeman's Journal and Catholic Register.

THE WORLD'S SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

By W. Fred Long.

The third day finds 2415 delegates from 47 countries registered. H. J. Heinz and a party of twenty-one business men and workers arrived to-day after being en route since March 11. They have a glowing report, having stopped and held meetings at seventy-three places—in Hawaii, the Philippines, Korea, Japan, and China. To-night they will give a stereopticon lecture and views of scenes on their trip. Mr. E. K. Warren and wife to-day entertained all the missionaries in attendance—253.

It is beyond the power of man to estimate the value of this Convention. The Ton Halle, which has the largest seating capacity of any building in the city, will not hold the people.

It is interesting to hear representatives of the nationalities make their brief reports and have an interpreter report their words.

Japan captures the next Convention, in 1916, the business men of Tokio having sent a delegation with a guarantee of $25,000. You can almost see these countries change to Christianity. Korea and China are enthusiastic, as is all of Continental Europe. To-day there were held six simultaneous Conferences in three languages, covering every phase of the work. The display of Sunday school helps and exhibits of the work done in various countries is an education within itself for Sunday school workers.

A public service was held at noon to-day at the Monument of Zwingli, the great reformer, who was pastor here in 1526. This was the home of Pestalozzi. A beautiful monument, with him and a boy, honors his memory. The great music composer, Wagner, composed three of his most popular productions here. When Secretary Burgess, of the Indias, made his report, a check for 1500 pounds was presented from Scotland friends. When the Secretary from a mission station in South Africa reported and expressed a wish for $40, Marion Lawrance at once said, "Brother you have your $40." Mr. Warren was behind it.

Tomorrow evening, from 5 to 7 o'clock, a musical concert of 400 Swiss voices and 40 instruments will be rendered. Every seat is sold at $1.50 per seat. We can see the snow on the Alps near by, and it is cool enough here. Great plans will be entered into, and history will be made here.

A GREAT NEED: A LIBRARY OF METHODIST LITERATURE.

The Library of the Biblical Department of Vanderbilt University has in its possession a valuable collection of Methodist Literature. Last fall when the Library was moved to the large, attractive quarters of the chapel on the second floor of Wesley Hall, this collection of Methodist Literature was carefully examined. It consists chiefly of the bequests of Bishops McTyeire and Digert, whose industry and good judgment in collecting valuable materials are well known. With other matter in possession of the Library, it is doubtless the largest and most valuable collection of Methodist Literature in the Church.

Recognizing the great value that such materials would be to the Church, the faculty of the Biblical Department has determined to continue the work of collecting, to the end that the Theological Library of this Department may be a center for the dissemination of information on Methodist Literature.

It is needless to say that the realization of this object will be gratifying to all Methodists in the knowledge that there exists a place, a center, where the original sources will be accessible, and where any one wishing to do research work may find all the available literature on the subject.

The faculty has, therefore, instructed the Librarian to invite correspondence with those who may be interested in such a movement, with a view to obtaining from them or their circle of friends information that will help toward securing Methodist Literature, especially of a historic nature.

It will appear that such sources are found in complete volumes of the Christian Advocates, and periodicals of our Church; in complete sets of Annual Conference Minutes extending over a number of years (if possible of the entire Conference history); the literature of Conference Historical Societies; pamphlets or monograms by individuals on matters pertaining to Methodism; autograph letters, collections, mementoes, connected with noted Methodist personalities; and, of course, in rare books of Methodist Literature.

There are doubtless a number of persons who have in their keeping valuable collections, which are often a burden, and who would be glad to entrust them to an institution were they assured of safe keeping and benefit to others. A reasonable assurance of such nature can be given by this institution. Should persons having such matter as described above not care to part with it, they are invited, nevertheless, to describe it to the undersigned, who will keep a careful record of the same, and will thus be able to inform inquirers where information sought may be found. Or it may be that they would lend their collections to the Library on guarantee that they would be returned when asked for. It is hoped that a cordial co-operation will be given toward making this enterprise a great success.

THE VANDERBILT CONTROVERSY.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am writing to say "Amen and amen," to all that Bishops Hoss and Candler and you have said in defense of our cause on the Vanderbilt question. I am sure, among all unbiased, fair minded people in and out of the Church, you will go down in history honored and loved for your loyalty to Christian education and our great Methodism in the South. Go at them! my brethren, and if it is not cussing, give them, "what Paddie gave the drum."

I would like to ask, who created that Board of Trust? Is it a creature of its own creation; or is it a creation of the Southern Methodist Church? If they are a self-constituted body, they have a right to do as they please and they are certainly self-perpetuating; but if their body was created by the Southern Methodist Church, then they must obey their creator. "Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus?" Their conduct is not only a betrayal of a most sacred trust, but impudent political trickery, upon an assumed technical interpretation of an act of the Church which is as clear as midday, and which the Chancery Court of Tennessee has so declared.

It is passing strange to me that any company of gentlemen, leaders in thought, and friends, supposed, of Christian education, could so persistently pursue a course in open violation of one of the most sacred trusts ever committed to men—vows they have taken before God and the Church! If they could not agree with the Church and its constituted authority, then the only honorable and just course to pursue was to resign. The thought of any other course should have made them blush with shame. If their views were not in harmony with the views of the Church and they felt that they were violating principles ever so sacred to them, when at last the General Conference voted against them they should have obeyed or resigned. Common honesty and fair dealing demanded this. But every step they have taken throughout all this disagreeable litigation has been to push the Church to the wall, and they have misrepresented and impugned the motives of those who stood up in defense of the Church's rights, calling them demagogues and what else.

When they could do nothing more they set up a tempting bait with the apparent purpose of biasing the court and tempting the Church with $1,000,000 from the greatest enemy that Christian education ever had. That Board knew too well that neither party could legally accept any gift pending the litigation in the courts; why then manipulate this proposition just at this time? If the Board had been willing to deal fairly with Mr. Carnegie and with the Church they should have said, "No; we cannot accept your munificent gift while this case is pending. But, Mr. Carnegie, if we gain the suit we will gladly accept the gift, with your agnostic conditions, turn the Church out, and take you in bodily, for we think you are worth more than the whole of Southern Methodism."

But a further evidence of the spirit of Judas is seen in the suggestion made to the Church through the Bishops, that we accept the $200,000, and to make sure of it put it into laboratories where Carnegie could not get it back, and at the same time also make sure of the interest on the remaining $800,000, until the matter is settled. "Shades of Moses cover us!" If that is the kind of honesty and fair dealing and "godliness" they are teaching at the University it is high time we were closing it up, much less lending it our patronage and influence. It is said that if we reject this offer of Mr. Carnegie, it will be a great loss to the city of Nashville and the South. If Southern Methodism is to sacrifice her principles on the subject of Christian education to accommodate the city of Nashville or the South, for any sum of money, she is unworthy of the respect of decent people. There are some things we need just now that would be worth far more than money.

When this question is finally settled, if it should go against the Church—which we do not see the shadow of a reason for—then Southern Methodism should and will withdraw, hair and hoof from Vanderbilt University, and wipe the dust off her feet as testimony against it. Let it be understood now and for all time, that Southern Methodism is not so poor that she must sell out to "an agnostic steelmonger" with millions, to get tainted money with which to educate her children, who are the purest young Anglo-Saxons and truest young Americans that now live on the continent. To do this would forever forfeit God's presence and promise to us, and instead of making us a blessing, it would make us a curse in the land. If we should be so unfortunate as to lose Vanderbilt University, we can and will build another far superior to it, sealed and delivered to the Church forever.

MR. BINGHAM ON THE CARNEGIE-KIRKLAND TRANSACTION.

(The following letter appeared in the Memphis Commercial Appeal of July 1.)

"The needs of Vanderbilt University, the interest of the highest and broadest education in medical science, the good of the entire country (particularly of the South) and the welfare of humanity make a powerful plea that Mr. Carnegie's large liberality shall be accepted by the trustees.

"Next to the most amazing thing that has ever come within the range of my observation is objection to the acceptance of that great gift.

"The most amazing thing that I have ever read is the reason assigned for such objection, viz: The university does not get a dollar from Mr. Carnegie, but the university gives away its medical department, valued at from $300,000 to $500,000. The third amazing thing is that Bishops join in this childish objection. The following statement makes their action amusing as well as amazing: Chancellor Kirkland secured $300,000 to purchase property for this same medical department. Whereupon these same Bishops went into court and secured an injunction against the completion of the transaction by which the university came into possession of the property. Now these same Bishops blame the trustees with the crime of giving away this same medical department. True, the Bishops afterward saw a light and had the injunction dissolved. It is to be hoped that reason will again resume her throne, and that the Bishops will withdraw this equally baseless objection.

Conditions Stipulated.

"That their objection is utterly groundless is proven beyond controversy by considering these facts:

"With Mr. Carnegie's generous gift he stipulated five conditions, and five only, viz:

"First—The trustees shall appoint for the management of the medical school a governing board of seven members.

"Second—The chancellor of the university shall be chairman of this governing board.

"Third—Three members of this governing board shall be men of recognized standing in medical education or medical science.

"Fourth—All the members of this governing board shall be chosen without regard to denominational considerations and solely because of fitness for the desired service.

"Fifth—The teachers in the school shall be chosen from the best men obtainable, the professorships to be filled as far as practicable by men who are primarily teachers rather than practitioners.

"The most distorted imagination can find no other condition.

"Approving these reasonable and commendable conditions, the trustees accepted the gift with thanks, and adopted these rules for the conduct of the medical department in accordance with the conditions of the Carnegie donation:

"First—The members of the governing board of the medical department shall be elected by the board of trust. If vacancies occur previous to the annual meeting of the board, the executive committee shall have power to fill the same until the next regular meeting of the board of trust.

"Second—Members of said governing board shall hold office for eight years, or until their successors are elected, but may be removed for cause by the board of trust at any annual meeting.

Record Shall Be Open.

"Third—Said governing board shall elect its own secretary and keep a record of its own proceedings, which record shall always be open and accessible to the board of trust or to the executive committee of said board, or to the president of said board of trust. Three members of said board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

"Fourth—The chancellor shall, in connection with his annual report, make a summary of the most important business transacted by the governing board of the medical department, and these actions of the governing board shall be subject to the ratification of the board of trust.

"Could anything be clearer than that this governing board is merely the agent of the board of trust to do the detailed work of the board of trust for this special department? It does seem that a wayfaring man, though a Bishop, need not err therin.

"When stockholders of a bank elect a board of directors, have the stockholders given away the bank? When the directors elect officers to do the detailed work of the business, have they given away the bank? The only possible answer is, nay. No more have the trustees given away the medical department when they appoint a board to do the detailed work of that department.

"It is difficult to believe that the Bishops are serious. In the language of eminent authority, 'Evidently they are hurting at one place and grunting at another.'

"Comes one Bishop and argues to the effect that Mr. Carnegie is attempting to influence a decision of the Supreme Court of Tennessee!

"Comes another Bishop and denounces Mr. Carnegie as an agnostic steel-monger!'

"What was he when he gave to Millsaps College $15,000, and received our thanks therefor? Well may Methodists pray, 'From such fatuous leadership, good Lord, deliver us.'

"Carrollton, Miss. J. R. BINGHAM."

FROM THE RALEIGH CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

"Whatever this reason was, there is no escape from the fact that the Chancellor, and not Mr. Carnegie, formulated the conditions upon which this offer should be made; and upon him must rest the responsibility. Much has been written about the Governing Board of seven members that is to govern the Medical Department under the new regime. The Chancellor and Mr. Whitefoord R. Cole, presumably representing the present position of the Board of Trust, have put forth the claim that this Governing Board is to be the creature of the Board of Trust, to be set up and pulled down at its behest; but the only evidence they present in behalf of this position is a set of resolutions passed by the Board of Trust after the transaction with Mr. Carnegie was complete, or at least after his offer had been made. Any child can see that what the Board of Trust can set up the Board of Trust can pull down in so far as this applies to its own methods of transacting its business, but it cannot annul a contract which it has made without the consent of the other party to the contract. That other party in this instance is Mr. Carnegie, and, so far, he has not been heard from in connection with this Governing Board's being a mere committee of the Board of Trust. He was assured that the President of the Carnegie Corporation should have the privilege of being a member of the Governing Board and it is stipulated that the Chancellor should be another, and that the remaining members should be chosen without any reference to denominational lines. If this does not mean severance of the Medical Department from the University, then it must mean a severance of the University from the Church.

"That the latter is the real purpose of the majority of the Board of Trust seems to us beyond any doubt. At the beginning of this controversy, and even after the lawsuit was entered, the Board of Trust admitted the Church's ownership of the University. It was only the question of her right to elect members of the Board of Trust that was called in question, but now we hear nothing of such fine, not to say absurd, distinctions. * * * * We have tried hard to believe in the sincerity of these men, that from their viewpoint they were trying to fulfill the trust committed to them. We have never for one moment agreed with their viewpoint, but we have wished to believe that they were seeking to guide the University to the destiny designed by her founders. But, if we must speak candidly, we have lost out. We can no longer believe it. Step by step we have been driven to a different conviction. It affords us no pleasure to write thus. There is a genuine pain at our heart as we do it, but to us the facts all look that way."

A BEAUTIFUL TRIBUTE.

It is with sincere regret that I read in this week's Advocate an account of the death of my old friend, S. B. McCutcheon. In the fifteen years of my acquaintance with the Louisiana Conference I have rarely missed him from one of its annual sessions. In his quiet, courteous, dignified way he was ever ready to serve the Church he loved so well, and no duty entrusted to him ever failed to have the most painstaking and conscientious attention. His work on the Joint Board of Finance was tedious and laborious; but to him it was a work of love, and he found real joy in being of substantial service to the superannuates and those dependent upon them.

Shreveport and Louisiana Methodism are inestimably richer because of the consecrated, beautiful life of S. B. McCutcheon. The influence and work of this great and good man will abide, and as the years come and go he will be remembered for his saintly life and devotion to his Church's best interest.

Ripened and mellowed by length of years and the sad and sweet experiences of a useful life, and robust and strong in his faith because of the stress and storm along his pathway, he was indeed ready to be gathered unto his people. To those who travel over the Church visiting Annual Conferences and other Methodist assemblies, I am sure it is a common experience to occasionally find a man who in his character and faith and good works stands out and apart and above the rank and file like a great mountain peak on a foundation of granite, eternal as the everlasing hills. Such an one was S. B. McCutcheon. May he rest in peace, and may his example be an inspiration to the rest of us!

SEASHORE ASSEMBLY OF CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

The Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers at the Biloxi Camp Grounds, has just passed the crucial session of its life; but the officers and those who have attended for years pronounce this in many respects the best of its meetings, notwithstanding the fact that there had been some doubt in the minds of those in charge as to the possibility of continuing the Assembly. God has wonderfully blessed the untiring efforts of Rev. Norman Guice, Miss Ellen Jackson, and Dr. F. S. Parker—director, treasurer, and president respectfully; and has graciously answered the prayers of Leaguers and other Christian workers in the three States represented, by pouring out graciously his Spirit upon the meeting, and rewarding their unselfish loyalty in material ways which will assure the permanency of this institution for the future. In response to an earnest appeal from Mr. Guice, the large audience assembled in the auditorium Sunday morning contributed the sum of $167 to defray actual expenses of this session.

Lack of space forbids a detailed account of all the excellent features of the Assembly, and the exceptional advantages offered there. Due to Mr. Guice was the splendid number of attractions in the way of lectures, addresses, recitals, and social and recreational pleasures.

The mornings were given over entirely to devotions and class work. Institutes in Sunday school and Epworth League methods were ably conducted by Mrs. W. G. Moody, of Montgomery, Ala., and Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, of Hazlehurst, Miss. The texts used were 'Emigrant Forces' and "Mexico To-Day."

Meetings for children were conducted by Miss May Belle Marshall, deaconess from Montgomery, Ala., who, with her personal consecration and ingenuity in holding attention, with interesting talks on Africa and curios from the same field, did some beautiful work with the large numbers of children on the grounds. The Assembly was fortunate in having Miss Peeples from Mobile, deaconess, present almost all the session.

Classes in Personal Work were under the direction of Dr. F. S. Parker, League Secretary from Nashville, whose daily talks were a wonderful help and inspiration.

Dr. W. F. Quillian, President of the Methodist Training School, Nashville, had charge of the Bible Study classes, using the life of Christ for outline, and presenting it in such a manner as to enable his hearers to grasp and take with them the great lessons of the greatest life.

The music, always an important factor, was under the management of Mr. Guice. His simple, gospel hymns used as solos were sermons in themselves. His classic selections on social occasions were sung in his characteristic pleasing style, showing always the possibilities of a wonderful voice, dedicated to the Master's service. His song recital Tuesday evening was a rare treat, its success being due, however, in no small measure to Miss Willie Anderson, accompanist, and Miss Elaine Griffin, reader.

On Friday evening, the introductory meeting in the tabernacle was led by Dr. Parker, at which time the members of the faculty were presented and briefly explained their plans of work.

Saturday evening was given over to a purely social, or "get-together meeting" under the direction of Mrs. McCleskey. A laughable feature in which old and young took part, being a "Mother Goose Match."

Sunday morning Dr. Quillian preached a thrilling and heart-searching sermon on the text, "Take heed unto thyself."

Dr. Parker's sermon Sunday night showed depth of research and personal consecration. His text was 1 John 1:8.

Monday evening, a large and attentive audience heard Dr. Parker's lecture on The Aesthetic in Religion. Wednesday evening, Dr. Quillian delivered an address on Life Decisions, his thrilling message being instantly blessed of God in the definite consecration to the Master's work of several young lives. They expressed their determination to submit themselves as volunteers to the work of carrying his gospel abroad and furthering his kingdom at home.

Dr. Quillian and Dr. Parker were given the evening hour on Thursday to present the cause of our Methodist Training School, an institution which is doing a most glorious work in preparing young Christian workers for all definite kinds of service, and the different departments of the Epworth League. One of the most delightful features from an intellectual standpoint was the lecture Friday night by Dr. W. H. La Prade. His subject was "Two Christian Poets," Sydney Lanier and Tennyson. Dr. La Prade's exceptional ability as one of our foremost pulpit orators is widely recognized, and his audience was charmed with his presentation of the beauty and influence of these two great lives. All the afternoons of the sessions were given over to recreations, of which the beautiful coast country offers such a variety. Swimming, fishing, boating, sailing and trolley parties made glad every minute of the time allotted to these enjoyable features. Moonlight sails were provided every night after service, all these entertainments being arranged by Rev. P. F. Daniels.

Vesper services were held each afternoon on the pier pavillion just at sunset. An inspiring atmosphere of spirituality characterized these services, and the glorious opportunity for contemplating God's wonders of sea and sky could not fail to lift up the hearts of his children in blessed fellowship and communion.

The last services were held on Sunday, Dr. Frank Parker preaching in the morning, and Mr. Sutton, of New Orleans conducting vesper services. On Monday, the old Camp Ground by the Gulf, which had been for nearly two weeks the scene of such hallowed associations, was deserted, save for the families and guests residing there for the summer.

This Seashore Assembly is a grand and glorious opportunity for the Methodists of Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana as a means of training and fitting for service the young life of the Church. God has wonderfully blessed it in the past, and will continue to bless it for his glory and name's sake. Those who have the responsibility of it are enthusiastic over the prospect for an unusually good meeting next year; and every means available for advertising the next session will be employed; for its exceptional advantages need only to be made known for its success to be assured.

At the last business meeting, the following officers were elected: President, Rev. C. N. Guice, of Mississippi; Vice-President, Miss Taylor, of Louisiana; Secretary, Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, of Mississippi; Treasurer, Miss Ellen Jackson, of Alabama. The Governing Board is as follows: Mrs. J. G. Spruell, Mrs. W. G. Moody, Miss Smith Holt, Miss Maybelle Marshall, Miss Daisy Brown, Miss Elsie Tucker, Miss Emma Clausette, Rev. Hugh Jamieson, and Miss Irma Weems. CORINNE AVERY.

In 1903 a law was enacted by the English Parliament which made it obligatory on the part of the land holders of Ireland to sell their lands to tenants at a fair price when said tenants desired to purchase them. The object of the law was to deliver Ireland from the grip of land barons. Since that time $625,000,000 has been paid by the tenants for land, and, according to a report made to the House of Commons recently, forced sales are now being made which involve the purchase of $300,000,000 worth more of land. The small farmers are being aided in making purchases by the National Debt Commission, which lends money at 3 per cent interest.

At the close of the Boxer rebellion in China, the Powers fined that nation $335,000,000. This enormous fine was distributed among the different leading powers of the world, England receiving as her portion $37,500,000. Leading publicists of Great Britain are now advocating spending half of the amount received from China on a great university to be built in Central China and presented to the Chinese government. Such an act on the part of England would be a worthy benefaction to that struggling Republic, encumbered as it is with ignorance and internal strife. Such a gift would also put to shame such nations as Russia, that took $95,000,000, and Germany, with her $70,000,000, and France, that received $50,500,000.

A STATEMENT, AND A PLEA.

Because of the urgent appeals coming from many of my most intimate friends among the preachers and people in Louisiana; because of the imperilled condition of the Orphanage to which I had given four years of my life's best effort and in which I had induced our people to invest large sums of money; because of the unsurpassed opportunity to educate and save many of the most needy and dependent of human kind; because of the exceptional class of children we now have in the home and the remarkable record they have already made in their school work and in the development of their characters; because of the providential gift of a home for the Superintendent's family by Mr. and Mrs. Lawson Higginbotham, members of my own congregation, and because of the unmistakable leadings of God's Spirit, I have consented to take up the work of the Orphanage again, and by unanimous action of the Board of Directors of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage I was again elected Superintendent of this Institution, to take active charge September 1st, following the resignation of Rev. P. H. Fontaine from said position.

Not as a matter of personal preference or choice have I done this, but here the path of duty seemed to lie. To this task my brethren have unanimously called me; to this work God directs me; and I have now pledged the rest of my active life to it, and I shall devote to its promotion the best of my strength and energy. As I stated to the Board of Directors: "As is obviously apparent, my purpose will be to give the Orphanage the full measure of my energy and intelligence, and to remain in the active service of the Home so long as I retain the sympathy and co-operation of the Louisiana Annual Conference, the preachers and people; and so long as I retain my health and strength."

Preparatory to taking up this work I have made a partial investigation of the conditions at the home. I found that the needs there are very great. On July 1, but a few cents over $3,000 had been contributed to this great cause since the last Conference—but slightly over half of the amount that had been contributed up to the same date last year, and not as much as was given to the Orphanage on Easter Sunday the year before. With monthly expenditures running close to $750, it can readily be seen how great the need is. Bills for current expenses could not be met, and three months of the dullest season of the year, when but little money comes in, were yet to pass through. With 75 children in the home (and others begging to come), to be fed, clothed and cared for; with matron's and helpers' salaries coming due; with grocery account, dry goods account, and running expenses to be met; with no summer vacation, no cessation of expenses, and no money coming in, the condition calls for the immediate help of every charitably inclined person in or out of the Church in Louisiana.

Please send what you can to Rev. P. H. Fontaine, Ruston, La., and do all you can to keep this worthy institution and the children we have undertaken to provide for, from suffering. I urge every preacher to take this cause up and do what he can to raise his assessment in full and send it in as soon as possible.

Praying God to continue to bless this great and worthy cause, and urging this call for help upon every Methodist in our State, I am,

Faithfully,
ROBT. W. VAUGHAN.

PERSONAL.

Miss C. McLemore, who has been the Secretary of the New Orleans Young Woman's Christian Association since its organization in 1911, left last week for Los Angeles, Cal., where she will accept a position with the Municipal Charities' Commission of that city. Her mother lives in Los Angeles, and her new work will enable her to be at home with the other members of her family. Miss McLemore's service as Y. W. C. A. Secretary in New Orleans is reported to have been highly satisfactory, and her decision not to continue longer in that capacity was generally regretted.

Mr. W. H. Patton, President of the Clarke County Sunday School Association, states that the recent convention held at Pachuta was a marked success, though there were 34 schools in the county unrepresented. Among the workers who participated in the exercises were Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, of Corinth; Miss Edwards, of Meridian; Miss Miley, of Bay Springs; Mr. McLemore, of Union; the Rev. Mr. Lightsey, of Montrose; and Brothers Long and Chisholm, and Rev. G. H. Ellis. Colorado, with 264 organized classes, has challenged Mississippi, which has 298, to compete with her for the leadership in the number of such classes, and has declared that she will soon outstrip the Magnolia State. Brother Patton makes an urgent appeal to Mississippians not to let this be done.

Under date of the 16th inst., from Boyle, Miss., Rev. L. W. Cain wrote us as follows: "There were 10 additions to the Church at Hollondale, Miss., as a result of our recent meeting there. I was assisted by Rev. W. D. Bass, of Corinth, Miss., who is a good preacher and successful evangelist. We have had this year a handsome increase in the membership of my charge, and the work is prospering. Our third quarterly conference was an inspiration. Brother Spragins preached two magnificent sermons. He is making a fine presiding elder. I am here this week with Brother J. J. Brooks in what seems to be a promising revival. I find that I am getting somewhat tired, but I yet have five meetings to hold between now and the third Sunday in October." We are pleased to hear of the success attending the labors of this faithful pastor, who is also gifted as a revivalist.

EARLY TIMES OF METHODISM IN NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. G. W. Bachman.

IV.

The year 1836 will ever be marked for the rapid development of the country and increase of population in the Chickasaw territory. Eleven new counties were organized, viz: Coahoma, Chickasaw, DeSoto, Itawamba, Lafayette, Marshall, Panola, Pontotoc, Tippah, Tishomingo, and Tunica.

The three mission charges of the Chickasaw Mission District previously noted had grown to such an extent that at the close of the year several self-supporting circuits were reported. In this progressive work of church extension the few itinerant preachers were greatly aided by the faithful local preachers who had moved into the country.

As a sample of many other similar records that doubtless were made we find the following in Lowry and McCardle's "History of Mississippi," page 560: "The Pontotoc Circuit of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was organized in 1836. Revs. Le Bonner and James Calloway supplied the work, R. Alexander being the presiding elder."

There are, however, two corrections to be made in this statement: (1) The word "South" should be eliminated, inasmuch as the date given was before the division of the Church; (2) the supply was Robert H. instead of "Le" Bonner.

Pontotoc Circuit was carved out of Chickasaw Circuit, Joseph P. Sneed being the preacher in charge.

At the session of the Mississippi Conference held in Vicksburg, in December, 1836, the following appointments were made:

Holly Springs District, D. O. Shattuck, P. E.; Holly Springs and Chulahoma, William Pearson; Holly Springs Circuit, R. S. Collins, William Neal; Salem, John W. Ellis; Oxford Mission, Wm. Craig; Pontotoc, John D. Neal; Grenada and Coffeeville, Thos. P. Davidson; Coffeeville Circuit, Edward R. Burton.

Thus we see that there was an entire readjustment of the work in this territory, and that to the district and pastoral charges were given names to designate their location. The preachers were a noble corps of earnest and faithful men who wrought well in the fields assigned them.

The presiding elder, D. O. Shattuck, was a man of rare ability in his day as a preacher and lawyer, for he was both, and served at one time in the dual capacity of presiding elder and circuit judge. We hope to be able to furnish a further sketch of him later.

Thomas P. Davidson, the preacher for Grenada and Coffeeville, was born in North Carolina on July 15, 1802. During his boyhood the family removed to the West, living in West Tennessee and Kentucky. His parents were Presbyterians and his religious training was Calvinistic, but when about grown, he joined the Methodist Church on probation, as was then the rule, and soon afterward obtained the witness of the new birth and the joy of salvation in Christ. He was licensed to preach in 1824 by Robert Paine (afterward Bishop), presiding elder of the Forked Deer District, Tennessee Conference; and in the November following was admitted into the travelling connection. After serving faithfully for ten years as a pioneer preacher in West Tennessee, he located on account of ill health and moved to Mississippi. He was readmitted into the Mississippi Conference in 1836 and appointed to the above named charge, which he served acceptably. At the close of the year he was again compelled to locate because of poor health. He lived several years in Grenada and Carrollton, serving efficiently as a local preacher, after which he removed to Memphis, and in 1856 was readmitted into the Memphis Conference, of which he continued to be a beloved and worthy member until his death in 1877. He spent several years in the "Mississippi Bottom District" (now the Delta) when it belonged to the Memphis Conference. It was the good fortune of the writer to be closely associated with Brother Davidson in 1863 on the Friar's Point Circuit, of which I was pastor and with which he was connected as a supernumerary. He then lived near where Coahoma is now located. We were much together in his home and in the work. He was a valuable helper of the young preacher both in counsel and service.

In 1865 he was my presiding elder for eight months, having been appointed to fill a vacancy on the Mississippi Bottom District, in which office he was continued the following year and rendered faithful service. He was a good average preacher, but his greatest force was in exhortation, an essential part of the gospel ministry, but which seems, in these latter days, to be "a lost art" with many. He often said of himself, that in licensing him to preach a good exhorter was spoiled.

In a company of preachers en route to Conference the question was asked: "Uncle Tommie (as he was familiarly called), in your preaching do you ever get in the 'brush?'" "Oh, yes, frequently." "Well, what do you then do?" His prompt answer was, "I set fire and burn out."

It would be well for some preachers of the present age to learn that lesson.

It has been previously stated that Joseph P. Sneed served the Tallahatchie Mission in 1835 and the Chickasaw Circuit in 1836. He was born in Tennessee in 1804; was licensed to preach and admitted into the Mississippi Conference in 1829, in which he served various charges until 1838, when he was sent from the Conference held at Grenada to the Texas Mission District and appointed to Brazoria. He was a charter member of the Texas Conference, which was organized on December 25, 1840, and continued an honored member of the same until his triumphant death on November 1, 1881, near Cameron, Milan County, Texas. (See Memoir, Texas Conference Minutes, 1882.)

THE VANDERBILT BOARD OF TRUST.

"If there is a patient, courteous, considerate, able and godly company of men on the earth, that company is found in the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University."—J. R. Bingham, (Trustee).

"There will be no trouble about this matter so long as the present Board of Trust remains in control. For the good of the University and of the whole South let us hope that this may be forever."—J. H. Kirkland, (Chancellor and Trustee).

A congressman seeking re-election, in an open air campaign speech was eulogizing his record in Congress. Two darkies passing, stopped to listen. After a while one of them said, "Who is dat?" The other replied, "I dunno, but he sho do highly recommend hisself."

It is said of Mr. Taft that he made a good President but that as a politician he is a failure. That there is truth in the statement is evidenced by the fact of his resigning his place on the Board of Trust of Yale when he was elected to a professorship in that University. If at any time he desires to play the game of university politics he will find that he has thrown away a powerful advantage. The real demagogue knows how to pull every string from that of the purse of the millionaire to a place on the Board that employs him; especially does he know how to "play to the grand stand" through the secular press.

"From the fatuous leadership of the Bishops, good Lord deliver us."—J. R. Bingham.

We Methodist people are in a dilemma. The majority of the Trustees make no secret of the fact that they are trying to take our property from us. On the other hand they tell us that the leadership of the men who are trying to defend our rights is "fatuous."

Whither shall we go? For myself I shall follow the leadership of the men who are trying, under the orders of the General Conference, to defend my rights even though "fatuously," in preference to those who "courteously, considerately and ably are "trying to despoil me."

THE INDICATOR OF DOUBT.

From the first pair in the garden of Eden down to the present day theologue, the instigator of doubt is the Devil. Eve did not know it was the Devil. She thought it came from an innocent source. The theologue doesn't know it's the Devil. He thinks it is from his superior intellect.

The doubt is the same in all ages. Its essence is in discrediting God's Word. To Eve the Word of God was discredited in a very neat and cunning way. Eve set up her judgment against God's Word and ruined a world. The insinuating doubt comes by putting a liberal construction on what God has said. "There is no hell." The idea is, God is merely scaring you, if he says there is one. But by a liberal construction of the Bible he does not say there is a hell. "Christ was not really born of a virgin." "He did not really rise from the dead in bodily form." "The Bible is not really to be believed in all its statements." "We have to exercise our human judment in eliminating from the Bible what is unworthy of acceptance." From beginning to end it's the same old instigator at work. The sad part of it all is the fact that he seduces good people.—Texas Christian Advocate.

A CHILD'S PRAYER.

Alice Green, in Zion's Herald.

Lord, be with Thy child to-day,
While at home, at school, at play;
Let no wrong or unkind word
From my lips this day be heard;
Make me gentle, helpful, true,
In all I think, or say, or do;
Fill my heart with love to Thee,
For all Thy goodness unto me.
AMEN.

THE FLYING FROG OF JAVA.

The Javanese frog is a creature measuring between fifteen and twenty-five inches. The skin of its back is pale blue and by night looks dark green or olive brown. The frog remains motionless during the day, with eyes sheltered from the light and with belly up, clinging to its support by adhesive cushions and by its belly, which is provided with a sticky covering, and it is hardly distinguishable from the objects that surround it. At nightfall it begins its hunt for the mammoth crickets on which it feeds, making leaps covering seven feet of ground. During the leap the play of lungs filled with air swells its body. To descend from a height it spreads wide its claws and, dropping, rests upon its feet.—Leslie's Weekly.

THE FINISHING TOUCH.

It was not a very pleasant face that Walter brought when he came to papa for the finishing touches of his dress.

"There, everything is on now,"

"Why no, son!" said papa soberly, "you haven't put everything on yet."

Walter carefully inspected his clothes, from the tips of his small toes to the broad collar about his neck. He could find nothing wanting.

"You haven't put your smile on yet," said papa, with the tiny wrinkles beginning to creep about his own eyes. "Put it on, Walter, and I'll button it up for you."

And Walter began then and there to put it on. And he never really calls himself dressed for the day until he has put on a sunny face.

Have any young American's smiles been forgotten in the morning "getting ready?" If so, no amount of fresh collars and new neckties and gay hair ribbons can ever take their place. The only really safe way is to put the smile on the very first thing. Besides, the other things will go on better if you do.—Central Christian Advocate.

A FOREIGNER'S SPELLING LESSON.

One foreigner gives the following description of his first lesson in an English class:

We have been given a book to learn the letters. I arrive at the class, having learned them perfectly.

Soon in the course of the lesson, we have the word l-o-w. "Love," I pronounce it, thinking the w has the sound of v.

"No; it is pronounced 'lo'" says the teacher.

"Then why is the w there?" I inquire, mystified.

"It is there because that is the way the word is spelled," responds the teacher; "but it is silent. Never mind why; it is sufficient to know that it is there."

Before long we come to n-o-w.

"Pronounce it," says the teacher.

"No," I reply.

"Why will you not?" she asks me.

It is some time before she understands that I am trying to pronounce the word when I say "no." Then she declared that although l-o-w is lo, n-o-w is now.

"If you want to make it no," she explains, kindly, "you put k before it."

You may believe I am bewildered. However, I memorize that n-o-w is now. The next word is s-n-o-w. I pronounce it like now with an s before it. The teacher laughs. The w is again become silent, apparently for no reason, and the word is called sno.

But that is not all. Later, I find that if you drop the n from snow, you can pronounce it whichever way you like!—Youth's Companion.

REV. J. B. STONE.

On the forenoon of June 16, a sad message came to me, over the telephone, calling me to Winona, Miss., to assist in the funeral service of Rev. J. B. Stone. He died at two o'clock, in the early morning of the same day, at Amory, Miss. His health, feeble for some years, was so much so of late, that his death was not a surprise to his children and friends. The funeral service was held in the Methodist Church at Winona, conducted by the pastor, Rev. O. W. Bradley, assisted by Rev. John Ritchey, Rev. B. P. Jaco and the writer. With an appropriate concluding service the body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Winona.

There had long existed a close and brotherly friendship between Brother Stone and myself. It was in accordance with his long expressed wish that I was present, and had a part in the service at his funeral. We had both entered the active ministry in the Old Alabama Conference. When the North Mississippi Conference was organized in 1870, we both became charter members of it. Our families were near neighbors for some years at Verona, Miss., and for four years of this time he was my faithful presiding elder and helpful co-laborer. In his social life, he was affable, pleasant and companionable. In his public walk and ministrations, he commanded the respect and won the confidence of those among whom he lived and labored. To his intimate friends, the world seems sadder and lonelier since his passing away, and deep sorrow rests upon the hearts of his stricken children and kindred.

Joseph Boyd Stone was born in Vernon District, South Carolina, December, 1831. He moved with his father to Alabama, where he was converted, when ten years old—moving afterwards into Mississippi.

At the age of eighteen years Brother Stone was a class leader at Old Antioch Church in Monroe County. In his twentieth year, he became a licensed exhorter. He was licensed to preach in 1856, and was admitted as a probationer into the Alabama Conference at Tuskegee, Bishop Pierce presiding.

Brother Stone was twice married. In 1857 he was wedded to Miss Rebecca J. Mosely, a beautiful and excellent young lady. She died in 1864, leaving a daughter, who became the wife of Mr. E. E. Buder, of Columbus, Miss. Two children (grandchildren of Rev. J. B. Stone) blessed the Buder marriage—George Stone Buder, and Bessie Curtis Buder. The latter, an infant of nine days at the death of the mother, was given to the care of Mrs. M. E. Shattuck, and lives, a ray of sunshine and a blessing to her foster-mother, Mrs. Shattuck, who is connected with the Industrial Institute and College at Columbus, Miss.

His second marriage was to Miss Mary B. Koger, a daughter of the late Rev. T. J. Koger. She was a devout, cultured, Christian woman. She preceded her husband by some years to the heavenly home, as we humbly trust. Her body sleeps in the cemetery at Winona. Five children blessed the second marriage of Brother Stone, one of whom, a daughter, died in childhood. Seven grandchildren, and the four following named children survive him: Mr. J. K. Stone, of St. Louis; Mrs. Dowden Rogers, of Texas; Mrs. J. B. Small, of Winona, and Mrs. John Kirk, of Amory.

As a Christian minister, Rev. Joseph B. Stone was abundant in labors, faithful, and efficient. He shunned no toil and was ever true to his high and holy calling. His preaching was evangelistic, and his sermons were delivered with such readiness and fluency of speech and such earnestness of spirit and manner, as always caught and held the attention of his congregation.

We cannot estimate the value, nor measure the influence for good, in such a ministry as that of Brother Stone—the multitudes of Christians comforted and blessed, the souls that were saved, the churches that were edified and strengthened—but his record is on high. Nor can we question but that his faithful, earnest ministry, extending from the time of its organization through so many years, has contributed largely to make the North Mississippi Conference what it is to-day.

The appointments served by Brother Stone show an important and extensive field of labor. He was twenty-one years a presiding elder. His first appointment in the Alabama Conference was that of junior preacher on the Pickens Circuit. He served the Macon District in 1870, the year the North Mississippi Conference was organized. In this Conference (the North Mississippi) the Districts served by him (there being a change or two in name and in part, perhaps, of territory) were the following: Aberdeen, Corinth, Holly Springs, and Winona. Among other charges served by him were the Crawford and Brookville Circuits, the Tupelo and Okolona Station, and the Verona and Tupelo Station. Sometime in 1863, he entered the Confederate Army as Chaplain of the 43d Mississippi Regiment and filled this position until the close of the war. In 1899-1900, he was on the Winona Circuit, his last pastoral charge. At the close of 1900, he obtained a supperannuate relation, being physically unable to do effective work. In this relation, he continued to the close of his life.

In the New Orleans Christian Advocate of June 19, Dr. R. A. Meek, in making announcement of Brother Stone's death, paid a tender and high tribute to the character and worth of our beloved and ascended brother. "This announcement" he said, "will touch with sadness many hearts and homes. * * * Brother Stone was for many years, one of the most prominent and active Methodist ministers of North Mississippi, filling with marked acceptability many of the leading appointments of his Conference. * * * He was a model presiding elder. * * * He was a man of deep piety, and both his private and public ministrations were helpful and strengthening. He had been on the superannuate list for a number of years; and his closing days were peaceful and radiant with light. He kept the faith, and we doubt not that he has now obtained the promised crown."

PRESS THE BATTLE.

This is the revival season in our rural charges which compose far the larger part of our patronizing territory. Within the next six weeks a large number of meetings will be held in Louisiana and Mississippi, and probably more preaching will be done than in any other period of equal length during the year. We feel a deep interest in this evangelistic work, and we pray that it may be crowned with much success. Its importance could hardly be overestimated. This is the season of ingathering, and usually also the spiritual life of the churches is greatly quickened. To be sure, some of those who make new pledges will grow cold, and possibly backslide, but many will be permanently benefited and made stronger for the Master's work by these special services. So let the campaign for precious souls be energetically pressed. No church should be allowed to go without at least a few days' meeting. Even the best Christians are helped by a time of general refreshing from the presence of the Lord. It is sometimes charged that the Methodist Church is ceasing to be the great evangelistic force that she formerly was and that some of the other denominations now bid fair to outstrip her in the work of soul-winning. We think this statement is an exaggerated one, but undoubtedly it behooves us to be up and doing, lest some other Church should take our crown. Men are more than things, and whatever else it may do, when a denomination ceases to carry spiritual life into the hearts and homes of the people, its glory has departed. The noblest service that can be rendered on earth is to lead the unsaved to Christ, who is able to do for them "exceeding abundantly above all we can ask or think."

A STATEMENT.

A correspondent, in an offered communication which we declined to publish because of its offensive tone, claims that in our recent strictures on the "General Statement" which appeared in the Vanderbilt Bulletin, or Catalogue, of last February we did the present Vanderbilt Board of Trust an injustice. It will be remembered that we commented vigorously upon the fact that in this "Statement," which purports to be of a historical character, the name of the Church nowhere appears and that nothing she has done for the University is mentioned. Our correspondent, though not denying the correctness of our assertion, declares that this "General Statement" was prepared when the Board of Trust was dominated by Bishop McTyeire and Chancellor Garland, whose loyalty to the Church was beyond question, meaning, of course, to charge that our suspiciousness led us into error and that the present Vanderbilt authorities have been misrepresented.

This explanation would be all right if the facts only sustained it, but they do not. This "General Statement," in anything like its full and present form (there are 18 pages of it), could not possibly have existed in the time of Bishop McTyeire and Chancellor Garland, for the reason that late events are mentioned upon every page and that tell-tale figures of recent date peep out from nearly every paragraph. If any one has the least doubt on the subject, let him examine for himself this interesting piece of composition and see. The day of the prophets is past, and history, unless it be wholly fictitious, cannot be written before it is made. "Higher Criticism" in this instance fully sustains the Editor; and we suppose that, in consequence, we shall have to think better of it in the days to come.

Our purpose in making these remarks, after having declined the discourteous article offered us, is that we may safeguard ourself as much as possible from private misrepresentation.

PRIZE-FIGHTING IN NEW ORLEANS.

Of late prize fighting is getting to be very common in New Orleans. Outlawed nearly everywhere else, this barbaric and brutal practice is apparently growing in favor here. And the favorite time for pulling off these outrageous contests seems to be the Christian Sabbath. It is now not uncommon to see flaming placards on the streets announcing that such a bout "will take place next Sunday," with the prices of seats ranging from $1, upward. Of course, it is claimed that these matches are mere boxing contests, but in reality they are prize fights—nothing more nor less. According to reports, some of the participants in them have been seriously injured, and much disorder prevailed while they were punching and beating one another.

The latest affair of this kind is scheduled to take place in the New Westside Atheletic Club, in McDonoghville, next Sunday. It is to be a 20-round contest for the welter-weight championship of the world, and that it will exert a wide-reaching demoralizing influence there is not the slightest doubt. We understand that Gov. Hall will be asked to exert his authority to stop this fight, and we sincerely hope that he will do so. Why should he not? Other Governors have interfered to protect the people from such indecent exhibitions, and we can see no reason why he should not follow their good example. So far as we know, Gov. Hall's administration has been conducted upon a high plane and merits the approval of the Christian people of the State; and we are inclined to believe that if this matter is brought properly to his attention, he will be heard from on the subject. But whatever he may do, the time has surely come when the best citizens of New Orleans and the surrounding country should speak out vigorously against these cruel outrages. They can stop them if they only will work together energetically and persistently to do so. Let us see that Louisiana is not disgraced any longer by these barbaric slugging matches, which most of the other commonwealths of the Nation have forbidden.

NEED TO USE THE MEASURING ROD.

Having succeeded in sucuring more than $1,000,000 for the endowment of the Southern Methodist University at Dallas, the Methodists of the Lone Star State are talking of setting out to raise another $1,000,000 for the same purpose. They are furthermore planning to launch a movement to erect a great sanitarium, or hospital, to cost not less than $250,000, which they expect also to locate in Dallas, connecting it with the Medical Department of their University. Great is Texas Methodism!

We are not a prophet, but we venture the prediction that if the Trustees of Vanderbilt University succeed in wresting that institution from the Church, within two or three decades the Southern Methodist University will be found in every respect, unless it should be in mere money matters, far in advance of it. Mr. Carnegie and others like him may heavily endow an institution of learning, but they cannot give it a large constituency and patronage. It takes vastly more than money and equipment to constitute a great college or university. Independent educational plants, though they may be rich, usually have a hard struggle to maintain a decent existence. We could easily adduce conspicuous illustrations of this fact, if we cared to do so.

And, incidentally, we will add that it is somewhat amusing to hear people talking as if the loss of the $1,000,000 offered by Mr. Carnegie would impoverish the Southern Methodist Church. Why, her property holdings are probably not far short of $300,000,000, and the wealth of her loyal and devoted members, if footed up, would make the whole of Mr. Carnegie's fortune look small. The little city on the Cumberland and the Vanderbilt Board of Trust, though re-enforced by their new-found ally, are far too weak and insignificant to swerve the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by one hair's breadth from her divinely appointed course of discipling and teaching the nations. Such a thing is about as reasonable as it would be to expect to see some of the little meteors circling around the sun deflect that great luminary from its mighty orbit, and cause it to make them obeisance.

Our advice to the Vanderbilt Trustees and to the citizens of Nashville who are given to uttering such great swelling words, is to modify their speech and talk somewhat more in proportion to their size and the magnitude of the interest which they fancy they represent.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. W. E. Thomas, pastor of the Second Church of New Orleans, is now in Nashville, Tenn., to which place he was called last week on account of the illness of a relative.

Rev. W. H. Lewis, the popular pastor of the Brookhaven (Miss.) church, has been absent from his pulpit assisting in a revival meeting at Meadville, Miss. During his absence his pulpit was filled by Rev. Hugh Germany.

Potts Camp, Miss., has lately had a gracious revival season in which Rev. E. A. Tucker, of Milan, Tenn., did the preaching. Rev. J. G. Johnson, the pastor, will tell our readers more of this interesting meeting in the next issue of the Advocate.

Rev. J. G. Snelling, of New Orleans, and Rev. J. B. Williams, of Clinton, La., have been announced as the preachers for the Bluff Creek camp meeting, which will be held at the Bluff Creek Camp Ground, four miles from Grangeville, La., beginning August 15.

Rev. J. G. Sloan, our pastor at Slidell, La., with two of his sons, spent last Saturday in New Orleans, and while here paid the Advocate office an appreciated call. His report of his work at Slidell was encouraging, and he expressed himself as thinking it may be wise to make Slidell a station appointment next year.

From Boyce City, Texas, under date of July 23, Rev. W. L. Graves, our pastor at Iuka, Miss., wrote us as follows: "Rev. W. M. McIntosh and I are in a great revival at this place. There have been about 50 conversions up to this time, and the meeting increases daily in power and results. This is a great country."

Rev. T. H. Porter, of Olive Branch, Miss., who on another page gives us an account of a successful revival recently held in his charge, sends us the following additional note concerning it: "I wrote you yesterday about our meeting here, stating that we had had 10 accessions on profession of faith and 2 by certificate. Since then we have received 3 more by certificate, making 15 in all." We are pleased to hear of this goodly ingathering at Olive Branch.

The Lincoln County Times (Brookhaven, Miss.) stated last week that Mrs. Bessie Lipscomb had passed through Brookhaven on her way to Natc[illegible]o enter a sanitarium for the purpose of undergoing a very serious operation. We are sorry to learn of the ill health of this brilliant woman, who was but recently honored by being elected Home Base Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society of our Church, and we trust that she may soon be able to return to the work to which the Church has called her.

Rev. L. A. Sims, who graduated from Centenary College in June, and Miss Isabell Ladell Johnston, of Shreveport, La., were united in marriage on June 16, at the home of the bride, by Rev. H. W. Cudd. The bride is one of the most accomplished young ladies of Shreveport, and belongs to one of the most prominent families of Northwest Louisiana. The groom is a member of the Louisiana Conference, and has been successful as a student, a teacher, and a pastor. We extend to the happy couple congratulations and best wishes.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., of the Carriere (Miss.) charge, and Rev. J. W. Campbell, his brother-in-law, who is a local preacher residing at Raymond, Miss., passed through New Orleans last Tuesday and paid our office an appreciated call. Brother Lewis has just closed a very successful revival meeting at Picayune, Miss., in which he was assisted by Brother Campbell. The meeting resulted in about 20 conversions and 8 accessions to the Church. Brother Campbell will also help Brother Lewis in meetings to be held at Nicholson and McNeil.

We received a post card from Rev. H. R. Singleton last week, and it bore the tidings that he and Sister Singleton are having a most delightful time on their European trip. The post-card was dated July 15 and postmarked at Zurich, Switzerland, where the World's Sunday School Convention was in session. New Orleans Methodists have missed Brother Singleton since his absence from the city, but those who are acquainted with the character of work that he has done in the Louisiana Conference are sure that he has well earned the delightful trip which he is now taking.

A note from Brother S. B. White, of West Point, Miss., reads as follows. "Our local pastor, Rev. E. S. Lewis, has just been operated on for gall stones at a local infirmary. He stood the operation well, but, of course, we are very anxious about him." We greatly regret to be informed of Brother Lewis' illness, and we pray that he have a speedy and complete recovery. He is one of the best loved ministers that we know, and his friends throughout the North Mississippi Conference will not cease to feel much solicitude concerning him until they know that all danger is passed.

Rev. J. L. Sutton, of New Orleans, preached at Handsboro, Miss., last Sunday.

Rev. T. J. Durrett is conducting a series of revival services at McCondy, Miss., this week. He is being assisted by Rev. J. H. Holder.

We acknowledge our indebtedness to Rev. F. R. Power, pastor of the Logansport (La.) charge, for a club of nine subscribers, sent in some days ago. We greatly appreciate his kindness in looking after the interests of the Advocate.

Rev. W. F. McCrory, of Bell City, La., says: "My work is progressing nicely. I have held two meetings at mission points with good success. We will begin our meetings at Bell City on August 3. Rev. C. C. Weir, of Morgan City, La., will do the preaching."

Read Rev. R. W. Vaughan's ringing appeal for the Louisiana Orphanage which appears in this week's Advocate. This clarion call ought to stir the Methodists of Louisiana to action in every pastoral charge in the State. Lend a hand at once, brother; it is needed.

A movement is under way to build a new parsonage at Okolona, Miss. It is expected that the new house will cost between $2500 and $3000; and of this amount about $1800 has been secured. Okolona is fast taking rank as one of the first appointments of the North Mississippi Conference.

Brother K. T. Moore, a lay member of our Broad Street Church of Hattiesburg, Miss., in a letter to our office, says: "Brother W. E. Harrison is doing us fine work and is loved by all." As will be remembered, Brother Harrison recently succeeded Rev. J. L. Neill as the pastor of this congregation.

Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, our genial and popular pastor at Columbia, Miss., favored us with an additional club of subscribers last week. The neat check which he enclosed was a most refreshing sight in this season of financial dearth. We assure Brother Sharbrough of our hearty appreciation of his good work for the Advocate.

From Georgetown, Miss., under date of July 28, Rev. T. J. Norsworthy writes: "On yesterday we began a meeting here with that wide-awake pastor, Rev. J. V. Bennett. Brother Bennett had things in readiness for this special series of services, and the outlook is propitious for a successful revival. We shall be here for several days."

Rev. B. F. Lewis, of Crystal Springs, Miss., who is the Chaplain of the Third Regiment of the Mississippi National Guard, has been spending some time with the soldier boys of the Magnolia State at their encampment near Biloxi, Miss. He filled the pulpit of the First Methodist Church in that city last Sunday morning, delivering an instructive and helpful sermon.

From the Wesleyan Christian Advocate of July 25, we take the following: "Dr. H. M. DuBose, pastor of the First Methodist Church of this city (Atlanta), left a few days ago for a cooler climate and some rest in Virginia. We do not believe there is a harder-working preacher in our connection than this ex-connectional officer who now delights in the work of the pastorate."

The Commencement Sermon of the Louisiana Industrial Institute at Ruston was preached last Sunday by Rev. W. W. Holmes. The audience was a great one, and the discourse was eloquent and appropriate. Brother Holmes is one of the growing young ministers of this section. He is a graduate of Millsaps College and of the Theological Department of Vanderbilt University.

Brother J. T. Means, of Ida, La., writes that the people of that community have been blessed with a season of spiritual refreshing. Rev. C. F. Staples, the pastor, had with him in the services Rev. D. A. Morris, of Mount Vernon, Ohio, whose sermons and work were much appreciated. A more extended account of this revival, written by Brother Means, will be published next week.

Rev. J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College, reported some days ago the largest registration for the next session that that institution has ever had so early in the season. The income of the College last year was $2000 in excess of any previous year; $3000 are being spent on the heating plant and other improvements this summer. Beyond any question, this school is on the up-grade.

Dr. Franklin N. Parker filled the pulpit at the Seashore Camp Ground last Sunday at 11 a. m., and gave his hearers a message which they will long remember. The Picayune reported this able and impressive discourse at considerable length. Though now filling a chair in Trinity College, at Durham, N. C., a position for which he is eminently fitted, Dr. Parker is still a beloved member of the Louisiana Conference.

Dr. Theodore Copeland, of St. Louis, in a note written last Saturday, says: "Bishop Hoss spent part of this week with me. I have never seen him looking so well, nor have I ever been with him when he seemed more happy. He is now with his son, Embree, at Galbraith Springs, Tenn." This is, indeed, good news. The whole Church rejoices to know that the Bishop seems to be regaining his health and strength.

Mrs. Mattie Foster, of Quitman, Texas, in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, takes time to express her appreciation of it. She also reports that her pastor, Rev. J. C. Huddleston, has recently held in her community a very successful revival in which the preaching, except one sermon by the pastor himself, was done by Rev. B. J. Ashburn, of the Northwest Texas Conference. Nine persons were recived into the Church.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, our efficient pastor at Mendenhall, Miss., has recently held two profitable meetings in his charge, one at Pinola, and the other Bethany, doing the preaching himself. It was thought that there were scarcely any outside of the Church at these places, but there were 7 additions to the membership of the two congregations. Those belonging to the Church were much quickened spiritually by the services.

Dr. A. F. Watkins spent last Sunday in Vicksburg, preaching at Crawford Street Church at the morning hour and at Washington Street in the evening. Writing of his visit to the Hill City, Rev. W. H. Saunders says: "No man in the Mississippi Conference has more friends in Vicksburg than Dr. Watkins; nor are they confined to the Methodist Church. He is moving things for a grand opening at Millsaps this fall, and we may look for a full school when the time comes."

The union revival recently conducted in Okolona, Miss., by Rev. W. M. McIntosh was a great success. Writing of it in his local paper, our pastor in that city, Rev. J. H. Holder, says: "It is impossible to estimate the results of this meeting. Our whole town received a spiritual uplift. All our churches felt its power. There were over a hundred conversions." Ninety-nine persons pledged themselves to join the various Churches. Of these, 44 applied for membership in the Methodist Church.

Rev. F. S. Parker, of Nashville, Tenn., who for some days had been attending the Seashore Epworth League Assembly, at the Seashore Camp Ground, was in New Orleans last week, and favored the Advocate office with a call. The Editor regrets that he was not in at the time and that he missed the pleasure of seeing this gifted leader of our Epworth League forces. Dr. Parker's work at the Seashore Assembly this year is reported to have been of a very high order, and it was much appreciated by all in attendance.

Writing from Memphis, on July 25, Rev. H. M. Ellis, the hustling Field Secretary of the Bluff City Methodist Hospital, says: "I am off to-morrow for a couple of weeks in Arkansas. The summer heat and vacation habit are interfering with collections for our hospital enterprise, but the cause is winning favor all the time. The apportionments have been accepted by all the districts were presented, and the plans for our campaign are well laid." We are happy to receive this cheering message. This commendable enterprise deserves to succeed, and it will do so if the brethren will give Brother Ellis their hearty co-operation.

We are grateful to our esteemed Brother W. H. Emerson, of Pachuta, Miss., whom formerly we knew at Starkville, Miss., for a kindly note commending the Advocate, which was received last week. Brother Emerson, who ever since we have been acquainted with him has been a notably active and useful layman, is now a local preacher in our Church, and preaches quite regularly, and assists in special meetings when he finds it possible to do so. Sister Emerson is also a Christian of deep spirituality and is fine help in a revival. These choice workers have some time unengaged this fall and summer, and would be pleased to assist any of our pastors who may desire their services.

In a personal note to the Editor, Rev. R. W. Vaughan, who has been serving the Mer Rouge (La.) charge, but who has again been chosen to take charge of the Louisiana Orphanage, at Ruston, La., says: "I shall leave our good people here with reluctance. They received me most cordially and have been most generous in the treatment accorded me. They have done all that was possible for our comfort, having in a manner rebuilt the parsonage, making it one of the neatest and most convenient in the Conference, and have in a thousand ways shown their devotion to the Church and her servants. I regret the necessity for this change, but feel that this call of the Master cannot be set aside, whatever in the way of sacrifice it may cost me and mine."

Rev. J. D. Simpson, of Pickens, Miss., writes: "We have just closed a good meeting at Richland which was begun last Sunday (July 20) by Brother W. S. Shipman, who gave us three soul-stirring sermons. The people fell much in love with him. Dr. H. G. Henderson, of Lexington, came to us Monday and preached until Thursday night. He had formerly been with us at Pickens, which is near-by, but he delivered at Richland a new line of sermons altogether, preaching with great power and effectiveness. His work both in the pulpit and the homes of our people would be hard for any man to surpass. The congregations were said to be the largest seen there in many years. Four were received into the Church on profession of faith." May God bless Brother Shipman and Dr. Henderson and all others who contributed to the success of this good meeting.

Two weeks ago what has proven to be a great revival meeting was started at the First Methodist Church of New Orleans. Mr. Charles McGehee, a student in the theological department of Vanderbilt University, and Rev. Hugh Jamieson, junior pastor of First Church, began the meeting and conducted it for a few nights. No special effort was made to secure the co-operation of the members of the Church, but the meeting was run more as a mission, the services being held in the basement of the building. The crowds increased; other workers joined heart and soul in the work; Dr. J. W. Moore, the pastor, assumed charge of the preaching, and Mr. J. K. Mann also lent his assistance as a speaker. Thus far there have been 25 conversions, and about 15 have asked for membership in the Church. Among the converts are four adults who had been stanch members of the Roman Catholic Church. The meeting is yet in progress.

SOME NOTES FROM DURANT DISTRICT.

Rev. E. C. Newbern has been relieved of the pastorate of the Ebenezer Circuit at his request, and Rev. G. H. Frazier, of Rio, La., will take his place.

Dr. H. G. Henderson, the pastor at Lexington, reports his missionary assessments paid, and $1500 in the bank and $1000 subscribed for the enlargement of his church. He serves a fine people.

Rev. J. F. Owens, the pastor at High Point, knows how to get up a missionary program to hold a Center Ridge congregation of 500 or 600 people for two and a half hours on such a day as July 6, and then turn the Elder loose on them for a collection. They may have paid to get out, but pay they did. They gave to foreign missions almost as much as the entire circuit paid for everything last year. Owens is going some.

Durant reported at the third quarterly Conference all the mission claims paid. Dr. Moss' people say that he is a fine preacher. He is winding up his fourth year in his present charge in fine shape.

Rev. S. B. Myers will leave Louisville, after a most popular four years' pastorate, almost, if not quite, a $1200 sation.

The average salary of the preachers of the M. E. Church, South, for the year 1912 is stated to have been $796, a gain of $65 over that of four years ago. This does not include the rental value of the parsonages occupied by the preachers; if this is added, the average is raised to $959. In the Methodist Episcopal Church, including parsonage rentals, the average salary is $988.

MY HOPE AT SEVENTY-SIX.

By Rev. J. A. Parker, D. D.

My day of life will soon have past,
The sun is going down;
And when I'm freed from earth, at last,
I hope to wear a crown.

This hope to me by Christ is given,
Through crucial pains he bore;
And when I reach the home in heaven,
That crown he will bestow.

Let care and toil be my store,
If such reward be given;
That when I reach the golden shore,
I'll wear a crown in heaven.

If life to me be toil and strife
Or riches and renown,
I'd gladly yield this mortal life
To wear a starry crown.

I'll struggle onward, up the hill,
Though foes would bear me down;
And strive to do my Father's will,
That I may wear a crown.

Then, I the victor's song may sing
In praise for victory won,
And gloryfy my Lord the King
For all that he has done.

Chorus:
Starry crowns! Glory crowns!
Ordained for saints to wear;
I'll share those starry crowns in heaven
And reign with Jesus there!

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, our beloved friend and fellow worker, Mrs. Susan Thompson Turner, has been removed from us by death, and we shall look upon her face no more, we, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Ellisville, Miss., desire to bear loving tribute to her worth and memory. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we remember with gratitude and love her life-long devotion to every good cause, and her unselfish activity in every work designed to advance the Master's kingdom in the world.
2. We remember with pleasure her long and useful life, during which she was a loving helper to her husband, the late Rev. M. G. Turner, who was so distinguished as a soldier and who was honored in civil life. And we rejoice that, by her wisdom and in the providence of God, she was enabled to train her children for usefulness and honor in the world.
3. It will always be pleasing to us to hold in memory her deep interest in the cause of missions, and in everything pertaining to this church, of which she was so long a member.
4. We rejoice in her useful life, and its quiet close, and in the hope we have that our dear sister and friend has entered into the unbroken rest of the people of God.
5. That these resolutions be published in the Christian Advocate, the county paper, a copy sent to the sorrowing family, and that they be spread upon the minutes of the society.

Signed by: Mrs. N. E. Craig, Mrs. A. R. Moody, Mrs. T. W. Hand, Committee.

BLUFF CREEK CAMP MEETING.

The twenty-fourth annual camp meeting of the Bluff Creek Camp Meeting Association will be held from Friday evening, Aug. 15, to Sunday evening, Aug. 24. The services will be conducted by the pastors of associated circuits, assisted by Rev. J. G. Snelling, of New Orleans, and Rev. J. B. Williams, of Clinton, and visiting ministers. Free entertainment for all visiting ministers will be provided by the management. The most accessible railroad stations are Clinton (11 miles distant) and Grangeville (4 miles distant), from which places conveyance to the grounds may be obtained. Ample hotel accommodations may be had by all, and horses and vehicles will be well cared for. There will be plenty of tents for rent. The water is good and every natural accommodation is at hand to make the stay of the campers pleasant. Let all who will, come. We extend a cordial invitation to all ministers to attend. For further information, address President O. E. Townsend, Oaknolia, La., or Secretary W. L. Haney, Clinton, La.

St. Tammany Charge, La. Conference.

On July 18, we closed a great revival meeting at Tailsheek, La. Rev. Thos. J. Norsworthy did the preaching, and the singing was led by Mr. Robt. Harmon, of Yazoo City, Miss. The preaching was of a high order—sane and logical. Brother Norsworthy is a good revivalist and an excellent preacher. His sermons are very interesting and edifying. While he did not fear to call a spade a spade, no one became offended at his preaching, and despite the unusually hot weather the crowds were large at every night service. I hope that Brother Norsworthy will see his way clear to come back into our Conference next December, and that our Mission Board will make him Conference evangelist. Very few are better fitted for this work. As a result of this meeting we had 15 to unite with our Church and several others have expressed a desire to join later. Our work on the St. Tammany charge is progressing very nicely. I closed a meeting at Lacombe, La., on July 5. There were several conversions and two to unite with our Church.—T. V. Peters, P. C.

THE EDITOR'S COURSE COMMENDED.

(Resolutions adopted by the Meridian, Miss., District Conference.)

With apparent hurtful innovations trying upon every hand to insidiously gain entrance into our Church, home and schools, and believing in the midst of these perilous times our God to be stronger than the devil, and that he will honor prayer and faithful leadership, be it

Resolved, That with deepest gratitude we note the alertness and boldness of Rev. R. A. Meek, Editor of our Annual Conference organ, The New Orleans Christian Advocate, in warning against and condemning theatricals, card-playing, dancing and kindred diversions that cannot be taken, according to our Discipline, in the name of the Lord.

Resolved, further, That we endorse and pledge him our prayers and continual support.

OLIVE BRANCH, MISS.

We have just closed an eight days' meeting at this place, resulting in a revival and ten accessions to the Church on profession of faith and two by certificate. We were assisted by Rev. J. B. Randolph, of Como, Miss. He is a good man and a good preacher. Our whole community fell in love with him and were greatly edified by the plain, practical gospel which he preached. We feel sure that we are upon a higher plane than we were before the meeting. T. H. PORTER, P. C.

A REVIVAL AT PURVIS.

A man with a message and a responsive congregation are sure of results. Rev. Burke Culpepper, of Memphis, Tenn., came to us on July 6, and preached ten days, morning and evening, to great and increasing congregations. The meeting began with a splendid service on Sunday morning, and with each succeeding service, a deepening interest, as well as an increasing attendance, was apparent till the meeting closed. Scores of people resolved upon a better life; some entered into newness of life and almost everyone said the meeting was a blessing to them. The Baptist congregation joined its influence with us in the noblest, most fraternal way. In fact, the whole town participated, and we are all rejoicing together. The meeting resulted in 33 accessions to the Methodist Church; 23 to the Baptist Church, and 3 to the Presbyterian Church.

Burke Culpepper is in many particulars a great preacher—sound, strong and absolutely fearless in his denunciation of sin, yet tender and loving, and almost irresistible in his appeals to the sinner. His great faith and courage are only equaled by his humility, his graceful tact, and brotherly love. Choicer spirits are seldom found. H. L. NORTON.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The fifth session of the Hattiesburg District Conference was held at Mt. Olive, July 9-11. It was by far the best session ever held in the District. The kind people exerted every effort to care for the members of the Conference, and the kind and courteous treatment of the host, Rev. J. L. Decell, will long be remembered by all who were so fortunate as to attend.

The preaching was done by the following brethren: W. J. Dawson, of Heidelberg; Dr. Harris, a local preacher of Meridian; Rev. J. L. Neill, of Broad Street Church, Hattiesburg; Rev. Geo. H. Galloway, of Court Street, Hattiesburg; and Rev. W. M. Williams, of the Methodist Orphanage, at Jackson, Miss. The brethren preached excellent sermons and we believe impressed those who heard them with a greater desire for the progress of the kingdom.

The service on Thursday night was especially fine. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by Rev. W. D. Dominick. A large number of communicants partook. This was followed by a Love Feast under the capable leadership of Rev. M. L. White, of Richton. The brethren were greatly inspired by the soul-stirring testimonies. Especially was it inspiring to hear of the deep things of God from our laymen.

The business of the Conference was dispatched without a single jarring note. We think that our presiding elder deserves the praise of all for his kind and considerate brotherliness. We believe that we can, under his leadership, accomplish large things for the glory of God.

One feature of the Conference which was out of the ordinary was the Missionary Program presented by Rev. C. W. Crisler, of Main Street, Hattiesburg. The cause was presented in a most helpful and practical way, and we believe that it will result in a deeper interest upon the part of our people generally in the missionary enterprises of the Church.

The condition of the District generally is more hopeful. We are looking forward to a year of great success in the Master's work.

J. C. CHAMBERS, Secretary.

TIMELY RESOLUTIONS.

(Adopted by the Hattiesburg District Conference.)

Whereas, Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, has been with us in behalf of that institution, and whereas, we learn with pleasure of the progress that has been made in its affairs, therefore be it resolved:

1. That we, as members of the Hattiesburg District Conference, desire to express our appreciation of the faithful and efficient work done by Dr. Watkins during his first year's administration;
2. That we desire to thank most heartily Major R. W. Millsaps for his munificent gift of property valued at $150,000 recently made to the endowment fund of Millsaps College:
3. That we wish to express our appreciation of Major R. W. Millsaps in his work in behalf of Christian Education, not only within the bounds of our own State, but also in behalf of Christian Education in the Church at large, as was recently manifested in his action as one of the Trustees of Vanderbilt University in protesting against the acceptance of the Carnegie gift of $1,000,000 on conditions that would alienate a portion of the University from the Church; and that we protest against the further continuance of Chancellor Kirkland in his present position;
4. That we urge the Methodists of Hattiesburg District and of the whole State to rally to the support of Dr. Watkins in his effort now to build a modern dormitory for the college proper, not to cost less than $50,000.

RESOLUTION CONCERNING SUNDAY FUNERALS.

Whereas, the Louisiana State Undertakers' Association, through the earnest endeavors of its President, Mr. John A. Barrett, has recently taken a strong stand against the custom of holding funerals on Sunday; and

Whereas, in many other cities of our good land this custom has long since been abolished, except in cases when the cause of death makes immediate burial a necessity; and

Whereas, the discontinuance of Sunday funerals has caused slight hardship, but to the contrary, has had a very beneficial effect upon such cities and communities in general;

Be it resolved, that the Methodist Sunday School of Algiers, Louisiana, does heartily commend the action of the Louisiana State Undertakers' Association in its recent action against Sunday funerals; and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the President of said Association, and to the several newspapers for publication.

Dated and passed on July 20, 1913.

A. S. DANIELS,
Superintendent.
HAROLD H. GIBSON,
Committee on Resolution.

A MEDITATION.

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." (St. John 3-16.)

"Jesus paid it all,
All to him I owe:
Sin had left a crimson stain,
He washed it white as snow."

"Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another." (I. John 4-11.) The Apostle is telling us here, what we ought to do; but let us see what Christ himself says about it: "This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you." (St. John 15-12.) Then he says, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." (St. John 14-15).

You say, "that is not hard to do." But listen to what he says in St. Luke, 6 27: "But I say unto you which hear, love your enemies; do good to them which hate you." And again in the 32nd and 33d verses: "For if you love them which love you, what thank have ye? for sinners also love those that love them. And if ye do good to them which do good to you, what thank have ye? for sinners also do even the same."

God created us in his own image; then we sinned against him; we were rebellious; we went from bad to worse; but he so loved us that he gave his only son to be the propitiation for our sins.

"I gave, I gave my life for thee.
What hast thou given for me?"

He gave us the Bible, which contains many precious promises. He has made the plan of salvation so plain that even a child can understand. He has made his Commandments so simple and easy that anyone can obey. But you say, "It is hard to love your enemies, and to do good to those that hate you." This is not hard to do if we are filled with the Holy Spirit.

"Thou canst fill me, gracious Spirit,
Though I cannot tell Thee how;
But I need Thee, greatly need Thee,
Come, O come and fill me now."

We disobey His commands, which are all for our good, and still He continues to shower innumerable blessings upon us day by day, which we seem to but formally recognize. Oh what wonderful love—"Love divine, All love excelling!"

Dear reader, if God so loves us, vile and sinful though we be, we ought also to love one another.

"Our God is love and all His saints
His image bear below;
The heart with love to God, inspired
With love to man will glow.
Teach us to love each other, Lord,
As we are loved by Thee;
None who are truly born of God
Can live in enmity.
Heirs of the same immortal bliss,
Our hopes and fears the same,
With bonds of love our hearts unite,
With mutual love inflame.
So may the unbelieving world,
See how true Christians love,
And glorify our Savior's grace,
And seek that grace to prove."

MRS. J. W. CAMPBELL.

TOO MUCH FOR ME.

"I tried to be a skeptic when I was a young man," said Cecil; "but my mother's life was too much for me."

It was Jesus Christ in his good mother that was "too much" for him.—Independent.

GOOD MEETING AT ROXIE, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Our pastor has just closed one of the best meetings ever held in this section of the country. With the exception of three sermons by our capable presiding elder, and one by the Rev. Mr. Swanton, the pastor did all the preaching.

We received a very large number into our Church, and they were from the leading families of our community. I don't think I ever heard better preaching than we had during the meeting. All who heard Brother Yeager were astonished at his profound knowledge of the Bible. He is one of the most forceful pulpit orators that has ever been in our part of the country, and his sermons are strictly orthodox. The congregations got larger all the time, and it seemed as if Brother Yeager improved every time he preached. It is wonderful to hear his strong appeals to a lost world to come to God and be saved from sin.

We ask the prayers of the Church in behalf of our much appreciated pastor and his work at this place.

J. A. NEIL,
President of Board of Stewards.

DO YOU WANT FIFTY DOLLARS.

The Executive and Finance Committee of the Board of Church Extension has authorized the following prizes for Church Extension stories:

First prize $25
Second prize 15
Third prize 10

The rules governing are as follows:

1. The story must not exceed five thousand (5,000) words and may be much—very much—shorter. Effectiveness is the point.

2. The story may involve all the work of the Board of Church Extension, or any one or more particular departments or phases of its work.

3. The story may be a recital of facts in connection with a church or parsonage building enterprise, part fact and part fiction, or pure fiction, as the author may elect.

4. Manuscripts must be plainly written on one side of the sheet only, and must reach the office of the Board not later than December, 1913.

5. Manuscripts will be numbered and submitted to a committee of three competent judges; these judges, not informed as to the authors, will carefully consider the manuscripts and award the prizes by numbers.

6. The Committee reserves the right to retain manuscripts, not awarded prizes, for publication; but manuscripts so retained will entitle the author to $5.00.

Note No. 1.—The literature published by the Board has received the highest commendation, but the committee is conscious of the fact that it is possible to preach the gospel of Church Extension in a form more attractive to the youth than it is now doing. The whole object in view is to create a literature more attractive to the young in the Sunday schools, the Epworth Leagues and the homes of the people. Hence the above offer.

Note No. 2.—The publications of the Board will be sent on request and without charge to those who desire to study the subject of Church Extension.

All communications should be addressed to

CANADIANS AS HOME-BUILDERS.

(From "If Canada were to Annex the United States," by James Davenport Whelpley in the August Century.)

There are in Canada to-day about 1,500,000 families, and only about 75,000 of these are without a dwelling to themselves—a great record of a home-building nation.

COCA-COLA HABIT, A GHOST.

We have all heard of ghosts, but none of us has ever seen one. It's the same way with coca-cola "fiends;" you can hear about them but you might search for them until doom's day and you would never find one. Physicians who have treated hundreds of thousands of drug-habit cases, including opium, morphine, cocaine, alcohol, etc., say that they have never seen a case where the use of Coca-Cola has so fastened itself upon the individual as to constitute a habit in the true sense of the word. Although millions of glasses of Coca-Cola are drunk every year, no Coca-Cola fiends have ever made themselves visible at the doors of the sanitariums for the treatment of drug habits.

The Coca-Cola habit is analogous to the beefsteak habit and to the strawberry habit and the ice cream habit. People drink Coca-Cola first because they see it advertised and thereafter because it tastes good and refreshes their minds and bodies. They drink it when they can get it and contentedly do without it when they can't get it. If you had ever witnessed the ravings of a real drug fiend when deprived of his drug, if you had ever observed the agony he suffers, you would never again be so unfair as to mention Coca-Cola in the same breath with the "habit-forming" drugs.—Adv.

AMERICANS LOVE POWER.

(From "The First Voyage Over," by Theodore Dreiser in the August Century.)

The American, the average American, I am sure, loves power, the ability to do something, far more earnestly than he loves mere living. He wants to be an officer or a director of something, a poet, anything you please for the sake of being it, not for the sake of living.

GREAT MEETINGS IN CHINA.

In reporting his recent meetings in Canton, China, with the students of that city, Dr. John R. Mott declares that they were the greatest experiences of his life. He spoke there to an audience of 3000 young men; and when at the conclusion of the services he offered them the opportunity of signing a card which pledged them to read the Bible and pray every day and to live in accordance with the Bible precepts so far as these commended themselves to their consciences, 825 young Chinese put down their names. Twenty-six of these were students from Canton Christian College; and of that number, 16 joined the college church the next Sabbath, making a total of 46 who have thus professed Christ at the college during the year.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

THE MISSIONARY COLLECTION AT WAYNESVILLE.

More than $152,000 was pledged at this great conference. The subscriptions are to be paid during the next two years, and most of this money is to be used in building churches, schools, hospitals, and residences for missionaries in the foreign fields. It thus becomes a permanent investment and will greatly strengthen our work in foreign lands.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

Report of the Louisiana Conference, Second Quarter.

Three adult auxiliaries have been organized, bringing 260 new workers into the ranks. Two Young People's auxiliaries and one Junior division have been organized. Eighty-two new subscribers have been obtained for the Missionary Voice. Seven boxes of supplies have been sent to the superintendent of the Supply Department.

The amount of money sent to the Conference Treasurer is as follows: Dues, $259.78; Specials, $136.70; Local Work, $1570.55.

Mrs. Cunningham requests that the following remarks be published in connection with her report:

"I have no report from the New Orleans and Lafayette Districts this quarter, nor have I heard from their District Secretaries. I waited as long as I could before sending my reports to Mrs. MacDonell, and it was with a feeling of sadness that I left out these two Districts. I brought over their reports (all except the money) from last quarter, but I do not know whether this was the right thing to do.

"We have three new missionary socities reported this quarter: one at Tallulah, Monroe District; one at New Iberia, Lafayette District; and the other at Elmore, Ruston District. I have taken my figures for the Junior and Baby Divisions from the Vice President's report.

"Let us not be content with 'holding our own' during this next quarter, for God wants us to advance even under difficulties. Keep this question before you:

"'I am satisfied with Jesus;
But the question comes to me,
As I ponder o'er his grandness,
Is He satisfied with me?'"

EXPENSES.

Every business requires an expenditure of money that it may grow and expand. This is as true of the missionary business as of any other. All partners in business furnish their prorata for running expenses. Is this so in the missionary business? What about your auxiliary? Does every member pay her part toward the running expenses?

WHAT SOME ARE DOING.

The Kentucky Conference raised last year for the Conference expense fund, $800. What did your Conference do? The North Georgia Conference has adopted a budget plan whereby every member is to pay five cents per month for Conference expenses. If a woman belongs to both departments, she pays twenty-five cents per month, five cents being for the expense fund. If a woman belongs to one department she pays fifteen cents, five cents for the expense fund. In this way a sum may be raised to meet all the expenses of the Conference, provide sufficient literature, keep an organizer in the field, and yet not draw on the regular fund, which must go to the maintenance of the work in the field.

Stress It.

Our members only need to have this matter put before them in a definite and business-like way. When they come to see that their failure to pay the Conference expense fund is to leave somebody else to pay their running expenses they will quickly do it themselves. No one of us is willing to leave our personal expenses for others to pay, and yet that is what happens when we fail to pay our running expenses in the Conferences. It must be paid, who shall pay it? We are not paupers, we will "pay our own as we go." Let the treasurers and presidents bestir themselves at this point, and call for every woman to pay her part of the running expenses of the work.

A MESSAGE FROM THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

A crisis is being faced in our missionary work. We have been and are praying the Lord of the Harvest to open doors and to send out laborers. We have not kept pace with the way God has heard and answered our prayers. From the Council secretaries we learn that curtailment of work already begun was necessary at home and in the fields beyond. The reason is a lack of funds. Why do we have this deficit? Because one-ninth of the women of the Church is busy the work of missions, and the other eight-ninths have not heard of the heart pleadings of the millions of burdened women. An increased membership, with the attendant increase in offerings and the volume of prayer, will help to meet the crisis. It will do more: it will enable us to meet it. Shall we of the one-ninth not pledge the Father our best effort—better than ever before! More of self-denial, more prayer and faith, and reach these eight-ninths? With these in our ranks we will be able to go forward even to victory.

At this time we would call your attention to the payment of the Conference expense fund. Please see that this is cared for in full. If we advance in our Conference work as God leads us, there must be a fund to meet the expenses.

This third quarter is the testing time of our love. Be true to self, to your officers, and to your Master. Keep the work going. Do not "hold your own" through the summer, for God wants us to advance even under difficulties. Let us enter the fall months and go to our district meetings in October with the consciousness of much work well done—and with our talents not buried but multiplied.

Mrs. A. P. HOLT,
MRS. W. T. CUNNINGHAM,

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Any of our Sunday school workers who may be privileged to have a vacation at that time should not fail to consider attending the Sunday School and Epworth League Conference at Southern Assembly, Lake Junaluska, N. C., on Aug. 6-17. The beauties of nature are here spread with a lavish hand, and the program is full and up to the standard. The railroads also promise to give rates.

In a recent sermon on Christian education, President R. H. Wynn, of Centenary College, called attention to the fact that China has had a system of education for three thousand years which has failed to stir the emotions and ambitions of the people, and that until the leaven of Christianity entered into the teaching of this oldest civilization in the world, it was non-sympathetic and non-progressive. Thus does the trained mind need the Christian motive to make life useful, and while the common school gives the one, the Sunday school gives the other.

The historians tell us that it was the custom of the Romans to teach their sacred literature as the first step in the education of their children, but in our country the tendency seems to be to more and more leave the Bible out of our common schools. If, then, we should let the Bible story and the daily prayer die from our home altars, and our children stay away from the Sunday school, would we not be even behind the Roman barbarians? Soldiers like Lee and Grant, and statesmen like Washington and McKinley, and reformers like Miss Willard, and educators like Senator Webb are the products of Christian education.

The deficit of the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Board now stands as follows: Previously reported, $75.90; B. P. Spiller, Treasurer Baton Rouge District Sunday School Conference, $10; Monroe District, W. A. Davenport, Mer Rouge, $5; Alexandria District, Judge R. J. Wilson, 5; Judge D. N. Thompson, $5; J. W. May, $5; B. M. Musser, $5; J. W. Tooke, $2. Total paid in, $112.90. Balance needed, $637.10. What we needed to start on was seventy-five persons to give us each $10, or more to give less in proportion. How many will send Brother Holloman $10 apiece before Aug. 1, and stop the interest on the note and relieve the Board of its embarrassment?

In a recent address on "Leaders and Followers," Bishop Candler suggested that for some to lead implies that others will follow, and that there is as much virtue in loyal following as in faithful leading. Without the faithful soldier Napoleon himself could not have won a victory, and without the loyal co-operation of the officers, teachers, and scholars of the school, the pastor and superintendent are powerless to achieve expected success, and their only remedy is to exhort for a reformation, or to "reorganize their cabinet." A careless or self-willed officer or teacher can put confusion into the whole spirit of the school, and aside from the confusion caused, the example before the pupils is of incalculable harm.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

All Sunday school workers in Mississippi, as well as all over our Church, should take advantage of the splendid Sunday school and Epworth League program at Lake Junaluska, N. C., on August 6-17. The climate is ideal, and the advantages offered are beyond comparison. A great crowd of enthusiastic, consecrated workers should arrange to be present.

Miss Willingham's Morris Class, of Eupora, enjoyed its annual picnic in June. They invited Judge Lamb's Gleaners and many others to accompany them. They had automobiles ready to convey all comfortably to a large grove some four miles out of town. A fine dinner and fine fellowship, plus the spice of merriment, games and fun produced, made the outing an ideal one. Superintendent Cooper has one of the finest Sunday schools in the Conference.

The Florida Sunday School Board made a forward step which has proven to be greatly beneficial. Three years ago Rev. C. M. White was made Field Secretary, and, aided by the enthusiastic co-operation of the Chairman of the Board, Rev. G. S. Roberts, of Jacksonville, and his committeemen, he has greatly advanced the Sunday school interests throughout the entire Florida Conference. One hundred and ninety-three Sunday schools have been organized, 18 churches have been built, 7,000 new pupils added to the Sunday schools, and great strides have been made along other lines of work. The last effort of these two Sunday school workers was to arrange for two Sunday School Institutes: one at Live Oak, in the northern part of Florida, and the other at Lakeland, in the southern part of the State. The Sunday previous to these meetings, the speakers filled the various pulpits in Jacksonville. Large and enthusiastic crowds with note-books, leading questions, and fine spirits, greeted the speakers, and Messrs. Roberts and White expect incalculably great good to result. Pastors, presiding elders, superintendents, and teachers lent listening ears, eager faces, and receptive minds and hearts, and the holding of the institutes will now become an assured annual event. Two banners were given to the Sunday schools coming the nearest to attaining the standard of excellence and meeting other requirements prescribed. They were won by the Jasper school, for North Florida, and the Manatee school, for South Florida. Mr. E. E. French, who was announced as one of the speakers, was unavoidably detained, and his work was divided among Mr. Way, Mr. White, and the North Mississippi Field Secretary.

SHOES AT WHOLESALE

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE Readers are SAVING from ONE to TWO DOLLARS a PAIR by Ordering Their Shoes DIRECT FROM FACTORY BY PARCEL POST.

Would the cutting of your FAMILY SHOE BILL one-third or more mean a very big yearly saving to you? Figure it out. The present high cost of shoes is due to two things, the Middlemen's profits which the consumer must pay and the enormous decrease in raw materials. The new Parcel Post System gave us an idea. By selling our shoes direct to the wearer, cutting out the middlemen entirely, we could save the consumer fully a third on every pair of shoes and still make our usual wholesale profit. The plan is a great success. New Orleans Christian Advocate readers are realizing the opportunity of saving and great numbers are writing for our catalog which is sent free to anyone on request. It tells how cheaply high quality shoes can really be bought under this fair method of selling. Every shoe sold is guaranteed perfect in fit, material and workmanship—your money will be refunded if unsatisfactory. Write for your catalog to-day. A trial order will please and result in our getting your entire shoe trade. PARCEL POST SHOE CO., 258 Meeting Street, Charleston, South Carolina. (Advertisement.

EVANGELISTS—WHAT THEY SHOULD BE.

Our word "evangelist" occurs three times in the Bible and only in the New Testament. (The Greek word translated evangelist is vangelistees.) Literally, it means a good messenger, or a messenger of good things. In New Testament times it seems to have meant any preacher sent out by the Apostles to complete unfinished work, but not to have charge of any local church as its pastor. Anyhow, they were classed as an order of ministers distinct from the apostles, prophets, pastors, and teachers. This clearly appears from Paul's words to the Ephesians when he said: "And he gave some apostles, and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers." (Eph. 4:11.) In our Church they are those sent out without any special charge to preach the word of God as we understand its teachings and to hold revivals where desired.

As to their character, they should not be money savers; for if they are, it will be their chief desire and aim, and when that is true they will delay as long as possible answering brethren of poor charges with the hope of getting an invitation to the moneyed ones so they can have the great pleasure of answering that they are already engaged, or cannot as yet see their way clear for an engagement. Thy may even misrepresent their financial condition to the pastor and his people in order to get a good collection, and feel much hurt if they do not get it. To be sure of a very creditable collection when taken publicly they will not hesitate to start off some sure working jokes, although God is forgotten, saints are demoralized, and sinners lose all their seriousness. It may be necessary to get a brother to announce himself for a good sum to originate and start off an almost irresistible collection wave, even when it is understood that he will not pay it; but no harm is dreaded and the Lord is accused of being in the whole business because the money is secured in desired quantities. They become unholy and unjust enough to feel and to say that God was in their collections when they, by shrewd schemes, have gotten one-fourth, one-half, as much, or more money for ten or twelve days' work than the faithful, drudging pastor does for three hundred and sixty-five days. What heartless self-conceit! Evangelists should be men freed from bossiness and self-glory. Instead of bossing the pastor or his people, they should be the servants of all in the Scriptural sense. Instead of being the big "I" and the hero of all their tales, let them magnify the pastor in a faithful brotherly way. Any preacher who would dare to speak and act in another brother's charge in order to exalt himself in any respect above his brother or brethren is devoid of the most ordinary social decency, and brands himself as a living insult to God, as a brazen robber of his brethren.

Evangelists should be men exceedingly holy in heart and life. Their conversation and acts should be holy. They should talk, preach, and live our holy religion. They should impress the people that they are not out as money seekers or after an easy life. In the pulpit they should avoid acting like a monkey or a clown, but act as grave messengers from God himself, and as men sensible of the fact that they will have to account to their Lord for their work and that the fitness or unreadiness of the people for the Judgment Day will be due largely to their work. Evangelists should be men of such respect for God's truths as to substitute no jokes, witticisms or any thing else for it. When they do, there are no real spiritual results. They should labor for nothing short of God's glory and the salvation of souls. They should see rigidly to it that they are like our blessed Lord, instead of being a disgrace to natural idiots, when classed with them, because of their idiotic sniggers, giggles, goat-like frisks, inexcusable lightness and shocking irreverence in dealing with the Word of God, treating it as if it were a book of jokes.

Evangelists should be so honest and truthful that when a meeting is not well attended and did not result well they, like manly men, will say it was not and endeavor to cover up nothing that would savor of dishonesty and truthlessness. Let them not once think that they are out for the business of making a reputation, or of maintaining one, and hence do the very unholy thing of having a stir irrespective of righteousness and truth and the honest help of the saints. Let all their efforts, and even their propositions, be sensible and pertinent. They are not out for newspaper puffs, compliments, praises, ease, money, and are not out even for a reputation, but for God's glory solely. Paul says: "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." (1 Cor. 10:31.) Or as God himself says of each: "For I have created him for my glory." (Isa. 43.) All true evangelists have a perfect hatred for those sensations and appeals to the emotions that pervert one's religious taste, that lead him from the truth, that make the money pour into their own pockets even when not to the hurt of others, that glorify themselves instead of God. Let us have in the evangelistic work, men who are not trying to accumulate property at all but are wholly separated from the world; that are holy in heart, in conversation, in conduct, in prayers, in preaching, in association with all classes, and who everywhere and under all circumstances love God supremely and seek to save every one.

ANENT THE ADVOCATE.

(By Meridian District Conference.)

Whereas, our Conference organ, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, is strong and fearless in its defense of the doctrines and polity of our Church, as well as in lifting its voice against the hurtful forms of wordliness which threaten our Zion;

We therefore express our unqualified faith in the importance of its religious sincerity and its timely utterances on worldly amusements, not to say sinful delinquencies of some who are bold to assume positions on things hurtful to the spiritual life of our Church.

We have learned with profound regret that Rev. R. A. Meek has announced his purpose of leaving the Editorship at the end of this year. We sincerely hope he may reconsider his purpose in this regard and that he may continue to serve God by preaching the doctrines of righteousness through the columns of our organ which he has so ably edited. To bim we pledge our prayers and support.

AN INTERESTING LETTER TO PARENTS FROM A NOTED TEACHER

When parents whose daughters' education is their most absorbing thought begin to cast about among the various institutions of learning, they become almost bewildered at the multiplicity of schools; and the different and many advantages of each of these as presented either by letter or representative, so that the selection of the one best suited becomes a question of no small moment and concern. These parents deeply appreciate the ultimate results depending upon their decision, and wish to select that one which furnishes the best advantages as considered from all standpoints. It is to these parents that I am addressing the following comments with the hope that they may be of some aid in their consideration of what the best school for a young lady is; and to present some of the requisites of a superior institution, and to call attention to a college wherein I know from two years' careful and personal observation such requisites exist. In presenting these I do so fully assured that other institutions as well as Whitworth offer many and important advantages. But it is true that Whitworth occupies no second place among Southern Colleges as the excellence of her graduates will fully sustain. So when asked by parents to name some good college in which they may place their daughters, I cite them among the first to Whitworth; and in so doing call their attention to the following features of this institution:

First, the personnel of the administrative Board and the Faculty. A glance at the roster of trustees and other directing heads will show the names of men prominent in social, professional and religious life; thus proving that Whitworth is directed by those who are recognized for their stability and worth and who are interested in those things that tend to the upbuilding of society. A similar examination of the roll of the Faculty will show the names of those whose work and literary attainments are attested to by their holding diplomas from the best and most important educational institutions. These show that the directing influences of Whitworth are inferior in no respect, but offer along this line advantages equal to any college of its size.

Second, the Curriculum; one has only to make a careful study of the various courses offered by Whitworth to see that the training in every department is fully as extensive as any other college, and more so than many. Equipped with the necessary talent the Faculty makes every endeavor to give to the minds of the young women not only deep instruction, but a culture that can be secured only from those whose abilities and attainments are of superior grade and from a curriculum both extensive and intensive.

Third, I would call attention to the various equipment. Every department is well supplied with all the essentials along this line. The music and science departments have all details; and the Library is well supplied with the best books and periodicals.

Fourth, there is a progressive atmosphere surrounding the school. The straight-laced and medaeval methods are absent; for the young women are regarded as the representatives of progressive America and hence their training is such as to fit them to meet the world and feel confidence in themselves, and to appreciate that they are being trained to meet any condition of life that a modern woman should meet.

Fifth, the home and moral surroundings. Unquestionably, no school can offer superior advantages in these two respects. Every young woman is made to feel at home and to know that she has come to be instructed and guided by those who sympathize with her in thought and act. The "home sickness" common to all who first leave home to be among strangers is soon dispelled and the idea soon prevails among the students that they have come together in a harmonious whole. The moral feature of the school, though not overshadowing other departments, is given strong emphasis, and the young ladies are taught that God is directing all human activity, and the cultivation of Christian attributes and the living of a Christian life are the first essentials of success and happiness.

In conclusion, Whitworth is progressing, her opportunities are being widened by the erection of new buildings and the making of other additional improvements needed in this age to maintain her position and sustain the ideals she has ever placed. To all the above I think both patrons and students will give their approval and I believe no parent will regret having entrusted a daughter to Whitworth.

Editorial

FOR BOTH TIME AND ETERNITY.

Religion has to do with both time and eternity. There are some who apparently wish to make it largely a thing of the present world; they want man to be virtuous, kind, and humanitarian without having much regard for the future. But this is a grave mistake. A religion that appeals effectively to immortal beings must have its issues in eternity. It must come with the inspiration of imperishable rewards for the good and the tremendous incentive of future punishment for the wicked. it must open the door to an existence yet to be, for the countless millions of the race know that they cannot tarry long upon earth; that with a steady and unceasing step they are marching to the tomb. The hope of a happy hereafter, where vice shall be outlawed and truth and righteousness shall reign, is a tremendous factor in inciting people to correct living and to high endeavor. Of our Lord himself, it is written, "For the joy that was set before him, he endured the cross and despised the shame." It is right for the sons of God, amid the toils and struggles and perplexities of this earthly life, to rejoice in hope of what they will finally be—to dwell in grateful contemplation upon the riches of their eternal inheritance in Christ.

But such meditation, helpful and necessary as it is, may be overdone. It will not do to put our religion too exclusively in the future tense. It has its present-day obligations, duties, and possibilities. It is designed to meet the temporal, as well as the eternal, needs of man. Foretastes of heaven may be had even here. We may seek the companionship and guidance of God, and tell him of all our sorrows and troubles. Nor will he fail consciously to sustain us and often to come to our relief. Many carry heavy burdens through life that, perhaps, might be lifted for the earnest asking. How few Christians in this present sphere of existence avail themselves of all their glorious privileges! They leave unpossessed luminous and blessed experiences that they might have. They permit to go largely unexercised the mighty power of prayer. They think of the Holy Spirit's wonderful work as chiefly restricted to the past, and of the Heavenly Father's deliverances from the crushing ills of life as coming almost entirely after we shall have passed into the realm invisible. They grope in darkness when they might walk in light. They view Christ chiefly as a historical character who trod the soil of earth in the dim long ago, or as the vanished Sun of Righteousness who in the far-away centuries will again rise upon our world "with healing in his wings." They have not sufficiently grasped the transcendent truth that he is still the living Savior, unchanged and unchangeable, who is more potentially present on earth to-day than in any former period of its history. They need to realize more fully the true significance of the beautiful words of Whittier—

"But warm, sweet, tender, even yet
  A present help is He;
And faith hath still its Olivet,
  And love its Galilee.

"The healing of the seamless dress
  Is by our beds of pain;
We touch Him in life's throng and press,
  And we are whole again.

"Through him the first fond prayers are said
  Our lips of childhood frame;
The last low whispers of our dead
  Are burdened with His name."

THE DESTRUCTIVE POWER OF VICE.

The tremendous truth declared in the Scriptures, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," continues to find abundant illustration in the world about us. About two years ago a comparatively young woman and a man, with a wife and several children, entered into illicit relations in this city. Later the man became surfeited or repentant and sought to break away from his paramour; and as a result he was shot down in the street and to-day sleeps in a dishonored grave. His wife and children, though innocent, are necessarily sharing in his disgrace, and are humiliated and overwhelmed with their great sorrow; while his so-called affinity, a self-confessed murdress, languishes in prison awaiting a trial for her life.

We give also another instance: A comparatively old man in New Orleans several months ago married a woman about whom he knew very little. Instead of being faithful to her husband, she began to accept the attentions of other men. Soon she was going joy-riding at improper hours, and later it developed that she was about to become a mother. With a marvelously forbearing love, her husband forgave her all and still clung to her; but apparently her remorse of conscience was more than she could bear. So, in an evil moment she dashed a draft of carbolic acid down her throat, and passed out into eternity—a suicide.

The papers are full of such things. Every day the sins of people are wrecking and destroying them and their heart-rending cries are heard as they go down beneath the black waves of vice. For those who violate the laws of God there is absolutely no escape, except that which comes through repentance and faith in Christ. And one of the most pathetic things about a vicious career, is that it usually leaves its victims in the end forsaken and alone. In the beginning the evil-doer usually has many friends, but when the inevitable ruin that follows in the wake of such a course commences to envelop and engulf him, they almost invariably desert him. With great impressiveness, Henry Ward Beecher, in one of his public utterances, sets forth this fearful truth:

"Remember, young men, if by any sinners you are enticed to ruin, you will have to bear it ALONE! They are strong to seduce, but heartless to sustain their victims. They will exhaust your means, teach you to despise the God of your fathers, lead you into every sin, go with you while you afford them any pleasure or profit, and then, when the inevitable disaster of wickedness begins to overwhelm you, they will abandon whom they have debauched. When at length death gnaws at your bones and knocks at your heart; when staggering and worn out, your courage wasted, your hope gone, your purity, and long, long ago your peace—will he who first enticed your steps, now serve your extremity with one office of kindness? Will he stay your head?—cheer your dying agony with one word of hope?—or light the way for your coward steps to the grave?—or weep when you are gone?—or send one pitiful scrap to your desolate family? What reveler wears crape for a dead drunkard?—what gambler ever intermitted a game for the death of a companion, or went on kind missions of relief to broken-down fellow gamblers? What harlot weeps for a harlot?—what debauchee mourns a debauchee? They would carouse at your funeral, and gamble on your coffin. If one flush more of pleasure were to be had by it, they would drink shame and ridicule to your memory out of your own skull, and roar in bacchanal revelry over your damnation!"

IS THERE SUCH AN ONE?

If there is a saloonkeeper in existence who obeys the laws regulating the liquor traffic, we shoud like to know his name and where he operates. We unhesitatingly affirm that we have never known one. The bartender, so far as we have been able to observe him and size him up, is a person who "neither fears God, nor regards man." Only a few days since, while in a restaurant, we saw a little girl, eight or ten years old, come in with a pitcher and hand it to a waiter (along with a nickel) who took it and went to a near-by dramshop and came back with it full of beer. Perhaps that child had been sent on this mission by her father or mother. Hundreds, if not thousands, of children in New Orleans are being reared upon the very threshhold of the saloon. What can be expected of them when brought up under such conditions? It is to us positively amazing that any decent man in his right senses should favor the maintenance of such an institution as the barroom. So long as the saloon finds supporters, no cause, however corrupt and vicious, need despair of securing advocates. Never was there a louder and clearer call to men of strong soul and high endeavor, than that which now rings around the world to rise and strike down this monster iniquity of the ages. A far nobler crusade is this than any recorded upon the pages of history.

When shall we learn the sweet trust in God that our little children teach us every day by their confiding faith in us? Why can not we, slipping our hand in his each day, walk trustingly, over that day's appointed path, thorny or flowery, knowing that evening will bring us peace and home?—Phillips Brooks.

SOUL WINNING THROUGH PRAYER.

We wonder if the majority of professed Christians know the value of prayer? We are of the opinion that greater things are accomplished in the spiritual kingdom through prayer than by any other agency. The Lord Jesus declared that men should pray always and faint not. Not only should Christians live in an atmosphere of prayer, but it is certain that the Lord moves upon the hearts of the unsaved and brings before their minds things which pertain to their eternal destiny through the agonizing prayers of men and women who know how to besiege the throne of grace. The Lord can reach hearts through our prayers that can not be reached by any of our endeavors. It is often better to talk to the Lord about men than to talk to men about the Lord. Just so sure as God's people travail in soul over the lost will the lost ones be saved. This is an important part of the work of the Church, and one that must not be neglected if people are to be saved from their sins and be brought into harmony with their Maker.

Do you have unsaved relatives who are very dear to your hearts? Then be sure to beseech the Lord in their behalf and plead with him in prayer until they are delivered from their sinfulness. "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." The editor of the Sunday School Times has written a few sentences that are to the point upon this subject, as follows:

"Most of us believe that God can do more for our friends than we can. Yet how many of us act consistently on this belief? Do we count our prayer for our friends the most effective service we can render them? That rare man of God, Forbes Robinson, whose influence over men in Cambridge, England, and elsewhere, was so notably blessed, found that 'the secret of any influence which he possessed over men was the outcome of his efforts to pray for them.' A friend who knew him intimately has written: 'He told me that in his younger days he had taken every opportunity of personally appealing to men to come to Christ. 'But,' he went on, 'as I grow older I become more diffident, and now often, when I desire to see the truth come home to any man, I say to myself, 'If I have him here he will spend half an hour with me. Instead, I will spend that half-hour in prayer for him.' We may be very sure that any one who thus sacredly meets his prayer obligations to his friends will also not fail to let God use him in conversational evangelism as well. But we must always remember that what we say to a man for Christ is likely to be less important than what we have said to God in that man's behalf."—The Free Methodist.

TO ALL METHODIST MINISTERS.

Dear Brethren: Methodist ministers by virtue of their ordination have been from the beginning recognized leaders in the Christian Ministry as "faithful dispensers of the Word of God." When ordained Deacons, they declared their "unfeigned belief in all the canonical Scriptures of the Old and New Testament." When ordained Elders, they pledged themselves ever to be "ready with all faithful diligence to banish and drive away all erroneous and strange doctrines contrary to God's Word." The most dangerous form of "erroneous and strange doctrine" to-day is the assault upon the integrity of the Holy Scriptures. It is a movement to destroy the faith of men in the genuineness, authenticity and authority of the Bible as the Word of God.

A systematic and aggresive campaign has been launched. It has a two-fold object. It seeks to commit educational institutions to false standards of interpretation which open the way for every form of unbelief. It endeavors to introduce the same methods into Sabbath school instruction. It must be apparent to every thoughtful person that if this is allowed to proceed unchecked, children, youth, young men and women will be inculcated with the principles of this false doctrine. The disaster and ruin to religious life which has ever resulted from disregard of God's Word and denial of its authority will imperil every interest we hold dear. We urge you to organize throughout the connection in defense of the Old Faith and the Old Book, and unite with the loyal Christians of all other evangelical denominations in repelling the assaults of this modern form of unbelief.

All ministers who will co-operate in this work are requested to send a postal card with name, address and Annual Conference to the office of the League, 86 Bible House, New York.

Wm. Phillips Hall, President of Bible League of North America. Jay Benson Hamilton, General Secretary.

MR. CARNEGIE AND THE METHODIST CHURCH.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is in hot water just now over the question of the control of Vanderbilt University. The trustees hold that they are a self-perpetuating corporation with full power to manage the affairs of the university as they choose. The Bishops claim that the university belongs to the Church, and that the trustees are merely representatives of the Church, acting under its authority. This position has been upheld by a court decision, but the case has been appealed.

Meantime the trustees have accepted a gift of $1,000,000 from Mr. Carnegie to establish a medical school in connection with the university, with the condition that no religious tests shall be applicable in such school; in other words, that in its management it shall be altogether secular.

The Bishops at once stepped in and vetoed the acceptance of this gift as an act of disloyalty to Christ, and so the matter stands until the higher court shall have decided who is the real owner of the university.

It seems to us that secular education is rather outside of the proper functions of the Church, and we doubt much if really satisfactory results, from a spiritual point of view, could be shown in connection with any such work. But of this we are quite sure, that if the Churches do such work it should be done in Christ's name and on a distinctly religious basis. We are quite sure that the Methodist Church, South, must either own and control Vanderbilt University and manage it as a part of the work of the Church or repudiate all connection with it. Any compromise would be disgraceful to the Church and would result in lowering the spiritual tone of the Church.

Mr. Carnegie seems to be animated by the spirit of the evil one in his antipathy to evangelical religion. He may have some sort of religion himself for ought we know; but he never seems to miss a chance to discourage loyalty to truth by making gifts conditional on utter indifference to the teaching of the Bible. There is nothing to hinder him from founding a medical school anywhere and making any regulations he chooses concerning its management. That fact does not seem to make any appeal to him. But a chance to lower the standard of the great Methodist Episcopal Church, chaining it to earth with a golden chain, opens Mr. Carnegie's pocketbook at once.

Poor Carnegie! Poor Carnegie! What a shriveled up creature he will be when he stands before the "Great White Throne" if he does not wake up before it is too late.—New York Weekly Witness.

DR. KIRKLAND'S INSULTS.

In the Nashville Christian Advocate of July 18, under the heading, "The Bishops and Mr. Carnegie," from Chancellor J. H. Kirkland of the Vanderbilt University, comes one of the most offensive and insulting diatribes against our Southern Methodist Bishops which it has ever been our misfortune to read. The Editor of this paper has no hesitation whatever in saying that it is his solemn and sincere conviction that the communication from Chancellor Kirkland is an insult, not merely to the consecrated and venerated Bishops of our Church, but through them to Southern Methodism in general, and that Dr. Kirkland's usefulness as Chancellor of Vanderbilt University is at an end.—Alabama Christian Advocate.

HOME MISSION WEEK.

By Rev. John M. Moore, D. D.

Nothing in recent years has done so much to encourage those engaged in Home Mission work as the general and hearty observance of Home Mission Week, last November. To the fellowship of home mission boards, with the 25,000 workers under their commission, it brought new hope and power. It is equally gratifying to know that, to thousands of churches, the Week brought new vision and spiritual power. The Councils above named, in view of these facts, have decided to ask the churches to join in a similar observance the coming autumn, culminating in the week of October 19-26. The date for all denominations other than our own is November 16-23. The change was made by our Board of Missions for our Church to avoid conflict with the annual sessions of various Conferences.

Last year a general view of the whole field was attempted. This year it is suggested that emphasis be centered on the immigrant. It is needless to point out the many-sidedness of the theme, and the obligations involved. Scarcely a community is without its foreign-speaking element. All our life, public and private, is powerfully influenced by the continual inflow of varied races. We are in the midst of as hazardous an experiment as any nation ever tried. To fuse a score of race stocks, with a half-dozen colors of skin, speaking forty languages, and inheriting the most diverse social and religious traditions, into a single homogeneous, democratic, and righteous nation, is a task beyond the strength of men. All home mission boards are addressing themselves to this problem. Their missionaries preach in thirty languages. A great section of their outlay is for this baffling and emergent task. All forms of organized home mission effort share the opportunity. In addition to the work of organizing and maintaining churches and mission schools, there is the indispensable task of aiding weak churches to secure houses of worship. In some denominations this is cared for by a department of the home mission board, in others by a special organization. But in every case the service rendered is of primary importance. The pioneer work done by mission Sunday school boards is in like manner an essential link in the chain. These boards are lifting the burden. They ask the Churches and all allied forces to join them in fresh study and effort.

Outline of the Plan.

No uniform method of observance will be proposed. Each pastor and church committee will be asked to use the period to such extent and in such way as seems best for furthering the end in view. The Councils only ask that whatever is done be commensurate with the problem before us. The following suggestions are offered to help churches and local communities to unite in this nation-wide effort. Mr. R. E. Diffendorfer is the author of these suggestions. The announcement, "New Americans for a New America," prepared by him, will be sent out about September 1, and will give full details of these plans, and will announce the literature and other aids necessary to carry them out. No church should attempt to follow all these plans. But some basis should be found from these suggestions for a plan of observance adapted to local conditions.

Service. The objective should be some concrete form of service rendered to immigrants by the Church as an organization and by individual Christians in their various relations. Such service may take the form of personal friendship and protection. Classes in English and civics may be promoted. Effort to improve industrial opportunities and living conditions for the foreigner may be undertaken. Sunday schools may be provided, together with other forms of ministry to the child life of immigrant communities. Bibles in the languages of the foreigners, selected religious reading, and literature on American life, laws, and customs may be distributed. Essential, as the culmination of such preparatory work as is suggested above, is an effort of evangelism which shall seek to arouse and enrich the religious life of the immigrant.

Many churches will find it possible to make careful inquiry as to the condition—economic, moral, and religious—of the immigrant population at their doors. It is to be hoped that from their inquiry new effort will spring. Helps for such surveys will be provided.

Inspiration. To arouse interest in conditions and to stimulate the indifferent, a variety of inspirational methods are suggested. Some pastors will wish to preach sermons on the theme of the week on the two Sundays, October 19 and October 26. Prayer meetings, young people's meetings, meetings for women, and meetings for children may be turned into this channel. A multiplicity of meetings is not desirable, but some of the above are practicable in every church. The culmination of the inspirational meetings may well be the Thanksgiving day service.

Education. Some form of more intensive educational work should be adopted in preparation for Home Mission Week. A mission study campaign may enlist any or all of the following classes; adult men, adult women, young people, boys and girls. The mission study books issued by the Missionary Education Movement, and the Council of Women for Home Missions will be upon the theme in hand. Suitable text-books for various ages will be provided. The educational program of the women's societies and the children's and young people's organizations may be correlated with the rest of the church activities.

Since the plans for Home Mission Week were formed, the home and foreign mission boards of all denominations have formed plans for united presentation of the mission cause to the churches forming their constituency during the coming fall and winter. These plans will not in any way interfere with the observance of Home Mission Week. Its observance simply becomes a part of the larger arrangement by which the entire strength of all missionary organizations is put behind every appeal, of whatever type.

BROTHER BINGHAM IN BAD COMPANY AGAIN.

By Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D. D.

Brother J. R. Bingham of Carrollton, Miss., has again rushed to the defense of Chancellor Kirkland. He did that once before. Some of us are a bit surprised that he should do it again. In a note accompanying his article, he states that "So misleading are some of the statements regarding Mr. Carnegie's gift to Vanderbilt University, that the exact facts should be known." Then he undertakes to give us "the exact facts;" but nothing that has appeared is more "misleading" than what he states as "facts." Brother Bingham's facts (?) are set down thus:

"With Mr. Carnegie's generous gift he stipulated five conditions, and five only, viz:

"First—The trustees shall appoint for the management of the medical school a governing board of seven members.

"Second—The chancellor of the university shall be chairman of this governing board.

"Third—Three members of this governing board shall be men of recognized standing in medical education or medical science.

"Fourth—All the members of this governing board shall be chosen without regard to denominational considerations and solely because of fitness for the desired service.

"Fifth—The teachers in the school shall be chosen from the best men obtainable, the professorships to be filled as far as practicable by men who are primarily teachers rather than practitioners."

Now really did Mr. Carnegie stipulate these as conditions of his gift? The first paragraph of his letter says:

Dr. J. H. Kirkland, Secretary Executive Committee Trustees Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn.

"My Dear Sir: I have given careful consideration to your letter of May 1, written on behalf of the trustees of Vanderbilt University, inviting me to contribute a million dollars for the establishment upon a sound foundation of a medical school of modern type in the South. After consultation with those familiar with medical education of this country I am convinced that the sum of money you mention could be wisely devoted to a medical school in Nashville. I approve thoroughly your suggestion that this gift be conditioned on the appointment of a small board of seven persons to govern the medical school, who shall be chosen absolutely without reference to denominational considerations and purely upon the ground of fitness for their duties."

From the fourth sentence of this paragraph it may possibly be argued that he accepts the stipulations laid down in Chancellor Kirkland's letter, which Brother Bingham presents as five. But let it be distinctly understood that these are Dr. Kirkland's stipulations.

Brother Bingham says: "He (Mr. Carnegie) stipulated five conditions and FIVE ONLY"—i. e. the five set down above; yet Mr. Carnegie says:

"There is, however, one factor in your university situation which leaves the policy for the future in doubt. A suit is now before the courts to test the question whether the university shall be governed by an independent self-perpetuating board as at present, or whether the trustees shall be chosen by the representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with which denomination the university has been since its beginning in sympathetic relations. Should the trustees finally receive an adverse verdict, I understand that the university will then be under distinctive denominational control. This result would seem to be unfortunate for the future progress and well-being of the institution. I do not believe that it is wise for any sect to control educational institutions such as universities, whether the organization be a Methodist conference, or a Presbyterian assembly, or a Catholic order.

"For this reason, therefore, while I am anxious to make this gift, which would be of high value to the whole south, I hesitate to do so until the question of denominational control has been settled by the courts.

"I make the following proposition for your consideration: I will furnish the $200,000 cash now needed for the laboratories, and the remaining $800,000 shall remain in the custody of the Carnegie corporation in New York—interest at 4 per cent to be paid to the university for the use of the medical school until such time as the question of denominational control has been settled by the court of last resort, its final disposition to be then determined."

Now if this is not another stipulation, another "condition" of the gift what do the words mean? Why say "I hesitate to do so until the question of denominational control has been settled by the courts?" Why hold back the $800,000 until this question is thus settled? So when Brother Bingham declares that Mr. Carnegie does not stipulate any condition other than the five he details, he certainly does not state a "fact"—it may be a dream or a very illogical deduction, but it is absolutely not a "fact."

Does anybody believe—does Brother Bingham believe—that if the Supreme Court decides in favor of the Church, the $800,000 will come to Vanderbilt University? And if the $800,000 should be withdrawn could the Church with any sense of honesty or self-respect retain the $200,000?

Again, will Brother Bingham declare on his knowledge and belief that neither he nor Chancellor Kirkland had in view any hope or thought that if Mr. Carnegie should make this tender and the Church should be induced to accept it, that the matter now in court would not be influenced favorably to the Kirkland contention? I do not mean that any one for one moment supposes that any action of Mr. Carnegie's or Dr. Kirkland's would bias the judgment of the supreme judges; but has it not occurred to Brother Bingham that if the Church should accept Mr. Carnegie's gift with his specified and implied conditions, that to be honest and consistent, it must withdraw its suit? Was not something like that thought of? Honestly now, Brother Bingham, was not something like that hoped for? Can you think of the Church continuing to prosecute a suit after it has accepted a million dollars on condition that her suit fail? If the tender of the million dollars under those conditions is not the offer of a bribe, what is it?

My imagination may be "distorted" as Brother Bingham insinuates; but my knowledge of plain English is not. Every man in Southern Methodism who has read the letters of Kirkland and Carnegie knows that they mean that if the Church wants this million for Vanderbilt, let her take it on condition that she is not to control Vanderbilt. Mr. Carnegie could hardly have made it plainer if he had bluntly declared: "I will give Vanderbilt a million dollars if that suit be dropped." Let nobody quibble about the $200,000 and the $800,000! If we reject the latter we must also refuse the former; and certainly Mr. Carnegie knew this when he made the peculiar division of the million.

Brother Bingham says:

"The needs of Vanderbilt University, the interest of the highest and broadest education in medical science, the good of the entire country (particularly of the south), and the welfare of humanity make a powerful plea that Mr. Carnegie's large liberality shall be accepted by the trustees."

Then the Church should at once go out of the business of educating. If she is to retire from Vanderbilt, then why not from Millsaps, Whitworth, Grenada, and all the rest? Vanderbilt may need much; but if her needs can be met at no cost less than this, it were far better that she close her doors, than that her needs be supplied by the sacrifice of the honor of the Church. I speak advisedly: if the Church should accept Mr. Carnegie's gift on the plainly implied condition, it would mean that she must dismiss her suit—and what would be her attitude toward Judge Allison? She must renounce control of her own University; she must endorse in so doing the most gigantic educational fallacy ever faced in all the ages—namely, that the Church is not fit to do the work of education; she must surrender her time-honored boast that as a denomination she has never resorted to proselyting from other Churches (Mr. Carnegie says that is what church schools are for); she must stultify herself, play false to her splendid history and belie her lofty claim—all this because Vanderbilt needs money, and the South needs a big medical school, and Carnegie tenders them on these dishonoring conditions. Brother Bingham indicates some "amazing things;" but more amazing than all is that J. R. Bingham advocates such a course.

The brother gets into a maze of amazing amazements—hear him:

"Next to the most amazing thing that has ever come within the range of my observation is objection to the acceptance of that great gift. The most amazing thing that I ever read is the reason assigned for such objection." The amazement of others at our Brother's course and attitude in this matter is intensified by remembering the very unenviable relation which our Brother sustains to the whole Vanderbilt affair: when the Board of Trust, in open rebellion against the Church, defiantly refused to seat the regularly appointed trustees, it elected Bishops Murrah and Lambuth, who, as a matter of course, declined to recognize the Board's right to elect. Then the Board elected this brother, J. R. Bingham, who accepted the role of a false trustee. He sits with the Board, supports its contentions, lionizes the recalcitrant Chancellor, thinks its thoughts and sympathizes with it in its rebellion. Other members say: "The Church approved of our being in charge of this interest, and we are maintaining what we think is the trust imposed. Mistaken as they may be about the obligation of their office, their mistake may be honest; this man cannot even say that the Church put him there. The Church stoutly protests against his being there. This son of the Church, who should have been at least silently modest, in defiant rebellion against the Church now writes to a secular paper, the Memphis Commercial Appeal, all of these amazing things about his own Church and her highest and most honored and honorable ministers.

He is not contented with inferential animadversions, but drops into language scurrilously abusive. Hear him:

"The most amazing thing that I have ever read is the reason assigned for such objection, viz: The University does not get a dollar from Mr. Carnegie, but the University gives away its medical department, valued at from $300,000 to $500,000. The third amazing thing is that Bishops join in this childish objection. * * * It is difficult to believe that the Bishops are serious. In the language of eminent authority, 'Evidently they are hurting at one place and grunting at another.'"

This last coarse slur, which charges duplicity as well, amazes everybody who ever saw the seemingly elegant J. R. Bingham. This from a son of the Methodist Church in a secular paper! Amazing! Amazing!!

He is as reckless with facts as he is with his abuse. Hear him again:

"The following statement makes their action amusing as well as amazing: Chancellor Kirkland secured $300,000 to purchase property for this same medical department. Whereupon these same Bishops went into court and secured an injunction against the completion of the transaction by which the University came into possession of the property. Now these same Bishops blame the trustees with the crime of giving away this same medical department. True, the Bishops afterward saw a light and had the injunction dissolved."

Bishop Hoss' version of this "amazing" event is as follows:

"When it came to the knowledge of the Bishops that it was proposed to dismember and disfigure the great Vanderbilt campus by selling off twelve or fourteen acres of the best of it, including the former home of Bishop McTyeire, for the pitiable sum of $125,000, (see note below), and then to buy the old Peabody property for $155,000 (I think my figures are exact), they were amazed, and asked for an injunction to prevent the transaction. While the matter of injunction was pending before the Chancery Court, the solemn assurance was given them through their lawyers that two gifts amounting to $300,000 were dependent on this completion of the transaction. On the ground of this assurance solely they withdrew their opposition and consented, much against their wishes, to let the injunction drop. Personally I had my doubts, and voted in the negative to the end. Later on the correspondence touching the gifts of $300,000 was presented for their inspection, and they discovered that it contained no such conditions as had been claimed, but it was then too late to do anything."

"The Bishops afterward saw a light and had the injunction dissolved," says Brother Bingham—"SAW A LIGHT." Yes, a "fatuous light," a falsehood perpetrated by men they had trusted. Who was responsible for the base deception of which Bishop Hoss tells? Are the Bishops to be sneered at and called "childish" and silly because they are now suspicious of men who once flatly deceived them? If the action and attitude of Kirkland, Bingham and Co. are manly, then the Church should congratulate herself that the grand men upon whom she has laid the honors of the episcopacy are "childish." The Christ said something about becoming as little children to be great enough for his Kingdom. About two millions of us have vastly more regard for the manliness and honesty of such men as E. E. Hoss, than for the men who are abusing him and sneering at him and his compeers because they will not permit the Church to be tricked into dishonorable dealings and compromising attitudes.

The Church has patiently borne much from these men; but she is growing very weary of these attacks upon her Bishops, whose very position in the Church deprives them of the right of self-defense so cherished by the rest of men. Not satisfied with picturing them as impractical and narrow, they are being held up as silly and "childish;" and, worse still, their motives are impugned. And this doughty Mississippian—alas! alas!!—joins in their insane bishop-phobia. The Church's patience is about threadbare. She will speak by-and-by; and all of the millions begged from Carnegie and the rest will not hush her. When the court of last resort has spoken, then she will speak; and her voice will be a voice of seven-fold thunders to some people.

What is said in the article under review about certain "rules for the conduct of the medical department" is of the very slightest importance. These rules made by the Board, after Mr. Carnegie's tender of his gift, are in no sense conditions of that gift. Made by a Board which has shown itself to be utterly unreliable, they may be changed at any time by the Board's obeying some freak of its effervescent nature. But one sentence more claims attention: "It does seem that a wayfaring man though a Bishop need not err therein." This irreverent perversion of Scripture does not hide the contemptible characterization implied, and that of the most honored men of the Church; so again we are told that our Bishops are false, mere deceivers, playing a part, or else they are fools. His language can admit of no other construction.

Brother Bingham's bank illustration is utterly illogical and irrelevant. The directors of a bank are chosen from among the stockholders, and are always under their authority and may be overruled and set aside whenever the stockholders see fit. But the Governing Board of Seven is partly from the outside organically and may be entirely from without (the Chancellor is not necessarily a trustee), and they must "govern" by virtue of a contract with an outside party, namely, Mr. Carnegie.

One who is a trustee of two institutions of learning and essays, against the protest of the Church, to be a trustee of another, and who parades himself in the papers as a great authority concerning educational matters, even going to the extent of sneering at our distinguished Chief Pastors, ought to know better than to bring forward as an analogical argument anything so flimsy and pitifully puerile as this. It shows how hard pressed our brother is when he has to try to hide behind such threadbare and wretched sophistry.

*The amazing absurdity of the Bingham statement is manifest in the light of the fact brought out by Bishop Hoss that this property is worth vastly more than $125,000 and is now held by the Peabody people at a much larger price.

THE SEASHORE EPWORTH LEAGUE ASSEMBLY—ADDITIONAL.

The vesper services on Sunday, July 27, while lasting only half an hour at sunset, were the most deeply spiritual meetings of the whole Assembly, and a sacred sense of the personal nearness of the Savior will ever be connected in memory with these informal gatherings. The most touching and effective was the one held on the sail boat Friday night, when, after the regular meeting in the tabernacle, a party of some twenty-five gathered at the wharf for the usual sail in "Captain John's" trim little schooner. Such songs of Zion as "Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me," "Sweetly Lord Have We Heard Thee Calling," "Master, the Tempest is Raging," "Savior, more than Life to Me," and others seemed to spring from the hearts and find expression in the concourse of sweet sounds as the vessel skimmed lightly over the waves in the streaming moonlight; and in the lull between the songs, Dr. Quillian began to speak of that beautiful incident in our Lord's life when he stilled the tempest on the lake, and spoke peace and cheer to his little band of frightened disciples.

There was not a soul in his hearing but that was deeply moved by the application of this incident to his or her life, and that did not feel more really than ever before the blessed fact of Christ's personal friendship.

On Sunday morning, the tabernacle was filled to hear Dr. Frank Parker of Trinity College, Durham, N. C., at the eleven o'clock service. His burning message of the Spirit-filled, Christ-surrendered life was one of the most powerful ever spoken on the old camp grounds.

The closing service of the Assembly was on Sunday night when Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker preached, his text being Acts 26:19. The Spirit of God was upon the speaker, and his impressive message went straight to the heart in convincing power. It came as a providential conclusion to Dr. Quillian's sermon on "Life Decisions," of a few days before, and under the combined influence of these two appeals, many expressed their determination to be "not disobedient unto the heavenly vision."

MRS. H. L. McCLESKY.

DR. WEEM'S DEAD.

Rev. J. M. Weems, D. D., died in the sanitarium at Newton, Miss., at 1:10 p. m., on Wednesday, July 30. He was buried in Newton the next day, the funeral service being conducted by the writer, assisted by Dr. I. W. Cooper, Revs. R. Selby, T. J. Abney, W. J. Dawson, J. R. Jones, and W. M. Williams. Dr. Cooper and the writer paid tributes—others would have done so had there been time. A large company followed the coffin to the grave.

Just a week before his demise Dr. Weems had removed from the parsonage at Laurel (Fifth Avenue) to his own house in Newton, hoping to spend his last days there in restful quiet. His malady so taxed him that he sought some relief in an operation. The surgeons discovered a large and malignant cancer fastening its grip rapidly upon his vitals. He died in two hours after the operation. All that human skill and love could do to save his life was done; but he left us. A memoir will be sent to the Advocate in a few days. One of our best men is gone.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

GOOD TRUSTEES.

I presume that Brother Barton, Brother Lagrone and others like-minded, will agree that my characterization of the trustees is true of Major Millsaps, Brother Pepper, Dr. Young and Dr. Chappell, who were included in my tribute. Nothing could be finer than the perfect courtesy of those brethren during the recent proceedings of the Board.

Dr. Chappell paid a high tribute to the courtesy shown to him by Chancellor Kirkland. The majority trustees showed equal courtesy to the minority. The difference in opinion was marked, but no impatient word was spoken in that meeting. Not till the matter reached the Bishops, who are exhorted in the Scriptures to be "ensamples to the flock," did we hear charges of an attempt to influence the Supreme Court of Tennessee by dangling before the public the lure of a million dollars; and the trustees were giving away the medical department, valued at from $300,000 to $500,000, while pretending to accept a gift of a million dollars to the University.

Does Brother Lagrone know that Bishop McTyeire, Chancellor Garland and Bishop Wilson held that the Board of Trustees is a self-perpetuating body? If so, does he include them in his condemnation? If not, why not?

Mr. J. B. Cornelius, of Davidson, N. C., has, within the past year, given $10,000 to the Children's Home, a North Carolina orphanage, and $20,000 to Davenport College. The increasing frequency of such benefactions upon the part of our wealthy men is a cause for gratitude to God.

The campaign in the Holston Conference to raise $75,000 for the endowment fund of Emory and Henry College has been brought to a triumphant completion. This will bring a like amount from outside sources, and the $150,000 thus added to the resources of this historic institution will insure for it a future of enlarging usefulness.

Bishop H. C. Morrison recently laid the cornerstone of a $40,000 Southern Methodist Church in Orlando, Fla., where Dr. J. E. Wray is the pastor. Dr. Wray is remarkably successful as a church-builder. It has a population of 15,000, of which about 5,000 are Moslems, and 10,000 Christians of various kinds."

The press dispatches state that representatives of Mr. Carnegie have turned over to Dr. J. H. Kirkland the $200,000 promised for the proposed medical school in Nashville. There is no doubt that the deal between these gentlemen will be carried out, even to the total elimination of the Church from any legal connection with Vanderbilt University, unless they are restrained by the strong arm of the law, as they ought to be, and as we hope they will be.

The $100 prize offered by the National Anti-Woman-Suffrage Association for the best essay against giving women the ballot was won by Mrs. F. L. Townsend, the wife of a North Carolina Methodist preacher. This triumph was achieved over nearly 1000 competitors who submitted papers on the subject. It will be remembered by some that Mrs. Townsend had some time since a brilliant article in the Methodist Review in which this question was ably discussed. She is an authoress of considerable note.

Press dispatches state that the Glenriddell manuscripts of Robert Burns have been sold by the managers of the Liverpool (England) Athenaeum to a London dealer, and by him to an American millionaire, at a price in excess of $25,000. President Wilson last week nominated Adam E. Patterson, a Negro of Oklahoma, as Register of the Treasury, a position that has been filled by Negroes for a number of years. Governor Majors of Missouri has issued a proclamation setting apart August 20 and 21 as road improvement days, and asking that all labor, so far as possible, be suspended on those days in order that every able-bodied man and work animal, together with tools and equipment, may aid in improving the highways. The Governor has secured a gasoline engine and two road graders and will himself spend the two days at hard labor. The results should not be disappointing.

The spectacle of a former Governor of Tennessee being arrested last week on the charge of loitering and his later published statement should be a warning to all men to abstain from intoxicating drinks. The once prominent statesman said that he was in an irresponsible condition as a result of drink. It is our opinion that a man is responsible for all he does while intoxicated. A sane man knows that liquor is the cause of crimes and misdeeds, and when he takes the first drink, he has volunteered to assume the responsibility for all that he does until he regains his self-control.

The English language is spoken by 130,000,000 people, German by 100,000,000, Russian by 70,000,000, French by 45,000,000, Spanish by 40,000,000, and Italian by 30,000,000. It is now claimed by some that within two generations English will be the principal language spoken in Japan. The population of Japan is 68,144,274. The English language is now being taught in some of the Japanese schools. The entire enrollment in common and high schools and universities in Japan is but 6,660,627 pupils; so it may be taken for granted that more than two generations will pass before English becomes the accepted language of the Japanese Empire.

What threatens to be a great civil war in China has recently broken out in the vicinity of Nanking. There are four Provinces that have joined together and declared their independence of Yuan Shi Kai's Government. It is also reported that Dr. Sun Yat Sen has taken side with the seceding Provinces. The present condition of China is not the best. A civil war might greatly retard the work of Christianizing that great nation. And yet, with her population of some four hundred millions of people, it is a cumbersome task to undertake to leaven the whole lump at once. Possibly with such a man as Dr. Sen at the head of a smaller republic of Chinamen friendly toward Christianity, more might be acomplished in the end.

In a recently delivered speech in Seattle, Wash., Secretary of the Navy Daniels condemned the "red flag," which is the emblem of political socialists. Secretary Daniels' remarks were unfortunate, not in what they were so much, as in where they were spoken. Seattle is a Socialist stronghold. The anti-Socialist sentiment is also very pronounced there, and the antis took advantage of the Secretary's remarks to make them their excuse for an attack upon the headquarters of the Socialists and other sympathizing organizations. Property damage amounting to more than $5000 was done. The Mayor of the city attempted to quell the riots by suppressing the publication of a Socialist paper and closing the saloons, but to no avail. The courts held that he overstepped his authority.

R. H. WYNN, President

THE NINETEENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The nineteenth annual meeting of the Board of Education was held April 29th to May 1st, at Dallas, Texas. The Educational Conference held in connection with the Board Meeting came to a close in the afternoon of May 1st. All the members of the Board were present and the Conference was attended by more than a hundred representatives from different parts of the Church. Dr. Andrew Sledd was elected a member of the Board to take the place made vacant by the death of Rev. T. H. Ware. The Board Meeting was the most important held during the present quadrennium and the Conference was of great interest. Given below are some important resolutions adopted by the Board:

"That the Comission on Education be requested to work out requirements and standards for a class of institutions to be known as Junior Colleges.

"That these Junior colleges shall consist of those now on the unclassified list and those under the title above indicated (as per the May Bulletin of 1912, pages 52-53) which give as much as two years of college work and do not confer baccalaureate degrees.

"That the institutions in said list which confer baccalaureate degrees but do not meet the requirements of the Commission for colleges within a year of the adjournment of said Commission, either take their places as Junior Colleges or raise their standards and enlarge their equipment and income so as to meet the requirements of college classification.

"That the Annual Conference Boards be advised that they are not at liberty, under the law of the Church, after the above readjustment shall have been consummated, to make appropriations to institutions which have not been properly classified by this Board."

* * * * * * * *

Whereas it appears that there is an increasing desire among educators engaged in training the young women of our Church, that greater liberty be given in preparing the courses of instruction in our girls' schools, both in the matter of required and elective subjects and the credits allowed for the same, than is now provided for by the Commission on Education; therefore, be it resolved:

"That the presidents of our female colleges, or some representative appointed by them, be constituted a committee to investigate the whole subject of a proper curriculum for our girls' schools, and report their findings to the Executive Committee of the Board by October 1, 1913, for transmission to the Commission at its next meeting. And the Secretary of this Board is hereby authorized and requested to call this above constituted committee together at such time and place as may be determined upon after correspondence with the various members thereof."

Concerning the religious education of Methodist students in state colleges and universities, the following resolutions were adopted:

"That the presence of a large number of Methodist students in state institutions of learning is a condition which demands the attention and consideration of the Church.

"That the responsibility of the religious welfare of these students is upon the Church, and can only be met by an earnest endeavor to furnish for them adequate means for their religious development.

"That we express sympathy with every sane and practical method of providing for the religious needs of young men and women in state schools.

"That we commend this work and its needs to our people, and suggest to men of means among us who are ardent friends and patrons of the state institutions the opportunity for good afforded by liberal contribution of means in providing for the religious education under the direction of the Church, of the students in state institutions."

* * * * * * * *

"It is the judgment of this committee that there are few if any more important pastoral charges in the Church and no more strategic points for the accomplishment of the largest possible results in the moral and religious life of our young men and women, than are to be found in the churches located in proximity to the large and influential institutions of learning conducted by the States. We feel that not only should our strongest ministers be placed in charge of these churches wherever it is possible, but that these pastors of college and university churches should be provided with assistant pastors who shall be charged especially with looking after the moral and religious life of the Methodist students in those colleges and universities; and if these churches themselves are not able to support these assistant pastors, we would urge upon the Board of Education and the Mission Boards of the Annual Conferences most interested to consider the wisdom and advisability of aiding such churches in providing the ministerial assistance that is needed."

On the subject of special provisions for the development of religious leaders in our colleges, the following were adopted:

"That we recognize the importance of making provision in the curricula of our colleges for those studies which serve to equip young men and women for religious leadership.

"We recommend that a group of subjects be offered by our colleges which are prepared to do so, which have for their object the equipment of religious leaders. All of our colleges offer some subjects looking to this end. Your committee has considered carefully the report of Dr. Anderson, representing the Board of Education, and Dr. Chappell, of the Sunday School Board, and feels that by co-operation definite courses of study on Sunday School Management and Methods may be worked out. It, therefore, recommends that Dr. Anderson be re-appointed to act with Dr. Chappell to work out and suggest such a course of study.

"That we appreciate the financial difficulties in the way of enlarging their courses of instruction, at least for most of our colleges, according to the suggestion above, and to meet these difficulties, we, in co-operation with the Sunday School Board, pledge our assistance in the following ways: (1) By such contributions as we are able to make; (2) by such legislation as we may be able to effect to secure means by the assessment plan; (3) by a joint effort on the part of this Board and the Sunday School Board, in securing an endowment for religious education in our colleges.

"That we call the attention of the Commission on Education to the desirability of mentioning at their next meeting the group of subjects given above as subjects of study for which credits towards degrees may be given."

The following is taken from the report on Ministerial Supply and Training, and was unanimously adopted:

"We heartily approve of the arrangement made by the Director with the Sunday School Department and the Educational Department of the Board of Missions, by which the fifth Sunday in September has been set apart as Vocation Day, and we hereby request that this day, or some other day agreeable to the Sunday School Board, be set apart annually for this purpose, and that the literature for that day be devoted to bringing to the attention of our young people the need for workers in the ministry and in the mission fields of our Church. We request our pastors and Sunday school workers to make this day an occasion of great prayer and effort that God's Spirit may have free access to the hearts of the scholars.

"We cannot emphasize too strongly the importance of this work in our schools and colleges. We recognize that the presidents and the professors of any institution are the key to the situation, and that they can accomplish more than any outside agencies. We appeal to these men and women to whom is committed the training of our choice young people that they may magnify to their students the great importance and dignity of the work of the Christian ministry. There are often great hindrances and discouragements in college life which deter young men from entering upon the work of the ministry. The outspoken approval of the faculty would be a great encouragement and stimulus. More and more it seems we must look to our own Church schools for our supply of ministers, and should those in authority there become in anywise indifferent, that supply would be diminished very greatly. We are satisfied that our school authorities will co-operate most heartily with the Board of Education in its efforts to reach our young men, and will welcome cordially any representatives which the Board may send to present this great subject to the attention of the student body."

MANSFIELD COLLEGE AND ELSE.

Dear Advocate: I am sure it will be good news to the friends of Mansfield College and the loyal Methodists of Louisiana to know that the prospects for Mansfield College for next year were never brighter. Already nearly as many boarding pupils have been enrolled as were in attendance at any one time last year, which was decidedly the best year the College has had in a number of years. I shall not be surprised to see the capacity of the building taxed this year. President Bobbitt is making an effective campaign for pupils, and is succeeding in a remarkable way. Some important improvements are now under way in the equipment of the buildings, and will be completed in time for the session.

I am also happy to report that the outlook for Centenary College is exceedingly good. I have met the new President at a number of public gatherings, and he is impressing all with his fitness for the important position to which he has been called, and is attracting pupils to the College. Unless all signs fail, Centenary is just about to enter upon the best year of its recent history.

My own congregation continues to do nice things for the pastor, his family, and for the cause generally. By unanimous vote the Board of Stewards granted me a months' vacation, with salary paid one month in advance to date. The ladies are having important improvements made at the parsonage. The families of Mr. J. M. Nabors, Dr. W. A. Nabors, and Mrs. E. A. Nabors, under the leadership of Mrs. J. M. Nabors, have furnished the church with electric fans, enabling us to worship in comfort in the hottest kind of weather. The Sunday school, under the superintendency of Mr. J. H. Thatcher, is breaking records right along. Last Sunday there were 205 in attendance, and now the mark is 300. The church debt, which has been such a distressing burden, has been paid, and there is a balance in the hands of the debt committee. Peace and harmony pervade the ranks, and by every token I regard Mansfield as the best appointment in the Louisiana Conference.

The oil boom is making great changes in our citizenship, and the volume of business has largely increased. Mansfield promises to become at an early day one of the largest and most important towns in the State.

WHAT THERE'S TIME FOR.

Lots of time for lots of things
Though it's said that time has wings.
There is always time to find
Ways of being sweet and kind,
There is always time to share
Smiles and goodness everywhere;
Time to send the frowns away,
Time a gentle word to say,
Time for helpfulness, and time
To assist the weak to climb;
Time to give a little flower,
Time for friendship any hour;
But there is no time to spare
For unkindness anywhere.

BILLIE FAIRFIELD'S PROMISE.

A. M. L. Hawes.

When Billie took the milk to Mrs. Seldon one morning, and she asked him if he would bring another quart that night, he said, "Yes'm," promptly, and then never thought of it again until he was in bed.

"Well, I can't take it now," said Billie. But he could not go to sleep, though he turned and tossed and twisted until he was tired. At last he went to the head of the stairs, and shouted: "Mother!"

Mrs. Fairfield had just threaded her needle, and stretched a stocking with a big hole in it over her hand. She said: "O dear!" But she went to see what Billie wanted.

"You'll have to go now," she said quietly, when he had told her.

"O mother! I can't go away up there alone."

Mrs. Fairfield knew that, for Billie was never out alone at night. His father had gone to bed down-stairs with the baby; and if they waked him, the baby would wake, too. So Mrs. Fairfield thought a minute. Then she said: "We'll see. I'll have the milk ready when you come down."

When Billie got into the kitchen his mother stood at the door with her hat and shawl on. Billie began to feel ashamed. He wished he dared to go alone; but he did not, for it was a lonesome road. He took the milk, and they tramped over the snow up the long hill without a word. The wind blew in their faces, and Billie's ears were cold; but he had the milk-can in one hand, and pulled his sled with the other, so there was no way to warm them. He was ashamed to ask his mother to take the milk.

Mrs. Seldon exclaimed when she opened the door: "Why, what made you come way up here to-night? And you, too, Mrs. Fairfield? It's too bad. I could have got along somehow without the milk."

"Billie promised you," Mrs. Fairfield answered. And Billie wished that nobody would look at him.

"It wasn't any matter, she said, mother," he urged when they had started for home again.

The wind was to their backs now, and Billie's ears were warm.

"The matter was your promise, Billie," said his mother. "Would you break a promise just to get rid of walking up to Mrs. Seldon's?"

Billie made no answer. He was ashamed again. Presently he asked his mother if she would slide down the hill. Mrs. Fairfield laughed. But she tucked herself up on the front of the sled, while Billie stuck on behind, and they slid down the long hill to their own yard, where Billie skillfully steered in. His mother praised the way he managed his sled; but Billie was still uncomfortable.

"Why don't you say something to me, mother?" he said, while they were warming themselves at the big coal stove.

His mother smiled at him. "I'll tell you how you will be punished, Billie," she said. "It's too late to finish mending these stockings to-night, so I shall mend them to-morrow, when I was going to make a cottage-pudding, and there'll be no pudding for dinner."

He and his father would say "cottage-pudding" to each other for a long time afterwards if anything was in danger of being neglected or forgotten. When Billie had grown to be a man and people said, "Just give me Billie Fairfield's word; that's all I want," Billie would smile, and say: "Yes, my mother taught me to keep a promise."—Sunday School Times.

FROM BROTHER MORRIS.

Dear Advocate: The account of the fund for the purchase of the old Methodist church property in Mansfield for Mansfield College is as follows:

Previously reported	$527.00
Jas. M. Wheeler, Chicago, Ill.	10.00
T. S. Matthews and brother, Shamrock, La.	20.00
Total	$557.00
Balance needed	443.00

I sincerely hope this balance may soon be subscribed, so that this indispensable property may pass into the hands of the College in time for use at the coming session. A great many people mean to help, but see no reason for hurry: yet there is need for hurry, for the whole property could be utilized to great advantage in accommodating the work as well as in beautifying the property for the fall opening.

I am happy to report that the outlook for the College is better than ever before at this time. Mansfield College has been thoroughly resurrected. Very truly,

STRAIGHT AT THE MARK.

Rev. Fred Pixton, in the Florida Christian Advocate.

But there is another thing about this whole matter that troubles me, that is, the attitude of Dr. J. H. Kirkland, Chancellor of the University. He seems to be the head and front, the leader of this whole movement to defy the Church and wrest the University from its control. After making repeated statements, running through several years, that Vanderbilt University belongs to the Church, he turns round and persistently endeavors to get it out of the Church's control. What kind of a man is he? A great scholar, no doubt; a fine administrative officer, but what about his conscience? He has put the Church to an expense of thousands of dollars in this lawsuit; add to this, the making of such a proposition to Mr. Carnegie as is indicated in his correspondence. I wonder if he has been blinded by the glitter of Carnegie's gold, and lost that fine perception of truth and right which a Christian should possess! If he does not like the situation, why does he not get out, resign, and leave the Church in peace? There are other men in our Church who can fill his place. Then there is Dr. G. B. Winton, at one time Editor of the Christian Advocate, now one of the Editors of our "Missionary Voice," a member of the Board of Trustees supporting Dr. Kirkland in this whole mater. I most earnestly disapprove of this policy of putting a man in the high places of the Church and keeping him there, and paying him a handsome salary, who is not thoroughly loyal to the law of that Church as expressed through its highest legislative body. Common honor, it seems to me, should impel him also to resign.

Let us rejoice that our Bishops are wise men and true, and that they will do all that can be done to safeguard the interests of the Church, and let us hope and pray that as the Church has won its case in the lower court, it will also win out in the higher.

AN EVANGELIST SINGER is often just what is needed to give to a revival meeting the needed element to make it a success. I have had many years experience helping pastors and evangelists. Write me for terms and open dates at 1713 Marshall Street, Shreveport, La.

Editorial.

NOT A TIME FOR CREED-MAKING.

In the Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate of June 5, appeared the following statement from the pen of its able Editor, Dr. James Cannon:

"At the General Conference of 1906, held in Birmingham, the Conference voted, by a large majority, in favor of a short statement of the belief of Methodism. Unfortunately, as this writer believes, the commission appointed was not authorized to take independent action. Before anything could be done in the way of formulating a statement it was necessary that other Methodist bodies should unite with ours in carrying out the plan. As no other Methodist body agreed to unite in such action, nothing of permanent value resulted from the appointment of the commission. Many persons never understood the real purpose of those who favored the movement. It was thought by many that it was intended to change the doctrines of the Church, to repudiate the Articles of Religion and to adopt a new series. But there was no such radical intention. It was not even intended to substitute the new statement for the old. The old statement was to remain untouched, and to continue as authoritative as before. The new statement was intended to be additional, supplemental. It was to state in simpler language and more modern form what Methodists really believe. It was intended to popularize our doctrines, and put them in such form that they could be put in the hands of our children in the place of the old-time Catechism. It was intended to lay special emphasis upon those doctrines which are vital and absolutely essential."

We claim to be one of Dr. Cannon's ardent admirers and in most things we are willing to follow, without any questioning, his leadership, but we do not concur with him either in his interpretation of the significance of the movement for a new statement of our faith which took place at Birmingham, or as to the wisdom, since that attempt proved abortive, of proceeding independently to set forth in new form our Methodist doctrines. The very resolution in which this matter was brought forward in the General Conference of 1906, "while reaffirming absolute faith in our Twenty-Five Articles of Religion," pronounced them "inadequate in their present form to meet the existing needs of the Church." So much, indeed, were they therein discredited that the scholarly Dr. J. J. Tigert registered a strong protest against this characterization of them and offered a substitute striking out this depreciatory reference to them, which was adopted. Nor should it be forgotten that Dr. W. F. Tillett, who apparently was the leader, if not the originator, of this movement for a new credal statement, in the course of his extended speech, used the following suggestive, and it seems to us somewhat contradictory, language:

"We say not that they (the Twenty-Five Articles) are erroneous or untrue, but they place the emphasis on the wrong place for our day. There is much in these Articles (notice that he does not here say that he believes the whole of them, but rather intimates that he does not.—Editor) which, while still believed by us, is not best suited to the day in which we live. The conditions, intellectual, spiritual, and practical, that exist in our day call for an expression of our faith, that is somewhat different (note these words.—Editor), and that places the emphasis, not upon sacramental errors, but upon the moral and spiritual truths of religion. But let me say that this report calls for no conflict with our restrictive rules. We would not alter in any degree these Twenty-Five Articles. We would leave them just as they are, and just where they are, to serve the intellectual and spiritual needs of any who may continue to get help and inspiration from them. Nevertheless, I for one believe that they have served their purpose by the will of God, and are now entitled to honorable superannuation."

And Dr. Tillett was by no means the only speaker in that memorable debate who showed a thinly disguised (shall we also say unconscious?) hostility to our Twenty-Five Articles of Religion. Indeed, it seems to us from reading the discussion, that though much faith was professed in them, the lack of a proper regard for them, in view of the fact that they are a part of the very constituion of our Church, was its most outstanding and regrettable feature.

To us, the claim that the proposed enactment did not in any way involve our restrictive rules is nothing short of amazing. Here is the language of the rule bearing upon this question: "The General Conference shall not revoke, alter, or change our Articles of Religion, or establish any new standard or rule of doctrine contrary to our present existing and established standards of doctrine." It was clearly contemplated by the founders of the Church that these Articles should continue in force as the accepted charter of our faith, and to substitute something else for them and to set them aside as having served their day, would obviously violate the spirit of our constitutional safeguards, if not the very letter of them. There are two ways to nullify a law: one is to strike it out, and the other is to leave it standing, but to make it nugatory and inoperative by the enactment of a later statute. This, as we see it, was, in effect, what was proposed at the Birmingham General Conference. The language of Dr. Tillett seems clearly to warrant this conclusion.

From the foregoing it is manifest that the record of the discussion in the General Conference of 1906 will not bear Dr. Cannon out in his affirmation that "the old statement was to continue as authoritative as before." To be sure, it was proposed to keep it in the book as a sort of relic of the past. It could not, with its rootage in the Church's constitution, be very well gotten rid of. The easiest way was to leave it alone. Nor was the suggested new statement to be such a simple and unpretentious recital of doctrine. Not one word was said about its being short. It was apparently to cover the whole field of what was regarded as essential in Methodist theology, and was to be ecumenical in character. It was to come with the stamp of all the leading branches of world-wide Wesleyanism upon it. Who can reasonably doubt, if such a statement had found its way into our Discipline, that it would virtually have displaced our time-honored Twenty-Five Articles as an authoritative interpretation of Methodist belief? What would have happened, may be fairly inferred from what has resulted from the changes that were made in our Ritual for the Baptism of Infants at the last General Conference. It is now not uncommon to hear it claimed that the Church has given a new and later expression of her faith as to the state of Infants and that she now no longer stands by the Seventh and Eighth of our Articles of Religion. Even representative journals of the Church have echoed this sentiment. This, in our judgment, is but a feeble indication of the deluge of such talk that we would have had if the other Methodist bodies had listened to the siren song of our would-be creed-makers in 1906.

If there be those among you who find our Twenty-Five Articles so inadequate and unsatisfactory that they must address themselves to the task of trying to secure a new and better statement of our faith, let them proceed to do so in the prescribed constitutional manner, and not by any method of indirection. A proper regard for the constitution of the Church imperatively demands this. A Rooseveltian spirit of disregard for organic law is bad enough in the affairs of State; and in the domain of church legislation it would be vastly worse. To ignore solemn obligations on the ground of expediency is proceeding upon a lower plane than Christian gentlemen can afford to move upon. Of course, we do not mean to attribute any such purpose as this to Dr. Cannon. We accept fully his declaration that what he wants is a short, simple statement of what Methodists believe, of a popular character. But if we are to have even that (which would be quite a different thing from what was sought at Birmingham), we think it should be made clear by some sort of an appended note that it is merely a deduction from our Twenty-Five Articles and other standards of doctrine, and not in any sense a revision or alteration of them, or something added to them—that they, and not the later utterance, are the constitutionally declared, and in consequence the highest and most authoritative, sources of information as to what sound and accredited Methodist teaching is.

We frankly confess that we are afraid to see the work of tinkering with our confession of faith started now. We are living in a transitional period. Men's theological opinions seem to be in a state of flux and confusion. The very air about us is rife with skepticism. And much of this is in the Church. Echoes of startling utterances in our theological seminaries are not uncommon; it is quite the fashion to have heretics to lecture in our biblical institutes, and some of our periodicals are a kind of free forum where all sorts of religious teachers may prattle forth their views. It is not a favorable season for Methodists to tear down the temple of their faith which has so long sheltered and safeguarded them, with a view to erecting another. There is no telling what strange kinds of timbers might insidiously find their way into the framework of the new structure. On this point we quote the following paragraph from Bishop A. W. Wilson's great speech at Birmingham in 1906, when the question of the proposed new statement of faith was under consideration:

"This is not the time to be making changes in the old, the venerable, the solid, the established statements of our faith which we have had throughout the centuries, and which have satisfied the broadest and best minds of our fathers. We have not done with higher criticism. Wait until it reaches its conclusions. We have not done with the assaults, the needless assaults, of science upon our faith. Wait until these things are settled. When you get the last and best conclusions of these investigations into the Scriptures of God, and their relations to our common life, when you have settled the points of agreement and difference between us and the men who are holding out the materialism of the world as its best and highest thing—when you have all these matters settled, you can come then to fix some statement in advance of anything you have, and that will perhaps move and satisfy the heart and conscience of the Church; but do not make your changes now while the air is full of discord and the notes of dissonance are jarring upon the ears from day to day, and many of our young men going into theological schools do not know exactly where they stand * * *, nor do they know when they come out. The time has not yet come for it, brethren. Let us stand where we are until we can see through the mists a little more clearly and the darkness shall be dissipated, and out of the clearer heavens shall come the only thing that can settle our faith and satisfy our consciences—the revelation of the Son of God to the heart of the whole Church. Then we may be able to state a little more definitely and accurately, perhaps, what we have in our present form of statement."

We sincerely hope that Dr. Cannon will use his brilliant talents to solve some of the other pressing problems of the Church, and not seek to galvanize and parade even in a less pretentious role this corpse, which—

"After life's fitful fever, * * sleeps well."

NEW LAURELS FOR WHITWORTH.

In the Piano Contest at the Mississippi Chautauqua, at Crystal Springs, which took place on July 29, Miss May Ellis, the representative of Whitworth College, triumphantly bore off the prize—a beautiful gold medal—over all competitors. Most of the female colleges sent pupils to represent them, and the victory is one of which the friends of Whitworth have every reason to be proud. Miss Ellis is a daughter of the Rev. H. M. Ellis, of Memphis, Tenn. She was graduated in music from Whitworth College last June. We congratulate her upon her brilliant triumph, which reflects much credit both upon herself and her historic Alma Mater.

HIS COURSE FINISHED.

In the late afternoon of Wednesday, July 30, after last week's issue of the Advocate was practically off the press, a dispatch from Dr. H. W. Featherstun brought to our office news of the death of Dr. J. M. Weems, which occurred on that day at his home in Newton, Miss. In common with a host of others throughout the State in which he lived and wrought, and elsewhere, the flashing forth of this message touched our heart with sadness; for, though our personal acquaintance with Dr. Weems was quite limited, we had known of him and had been reading the products of his pen ever since we have been in the itinerancy, and we had for him the highest veneration and esteem.

He transferred to the Mississippi Conference in 1891, and had long been one of its best known and most useful members. He was a man of scholarship and studious habits, and carried no unbeaten oil into the sanctuary. His expositions of the Word were luminous and helpful, and to sit under his ministry was a privilege that one might well covet. He was also gifted as a writer and frequently contributed entertaining and informing articles to the church press. Thoroughly orthodox, his trumpet never gave forth an uncertain sound, but ever rang clear and true. In whatever capacity he served in the ministry, he moved on high lines and bore himself as a worthy son of the King of kings. Everywhere he labored he left behind a good name and friends who were bound to him as with hooks of steel. His last work was in Laurel, Miss., and our beautiful new house of worship which rears itself aloft in that city is a monument to his fidelity and efficiency. Its walls through the coming years, with silent but eloquent tongue, will speak of him.

But a hand invisible to others beckoned him, and he has gone from us. We shall see him here no more until the morning light of eternity breaks; but his influence will long abide and tender memories of him will not soon cease to be cherished. His record is written enduringly both in the hearts of his fellow men and in the shining Book of Life on high.

"Soldier of Christ well done!
Praise he thy new employ;
And while eternal ages run,
Rest in thy Savior's joy."

Dr. Weems' wife, who survives him, is a sister of the lamented Bishop Galloway. He also leaves to mourn his death a daughter, Mrs. John A. Moore, of Magnolia, Miss. May the Heavenly Father comfort and sustain these sorrowing ones!

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. I. W. Cooper attended the meeting of the Presidents of Female Colleges which was held in Nashville, Tenn., Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

Rev. E. K. Means, pastor of our church at Arcadia, La., passed through New Orleans last Saturday on his way to Birmingham, Ala., to visit his father.

Greenville, Miss., is well represented at Monteagle, Tenn., this summer. Mrs. Robert Somerville and her daughters, Misses Eleanor and Lucy, are sojourning there, as are also Mr. W. P. Kretschmar and his wife and mother.

After a visit of several days to relatives in Memphis, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Barbee are again at home in Greenville, Miss. Though improved, we regret to state that Brother Barhee's health yet lacks much of being fully restored.

Dr. Felix R. Hill, Jr., pastor of the Rayne Memorial Church of this city, has, we regret to state, been phyisically indisposed for the past few days. His pulpit last Sunday was filled by Dr. J .M. Henry, presiding elder of the New Orleans District.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, of Jackson, Miss., was an appreciated caller at our sanctum last Monday. He has the interests of Milisaps College much on his heart, and is pleased with the encouraging reports that he is receiving concerning the next session.

The Lebanon camp meeting, which is held near Waterford, Miss., will begin on August 15. Rev. T. H. Dorsey, of Water Valley, Miss., will be the principal preacher, and the local pastor, Rev. C. T. Gregory, will act as manager. Large crowds and great interest are expected.

On August 10, the new church building at Mermentau, La., of which Rev. Martin Hebert is pastor, will be dedicated. Dr. J. W. Moore, pastor of the First Church of New Orleans, will deliver the dedicatory address, and Rev. A. S. Lutz will be present and take part in the service.

Rev. L. I. McCain, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, is now in Colorado, where he will remain for several weeks. As soon as he has fully regained his strength he will return to his pastorate at Bogalusa, La., where he is being much missed during his absence.

"Everything is moving along nicely on the Morton and Pelahatchie charge." So writes Rev. J. T. Abney, our pastor on that interesting work. The letter from this worthy itinerant also brought us a nice list of subscribers. He manifestly believes in circulating the Advocate among his parishoners.

On last Sunday Rev. J. L. Sutton, pastor of the Louisiana Avenue Church of New Orleans, and Rev. W. L. Linfield, our pastor at Biloxi, Miss., exchanged pulpits. From the reports that have reached us, it appears that each congregation was much pleased with the sermon of the visiting minister.

Rev. W. N. Dodds, our pastor on the Houlka (Miss.) charge, has the sympathy of many friends in the loss of his mother, to whom a brief tribute is paid by Rev. E. H. Cunningham in this number of the Advocate. When one's mother leaves him, earth loses much of its brightness and one is immeasurably poorer.

Rev. J. M. Wyatt, Sister Wyatt, and their daughter, Miss Kathleen, left their home at Ackerman, Miss., last week for Monteagle, Tenn., where they will spend their summer vacation. We wish them a happy season of rest and recreation at this famous resort, where refreshing mountain breezes are wont to chase away the annoying heat.

Our stirring pastor of the Rankin Street Congregation of Jackson, Miss., Rev. Ben E. Meigs, favored us with a club of five subscribers on August 1. We are grateful for this good service rendered the Advocate, and we pray that it may carry a weekly blessing to every home into which this alert worker has been instrumental in sending it.

The little daughter of Rev. and Mrs. L. C. Wilson, of Franklinton, La., underwent an operation at the Presbyterian Hospital in New Orleans last week. We are glad to report that the operation was successfully performed and that the patient is rapidly recovering. While in the city, Brother Wilson paid the Advocate office a brief call and gave a favorable report of his work.

Rev. E. L. Cargill, our pastor at Colfax, La., pleased the publisher a few days since by sending from his charge a nice list of subscribers, with a check to correspond. This is a time when the Advocate needs the help of its friends, and we hope that all our pastors who can, will remember us in this season of financial dearth. It takes money to make our linotype and printing press go.

We make grateful acknowledgement to Rev. W. W. Perry, our pastor at Haynesville, La., for several subscriptions forwarded last week. We trust that he may find himself effectively re-enforced by the Advocate in his labors for the Master in his charge. Brother Perry has also furnished us with an interesting account of his recent labors for the Master in his field, which will appear next week..

We have on our table a copy of the Quarterly Conference Bulletin issued by Rev. W. W. Jones, of Carrollton, Miss., a few days since. It contains an informing exhibit of the status of the work in his charge, and shows commendable enterprise. This conference is due to be held at McCarley next Saturday and Sunday, by Rev. B. P. Jaco, the able presiding elder of the Winona District.

A press dispatch from Meridian, Miss., to the Times-Democrat, bearing date of July 29, stated that the Finance Committee of our Central congregation in that city had reported everything in readiness to proceed with the work of constructing a $75,000 house of worship as soon as a suitable site is secured. The consummation of this enterprise would mean much for Methodism in East Mississippi.

That is fine appreciation of Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, from the pen of a Florida pastor, which we print this week. North Mississippi has every reason to be proud of its gifted and consecrated Field Worker. What is your charge doing to help maintain her in the field? This inquiry is addressed, of course, to North Mississippians. Send your pledge or remittance at once to Mr. R. M. Weaver, Corinth, Miss.

A card received at out office on July 30, brought news of the marriage of Rev. R. W. Lovett and Miss Ruby O'Neal, both of Mathiston, Miss., which occurred at that place on July 27, Rev. C. H. Dobbs officiating. Mr. Lovett is a promising young minister in the North Mississippi Conference, and the bride is said to be a most interesting and attractive young lady. We extend to the happy pair our congratulations and best wishes.

In a business letter to our office, Rev. G. A. Morgan, of Opelousas, La., adds the following interesting note: "We have recently closed a revival meeting here. Rev. R. H. Harper, of Natchitoches, La., did the preaching, and you may know it was of an excellent quality. Brother P. O. Lowrey was also with us the last two days of the meeting. We closed the meeting on Sunday, and held a Sunday School Institute the day following. I have received 20 persons into the Church up to date."

The prize-fight which was announced to take place in McDonoghville, a suburb of New Orleans, last Sunday was called off. The credit for the suppression of this slugging match belongs chiefly to our McDonoghville pastor, Rev. A. J. Gearheard, who took a brave and determined stand against it and left nothing undone to unite the moral forces of the community in opposition to it. We hope that this means the beginning of the end of such contests in the Crescent City.

Mr. Wm. Hamilton Watkins died in Chicago a few days since and was buried in New Orleans on Sunday afternoon, August 3, Dr. John T. Sawyer officiating. The deceased was the youngest of the two sons of the late Dr. John Minter Watkins, and a grandson of the Rev. Wm. H. Watkins, D. D., for many years a leading member of the Mississippi Conference. His uncle, Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, was present at the funeral, which took place from the home of his mother in this city. The departed was 32 years of age. His young wife survives him.

The Western Methodist of July 31 stated that Rev. L. M. Broyles, the pastor of the Central M. E. Church, South, of Fort Smith, Ark., had recently gone to Rochester, Minn., carrying with him Mrs. Broyles, who was expected to undergo there a serious operation. This elect lady was formerly Miss Annie Scales, of Macon, Miss., and she has a large circle of friends in the State of her nativity who will feel anxious about her until they know the outcome of the surgical treatment to which she has been forced to resort. Let the readers of the Advocate remember Brother and Sister Broyles at the throne of grace during these days of apprehension and trial.

On August 1, Mrs. Mamie D. Lewis, the wife of Rev. E. S. Lewis, our pastor at West Point, Miss., sent us the following message: "I know that you will be glad to learn that Mr. Lewis, who recently underwent surgical treatment for gall stones, continues to do well and that everything points to his recovery. This is the eighth day since the operation was performed, and we feel much encouraged. Our friends in West Point are kind and loyal. It is expected that Mr. Lewis will be out of his pulpit for six or eight weeks." We are indeed happy to have this hopeful report concerning our stricken friend, and to be able to pass it on to others who likewise will be much gratified to receive it.

In our issue of last week the interesting communication, entitled "The Seashore Epworth League Assembly," was improperly signed. Miss Corinne Avery was not its author, but a member of the Board of Directors. The article was not accompanied by any note, and Miss Avery's name, written with a pen and ink (the rest of the contribution was typewritten), appeared somewhat detached and almost in the exact place for the signature of the writer to be affixed. This was what led us into the error. Our correspondent, however, was Mrs. H. L. McCeskey, of Hazlehurst, who assumed that we had been apprised of the fact that she was to report the proceedings of the Assembly for the Advocate, when we had not, though we had asked the managers to designate some one to render this service. It is needless to say that we regret this mistake.

Dr. and Mrs. I. W. Cooper have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Bessie Chicester Cooper, to Mr. O. S. Hopkins, at Whitworth College, on Sept. 3. Miss Cooper is a most accomplished and gifted young lady, being a graduate of three of the leading colleges of the South, including the Wesleyan Female College, at Macon, Ga., and the Randolph-Macon Woman's College, at Lynchburg, Va. She taught some at Whitworth last session, and is active in Christian work, being the teacher of the Wesley Martin Bible Class of Brookhaven. Mr. Hopkins is president of the Bank of Hickory, and is a graduate of the University of Mississippi. He is a young man of most exemplary Christian character, and is a Sunday school superintendent and steward in our Church. The Advocate joins the many friends of this splendid young couple in wishing them much happiness.

We regret to be informed that Rev. H. N. McKibben, of Mayersville, Miss., has lately been somewhat hindered in his work by personal affliction, but are pleased to know that he is now much improved. He reports the arrival in his parsonage home on July 28 of a fine girl baby. We heartily congratulate the happy parents on their good fortune. Read Brother McKibben's appeal for assistance to reconstruct our demolished church at Fitler's, Miss., which appears on another page. This is the same congregation for which Brother T. W. Adams, the presiding elder of the Port Gibson District, asked help in our issue of last week. This cause is a worthy one and we hope that it will meet with a generous response from many of the brethren. We certainly need to take care of the interests of Methodism in the great Mississippi Delta, where we possess the field and other denominations are striving to gain a footing.

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1913. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

EMMA JANE SCHULTZ, the daughter of John Henry and Mary Christina Dutsch, was born July 6, 1862. She united with the Methodist Church in 1876 at what is now Waldheim, La. She was married to Rudolf Schultz, who was killed by a falling tree in 1888. She never married again, but devoted her life to raising her only child, Rudolf Schultz, Jr., and the children of her brother, Henry. She was patient and kind to all, never turning anyone away who needed her help. Trials and painful experiences were powerless to crush her, for she trusted in Him who is able to deliver, whose grace is sufficient for all our trials. She leaves only one child, Rudolf Schultz, Jr., who is a member of his mother's church at Waldheim, La. Six brothers and two sisters survive her, as follows: William and John Dutsch, of Covington, La.; Henry, Charles, Hermon and Frank Dutsch, of Waldheim, La.,; and Mrs. A. R. Cook and Mrs. A. Lenell, of Waldheim, La. May God bless her son, relatives and friends, and help us to so live that we may all meet her some sweet day in the house of many mansions. T. V. PETERS.

On July 21, we laid to rest in Pleasant Grove Cemetery, all that was mortal of one of God's saints, MRS. WILLIAM DODDS, mother of our Rev. W. N. Dodds, of the North Mississippi Conference, and of Profs. Grover and B. E. Dodds, evangelistic singers, and seven other children, who, with her husband and a host of other relatives, mourn her departure. Sister Dodds was 64 years of age, a devoted member of the Methodist Church who loved and enjoyed all things sacred, good and pure. Her entrance into the life eternal was angelically beautiful. Such calm and undisturbed approach into what she knew was death was the complement and crowning reward of the consecrated life which she had lived. One by one she called her loved ones to her side and bade them goodbye and urged that they all meet her in heaven. For a time the veil seemed to be lifted and her soul viewed the glory that awaited her on the golden shore.

Volumes could not describe her Christian character, love and devotion, or begin to tell of her resigned spirit and readiness to be summoned at her Master's call. Into her home fifteen children were born, ten of whom survive to call her blessed, for her example and teaching which led them all to Christ.

She was happy here, but is happier over there.

Mourn not the dead whose lives declare
That they have nobly borne their part,
For victory's golden crown they wear,
Reserved for every faithful heart.
They rest with glory wrapped around,
Immortal on the scroll of fame;
Their works their praises shall resound,
Their name an everlasting name.

E. H. CUNNINGHAM.

SARAH ELIZA GUY, wife of Bro. W. G. Spinks, was born Sept. 13, 1843, and died at the family residence near Irene, Miss., March 19, 1913. In the year of 1864, during the pastorate of Rev. Andrew Day, she gave her heart to God and her life to the Church, joining the Muddy Springs Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The next year, Oct. 19, 1865, she was united in marriage to W. G. Spinks, who, with two sons and one daughter, yet lives to mourn her departure. For nearly a half century she and her husband walked along the path of life, sharing each other's joys and sorrows, but now God has said to her: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, it is enough, come up higher," where there is no sorrow nor pain, but all is joy. The writer was her pastor for three years, and found her "on the Lord's side." Several times after she had lain down to walk no more here upon this earth, she said to me, "I am ready and waiting for the Lord to come." Death to her was not an ordeal but a gateway opening from earth into heaven. What joy there must have been when she went "sweeping through the gates" and was greeted by loved ones gone on before! May God carry each of the remaining ones to rejoice with her forevermore! J. LOYD DECELL.

PUT KIRKLAND OUT.

The report that obtained circulation, some time since, that the Chancellor of Vanderbilt University had received a call to some other institution of learning, and would probably accept, was gratifying to many. Rightly or wrongly, it was felt that he, more than anyone else, was responsible for the attempt to alienate the University from the Church; and for the situation arising out of that attempt, by reason of which the Church has been subjected to much trouble and expense. It was hoped that his leaving the University would remove the chief troubler of Israel, and make the solution of the problem, which he, in large part, had created, easier of solution. His decision to remain at Vanderbilt was disappointing, and somewhat inexplicable, until the offer of Mr. Carnegie became public, which seemed to afford the explanation.

* * * * * * * *

The tone in which Mr. Kirkland writes is distinctly hostile to the Church and its constituted authorities. His position in regard to the Church's interest in the University is unfriendly. That a man of his sentiment and view should continue at the head of this institution is inconsistent with every interest the Church has there.

Mr. Kirkland should be asked to resign, and allow some man to be elected in his place who is loyal to the Church, its constituted authorities and its educational program. If he will not resign, he should be put out by the quickest method that the Church can command. The longer he stays there, the more trouble he will make, and the more friends we will lose because of him.—J. Edgar Wilson, in the Florida Christian Advocate.

IN APPRECIATION OF REV. J. L. NEILL.

Whereas, Bishop Candler has transferred Rev. J. L. Neill from the Broad Street Church of Hattiesburg, Miss., to the pastorate of First Church, of Laurel, Miss., which pulpit was made vacant by the continued illness of Dr. J. M. Weems;

Be it resolved by the Board of Stewards of the Broad Street Church, that we regret that Brother Neill could not have remained the full quadrennium with our church, believing that the church has never been more prosperous than at the time of his departure;

That we found in him a most faithful and efficient pastor; a strong gospel preacher, and a Christian gentleman of the highest order, and

That we congratulate the people of his new pastorate on securing the leadership of one so active, wise, and faithful.—Board of Stewards of Broad Street Church, C. H. Colmer, Pres.

Tidings From the Field

Ida, La.

Our people of Ida feel greatly benefited by a revival which closed July 16. Rev. C. F. Staples, the pastor, was assisted by Rev. D. A. Morris, of Mt. Vernon, Ohio. There were 12 accessions to the Church, and some who will unite with other Churches. We feel in every way that the meeting was a decided success. Rev. D. A. Morris is a young man, studious and well educated, and is a power in revival work. His sermons are easily understood and carry with them the force of conviction. His audiences are ever anxious to hear him again. Apart from the spiritual benefit derived from the meeting, we feel that there is yet in store for our church and community many other blessings as a direct result of the services. Brother Morris is a fair, broadminded man, and brought to us glorious messages from the grand old Book—messages that will linger with us. He is yet engaged in revival meetings in Northwest Louisiana, and has the prayers and best wishes of the people of Ida.—J. T. Means.

Potts' Camp, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: We have just closed a most successful meeting here at Potts Camp. Rev. E. A. Tucker, of Milan, Tenn., did the preaching, and did it well. Brother Tucker is one of the best revivalists that I know. His preaching is clear and forceful, and at every service it was accompanied by the power of the Holy Spirit. There was not a service during the ten days' meeting that was not full of interest, and everybody listened in almost breathless silence as he, in his own way, broke to us the bread of life, told of the awfulness of sin, of the judgment to come, and what it meant to be lost. He can make a sinner see his true condition, and then point him to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world. Brother Tucker is one of the most thoroughly consecrated men I ever knew. He will long live in the hearts of our people. They love him and they love the Lord much better since he came. On Thursday morning he preached to the old folk, and the power of God was there and we were all happy. The service for the children on Saturday morning was one of the sweetest I have ever been in. He had each child to bring to the service three old crooked, rusty nails. These he used to illustrate a wasted life, and at the conclusion of the service each child, as well as many who were older, expressed a determination to keep his life from being like those old nails; and as a reminder each one took home with him one of these nails. Sunday afternoon there was a service for men only. This, perhaps, was the greatest service of them all. The house was full of men and the singing was led by the children's choir. Not one word was spoken that could not have been spoken in the presence of a lady, and at the close of the service nearly all came forward and gave their hands and many of them were outspoken for a better and cleaner life. About 60 were converted and reclaimed, and 20 joined our Church. Brother Tucker has been invited to come back at the same time next year and hold another meeting, which we hope will be only a continuation of the one just closed.—J. G. Johnson, Pastor.

MISS KILPATRICK'S WORK APPRECIATED.

At the Sunday School Conference, lately convened at Lakeland, Florida, it was our undisguised delight and profit unsurpassed to have as an assembly worker the illuminating and inspiring presence of your thoroughly capable field agent from Corinth, Miss. She was easily the "star," and shone radiantly at each presentation on the kaleidoscopic program lasting through two days. That was a graceful and fitting compliment the writer heard paid her by an elderly lady (our hostess), who said," "She's a comrade."

Consecrated, unaffected, loyal, intelligent, Miss Kilpatrick leads a legion of real students desiring to become experts touching present day progress in Sunday School service. The simplicity of her queenly piety presents a striking portraiture of the beauty of holiness that is refreshing. Then, too, the culture of a true Southerner sparkles through all her manner and utterance.

Long life to Miss Elizabeth, and may the influence of her wonderful gifts be far-reaching.

A FLORIDA PASTOR.

AN APPEAL.

On the evening of July 6, our church at Fitler, Miss., was demolished by wind. It was new, and was to have been dedicated July 27. We strained a point to build it, and we are willing to strain another to rebuild; but with three floods within a year's time, boll weevils in abundance, and eight to nine weeks drouth following the last flood, we need assistance, and without it, it is hardly possible for us to replace our destroyed house of worship. Shall Methodism suffer in this territory for the want of an edifice, or shall we find comfort and strength with our brethren? Any amount, great or small, will be appreciated.

H. N. McKIBBEN, Pastor,
Mayersville, Miss.

A REQUEST.

Brethren and Readers of the Advocate: Will you join me in prayer for the Ringgold charge, and especially for the two protracted meetings which are to begin on Aug. 1, running through the 25th? Our church problem in this charge is of a serious nature. I trust you brethren will request those attending prayer meetings to pray for us during the month of August. D. L. GRIFFIN, P. C.

EACH HAS HIS PART TO DO.

My share in the work of the world may be limited, but the fact that it is work makes it precious. * * * Darwin could work only half an hour at a time; yet in many diligent half-hours he laid anew the foundations of philosophy. * * * Green, the historian, tells us that the world is moved along, not only by the mighty shoves of its heroes, but also by the aggregate of the tiny pushes of each honest worker.—Helen Keller.

SOUTHERN STUDENT CONFERENCE OF Y. M. C. A. REPRESENTATIVES.

For a number of years thousands of students from all sections of the country have gathered in summer conferences. The schools, colleges and universities of the South for twenty years have been sending representative men to the Southern Student Conference.

The enthusiasm and interest which have been shown in this greatest student gathering in the South have grown from year to year. The outstanding objectives of these conferences make plain why so many of the earnest and best students have given the gathering such a place in undergraduate life.

Every thinking college student at some time is brought face to face with the opportunities and seriousness of life, and the magnitude of some of our pressing national problems. He thinks of his life in terms of the world's needs; he desires to throw himself into that thing that will call out the best there is in him and also enable him to serve his fellow men most effectively. At this gathering, Christian fellowship with hundreds of students kindles enthusiasm. A thorough study of the best and most effective methods of Christian work employed by other college men and the vision of the reality of a growing life among students are two of the forces of the Conference which are sending men back into the colleges with their lives strengthened, and with a new attitude toward God and their fellow men.

The Blue Ridge Association, at Black Mountain, North Carolina, was opened in June, 1912, and the second gathering held there was that of the Southern Students' Conference. The buildings represent the most splendid tradition of Southern Colonial architecture, and these, with the water supply, electric lights and athletic fields, makes the accommodations complete. The grounds, comprising nearly 1,000 acres, are right in the heart of the Blue Ridge Mountains. More than forty peaks can be seen from the property. Among these are the Great Craggles, the Seven Sisters Range, and Mt. Mitchell. Besides the new buildings, which include a large rooming house, dining room, and auditorium, there are tennis courts, a baseball field and a track for athletics. The entire equipment cost about $125,000. At this season of the year the climate is all that could be desired. While there are many enjoyable features at these gatherings, such as the athletics and college singing, they are primarily working conferences. Students come to deepen their spiritual lives and to carry back a great message to their college. The daily program gives one an idea of the inner workings. The mornings are given over (1) to study classes in the Bible, (2) to a discussion by the students of the outstanding problems of moral and religious work in the college, and the most approved methods of dealing with these problems, (3) to a study of the problems of social service and life investment, and (4) to hearing addresses from some of the outstanding student leaders. The afternoons are given over to various forms of recreation. The new grounds have ample facilities for games of baseball, of track events, of basketball, volleyball, tennis, and mountain climbing, which have always had a prominent place in the life of the gathering. Classes dealing with some of the pressing needs of humanity at home and in mission fields are held after supper, and there is also an address on the outstanding opportunities for life investment.

The leaders and speakers of the conferences are among the foremost in America, such as John R. Mott, Robert E. Speer, and Dr. O. E. Brown. I have just returned from the last conference as a delegate from the Mississippi A. & M. College. The instruction and inspiration that I received there cannot be estimated. No man can afford to go through college without attending at least one of these conferences. Be sure to go at your first opportunity. Ask the general secretary or any former delegate about this, and then ask to be sent as a delegate. I hope we will have more delegates from Mississippi next summer from June 14 to June 26.

ADDITIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Rally Day is an important day in the life of the Sunday school, and plans should be begun at once looking to a good program about the first Sunday in October. It would be worth while to give an entire day to this, having an invited speaker, if possible, at one service, and at the other have various Sunday school problems discussed by local workers in the school. Promotions, regrading, introducing graded literature, and an installation service for officers and teachers, as well as conferring all certificates and awards should be a part of the program. It would be well also to have a house-to-house canvass for new scholars the week ending on Rally Sunday; and the Field Secretary is even suggesting an entire week, including two Sundays and the nights between, for the Rally occasion, and has in the printer's hands a program to this end. Is not the Sunday school of such vital concern to the Church as to justify this effort?

The Field Secretary's report for July was as follows: Miles traveled by rail, 1,077, by buggy, 44; addresses delivered, 15; councils held with Sunday school workers, 4; Wesley Adult Bible classes organized or planned for organization, 12; Home Departments organized, 6; Cradle Rolls, 5; Teachers' Meetings established, 2; Missionary Departments organized, 1; systems of grading and recognition of scholars and classes introduced, 3; expense account, $16.40, 5.42 of which was raised from local schools; raised on the deficit against the Sunday School Board, $50. The schools at Glenmora, Opelousas, Lawtelle, Standard, Urania, Olla, and Divis' Springs were visited. An institute was held at Pineville, and the Ruston District Conference at Athens was attended, as was the DeSoto Parish Sunday School Convention at South Mansfield.

ATTENTION!

Several weeks ago we published some facts concerning Laredo Seminary; also made known some very urgent wants of the school. Our column was somewhat crowded that week and the list of articles needed did not secure as prominent a place as we desired. We fear some of our women failed to see it at all, for we have received no responses from the appeal. Surely the women of Mississippi and Louisiana are not going to lose this opportunity to help. We are going to publish again the articles needed, and hope many auxiliaries throughout the Conferences will respond promptly and liberally.

For Laredo, at Once.

200 sheets, three-quarter size,
12 counterpanes, regular size,
12 counterpanes, single-bed size,
200 pillow-slips, 18x28,
20 table-cloths, 4 yards long,
36 linen dinner napkins,
24 guest towels,
24 plain towels,
48 roller towels,
48 white aprons for serving in dining room,
48 gingham aprons for dish-washers.

Write Dr. J. M. Skinner, Laredo, Tex.; tell him your auxiliary will send a box or barrel, when and what will be sent in it. If you send now you will have time to send by freight and thus it will cost very little. Write to the editor of your woman's page when you send, that she may keep a list on the page; also report the donation through your Conference Superintendent of Supplies.

AWAKENING BRAHMINS.

According to the quotation from the Lahare "Tribune" in the "Literary Digest" the Brahmins of India have had an awakening from the sleep of centuries. A convention of Brahmin priests has been held at Amritsar, the second largest city of Punjab, attended by a thousand delegates. This convention adopted a remarkable set of resolutions, "some of which laid violent hands upon venerable Brahmin customs and superstitions accepted by some 217,000,000 human beings." One of these resolutions expressed the opinion that the Brahmins ought to work for a living and not subsist upon charity. Another enjoined upon all Brahmins as their first duty to get an education. Perhaps the most radical resolution was the injunction upon all Brahmins to support Brahmin widows and care for the orphan and poor Brahmin children. The president of the convention is reported as urging upon all that they maintain a high moral character and purity of mind, and be truthful and honest in all their dealings. This convention and its conclusions may well be regarded as one of the by-products of Christianity in India.—Christian Observer.

THE DENDO-DAN.

The Dendo-Dan is an independent organization of Christian Japanese on the Pacific Coast. The Dendo-Dan believe in a few years—say ten—the Japanese Christians will be able to carry on all the evangelistic work on this coast among their countrymen without the aid of the Boards, provided the Boards now engaged in Japanese work will assist them at the present time. They contemplate the organization of a Japanese Christian Church in which all Christian Japanese will unite.

THE WORK AT BILOXI, MISS.

Our Home Department leaflet for August consists of a series of tableaux portrayed by our deaconess, Miss Myrtle Long, who labors at Biloxi. She tells of a christening service which fills us with horror. It was in one of the factory homes and occurred on a Sunday afternoon. The priest had performed the ceremony and then great hilarity prevailed. Beer, wine and whiskey caused the hilarious time. Can you think of a more shocking way to celebrate the christening of a little innocent baby?

She tells of another family where the father drank. Their bed was one mattress on the floor. Often drunken men spent the night with the father. The little ten-year-old daughter prepared the meals, cared for the baby, and worked in the factory. Heavy tasks for such young shoulders!

In another home a woman thirty years of age, the mother of fifteen children, was found surrounded by disorder and filth. A little baby, nine months old, was seated on the floor playing with a whiskey flask and a deck of cards.

The women working in the oyster and shrimp factories go to their work as early as three o'clock in the morning, often not returning until seven o'clock in the evening. And for these long hours a mere pittance is earned which barely keeps the "wolf from the door." Starved bodies, and starved souls! Who will say there isn't need for a deaconess here? The only ray of sunshine and the only hope in life come as the result of her visits and her ministerings.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Mr. R. A. Maddox.

Brother pastor and superintendent, have you taken your Children's Day and 3-cent assessment collections yet? If you have not, hurry and do it for fear you forget. The Forest charge will report about $40 for Sunday school work.

The work of the Field Secretary on the Deasonville, Fannin and Utica charges for the month of July was very satisfactory. At every place a collection was taken for the support of the Sunday school work, which amounted to a total of $22.55.

There is a Teacher Training Class at Goshen Springs, on the Fannin charge, with 18 members. The Field Secretary had the pleasure of teaching the class the first lesson in the Legion of Honor, and never saw a more interesting class. The Goshen Springs people do things in the right way.

The night of July 24 will ever be remembered by the Men's Bible Class of the Capitol Street Methodist Church of Jackson, Miss. A good banquet was given at the Edwards Hotel by the class, with 80 present. This class has grown from 16 to a membership of 144. There were some very interesting talks made by members of the class and visitors. The toastmaster, Dr. N. C. Womack, introduced the presiding elder of the Jackson District, Rev. P. D. Hardin, who, in his usual style, made a very interesting and profitable talk, which was an expression of his soul. He was followed by the teacher of the class, Prof. O. H. Wingfield, who spoke on "My Estimation of My Class." Next came a talk from Mr. W. S. Ridgway, assistant teacher of the class; and he was followed by Mr. M. S. Enoch, president of the class, who outlined the work done and to be done by the class. Others made talks worthy of mention, but we haven't the space to make mention of them all. One talk we cannot fail to mention, however, was by a man who received a blessing and had to tell it. He said he had not been to church in 10 or 15 years, but after being present with that class he was ready to get in line, and was also ready to help the class with his money. That is one of the objects of the Organized Bible Class. Let all classes be busy. Help your brother! Help your pastor!

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Bishop Vincent says, "The Sunday school fulfills a divinely inspired command of Christ. 'Go preach!' produced the pulpit, and 'Go teach!' guarantees the Sunday school. In whatever form it may have been presented to the Church, the teaching precept is in the divine command."

The Yonng Men's Bible Class of the First Methodist Church of Corinth, Miss., enjoyed a splendid Brunswich Stew on Friday afternoon, July 25, at the Fair Grounds. A large crowd, fine fellowship, and an hour or two in God's great out-of-doors rewarded the committee that had worked so faithfully for the success of the enterprise.

The trouble with many Sunday schools is that they never get beyond the letter A in their activities—Alarm, Arouse, Arithmetic—and then they settle back into their accustomed rut. They alarmed, aroused and counted the new members and felt that the program was complete, when it was only begun. The members can never be held unless they are given something to do individually.

The enthusiastic superintendent of the Marshall Institute Sunday school near Collierville, Tenn., has, by request, furnished us with an account of a Sunday school picnic enjoyed by all the schools on this charge. The church, situated under splendid oaks, was crowded by 9 o'clock. Horses were hitched for a block away and everything was done for comfort. Songs and recitations by the various Sunday schools were the first thing on the program, which were followed by a fine address by Rev. W. M. Williams of the Orphans' Home. Dinner, in abundance, and plenty of cool water filled in the intermission, and at two o'clock the pastor, Rev. W. R. Williams, after a helpful address, introduced the most interesting part of the program. Three Sunday schools—Union, Mt. Pleasant and Marshall Institute—contested for a banner. The Field Secretary had sent 50 questions, on this quarter's Sunday school lessons, to the pastor. Prof. W. H. Adamson, of Texas, asked the questions, and there were forty-eight questions answered correctly, Union winning by five-twelfhs over Marshall. This was a splendid and close contest. Rev. A. B. Jones, of Collierville, gave an interesting address and presented the banner to the successful and much-to-be-congratulated Union Sunday school. This is one of the new and fine signs of our great Sunday school progress, that a picnic should combine pleasure and profit, and it is to be hoped that many other rural charges may follow this example. Superintendent W. W. Stamps, a very busy man, was tireless in his efforts to bring about this successful result.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

The Baird Class of the First Methodist Church of Shreveport now numbers about 400 members. Among other acts of service, the class is seating the auditorium of the new Church at a cost of $2,000, and until recently supported two children at the Orphanage. The class is divided into groups with leaders over each, and these groups keep their records separate and strive to excel each other in the regularity of their attendance. Among other original things, the class is planning to have an "official stenographer" and take the photograph of every member and make a "picture gallery" of all those who become members, though only for a short time. A corresponding secretary keeps up with absent members and Mr. Baird, the teacher, is planning to have literature sent them regularly and to hold their membership even in their absence.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTES.

We call the Louisiana Conference Sunday school workers' attention to the following list of two nights and a day institutes to which we most cordially invite them to come and to bring delegations from their schools, according to the convenience of the location. We are trying by all reasonable means to get our workers together for counsel and fellowship, believing that thus we can get them to helping each other, as well as enlist them in enlarging our Sunday school work. Other institutes at central points will be announced from time to time. Will not our pastors and superintendents at once see to arranging delegations for the institutes near them, and stand by us in this effort to strengthen our Methodist Sunday school work in Louisiana?

The institutes thus far announced and arranged with good programs are: Patterson, Aug. 11-12; Kiethville, Aug. 15 (all day with dinner on the ground); West Monroe, Aug. 19-20; Winnsboro, Aug. 26-27; Selma, Sept. 9-10, and Bernice, Sept. 16-17. The pastors at these places will answer further inquiries, and entertainment will be provided for all who give due notice of their purpose to attend. Is not this notice sufficient without a further effort in the way of advertising, to bring out a good attendance?

Yours for more and better Sunday schools,
P. O. LOWREY.

STILL OUR HELPER AND GUIDE.

Sometimes we fear that the greatest weakness of the Church in this age is its failure properly to recognize and honor the Holy Ghost as its divinely sent Helper. The most outstanding thing in the inspired history of the early disciples was the wonderful superintendency of this Third Person of the adorable Trinity in their affairs. By order of the Master, they tarried at Jerusalem until He came; they sought His counsel in all their plannings; they dared not go forward with any undertaking until they felt that they had His sanction. He was not merely the witnesser to them of sonship and adoption in the hour of conversion; they realized that the disclosure of that glorious relation was only one of His many offices. They knew that He had been sent forth from the Father and the Son to be their Co-worker, their Teacher, and their Guide. They labored under His direction, and he was the constant testifier to them of God's presence and approval. They knew His voice, and hearkened to it when He gently called.

We are still living in the Pentecostal Age. None of the promises made concerning the coming and work of the Holy Spirit have been revoked. True, we can hardly now expect any miraculous manifestations of His presence—they were unusual even in that period. Nor were they the best and most needed exhibitions of His power. The glory of Pentecost was not in the visible tongues of fire, nor in the noise as of a rushing wind, nor in the miraculous speaking of many languages, but in the illumination and purification of human hearts and in the bringing of thousands into the Kingdom. This highest and divinest of His works the Holy Spirit is still performing in the world. And His enduement of power and daily guidance may still be had by those who rightly seek them. He who prepared Paul for Annanias and Annanias for Paul, who brought Peter and Cornelius together when each had been made ready for the meeting, will prepare the needy for our coming and lead us to them in this day, if we will only let Him. Why should we struggle along in our ignorance and in our own puny strength, when so gracious and mighty a Helper is at hand? The simple lesson of letting the Holy Spirit possess and use us is the one that the vast majority of Christians most need to learn.

A MIGHTY INTELLECTUAL STIMULUS.

The Bible is much criticised and sneered at in this day, but it is still the world's most popular and influential book. Indeed, in this respect it stands supreme and without a rival. As Mr. William J. Bryan has said, with all our boasted progress in learning and enlightenment, the modern scholars and writers have been able to produce nothing that remotely approaches it. A large share of the world's intellectual activity is directly traceable to this marvelous volume, to say nothing of its indirect influence upon the various civilizations of the globe.

In the August number of the The Bible Magazine (New York) President G. R. Grose, of De Pauw University, touches upon this point in a most impressive manner. We quote briefly from his utterance, though we do not wish to be understood as wholly endorsing his view as to the composition of the Sacred Canon:

"Here is a unique library composed of sixty-six books, written in three languages by thirty different writers; its composition covering a period of a thousand years. In this collection of pamphlets and books is gathered almost every variety of literature—history, fiction, poetry, romance, orations, sermons, codes of law, doctrinal expositions, prophecies, and apocalypses. The Bible in its myriad phases 'addresses and creates alert intelligence.' A prominent educator has well said it is 'the most important single educative force in the modern world. Millions have learned to read in order that they might learn to read the Bible; students by the thousands are studying Greek simply to read the New Testament.' The Hebrew language would long ago have been lost to the Christian world but for the desire to read the ipissima verba of Israel's prophets and sages. * * * * * * * 'The Bible has performed in modern times a vastly greater educational service than the entire classical literature of the Greeks and Romans.'"

MARRIAGE HELPFUL.

The present age is characterized by an increasing disinclination to matrimony and a decreasing birthrate. In some of the nations these tendencies have developed to such an extent as to become alarming and to call for public legislation designed to correct them. The student of history knows that wherever these symptoms exist they are unfavorable indications as to the health and progress of society; that almost invariably they have been strikingly manifest in the dacadent civilizations of the past. The words of the Almighty, "It is not good that man should be alone," find attestation of their correctness on every side. It is as a home-maker that man attains his highest usefulness on earth and contributes most to the upbuilding of the social order. It is also in the family circle that he realizes his own fullest happiness and largest welfare in this present sphere of existence. The individual who elects to be a bachelor in order to escape the responsibilities of caring for a family loses by such a course vastly more than he gains. For one thing, the wedded man has all the better of it in the way of longevity, as is shown by the following quotation from the New York Independent of July 17:

"In these days of decrease in the marriage rate and late marriages it would be well for people generally to realize that while marriage is not exactly an insurance policy against death and disease, there is probably no single factor that makes so much for the prolongation of life and freedom from the accidents and ailments which often prove fatal to men, though to a less extent to women. The old impression is not only fully confirmed, but the statistical results go far beyond it. The married man's expectancy of life after the age of twenty is nearly double that of the bachelor. In marrying, a man takes not only a better half but he adds to the length of life that he shall live, provided ill fortune or ill conduct does not take his wife away from him by death or divorce."

JUST LET THEM WAIT A LITTLE!

Of all the ridiculous suggestions that have been made in the controversy that the Kirkland-Carnegie deal has brought on, the one that our Methodist people generally do not endorse the position of our Bishops, takes the prize. If those who have intimated this are really sincere, what a rude awakening awaits them in the near future! The majority of the Vanderbilt Trustees were assured just before the meeting of the last General Conference that the Church would stand with Chancellor Kirkland, but they could not muster a corporal's guard in Asheville. And we predict that in this latest bid which they have made for favor, the Trustees will have even less following than they had before. Few of our members are so lost to a sense of decency and self-respect that they do not see the iniquitous significance of an $800,000 prize being hung up as a reward for a decision against the Church in the Vanderbilt lawsuit. The scandal of such a thing is utterly repugnant to them. Already the District Conferences in various places are beginning to speak, and there is no uncertain sound in what they are saying. Soon the Annual Conferences will begin to be heard from, and when they do it will be like the noise of mighty thunderings. Before many moons have passed some of those who are now talking about the people, will be heard lustily crying, "From the people, good Lord, deliver us!"

Soon after the last General Conference, Dr. G. B. Winton was elected President of the Alumni Association of Vanderbilt University, and Dr. Kirkland in addressing that body said: "I am certainly gratified that Dr. Winton can get elected to something. And if he will always run with the right crowd, we will elect him to something else." (See Vanderbilt University Quarterly, July-September, 1910, Page 193.) If the Chancellor is going to be equally kind to all his other clerical supporters in this rebellion against the authority of the Church, and see that they are taken care of, we dare say that he will have his hands quite full at no distant day.

Some snarling cynic has defined gratitude as a "lively sense of favors expected." If your neighbor passes over the back fence some snap-beans for your dinner, whilst you thank him, you have your furtive eyes expectantly upon his roasting-ears and cabbages, that you secretly hope will take the same route as the beans. Such a view is belittling. Disinterested benevolence is quite common. When the Master had lost his popularity, and already hatred was triumphing, a little company gathered at Bethany, in the house of the leper, and Mary broke the alabaster box of ointment and poured it upon his feet. The pages of the world's history are bright with accounts of the gifts and deeds of unselfish affection.

A NEW CREATURE.

By Dr. John T. Sawyer.

The man who is converted to Christianity is not mended but new-made. Dr. Clarke tells us: "It is vain for a man to profess affinity to Christ according to the flesh, while he is unchanged in his heart and life, and dead in trespasses and sins; for he that is in Christ, that is, a genuine Christian, having Christ dwelling in his heart by faith, is a new creature; his old state is changed; he was a child of Satan, he is now a child of God; he was a slave of sin and his works were death; he is now made free from sin, and has his fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. He was before full of pride and wrath; he is now meek and humble. He formerly had his portion in this life, and lived for this world alone; he now has God for his portion and he looks not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are eternal."

If, then, a man in order to be a true Christian must be a new creature, the old things passing away and all things becoming new, as Paul puts it, it follows that Christ has not only done a work for but in every believer, saving not only from the guilt of sin, but also from its power. Believers are called the elect; if so, it is "through sanctification of the Spirit." They are said to be pre-destined; if so, it is "to be conformed to the image of his Son." They are chosen; if so, it is "that they may be holy before Him in love." Hence, a holy life is as good evidence as a man can give that he has a living and not a mere dead faith, for genuine faith "worketh by love and purifieth the heart." Some one has well remarked: "Say not that thou hast royal blood in thy veins, and art born of God, except thou canst prove thy pedigree by daring to be holy." If a professor of religion had rather gossip at home or in the house of his neighbor than to take part in a prayer or experience meeting; if he had rather listen to sermons than to practice one of them; if he had rather dissect the preachers and criticise their pulpit manners than to pray for their success or labor for and with them; if he had rather talk about and condemn the many sins he sees in his brethren than to mortify one sin in himself; if he had rather read the newspaper or a novel than God's Holy Word; if he had rather go to the dance, or the theater, or some other essentially worldly assembly than to let his light shine by staying away; in brief, if he acts as though the holiness of Christ was intended to save him the trouble of being holy, he may be sure that, however it may seem to himself or others, his religion is in fact no more than the cant of the hyprocrite or the ravings of a self-deceiver. Such can never be the religion of one who, born of God, is a new creature in Christ Jesus.

It is a mark of the new creature that he has a new and positive love for the Bible. How natural for the young Christian to say, "Why, the old Bible seems like a new book to me now." And it is to him practically a new book. From his earliest years he has been taught, it may be, to read and reverence it; he memorized portions of it in the Sunday school and has acquired a general knowledge of its make-up and contents. No sooner, however, does he truly believe on Christ than a marvelous beauty, never before discovered by him, gleams out upon him from the pages of the old Book. Why is this? Because the same blessed Spirit who inspired the Bible has taken possession of his heart, leading him not only to love the Bible, but opening his eyes to "discern the things of the Spirit."

Right here, it is proper to state that one chief reason why there is so much stunted piety in the Church is that many Christians fail to go on reading their Bibles with the glow and spiritual insight that comes immediately after conversion. They feed more upon harangues about religion and on the weak theology of some of the popular hymns of the day than they do on the pure, unadulterated word of truth. The holiest men in all the ages gone—the men of sturdy piety, vigorous faith and unbending principle—gathered strength from reading and meditating upon God's Word. Those who are most useful in our churches to-day are Bible Christians; feeding upon the Word of God as its sacred pages are lit up, and its inner, spiritual meaning discovered to them by the Holy Spirit—such men are the ones who, in the expressive language of another, "are enabled to strike the kingdom of darkness with blows resounding through eternity." Of a truth, that is a sickly piety that is mainly fed on public meetings, narratives, emotional hymns, sermons and mere excitements. Every Christian should be careful to feed upon the Word of Life.

Let us give an old yet apt illustration just here. Suppose a poor widow left with an only son, and that, years ago, the son went off to lead a sailor's life. One day, while her pastor is with her and they are engaged in religious conversation, a knock is heard at the door and a letter is handed in. At first glance, recognizing the hand-writing of her long lost son, her whole countenance is bathed in joy as she exclaims—"My son is yet alive!" And how eagerly she devours every word of that letter. Suppose, however, instead of thus eagerly reading that letter, she had carefully laid it upon a shelf until the dust of weeks had accumulated upon it before she read it. Had she done so, would she have shown any evidence of love for her son? Or, suppose that after a long time she had taken it down just from a cold sense of duty, or to satisfy conscience, yawning and dozing at the end of each paragraph, would there have been in that any evidence of love for her son? Assuredly not—there would have been nothing of mother-love in all that—and, though she might profess to love her son, her actions would flatly contradict her profession.

The Bible has been called a letter from the Father of love from whom we have been so long estranged. It tells of the feelings of his heart toward us and he therein kindly invites us to return to the enjoyment of his favor. If we take little or no interest or pleasure in reading it; if we are not willing to make sacrifices to understand it more fully; if we are delighted with the light, trifling and pernicious literature of the day, and regard the Bible as dry and uninteresting, we may be assured it is because "the love of the Father is not in us." Fed upon by us, hid away in our hearts, enshrined in our affections, God's Word will be to us a sure guide through a world of darkness and perplexity, drying up our tears of sorrow, cheering our saddened hearts, invigorating our inner man, and flashing for us the light of its glorious promises across the valley of the shadow of death.

The new creature has an absorbing love for the Lord Jesus Christ. In battle an officer who had become engaged in a hand-to-hand conflict with one of the enemy, slipped and fell to the ground: instantly, his opponent's sword was lifted for his destruction, when one of his men who loved him threw himself between him and the uplifted weapon and received it in his own heart. Do you not suppose that love to overflowing must have filled the officer's heart, as he arose from the ground covered with the blood of the man who had laid down his life for him? Ah, how is it possible for any one to believe that Jesus interposed his precious self and life between the sword of Divine Justice and his guilty heart, without feeling for his Lord and Savior a boundless love? Wherever we may roam the wide world over, and under all the circumstances in which they may be, we shall find that genuine Christians are able to say as did Peter under the very eye of the Master: "Lord, thou knowest all things, thou knowest that I love thee."

A wounded French soldier from the battle field of Waterloo lay upon the operating table. As the surgeon began to probe for the fatal bullet, the dying man started with a convulsive effort and exclaimed: "A little deeper and you will find the Emperor," meaning that he had Napoleon in his heart. So, wherever you find a real Christian, be his color what it may, be it in the torrid, temperate or frigid zone, you will find that, deeper than the love of home, deeper than the love of kindred, deeper than the love of life itself, deeper than all other loves, is the love of the Lord Jesus. A primitive Christian, brought to the bar of Trajan, was asked, "Art thou a Christian?" His answer was: "I am. I have Christ in me." Trajan then urged him to deny Christ, when he exclaimed, "What! shall I deny my Lord and Master? I have Christ in me." He was immediately led to martyrdom. Ah, yes! if we are indeed new creatures the love of our Lord literally possesses us, and we can suffer and dare all for his dear sake.

Among the very first feelings produced by the belief of the Gospel is joy, and the next is love. Were you in a burning building and could see no way of escape, and some person were to rush in and save your life, bringing you out of the flames, your first emotion would be joy because of your deliverance, but your quick second emotion would be that of gratitude and love to your deliverer. Just so, the genuine convert is found to abandon the scenes of his former gaiety and worldly pleasure wherein he likely bore a conspicuous part. Why? Because he has gotten his heart fixed upon something better. His new-found joy in God and his love to Jesus have given him new enjoyments as much superior to those of the world as the glorious sun is to the fitful light of the taper. His old friends may think that the reason he has left the dance and theater is the dread of hell, or the fear of church censure, or a desire to stand well with his new associates, but they are greatly mistaken. The truth is, he has ceased to find pleasure where before he so eagerly sought it, having begun to drink of those rivers of purest pleasure that are to gladden his soul forever. It is said "a deep trench surrounded the walls of ancient Babylon and that, when opened, it was so deep and large that it could absorb the waters of the great river Euphrates and leave its channel dry." So, the love of Jesus produces such full and satisfying joy in the soul, that all the purely worldly channels of joy and pleasure are left dry and worthless.

The new creature is not engaged running out after worldly and sinful pleasures; and when professors of religion are heard inquiring what harm there can be in those things which the world loves and to which worldlings are devoted, it may be put down as a sure sign that the love of Christ is declining in their hearts. Some church people, in the excess of what they style "liberalism and intelligent Christianity," are ready themselves, and to allow the same to others, to walk partly with Christ and partly with the great multitude that throngs the road to death. Such leaning towards that which essentially belongs to and distinguishes the worldly is doubtless an attempt to get something to satisfy conscience and is a virtual declaration that the Bread of Life which cometh down from above does not satisfy, and that therefore they are anxious to find some excuse for getting back to the service of Satan.

Instead of a church member arguing the rightness or the wrongness of those "diversions which cannot be taken in the name of the Lord," and in regard to the sinfulness of which no truly spiritual person can have a doubt, it were better for him to examine his own heart. The Lord has not only warned his people against going back but even looking back, and they are instructed not to seem to come short. They are to shun the very appearance of evil.

Another mark of one's being a new creature in Christ Jesus is a burning desire to rescue perishing souls. If we truly love the Lord Jesus, we see in him not only our own personal Savior but the Savior of the whole lost race of man. Communing with him and he with us, we are sure to have within us a love for sinners akin to his, and to be profoundly impressed with the tremendous fact that he has shed his precious blood for them and longs for their salvation with an infinite longing and solicitude. When we proclaim, as we believe all true Christians can, "Lord, thou knowest all things, thou knowest that I love thee," he asks us as an evidence of our love for him, to go straight to the dying souls around us and, telling them the story of his love, urge them to flee the wrath to come. As we love the Lord who bought us, as we value an eternity of bliss, and as we would not in the day of judgment have the blood of souls upon us, we must, God helping us, do our best to pluck men and women as "brands from the burning." To be privileged to tell the story of the cross; to stand between the Eternal God and perishing men, who are madly rushing on to endless ruin; to thus stand and plead, entreating them to be reconciled to God, is the most solemn, as well as the grandest, work for mortal man this side of eternity. Thank God, this glorious work is not committed to the ministry alone, for it is written: "Let him that heareth, say come." Every saved child of God, (of the ministry and laity, too), may and should engage in the blessed work of winning souls. Just think of it—the men and women whom we daily meet are not the creatures of a day—all is not over with them when they pass the boundary line between time and eternity; no, no! for they are to live as long as God lives, forever, in unspeakable bliss or in woe beyond conception. In a most real sense, every one who has heard, and been made a new creature, is his brother's keeper and a seeker of souls. Under the weight of responsibility in this matter of helping souls to Christ an angel might tremble; and it would surely crush the Christian to earth, if with the command our Lord had not promised his sufficient strength. The Christian's part is the telling of "the old, old story" and the daily living of the truth as it is in Jesus; God's part, and he will do it, is the giving of success.

A PREACHER'S RETORT.

A modestly dressed preacher and a gorgeously bedecked young man sat down at the same table in the dining car. The preacher opened the conversation and they chatted pleasantly till a waiter came to take their orders. The preacher gave a simple order of roast beef and coffee, but the gorgeous young man ordered an elaborate spread of many dainty dishes, requiring nearly $5 to settle the bill.

Immediately the conversation began to lag, and, when the meal was served it ceased altogether. The gorgeous young man looked off as he devoured his sumptuous feast, now and then casting a furtive and ever increasingly contemptuous glance at his modest companion.

The preacher's meal was soon ended, and, as he rose and reached for his hat, the gorgeous young man, addressing the gentleman across the aisle, and referring by a nod of his head to the standing preacher, said in a loud and contemptuous voice, heard all over the car: "Some darned fellows are too cussed stingy to buy enough to eat. What's money for, if it ain't to get what you want?"

Instantly the preacher wheeled to face the speaker, his cheeks flushed crimson, his eyes flashing fire. But before he could speak the humor of the situation struck him. His face relaxed into a smile, and reaching again for his hat, he remarked quietly but distinctly, as if merely repeating a favorite proverb: "Blessed is he who considereth the limitations of his own purse, and attendeth diligently to his own business; for, verily, when the asses are branded, he shall escape."

A rotund old gentleman at a rear table broke into a roaring laugh and saluted with a wave of his hand, and there was a general nod of approval. As the now smiling preacher passed out of the diner, the two ladies at the first table smiled and bowed and clapped their hands.

EARLY TIMES OF METHODISM IN NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

V.

The year 1837 was crowned with great success in the Holly Springs District. A new circuit had been organized in the northeastern part of the State called Tishomingo.

"The work was still enlarging and assuming a higher importance in the Chickasaw Purchase. The rich lands had invited a superior class of families to settle in the Purchase and their elevated grade in society required a fair proportion of the best talent in the Conference to be stationed among them.

"The area of the settlements had so enlarged that it became necessary to organize a new District south of Holly Springs, which took the name of Grenada. The principal enlargement of the work which made the new District necessary was in the direction of Choctaw and Chickasaw Counties, around the headwaters of the Big Black and Yallabusha Rivers." (See Jones' History of Methodism, etc.; Vol. 2, Page 397.)

At the Conference held in Natchez, in December, 1837, with Bishop Andrew presiding, the following appointmens were made:

Holly Springs District, John M. Holland, P. E.; Holly Springs, Joseph Travis; Holly Springs Circuit, W. Craig, W. B. Walker; Salem, John W. Ellis; Oxford, A. J. S. Harris; Pontotoc, Samuel M. Kingston; Tishomingo, N. R. Jarrett.

Grenada District, D. O. Shattuck, P. E.; Grenada, William Pearson; Coffeeville, John D. Deskins; Choctaw, Wm. McD. Martin; Chicasaw Mission, Wm. G. Gold; Yallabusha, John D. Neal.

Rev. John M. Holland, presiding elder of the Holly Springs District, was a recent transfer from the Tennessee Conference. He was born in Williamson County, Tenn., in 1802 or 1803; was admitted into the Tennessee Conference, on trial in the autumn of 1822. There he served effectively circuits, stations and districts until his transfer to the Mississippi Conference in 1837.

He served on the Holly Springs District two years and as agent for the Holly Springs University one year. At the close of 1840, by the change of Conference boundaries, he fell into the Memphis Conference and was made presiding elder of the Memphis District, where he closed his earthly labors in the prime and vigor of his manhood. "During the latter part of the summer of 1841 while on a remote portion of the District, he was taken sick and was conveyed to the town of Bolivar, where on the 18th of August he fell asleep in Jesus. He died away from home; died at his post; died giving glory to God. His remains were interred in Bolivar.

"Few men combined so many elements necessary to constitute an able preacher as did Mr. Holland. His person was attractive. He was about five feet ten inches in height, slender, but very erect and elastic; his face was smooth and complexion ruddy; his hair dark and eyes black; his features well formed and his countenance open and very pleasant. His manner in the pulpit was easy and graceful—no ostentation—no attempt at display. His voice was full, clear and musical; his articulation was distinct. His style was chaste and his words well chosen. His mind was logical and his exposition of the Scriptures clear and satisfying. His sermons were well matured and delivered with earnestness and power and they seldom failed to produce conviction in the minds of his hearers. It was not uncommon for his whole audience to be sensibly moved under his preaching.

"He was an indefatigable laborer—nothing was suffered to divert him from his work. In the city and on the frontier, he was always found at his post, the faithful and earnest preacher, and the ever watchful, diligent and devoted pastor.

"He was an itinerant indeed. In the Cumberland Mountains, in the Valley of Middle Tennessee, in North Alabama, through the western portion of his native State as far as the banks of the Mississippi River, and in Mississippi as far south as the waters of the Yallabusha this eminent servant of Christ proclaimed in eloquent strains the tidings of salvation and was instrumental in bringing many souls to God." (See McFerrin's History of Methodism in Tennessee. Vol. 3, Pages 87-91.)

In his "Autobiography" Rev. Joseph Travis, who was associated with him two years in Holly Springs, thus writes of him: "He was an experimental and practical preacher, excelled by few. He was unfortunate in his temporal affairs. The Mississippi epidemic (speculation) had well nigh ruined him in some unguarded trades; yet he maintained his piety and zeal to the last. * * * * * By some of the enemies of Christ he was persecuted and spoken evil of, and I am sorry to add that some members of the Church treated him unkindly."

But of the integrity of John M. Holland there was never any doubt by the masses of sober thinking people who were cognizant of the facts, as this writer has frequently heard from those who knew him well. G. W. BACHMAN.

PREACHER PRESIDENTS AND PROFESSORS.

Editor Advocate: In your issue of July 24 is an article by "A Methodist Layman," confessing to unwonted frankness and benevolence, manifesting meanwhile undisguised and unwarranted prejudice against the prevailing custom of our Methodism placing preachers in charge of our educational institutions and in professorships. And he lodges the allegation that the unduly small patronage of our schools and colleges is in consequence of said custom.

He proceeds (and being a layman it is not surprising) upon a false conception of the pastoral office and accordingly limits the jurisdiction of the preacher. Carried to its logical conclusion his limitation would require the making of presiding elders, Bishops, and General Conference connectional officers out of laymen exclusively, along with college presidents and professors. In her wisdom, however, our Methodism regards the administrative function in some instances as emphatically pastoral as the shepherding of a congregation in its organized capacity.

The Methodist Church recognizes a distinctly divine call to teach, in the technical sense, as well as to preach. In the business of teaching her record has been that of a pioneer, and unimpeached in efficiency, while her uniform habit has also been to appoint her most devoted preachers in charge of such pre-eminent pastorates as her schools and colleges manifestly are. If ever a shepherd in the most Scriptural sense were needed, such a position demands him. The college household, no whit less than the ordinary congregation, requires the most intimate and tender care and oversight in administration of "one called of God to this ministry as was Aaron."

Moreover, there are some shining examples where laymen presidents, lacking the doctrinal integrity, and devoid of those fine ministerial bonds which intimately and strongly bind one to the Church, have unconsciously (else intentionally) alienated members of the student body, and the institution practically, from the mother that nurtured them—thereby thwarting the very design of the Church in engaging in educating her wards.

Touching the allegation anent the paucity of patronage, we confidently deny the same and defy the "allegator." Let aim bring the proofs. The onus is upon him. He simply can not do it.

Yours for Christian education, under the fostering care of a loyal and consecrated ministry, backed by a faithful church membership.

A METHODIST PREACHER.

THE SAILORS' REST AT GULFPORT.

As the result of a resolution adopted by the Woman's Council during the annual session held in Birmingham last April, withdrawing support from the Sailors' Rest at Gulfport, the impression has gotten abroad that the Bethel has been closed, and that work among the sailors at the said port by our Church has ceased altogether. As Secretary of the Board of Missions of the Mississippi Conference, I desire to say that this impression is erroneous. The withdrawal of support on the part of the Woman's Council does not take effect until next December, and even if that support had been withdrawn immediately after the passage of the resolution in question, some means would have been devised by the Mississippi Conference Board of Missions to keep the Bethel going until the session of our Annual Conference. I am glad to say, reports to the contrary, notwithstanding, that Rev. W. T. Griffin, the diligent and faithful Superintendent, is at his post of duty, and that the Bethel is in active operation.

Gulfport is visited annually by over three hundred ships from all parts of the world, having in their employ not less than 5,000 sailors, who sorely need while in port and ashore the steadying, encouraging, uplifting influence of Christian workers and of a rendezvous under Christian auspices. The Bethel is indeed a home to them while in port. During the year 1912 there was an attendance of 3,169 upon the gospel services, and of 10,920 at the Reading Room. Five hundred and six visits were made by the Superintendent and his helper to the ships, and 7,630 tracts and booklets and 309 Testaments were distributed among the sailors.

Gulfport is fifty miles nearer the Panama Canal than any other port in the United States, and is acknowledged to be the largest lumber port in the world. In view of the growing importance of this seaport, it would be nothing short of a calamity for our Church to abandon mission work among the sailors there in this hour of golden opportunity. To sound a retreat when all the signs are calling us to go forward would be shameful indeed.

The Bethel has the hearty endorsement not only of the Presiding Elder of the Seashore District and of the Methodist pastor, but also of all the Protestant pastors at Gulfport. It is sincerely hoped that the Home Department of our General Board of Missions will see the way clear to co-operate with our Conference Board in continuing and maintaining this highly important missionary enterprise. M. M. BLACK,

Secretary Board of Missions
Laurel, Miss. Miss. Conference.

An Amite (La.) paper says: "With a $2,000,000 strawberry crop, a dairying industry second to the largest in the South, trucking gardens without a parallel, both in point of production and remuneration, lumber interests of huge dimensions, why should we be classed among the drones? Truly, Tangipahoa Parish is the garden spot of Louisiana."

A recent report, after a minute spectrum examination, is to the effect that light passing through red glass exercises a neutralizing effect upon the lacteal microbe that is responsible for the souring of milk. It is therefore concluded that milk kept in red bottles will remain sweet a much longer time than that kept in clear or other colored bottles.

A news report dated July 31 states that Great Britain has definitely decided not to participate in the Panama Exposition at San Francisco in 1915. It is rumored that this decision on the part of Great Britain is in retaliation for this country's action in taxing foreign vessels passing through the Panama Canal while exempting her own engaged in coastwise trade.

Two hundred camels are soon to be brought from the Far East and placed on the deserts of Arizona, New Mexico, and Texas. It is the opinion of ranchmen in the West that camel culture can be made to be profitable. This is not the first time, however, that this experiment has been proposed. Hon. Jefferson Davis, President of the Southern Confederacy, when he was Secretary of War during the Pearce administration, led in a similar movement which proved to be a failure.

Forty thousand acres of land lying immediately adjacent to New Orleans, on the Algiers side, and alongside McDonoghville and Gretna, will be drained within the next seven months, the contract having been awarded to a New Orleans firm to install the largest pumping plant in the world for that purpose. The great pumps will cost $100,000, and have a capacity of 1,000,000 gallon of water per minute. The plant will consist of four nine-inch pumps, besides several smaller ones.

As a result of observing the success of the parcel post department of the United States Post-office, the Interstate Commerce Commission on August 4 ordered reductions in express rates by all companies, which will net an annual saving to the American people of $26,000,000. It was learned that express companies have in the past declared regularly more than 250 per cent dividends on the capital invested. In the future, it will be cheaper to send packages weighing more than four pounds to distances in excess of 200 miles by express.

In France the public roads are to be named as the streets are in an American city, and the name of the road is to be placed at every crossing. In this way it is believed that tourists will be able to travel anywhere they wish to go without danger of losing their way. We think the same plan would be a wise one if put into effect in this country. Oftentimes, while driving on the prairies of Louisiana and Kansas and in the forests of Arkansas and Missouri we have wished for some hint at a road crossing as to where we were.

Dr. George W. Crile, a noted surgeon of Chili, Ill., has compounded an anaesthetic that is said to be powerful enough to shut off the area of an operation from the brain for several days, and at the same time not affect the patient in the exercise of his senses. The wonderful discovery has been demonstrated before the British Medical Association by Sir Berkley Moynihan, Professor of Clinical Surgery of the University of Leeds, who pronounces it to be the greatest contribution to the science of surgery within the last decade.

Dr. Rudolph Matas, who is one of the South's most famous surgeons, is now in London, England, attending the International Medical Congress. He is reported to have read a paper before that body, which is composed of 10,000 of the world's leading surgeons, on the subject of "Aneurism." He was at first represented as having given the result of personal experiments in the transplanting of organs from one animal to another, but his colleagues in New Orleans discredit the report. They claim that he has made few, if any, experiments of that nature.

Hon. John Lind, four times Governor of Minnesota, has been sent to Mexico as the personal representative of President Wilson. He is not an ambassador, nor has he ambassadorial powers. The view that the Mexican authorities have taken of him and his mission is that he is a federal spy. President Huerta has notified the United States authorities that he would be an unwelcome visitor. There is no question but that the Mexican situation is a most trying one, and, in our opinion, it is time for the United States to take a definite stand for some kind of a policy.

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis is reported to have delivered an address in Washington favoring a national "Fathers' Day." He is quoted as having said that we now have a "Mothers' Day" and a "Children's Day," but that we are neglecting the fathers. As we understand it, Children's Day is purely a practice within the Sunday schools of the Churches, and a lamentably large number of them forget to observe it, and Mothers' Day exists in a sentimental way only. If Fathers' Day should be started with a federal law behind it, it might have some chance, but we fear that Mr. Lewis' legislative talents are being misdirected.

JUDGE BUCKLEY'S CHARGE.

(We take from the New Orleans Picayune Judge Buckley's admirable charge to the grand jury of the Lauderdale County Circuit, which was delivered in Meridian, Miss., on August 4.)

"A fierce battle has been raging in Meridian for some time between the moral and immoral forces, and the question has been which would likely predominate. I am pleased to note that the Christian people have at last become aroused from their Rip Van Winkle state, and proclaimed to the world that houses of prostitution should not run unmolested in the Queen City of the East. I have made a close search of my Bible to ascertain if the practice was in any wise justified. The result of my investigation was that I found it severely condemned by all of the divine writers on the subject. Whenever houses of ill fame are located and permitted to run without molestation by the officers there you will find gambling and blind tiger whiskey dispensed, because all go hand in hand, to ruin and make moral lepers of our boys. The law is plainly written on the subject, and I propose to enforce it so long as it stands in full force and effect.

Go After the Owners.

"It is necessary for the women to have places of abode, therefore I want you to first go to the root of the evil by locating the renters and owners of the houses. After you shall have acquired that knowledge, then you should indict each and every landlord, as is your plain duty under a recent decision by our Supreme Court, styled the State vs. M. G. Treweilder, appealed from Coahoma County. Then turn your attention to the women and indict them under the common law for running bawdy houses, or under our present statute defining vagrants. You have no right to persecute them. You haven't any legal authority whatsoever to say to the unfortunate women that they must leave Lauderdale County and burden some other community. However, it is within your province to say to them that if they propose to live in the beautiful and enlightened city of Meridian that they shall show reverence and respect to the law, as it is written for the State of Mississippi.

"Social" Clubs Scored.

"If the officers have been intentionally ignoring the enforcement of the law, your duty is plainly written and outlined under sections 1301, 5056 and 5062, Code of 1906.

"Our Legislature ought to come to the relief of the Christian people by eliminating the drinking features of the social clubs in Mississippi. By so doing it would be instrumental in rescuing many bright lives from the treacherous road which they are now following, and such lives would become shining lights in the community of their residence.

The Bank Situation.

"It seems that there has been a perfect mania for polluting, wrecking and destroying banks over the State of Mississippi within the last twelve months. The result emanating therefrom is that unhappiness, distress and poverty have been brought into the homes of numerous poor people who have been saving up their little mites for a rainy day. I know of an instance where widows with orphans, poor single ladies and a superannuated preacher had been saving up their small earnings for many years so that they could have a sustenance during their declining years. All was without warning taken away from them by the wreckage of a bank in which they had made their deposits, believing that the officers of the institution would guard and protect the same."

CHURCH EXTENSION HAND BOOK.

"The Church Extension Hand Book for 1913" is off the press and is being distributed over the Connection. It is a paper-bound volume of 527 pages, and is brimful of interesting matter. It contains not only the proceedings of the last meeting of the General Board of Church Extension at Dallas, Texas, and a summary of the work done by each of the affiliated Annual Conference Boards, but also much important information of a historical and general character. Impressive illustrations are scattered throughout the book and add not a little to its attractiveness and value. We jot from its instructive pages the following figures: Number of "Societies" in Southern Methodism, 19,597; Number of Houses of Worship, 16,327; Homeless Congregations, 2,270; Number of Parsonages, 5,449; Homeless Preachers, 1,093. During the 31 years of its history this Board has donated to churches and parsonages, $2,610,378.93, and has loaned to them $1,356,062.83, making the total amount invested in them, $3,966,441.76. Of our churches, 8,692—more than 50 per cent—have received assistance; and 2,261 parsonages have been helped. This is, indeed, a remarkable showing. Great is our Church Extension work, and Dr. W. F. McMurry is its prophet!

NOTICE.

To pastors, Sunday school superintendents, and workers in Women's Missionary societies: I have arranged for a stereopticon lecture on "An Evening in China." It consists of 101 views of China. I shall give it in each of the churches on my charge. While the slides are in my possession, I would be glad to give the lecture for the benefit of any church, Sunday school or Missionary society. My terms are from 30 to 60 per cent of the proceeds from sale of tickets, the exact figure depends on how great a distance I would have to travel in order to deliver the lecture. Will make no lecture dates earlier than September 2. Will send endorsement of lecture on application. Yours fraternally,

Rev. Jerome Duncan, presiding elder of the Fort Worth District, and a leading member of the Central Texas Conference, died suddenly from apoplexy on July 21. Bishop Atkins has appointed Rev. H. W. Knickerbocker, pastor of the Central Church of Fort Worth, to succeed Mr. Duncan temporarily. He will serve the District in connection with his present charge until the Bishop decides upon some permanent arrangement. It is stated that all the pastors in the District have certified their willingness to carry on the work until the meeting of the Annual Conference, and let the salary that her husband would have earned go to Mrs. Duncan.

RUSTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Ruston District Conference convened at Athens, Louisiana, July 22, and lasted three days. It was in every way a profitable and enjoyable conference. The town of Athens "did itself proud" in entertainment. All homes were thrown open to the delegates. Several were heard to say: "Lets vote the Annual Conference to Athens while W. W. Perry is pastor."

The opening sermon was preached by Rev. T. J. Warlick, of Homer. His theme was: "The Fatherhood of God." It was a great sermon.

The visitors to the conference were Rev. A. I. Towusley, State Epworth League Secretary; Rev. P. O. Lowrey, Sunday School Field Secretary; Dr. R. H. Wynn, President of Centenary College; Rev. P. H. Fontaine, Superintendent of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage; Prof. R. E. Bobbitt, President of Mansfield College; Rev. T. H. Morris, pastor of our Church at Mansfield, and Rev. H. W. Cudd, recently graduated from Centenary College. The messages brought to the conference by these visiting brethren were worth while. Our college presidents represented our educational interests with credit to themselves and to the cause of education. Dr. Wynn said that one of the greatest needs at Centenary College just at this time was a Loan Fund which lege just this time was a Loan Fund which would enable the poor boy to pursue his studies without financial embarassment. In view of the fact that the Shreveport District has created a commission to raise $1000 by September 1, for this Loan Fund, the Ruston District appointed a like Commission. The report of this committee was as follows: "We your committee beg leave to make the following recommendation touching the raising of the Loan Fund for Centenary College, Ruston District:

"1. The election of a District Commissioner of Education, and nominate Rev. E. K. Means, of Arcadia.

"2. A Committee to co-operate with the Commissioner of Education, and nominate for this purpose C. O. Ferguson, Homer; Judge W. C. Barnett, Arcadia; Sam Collins, Ruston."

About $500 was subscribed at the Conference.

The reports from the churches were all encouraging. Both preachers and laymen were hopeful. Several revival meetings have been held. In making the reports no interest of the Church was overlooked. Rev. C. B. Carter, the presiding elder, has first-hand information about every church in the district; hence his questions were always pertinent.

The following young men were granted licenses to preach: James E. Napper, Franklin P. Moss, John F. Dring, and Joe C. Sutton.

Albert Dean George was recommended to the Annual Conference for Admission on Trial.

J. M. Miller, A. Hoffpauir, P. K. Abel, and C. H. Henry were elected as delegates to the Annual Conference, with J. L. Lay, W. C. Barnett, W. J. Johston, and M. C. Tarpley as alternates. R. T. McLendon was elected district Lay Leader. The next District Conference will be held at Haughton.

REPORT OF THE GENERAL BOARD OF MISSIONS.

The Sixty-Seventh Annual Report of the Board of Misions of the M. E. Church, South, is on our table. It numbers 289 pages, and contains the proceedings of the last general meeting of the Board, reports concerning their work from our several Secretaries, and fresh and up-to-date information from every field where our missionary forces are operating. The receipts on the foreign assessment showed last year a falling off of about $60,000; but the collections for missions, taken as a whole, are encouraging. The following are the figures: Foreign Department—General Work, $543,936.37; Woman's Work, $293,823.95; Total, $837,760.32. Home Department—General Work, $100,140.55; Woman's Work, $241.138.87; Total, $341,299.42; Grand Total from All Sources, $1,179,039.74. This shows an increase in the income of the Board over that of the preceding year of $92,356.74. The indebtedness of the Board on January 1, 1911, was $220,121; on January 1, 1912, $145,267; on January 1, 1913, $121,943. So the reduction of the debt during the past year was $23,224. This volume has as a frontispiece a fine picture of Rev. W. P. Turner, Georgia's noble son, who after more than a score of years of splendid service in Japan, fell at his post in Hiroshima on March 10, 1912. Our pastors and others interested in the great cause of missions will find in the pages of this Report much to interest, hearten, and enthuse them.

R. H. WYNN, President

THE GIRLS' MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

We had a great time in the Girls' Missionary Conference held at Booneville, Miss., July 12-14. Rev. S. A. Brown conceived the idea of this conference out of his desire to do something for our girls, by way of counteracting the allurements of the world, and of causing them to realize that they have a part and a place in the great work of the evangelization of the world for Christ. The full fruition of his fondest hopes was realized in the splendid success of this Conference. Forty delegates were in attendance from the various churches in the Corinth and Aberdeen Districts, and great enthusiasm and spiritual power were manifested from the opening to the closing session.

This Conference was held under the auspices of the Young People's Missionary Society of the town, and the Woman's Missionary Society also rendered able assistance and manifested great interest in its each and every session. The people of the entire community opened their homes and hearts to the young people, and dispensed with lavish hands such hospitality as the people in the old ante-bellum days of our Southland were noted for. The sermon on Sunday at 11 a. m. was preached by Rev. S. L. Pope of Ittabena, and was a masterful and helpful one. I count it very fortunate that we had in this Conference Miss Lillie Louise Hartwell of Water Valley, Second Vice-President of our Conference Society, and Miss Corinne Rogers of New Albany, District Secretary of the Corinth District. It meant a great deal to the girls in attendance upon this body to come in touch with these consecrated young women, who are devoting their time and talents to the cause of missions. Miss Hartwell is a graduate of the Scarritt Bible and Training School, and has had three years' experience as a city missionary; while Miss Rogers has taken a course at our Training School in Nashville, and is one of the most wide-awake District Secretaries in our Conference Society. These young women delivered most helpful addresses, and in addition thereto, Miss Hartwell held several conferences with the girls, and Miss Rogers conducted an Institute for the Woman's Auxiliary, on the day following the close of the Girls' Conference. Mrs. J. H. Mitchell was also present throughout the entire session of the Conference, and in addition to the valuable help she rendered, she added tone and dignity to our Conference by her presence.

At the service on Sunday afternoon God's Holy Spirit was manifested in great fullness and power. Almost the entire audience responded to a proposition for reconsecration, and a sweet young woman of the Memphis Conference, a Miss Duncan, who was visiting her sister in Booneville, signified to that audience that she was preparing to do work in the foreign field as a Kindergarten teacher. Another young woman signified her decision to accept Christ as her Savior. On Monday morning in a consecration service conducted by Miss Hartwell, twenty girls responded to an appeal for volunteers to devote their lives to the Master's service. We failed to secure the names of all of these girls; but of those we talked to afterwards, eight expressed the clearly defined and positive desire to prepare themselves for mission work. Among that number were two bright, intelligent girls from my own church. Of course, some of these girls are quite young, and unless the impressions of this Conference are followed up, they may be turned aside from this decision. From the great number who responded, I could but feel that possibly they were somewhat confused in regard to the appeal; but it has occurred to me since that possibly my faith was too weak to take in the results of this meeting, and for this reason I'm apologizing, as it were, for my shortcoming in this respect. However that may be, I'm sure that God's Holy Spirit moved mightily upon the hearts of those young girls upon that occasion, and I request each woman in the Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference to unite with me in coming boldly to the throne of grace and asking God to so deepen and sanctify the impressions of this Girls' Conference as to open the way for each one of those who expressed such a desire to prepare herself to do specific work in the mission cause. This young life is the hope of our Church, and the hope of our Woman's Missionary work to-day. For, in the language of our lamented Bishop Galloway, "it is not intended that the rich-bounding young life of the Church should be expended in mere local enterprise or exhausted in the fruitless effort to find innocent social diversions. Broad and definite aims should command its splendid energies. Great connectional causes challege its ardent support."

When I consider the curtailment of work already begun, at home and abroad, by our Woman's Missionary Council, on account of the lack of workers and funds, and then think of the results of this Conference, I'm inclined to think that this may be God's plan for supplying the deficit in funds and workers. These girls had been told of this curtailment of work, and of how largely the call for workers had exceeded the supply at the Council meeting in Birmingham last spring, and how that thirty cities and mill communities had to go without deaconesses and missionaries; and an earnest appeal was made, that a great number of girls might go out from that body with the clearly defined purpose of preparing themselves to supply this great need. Yet I found myself astounded at the result. God grant that this Girls' Conference may prove an epoch in the history of our Woman's Missionary work in the North Mississippi Conference.

Now, from my directory, I find that there is no department of our Woman's work that needs developing so much as the Young People's Work, and Miss Hartwell and I have agreed that Brother Brown has suggested the plan for the development of this department. Consequently she is bubbling over with enthusiasm and plans for a Girls' Conference at Water Valley, embracing the third Sunday in August. I feel too, that through two other similar Conferences we migbt be able to reach many more of the young girls in the North Mississippi Conference. We would like to know if any of our women or pastors will volunteer to assist us in a Conference for their own and an adjoining District.

Special emphasis was given the social feature throughout the Booneville meeting. A reception was enjoyed the first evening, while a picnic was given on the last afternoon. This picnic was held at a picturesque lake, nestling among the hills out in the suburbs of the town, and I have never seen a crowd of young people enjoy themselves more than those present did upon this occasion. When the Church of God provides social entertainment for its young people rarely do the dance, the theater, and card table attract them. But it takes mottoes, badges, colors, and flying banners to harness the young life of our Church and turn it in the right direction. And when this is done what a mighty impulse does the Church of God receive! Frequently have I heard it said in this day of development along Sunday school lines, that the Epworth League is now a non-essential—that the same work is being done in this day through the organized Sunday school classes. Now, as a teacher of an organized Sunday school class, and as a former Epworth Leaguer, I want to say just here, that the work of the Epworth League is not being done through the organized Sunday school classes; nor do I believe it can be done in that way. No, the Epworth League is the training school in which our young people are trained and prepared to fill every place of usefulness in the Church, and to become missionaries and deaconesses. As president of our Conference Society, I want to say just here, that I do not want the work of the Missionary Societies to supplant in any manner the work of the Epworth League; but instead I'm recommending the correlation of Missionary Societies with the Epworth Leagues. Our Council has issued a leaflet on this subject, which I commend to all Epworth League and Missionary workers. All of the leading young women who attended our Girls' Conference and took part in its proceedings gave testimony to the fact that if they are worth any thing to the Church, it is largely due to the training received in the Epworth League. This may seem a digression from the subject in hand; but for good reasons, I deem it most timely.

LIBERAL CHRISTIANITY.

It is growing quite common to charge fossilism on men who believe the Bible. A Christian man is engaged in mining out West. One day as he was walking by a group of mining men he overheard one of them say, "That fellow believes the Bible. What do you think of that?"

In New York there was a large gathering of preachers to discuss the Bible. The secular press reported that out of forty or fifty distinguished divines there was not one who defended the Bible. One of the members was reported to say that Abraham had no call from God, but only had a natural dream.

Four young men were admitted to the Christian ministry lately after they had made this statement: "'That they desired more evidence before they could form definite opinions concerning the virgin bith of Christ, the authenticity of the Pentateuch, the canonical standing of the gospel according to St. John, and the Resurrection."

These young capped and gowned fledgelings, holding in thin hands a diploma from a Theological School, say, like the miners of the West: "That fellow believes the Bible. What do you think of that?"—Texas Christian Advocate.

WHAT THE MINUTES SAY.

We are but minutes, little things—
Each one furnished with sixty wings,
With which we fly on our unseen track;
And not a minute ever comes back.

We are but minutes; each one bears
A little burden of joys and cares;
Take patiently the minutes of pain;
The worst of minutes cannot remain.

We are but minutes. When we bring
A few drops from pleasure's spring,
Taste their sweetness while ye may;
It takes but a minute to fly away.

We are but minutes. Use us well;
For how we are used we must one day tell.
Who uses minutes, has hours to use;
Who loses minutes, whole years must lose.

SWALLOWED HIS "OBJECT."

"Object" drawing has brought a new anxiety into the schools. In certain districts youngsters may be seen moving schoolward with hatchets, knives, hammers, chisels, and similar things, as materials for their drawing lesson. The other day, just as one of these lessons was about to begin, a small boy was found standing tearfully at his teacher's desk.

"I've swallowed my object," he explained, with an alarming gulp.

"What was it?" asked the teacher, anxiously.

"A banana," replied the would-be artist with a final gulp.—Continent.

"AIN'T I WORTH MORE THAN YOUR TAXES?"

"Daddy, ain't I worth more to you than your taxes? If you vote 'wet,' maybe I'll be a drunkard some day."

Returning from a recent local option meeting in Cheboygan County, Mich., a lad climbed upon his father's lap and asked: "What way will you vote, pa—'wet' or 'dry'?"

"'Wet,' of course," replied the man.

"Pa, why will you vote 'wet'?" the child continued.

"Because," returned the parent, "the saloons help to pay my taxes."

The little fellow had been deeply impressed by the lecture at the schoolhouse around the corner that evening, and he failed to comprehend how his own father could not understand as he did. Innocently he then asked the foregoing question and made the awful prediction that some day the saloons that "help to pay the taxes," as that father explained, might drag down that same boy to the grave of a drunkard!

The small son wanted to know which was the most vital, a human life or a mere tax levy. Should a father value a few paltry dollars, paid in just taxes, above the very life of his own flesh and blood? That's what the Cheboygan laddie wanted to know.

It was a sleepless night for that father, for those dreadful words kept ringing in his ears: "If you vote 'wet,' maybe I'll be a drunkard some day."

To-day there isn't a stronger advocate of temperance in all of Michigan.

"That boy is worth more to me than all the property I could ever own," he declares emphatically.

Other fathers, how about you?—Michigan Issue.

LITTLE BY LITTLE.

A hundred years ago there lived a little boy in the city of Oxford, England, whose business it was to clean the boots of the students in the famous university there. He was poor, but bright and smart. No boy could make a boot shine better than he. He was one of the few young workers, whose rule it was to do everything well; and so he blacked boots well. He earned his daily bread in this way—and the more polish on the boots the sweeter was his bread.

Well, this lad, whose name was George, grew rapidly in favor with the students. His prompt and hearty way of doing things, his industrous habits, and his honest and faithful deeds, won their admiration. They saw in him the promise of a noble man; and so they proposed to teach him a little every day. Eager to learn, George accepted their proposition; and he soon surpassed his teachers by his rapid progress. "A boy who can black boots well, can study well," said one of the students. "Keen as a brier," said another, "and pluck enough to make a hero."

But we cannot stop to tell of his patience and perseverance—how he studied and worked each day—how often he laughed and sang when other boys would have cried—how a little knowledge acquired one day made him thirst for more the next. He went on, step by step, just as the song goes.

One step, and then another, until he became a man—a learned and eloquent man, who preached the gospel to admiring thousands. The little bootblack became the renowned pulpit orator, George Whitefield.—Unknown.

"If there is anywhere on your horizon a spot of light, fix your eyes upon it and turn your thoughts away from the clouds which may cover the rest of the sky. One spot of blue is worth a skyful of gray."

WORK OF THE MISSISSIPPI ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE.

Prizes have been awarded by the Anti-Saloon League for the best essays on "The Effect of Alcohol on the Human Body." Persons in all parts of the State equipped themselves with good literature and prepared able treatises on the subject. The essays were turned over to a Committee of three who did not know the names of the parties who wrote the essays. Dr. B. L. Cully, representing the physicians; Rev. Dr. P. I. Lipsey, representing the clergy; and Hon. R. B. Ricketts representing the lawyers, constituted the Committee on Awards. Each took the essays separately and graded them and returned their verdicts in sealed envelopes to the office of the Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League.

The entire Committee then met, and Dr. G. W. Eichelberger, Superintendent of the League, handed them a sealed envelope containing names of the contestants corresponding to the numbers on the essays. These the Committee opened, and they found that the Committee acting separately had agreed almost entirely on all the essays. There was one prize offered for the best essay among professional men; one prize for the best essay among university and college graduates; and one prize for the best essay among high school graduates.

The $10 gold piece, awarded for the best essay by university and college graduates, given by Major R. W. Millsaps, was awarded to Mr. A. W. Mangum, of the University of Mississippi.

The $10 gold piece for the best essay among professional men and women, given by Mr. Thad B. Lampton, was awarded to Mr. J. P. Alexander, of Jackson.

The $10 gold piece given by Enoch's Lumber Co. for the best essay among high school graduates, went to Miss Mable Coleman, of Montpelier, Miss.

The $5 gold piece awarded as the second prize for the best essay among college or university students, given by Mr. W. H. Patton, was awarded to Mr. E. W. Chatham, of the State Normal, at Hattiesburg, Miss.

These four essays have been selected and will be published by the Anti-Saloon League in neat pamphlet form and many thousands of them will be scattered over the State. The Committee was unanimous, also, in the expressions that these essays are exceedingly fine—master-pieces—and that they will be a strong factor in crystallizing public sentiment in Mississippi in favor of the non-use of alcoholic drinks for physical reasons. The superintendent is in hopes that the League will be able to publish at least 100,000 copies.

Among other facts disclosed is the astounding affirmation that when alcohol once gets into the system it takes three generations of abstainers to get it out of the blood of a family. Another fact established is that 35 per cent of insane persons are insane on account of drink, and that 17 additional per cent are insane indirectly on account of some one else's drinking, making 52 per cent in all. And the facts brought out as to the injurious effects of alcohol on the brain, muscles, judgment, blood, liver, digestion and character are strong, to say nothing of the effects of intoxicants on politics, finance, and other important issues in society.

The State Chairman of the Anti-Saloon League, Captain W. T. Ratliff, the Superintendent, and the Board gratefully appreciate the work of the Committee in these decisions, and feel that this educational part of the League will be strongly felt among all classes of people. The aim will be to get one copy of the pamphlet to be issued in each family of the State, if possible.

There have been 1014 blind tigers convicted in the last 19 months, including 3 drummers and a large number of railroad porters and news boys. The League's influence has reached over into Louisiana, and has aided the Louisiana officials in bringing some operators on the Island near Vicksburg into court. One of these Islanders was indicted two weeks ago in Vicksburg 25 times in one day for the shipment of liquor into Mississippi. The League has published and distributed over three million pages of literature, and has in the State over 1600 men on local committees for various purposes.

The Superintendent, Dr. Eichelberger, says that if the League had the means to do it, it could close up practically every joint in the State within a few months. But it is limited in its work on account of a lack of sufficient funds. Only a few weeks ago, he learned of a young fellow in Jackson, who had been selling liquor for two years without being caught. While one of the detectives was resting here, he put him on the track of this criminal and the next morning he brought him into court where he was punished.

THE ASSAULT UPON OUR BISHOPS.

The slurs and insults cast at the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by leading members of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust and their partisans has long since passed beyond the bounds of propriety and decency, and is, so far as we are informed, without a parallel in the annals of our denomination. That men claiming to be Methodists and holding high positions in our Church should have joined in this tirade of misrepresentation and abuse is a burning shame. The College of Bishops has done nothing to afford the slightest justification or excuse for such attacks. On the contrary, our Chief Pastors have only done what devolved upon them as a result of the instructions given them by the last General Conference, and their utterances and deportment throughout have been dignified, manly, and worthy in every respect of them and the Church for which they have acted. Both their recent veto message and their address to the Methodists of the South were pitched upon a high plane and were permeated by a thoroughly Christian spirit. There is not one word in either utterance which any loyal and high-minded Methodist need wish were modified or recalled. The truth is, if the Bishops had done any less they would have been adjudged recreant to the important trust committed to their hands and would have been censured for failing to do their duty. It is worth remembering that some of the very same men who are now finding fault with them for their aggressiveness, chided them for their hesitancy when they proceeded with care and discretion in their meeting at Nashville in July, 1910—the first one that was held after the Vanderbilt Board had severed every cord that bound the University to the Church and had openly hoisted the flag of rebellion.

But it is alleged that Bishops Candler and Hoss, in public interviews, have intimated that the Carnegie offer, with the accompanying conditions, wears the aspect of an attempt to influence improperly the litigation for the control of Vanderbilt University now pending before the Supreme Court of Tennessee. So they have, and the facts fully warrant all that they have said. Indeed, when that discreditable transaction is considered in its full setting, it scarcely admits of any other reasonable inference as to what its purpose was. Let us glance for a moment at the situation and see if this is not true. Chancellor Kirkland, the dominating spirit of this revolt, against the authority of the Church, in the course of the fight that was being waged had at last found himself in a very awkward and uncertain predicament. He had sought to accomplish his purpose to secularize the University by adroitly manipulating things in the Church, but in these efforts he had been blocked at every point. He had tried the stratagem of securing a new charter which did not even mention the name of the Church, but that, too, had failed him. He had made a strenuous fight before the Vanderbilt Commission, but that tribunal had decided against him. He had had recourse to the State Legislature and had endeavored to get that body quietly to pass a measure conferring large and unusual powers upon the trustees of institutions of learning, but here again he had been foiled. Then came his Machiavellian fight before the General Conference of 1910, where he lost completely out. Following this came the lawsuit in the Chancery Court of Davidson County, Tennessee, in which the Church won a sweeping and overwhelming victory. This left the Chancellor in a pitiable plight. Some of the leading members of the Board, who had been standing with him, took the position that a court of law had spoken, interpreting the charter, and that the suit ought to stop. Letters to this effect had been passed around among the Trustees. As a result of Judge Allison's decision public sentiment in Nashville was reported to be veering strongly toward the Church.

The fire was burning both behind and before Dr. Kirkland. The Vanderbilt Trustees would soon meet—what would they do? The Supreme Court would soon speak—what would it say? Something had to be done, and that quickly. So the Chancellor got busy. No one who knows him, at all doubts his shrewdness and resourcefulness. So he began to dicker with the Trustees of the University of Arkansas, apparently in order that he might have a lighting place in case the worst should happen. But he had yet by no means given up the fight to wrest the University from the Church. He knew of Mr. Carnegie's hostility to church institutions of learning—that he had pulled a large number of colleges away from their denominational moorings; so in his desperation he proceeded to open up negotiations with this archenemy of Christian education. What went on between these two men is not known. We are reliably informed that Dr. Kirkland has admitted that he had communications with Mr. Carnegie, or his representatives, before their correspondence which finally consummated things took place. Doubtless the last letters that passed between them were composed with the understanding that they would have to stand public scrutiny. What these men said to one another behind the curtain, we may never know. Did James H. Kirkland, or Andrew Carnegie, in their private communications first suggest that the $800,000 gift should be conditioned upon the Vanderbilt Trustees winning their suit? This we cannot tell; but we do know that if either of these parties had been a man with a high sense of honor such a proposition would never have been submitted to the Trustees of the University. The mere suggestion of such a thing would have been met with a swift and stinging rebuke.

But whoever may have conceived the conditions laid down in the published correspondence of these gentlemen—whether it was Mr. Kirkland, or Mr. Carnegie, or some one else—for our part, we do not hesitate to say that we believe the plan was designed to give Mr. Kirkland a firm anchorage at Nashville, to stop any defections among the Trustees and tie them hard and fast to the Chancellor's policies, to sway public sentiment in and about Nashville, and ultimately, if possible, through this medium to influence the Supreme Court in its decision. As we see it, the time at which this movement was started, the stipulations of the agreement, and the other attending circumstances, all clearly imply that these were the objects definitely in view when this astounding scheme was developed. In other words, this transaction was, in our judgment, simply the last desperate expedient of a man who had been beaten in all his other efforts, and who was determined to triumph in his purpose to control the University, no matter how low he might have to stoop to conquer.

Now, in view of this offer to give $800,000 to Vanderbilt in case the Trustees should win the lawsuit (now pending) having been brought forward, and in view of the further fact that every indication is that this proposition was carefully planned to complicate and influence the situation, we respectfully submit that the language of Bishops Candler and Hoss was mild compared to what so outrageous a proceeding merited. Indeed, we do not think that their utterances by any means measured up to what the occasion justly would have warranted. We are rather disposed to the view that those who believe in being extremely conservative at all times ought to congratulate these two Chief Pastors upon having restrained themselves so remarkably and upon having kept so well within the bounds of decorous speech in the face of circumstances so scandalous and exasperating. It is startling to think what a man of the world would have said under like conditions.

But the aspersions and coarse insults of these men cannot hurt our Bishops. In the first place, so far as we are able to judge, they have practically no following in the Church. We do not believe that Dr. Kirkland and his sympathizers could carry a district conference in Southern Methodism. The utmost that they can do is perhaps to create among uninformed outsiders a small measure of prejudice against our episcopacy, but even that will be short-lived, for the lapse of a little time will more fully uncover the indefensible course of the majority of the Vanderbilt Trustees. The truth is, most of the leaders among these gentlemen have in the course of this controversy already taken for the public their own moral measure. Take Chancellor Kirkland, for instance, who has been held up to us as a saint with a halo around his head. He has, from time to time, shifted his position and contradicted himself with scarcely the faintest semblance of an apology; and when he recently suggested that the Church should have kept silent as to Mr. Carnegie's offer, so that no matter which way the lawsuit might have gone, the University could have pocketed $200,000 of his money, he closed all legitimate debate as to the question of his mortal stature.

But we must forbear making any further comment for the present. This is clearly a case where we should love our Bishops all the more for the enemies that they have made; and they may feel assured they have in solid array behind them the nearly 2,000,000 Methodists of the South, who thoroughly approve of their course and honor them for their incorruptibility, their manliness, and their courage.

A RINGING UTTERANCE.

We print in this issue of the Advocate Judge J. L. Buckley's charge to the grand jury of Lauderdale County, Miss., which is a most wholesome utterance. If the warfare which this jurist wages against lawlessness anything like measures up to this manifesto, there ought soon to be an admirable condition of things morally throughout the territory under his jurisdiction. True, a judge cannot enforce the law and suppress evil by himself, but usually when a brave and determined administrator of justice sets his heart upon maintaining decency and good order, enough good citizens can be found to re-enforce him and make his efforts effective. We applaud Judge Buckley for the high stand that he has taken, and we trust that his brethren on the bench in Mississippi and elsewhere will emulate his good example. Few agencies make more for civic righteousness than a clean and high-minded judiciary.

A GOOD LAW.

On August 1, a new law concerning the disposition of the earnings of men confined in the penitentiary went into effect in Ohio. Instead of appropriating them to the use of the State as heretofore, they are to go to the dependent families of the prisoners, if such in any case exist. This strikes us as a most admirable arrangement. Under the old regime not only the man committing the crime was punished, but his innocent wife and children were also, in consequence, often made to suffer hardships and actual want. The infliction of such injustice is unworthy of a Christian people. That it should have been so long and so generally practiced is most surprising. The State of Ohio has in this respect set the other commonwealths of the Union a good example, which it is to be hoped they will not be slow to follow.

AN ERROR.

In the Editorial, entitled "No Time for Creed-Making," which appeared in last week's issue of the Advocate, we were made to say: "If there be any among YOU who find our Twenty-Five Articles so inadequate and unsatisfactory," etc. What we wrote was, "If there be any among US," etc. We had no thought of addressing our brethren as if we were apart from them and not one of them. Usually we do not take notice of the typographical errors occurring in our paper; but this one made our utterance seem so unusual that we could not gain our consent to pass it over in silence. Nothing is more repellant to us in a speech or written communication than an understone of Pharisaism.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. W. G. Burks, our pastor at Byhalia, Miss., favored us with a club of 5 subscribers on the 9th inst., for which we heartily thank him. He serves a most excellent people, and God is graciously blessing his labors among them.

In a note to our office, Rev. Lastie N. Hoffpauir writes most encouragingly of his work at Jennings, La., and tells of some successful revivals in which he has recently had a part. His interesting communication reached us too late for this issue of the Advocate, but will appear next week.

Rev. J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College, was a visitor at Greenville, Miss., the latter part of last week. He is industriously engaged in looking after pupils for the next session of his school, and, according to the reports reaching us, the indications point to a great opening for this institution in September.

From Greenwood, La., on August 4, Rev. A. H. Parker wrote as follows: "I am just home after a two weeks' visit to Mineral Wells, Texas. The good people of this place gave me the trip, bearing all my expenses. I have never served a choicer flock. They never do things by halves. This Conference year is proving to be far too short."

Rev. W. W. Perry, our energetic pastor at Haynesville, La., has secured this year (including new names and renewals) 59 subscriptions to the Advocate. This is a fine showing for Brother Perry and his good people, and we assure them of our hearty appreciation of the manner in which they are standing by the Conference organ. We dare say that there is a virile Methodism in and about Haynesville.

Rev. W. E. Thomas, pastor of the Second Church of New Orleans, returned last week from Nashville, Tenn., where he had been for two weeks at the bedside of a sick relative.

Rev. W. B. Hogg, of Fernwood, Miss., closed a very successful meeting at Kokomo last Sunday. During his absence, his home pulpit was filled by Rev. C. J. Stapp, of McComb City, Miss.

Dr. William A. Webb, a member of the faculty of the University of Colorado, has been elected to the presidency of the Randolph-Macon Woman's College, at Lynchburg, Va., and has signified his acceptance of the position.

Rev. G. G. Yeager states that his work is progressing favorably on the Hamburg (Miss.) charge, and that the prospects there are quite encouraging. We acknowledge ourselves indebted to this faithful pastor for a club of subscribers, forwarded on August 6.

In renewing his subscription to the Advocate, Dr. Dabney Lipscomb, one of the accomplished professors of the Industrial Institute and College, at Columbus, Miss., takes time to write a few generous words commending our paper. Coming from such a source, this message of encouragement is much appreciated.

A house has been secured at the Seashore Camp Ground by the New Orleans Outing Commission, which is under the supervision of the workers at St. Mark's Hall, and women and small children who are deserving and needy will be taken there during the next six weeks for rest and recreation.

The Wesley Bible Class of the Algiers (La.) Sunday school, which is a men's class, entertained at a banquet last Wednesday night the men of the Wesley Bible Class of McDonoghville. The Algiers men announced that they would give the McDonoghville men a cool reception, but the coolness was only found in the refreshments.

The revival meeting which has been in progress at the First Church of New Orleans for the last few weeks closed last Sunday, Dr. J. M. Henry being present and preaching the closing sermon. Dr. Moore, the pastor, says that in many respects this meeting was the best that has been held in First Church in many years.

The Kosciusko Courier of August 7 states that Miss Julia Wasson, who for the past five years has been one of the teachers in the McTyeire School in Shanghai, China, is now at her old home in Attala County, Miss., where she will remain for twelve months before resuming her labors in the Orient. We hope that she may have a pleasant stay among her kindred and friends in the home land.

We were favored last Tuesday with a pleasant call by Rev. W. W. Drake, our pastor at Baton Rouge, La., and his son Walton, who were spending the day in New Orleans. Brother Drake spoke most encouragingly of his work in the Capital City of Louisiana. He returned home in the late afternoon, but his son took the train for Turin, Ga., where he has gone to visit his uncle, Mr. Benjamin M. Drake.

We take the following from a recent number of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate: "Rev. T. J. Warlick, formerly of the North Georgia Conference, but now of the Louisiana Conference and stationed at Homer, has been in Georgia on a visit for some days. He reports things as moving along smoothly in the country where he serves. He also reports well of the other Georgians toiling in that part of the field."

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, the Secretary of Education of the North Mississippi Conference, has done some valuable work for that important cause this spring and summer. He visited a number of the District Conferences, and everywhere that he went he made a fine impression. If we mistake not, every North Mississippi District had pledged itself to assist in maintaining a ministerial student at Millsaps College.

As will be seen elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate, Rev. W. W. Jones, our pastor at Carrollton, Miss., writes us that Mr. J. R. Bingham was stricken with appendicitis some days ago and was forced to submit to an operation. We are pleased to note that he stood the trying ordeal well and that no unfavorable symptoms have since developed. We sincerely hope that he may have a speedy and complete recovery.

The ladies of our church at Greensburg, La., have adopted the custom of "pounding" their pastor once every quarter. They announce the event through the local newspaper and solicit the co-operation of the community in order to insure a big crowd and a liberal donation. The pastor at Greensburg is Rev. H. B. Perritt, and he considers himself fortunate, indeed, to be assigned to a charge where the people are so liberal.

On last Tuesday evening the City Epworth League Union of New Orleans held its monthly meeting in the City Park. The young people assembled in the open air, conducted a religious service and attended to the business of the Union, after which they enjoyed a social hour. This plan of conducting the summer meetings in the park was suggested by the Third Vice President, Rev. W. E. Thomas, and has proved to be a popular one.

Dr. S. H. Werlein's ministry is much appreciated by the Methodists at Alexandria, La. There are few abler sermonizers in Southern Methodism than Dr. Werlein, and best of all, he is thoroughly orthodox and evangelical. He has the imprimatur of old Emory and Henry upon him. What men our Church schools used to turn out! Mr. Carnegie could make no greater mistake than when he seeks to disparage the work of such institutions.

In a letter to our office, written on August 2, Rev. J. D. Parmer, of Tunica, Miss., takes occasion to say how much he misses the late Rev. J. W. Honnoll, who was the pastor of that charge, when the Master called him home. Brother Parmer is not alone in his feeling of loneliness since the Grand Old Man of North Mississippi Methodism went from us. He was large enough to leave a vacancy in the Church and in the world that will long be unfilled.

Pastors and other Christian workers who are interested in getting at the facts concerning "Pastor" Russell and his teachings would do well to write Dr. C. C. Cook, 150 Nassau Street, New York City, for the two following pamphlets: "All About One Russell," and "Some Facts and More Facts About the Self-Styled Pastor Russell." The price of each of these booklets is 10 cents. Since the death of Dr. Dowie, Mr. Russell is the nation's foremost religious fakir.

In sending in some names for our subscription files, for which we extend him our thanks, Rev. George P. Fikes adds the following note: "My health is fast improving, and things are moving on well on the Neshoba Circuit. Surely some of the best people in the world live within the bounds of this charge." We are pleased to know that our brother is gaining in physical strength, and we trust that he may have a most successful rounding out of the year's work.

Rev. F. N. Sweeney, our pastor at Wilson, La., writes as follows: "I have held two meetings on my work. One was at Pisgah, where Brother Curry assisted me. We had good success: the church was revived, and there were 10 accessions. The other series of services was held at Manassas. Brother Bamburg was there and rendered good service, which resulted in 6 additions on profession of faith and one by letter. I am glad to say that my health is much improved."

The Louisiana Conference is fortunate in the kind of men she has in the presiding eldership. They are capable, alert and active, and usually have two or three meetings during the year to confer concerning the promotion of the work of the Church. This is as it should be. Concert of effort counts for much in any undertaking. Considering its numerical strength and financial resources, Louisiana Methodism has been giving a remarkably good account of itself for several years.

A dispatch from Starkville, Miss., to the Commercial Appeal, bearing date of the 5th inst., reads as follows: "A $5,000 Methodist parsonage will be erected here within the next few months. A corner lot, opposite our church, has been purchased, and the enterprise will be carried promptly forward. The building committee is composed of Mr. F. L. Hogan, Mr. W. W. Magruder, and Mr. W. H. Sudduth." We congratulate Brother Lipscomb and his choice flock upon this needed forward movement.

Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, of Columbia, Miss., continues to extend the circulation of the Conference organ among his people. It is needless less to say that we appreciate his kindness in this respect. He is serving with great acceptability one of the choicest congregations in the Mississippi Conference. We hope when the weather gets somewhat cooler to redeem our promise to spend a Sabbath with this good friend of the Advocate and see the sights in Marion County's attractive capital, of which we have heard not a little.

A recent issue of the Brookhaven (Miss.) Leader contained the following appreciative reference to the able and warm-hearted President of Whitworth College: "Dr. I. W. Cooper, whose genial fellowship with religious bodies of every creed and helpfulness to the cause of Christianity generally, are well known, preached for the Baptists at the City Hall last Sunday morning a sermon that edified and uplifted all who heard it." What The Leader says of Dr. Cooper is true: his catholicity and brotherliness extend far beyond denominational lines.

The Bluff Creek camp meeting, which is held near Grangeville, La., will begin next Friday and continue until August 25. A large attendance is expected. Rev. J. G. Snelling, of New Orleans, and Rev. J. B. Williams, of Clinton, are announced as the preachers of the occasion. Those who know these brethren are sure that the Bluff Creek people have in store for them a feast of good things. This is Brother Snelling's second year to hold the meeting there, he and Brother Elton Wilson, of Hammond, La., having been the preachers selected last year.

The interior of our First Church at Columbus, where Rev. W. W. Woollard is pastor, has lately been undergoing a pretty thorough overhauling. The pastor's study has been touched up and rendered generally more attractive. The great auditorium, which is one of the finest in the South, has also been given attention and is much improved in appearance. Reports reaching us from various sources indicate that this congregation is taking on new life and activity, and that an excellent report will be sent to the next session of the Annual Conference.

From the Jackson (Miss.) Daily News of August 6, we clip the following: "Advices to friends from Bishop and Mrs. W. B. Murrah report their safe arrival in England, on their way to the Orient. They had the good fortune to secure passage on the Imperator, and Mrs. Murrah writes that language is inadequate to describe the magnificence and completeness of that mammoth vessel and wonderful triumph of marine architecture. The Bishop and Mrs. Murah expect to travel overland from Cherburg to Brindisi, taking a steamer thence to Hong Kong."

A note from her brother, Rev. H. B. Watkins, of Natchez, Miss., states that the operation that Mrs. Bessie W. Lipscomb underwent at that place more than a week ago seems to have been a complete success, and that she has every chance for a quick recovery. This will be most gratifying news to Sister Lipscomb's many friends throughout the Church, whose name is legion. We trust that a favoring Providence may soon enable her to return to her post at Nashville. As is well known, Mrs. Lipscomb is the Home Base Secretary of our Woman's Missionary work.

Our pastor at Mer Rouge, La., Rev. R. W. Vaughan, has informed us of the death of Mrs. H. D. Causey, which occurred at that place on July 31. She was a most excellent woman, who had been a member of the Methodist Church from girlhood, and whose life in every respect had been most exemplary. She will be greatly missed in the community. She left to mourn her departure a husband, two sons, a sister and brother, and a wide circle of sorrowing friends. We extend sympathy to the bereaved, and pray that the Heavenly Father may graciously comfort and sustain them.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of Mendenhall, Miss., under date of the 8th inst., writes: "We have just closed a great revival at Thomasville—pronounced by the people the best in the history of that church. The membership of the church was greatly quickened and there were 10 accessions, three of them coming from the Baptists. A prayer meeting was organized, and 4 new subscribers to the Advocate and three renewals were secured. The pastor, Rev. O. S. Lewis, is a fine man to work with, and is in high favor with his people. I go next to Summerland." In a note to our office, Brother Lewis speaks in terms of high appreciation of the service rendered his people by Brother Ramsey, stating that he has never had better help in a meeting.

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1913. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee:

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

Editorial.

THE ASSAULT UPON OUR BISHOPS.

The slurs and insults cast at the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by leading members of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust and their partisans has long since passed beyond the bounds of propriety and decency, and is, so far as we are informed, without a parallel in the annals of our denomination. That men claiming to be Methodists and holding high positions in our Church should have joined in this tirade of misrepresentation and abuse is a burning shame. The College of Bishops has done nothing to afford the slightest justification or excuse for such attacks. On the contrary, our Chief Pastors have only done what devolved upon them as a result of the instructions given them by the last General Conference, and their utterances and deportment throughout have been dignified, manly, and worthy in every respect of them and the Church for which they have acted. Both their recent veto message and their address to the Methodists of the South were pitched upon a high plane and were permeated by a thoroughly Christian spirit. There is not one word in either utterance which any loyal and high-minded Methodist need wish were modified or recalled. The truth is, if the Bishops had done any less they would have been adjudged recreant to the important trust committed to their hands and would have been censured for failing to do their duty. It is worth remembering that some of the very same men who are now finding fault with them for their aggressiveness, chided them for their hesitancy when they proceeded with care and discretion in their meeting at Nashville in July, 1910—the first one that was held after the Vanderbilt Board had severed every cord that bound the University to the Church and had openly hoisted the flag of rebellion.

But it is alleged that Bishops Candler and Hoss, in public interviews, have intimated that the Carnegie offer, with the accompanying conditions, wears the aspect of an attempt to influence improperly the litigation for the control of Vanderbilt University now pending before the Supreme Court of Tennessee. So they have, and the facts fully warrant all that they have said. Indeed, when that discreditable transaction is considered in its full setting, it scarcely admits of any other reasonable inference as to what its purpose was. Let us glance for a moment at the situation and see if this is not true. Chancellor Kirkland, the dominating spirit of this revolt, against the authority of the Church, in the course of the fight that was being waged had at last found himself in a very awkward and uncertain predicament. He had sought to accomplish his purpose to secularize the University by adroitly manipulating things in the Church, but in these efforts he had been blocked at every point. He had tried the stratagem of securing a new charter which did not even mention the name of the Church, but that, too, had failed him. He had made a strenuous fight before the Vanderbilt Commission, but that tribunal had decided against him. He had had recourse to the State Legislature and had endeavored to get that body quietly to pass a measure conferring large and unusual powers upon the trustees of institutions of learning, but here again he had been foiled. Then came his Machiavellian fight before the General Conference of 1910, where he lost completely out. Following this came the lawsuit in the Chancery Court of Davidson County, Tennessee, in which the Church won a sweeping and overwhelming victory. This left the Chancellor in a pitiable plight. Some of the leading members of the Board, who had been standing with him, took the position that a court of law had spoken, interpreting the charter, and that the suit ought to stop. Letters to this effect had been passed around among the Trustees. As a result of Judge Allison's decision public sentiment in Nashville was reported to be veering strongly toward the Church.

The fire was burning both behind and before Dr. Kirkland. The Vanderbilt Trustees would soon meet—what would they do? The Supreme Court would soon speak—what would it say? Something had to be done, and that quickly. So the Chancellor got busy. No one who knows him, at all doubts his shrewdness and resourcefulness. So he began to dicker with the Trustees of the University of Arkansas, apparently in order that he might have a lighting place in case the worst should happen. But he had yet by no means given up the fight to wrest the University from the Church. He knew of Mr. Carnegie's hostility to church institutions of learning—that he had pulled a large number of colleges away from their denominational moorings; so in his desperation he proceeded to open up negotiations with this archenemy of Christian education. What went on between these two men is not known. We are reliably informed that Dr. Kirkland has admitted that he had communications with Mr. Carnegie, or his representatives, before their correspondence which finally consummated things took place. Doubtless the last letters that passed between them were composed with the understanding that they would have to stand public scrutiny. What these men said to one another behind the curtain, we may never know. Did James H. Kirkland, or Andrew Carnegie, in their private communications first suggest that the $800,000 gift should be conditioned upon the Vanderbilt Trustees winning their suit? This we cannot tell; but we do know that if either of these parties had been a man with a high sense of honor such a proposition would never have been submitted to the Trustees of the University. The mere suggestion of such a thing would have been met with a swift and stinging rebuke.

But whoever may have conceived the conditions laid down in the published correspondence of these gentlemen—whether it was Mr. Kirkland, or Mr. Carnegie, or some one else—for our part, we do not hesitate to say that we believe the plan was designed to give Mr. Kirkland a firm anchorage at Nashville, to stop any defections among the Trustees and tie them hard and fast to the Chancellor's policies, to sway public sentiment in and about Nashville, and ultimately, if possible, through this medium to influence the Supreme Court in its decision. As we see it, the time at which this movement was started, the stipulations of the agreement, and the other attending circumstances, all clearly imply that these were the objects definitely in view when this astounding scheme was developed. In other words, this transaction was, in our judgment, simply the last desperate expedient of a man who had been beaten in all his other efforts, and who was determined to triumph in his purpose to control the University, no matter how low he might have to stoop to conquer.

Now, in view of this offer to give $800,000 to Vanderbilt in case the Trustees should win the lawsuit (now pending) having been brought forward, and in view of the further fact that every indication is that this proposition was carefully planned to complicate and influence the situation, we respectfully submit that the language of Bishops Candler and Hoss was mild compared to what so outrageous a proceeding merited. Indeed, we do not think that their utterances by any means measured up to what the occasion justly would have warranted. We are rather disposed to the view that those who believe in being extremely conservative at all times ought to congratulate these two Chief Pastors upon having restrained themselves so remarkably and upon having kept so well within the bounds of decorous speech in the face of circumstances so scandalous and exasperating. It is startling to think what a man of the world would have said under like conditions.

But the aspersions and coarse insults of these men cannot hurt our Bishops. In the first place, so far as we are able to judge, they have practically no following in the Church. We do not believe that Dr. Kirkland and his sympathizers could carry a district conference in Southern Methodism. The utmost that they can do is perhaps to create among uninformed outsiders a small measure of prejudice against our episcopacy, but even that will be short-lived, for the lapse of a little time will more fully uncover the indefensible course of the majority of the Vanderbilt Trustees. The truth is, most of the leaders among these gentlemen have in the course of this controversy already taken for the public their own moral measure. Take Chancellor Kirkland, for instance, who has been held up to us as a saint with a halo around his head. He has, from time to time, shifted his position and contradicted himself with scarcely the faintest semblance of an apology; and when he recently suggested that the Church should have kept silent as to Mr. Carnegie's offer, so that no matter which way the lawsuit might have gone, the University could have pocketed $200,000 of his money, he closed all legitimate debate as to the question of his mortal stature.

We were favored last Tuesday with a pleasant call by Rev. W. W. Drake, our pastor at Baton Rouge, La., and his son Walton, who were spending the day in New Orleans. Brother Drake spoke most encouragingly of his work in the Capital City of Louisiana. He returned home in the late afternoon, but his son took the train for Turin, Ga., where he has gone to visit his uncle, Mr. Benjamin M. Drake.

We take the following from a recent number of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate: "Rev. T. J. Warlick, formerly of the North Georgia Conference, but now of the Louisiana Conference and stationed at Homer, has been in Georgia on a visit for some days. He reports things as moving along smoothly in the country where he serves. He also reports well of the other Georgians toiling in that part of the field."

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, the Secretary of Education of the North Mississippi Conference, has done some valuable work for that important cause this spring and summer. He visited a number of the District Conferences, and everywhere that he went he made a fine impression. If we mistake not, every North Mississippi District had pledged itself to assist in maintaining a ministerial student at Millsaps College.

As will be seen elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate, Rev. W. W. Jones, our pastor at Carrollton, Miss., writes us that Mr. J. R. Bingham was stricken with appendicitis some days ago and was forced to submit to an operation. We are pleased to note that he stood the trying ordeal well and that no unfavorable symptoms have since developed. We sincerely hope that he may have a speedy and complete recovery.

The ladies of our church at Greensburg, La., have adopted the custom of "pounding" their pastor once every quarter. They announce the event through the local newspaper and solicit the cooperation of the community in order to insure a big crowd and a liberal donation. The pastor at Greensburg is Rev. H. B. Perritt, and he considers himself fortunate, indeed, to be assigned to a charge where the people are so liberal.

On last Tuesday evening the City Epworth League Union of New Orleans held its monthly meeting in the City Park. The young people assembled in the open air, conducted a religious service and attended to the business of the Union, after which they enjoyed a social hour. This plan of conducting the summer meetings in the park was suggested by the Third Vice President, Rev. W. E. Thomas, and has proved to be a popular one.

Dr. S. H. Werlein's ministry is much appreciated by the Methodists at Alexandria, La. There are few abler sermonizers in Southern Methodism than Dr. Werlein, and best of all, he is thoroughly orthodox and evangelical. He has the imprimatur of old Emory and Henry upon him. What men our Church schools used to turn out! Mr. Carnegie could make no greater mistake than when he seeks to disparage the work of such institutions.

In a letter to our office, written on August 2, Rev. J. D. Parmer, of Tunica, Miss., takes occasion to say how much he misses the late Rev. J. W. Honnoll, who was the pastor of that charge, when the Master called him home. Brother Parmer is not alone in his feeling of loneliness since the Grand Old Man of North Mississippi Methodism went from us. He was large enough to leave a vacancy in the Church and in the world that will long be unfilled.

Pastors and other Christian workers who are interested in getting at the facts concerning "Pastor" Russell and his teachings would do well to write Dr. C. C. Cook, 150 Nassau Street, New York City, for the two following pamphlets: "All About One Russell," and "Some Facts and More Facts About the Self-Styled Pastor Russell." The price of each of these booklets is 10 cents. Since the death of Dr. Dowie, Mr. Russell is the nation's foremost religious fakir.

In sending in some names for our subscription files, for which we extend him our thanks, Rev. George P. Fikes adds the following note: "My health is fast improving, and things are moving on well on the Neshoba Circuit. Surely some of the best people in the world live within the bounds of this charge." We are pleased to know that our brother is gaining in physical strength, and we trust that he may have a most successful rounding out of the year's work.

Rev. F. N. Sweeney, our pastor at Wilson, La., writes as follows: "I have held two meetings on my work. One was at Pisgah, where Brother Curry assisted me. We had good success: the church was revived, and there were 10 accessions. The other series of services was held at Manassas. Brother Bamburg was there and rendered good service, which resulted in 6 additions on profession of faith and one by letter. I am glad to say that my health is much improved."

The Louisiana Conference is fortunate in the kind of men she has in the presiding eldership. They are capable, alert and active, and usually have two or three meetings during the year to confer concerning the promotion of the work of the Church. This is as it should be. Concert of effort counts for much in any undertaking. Considering its numerical strength and financial resources, Louisiana Methodism has been giving a remarkably good account of itself for several years.

A dispatch from Starkville, Miss., to the Commercial Appeal, bearing date of the 5th inst., reads as follows: "A $5,000 Methodist parsonage will be erected here within the next few months. A corner lot, opposite our church, has been purchased, and the enterprise will be carried promptly forward. The building committee is composed of Mr. F. L. Hogan, Mr. W. W. Magruder, and Mr. W. H. Sudduth." We congratulate Brother Lipscomb and his choice flock upon this needed forward movement.

Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, of Columbia, Miss., continues to extend the circulation of the Conference organ among his people. It is needless less to say that we appreciate his kindness in this respect. He is serving with great acceptability one of the choicest congregations in the Mississippi Conference. We hope when the weather gets somewhat cooler to redeem our promise to spend a Sabbath with this good friend of the Advocate and see the sights in Marion County's attractive capital, of which we have heard not a little.

A recent issue of the Brookhaven (Miss.) Leader contained the following appreciative reference to the able and warm-hearted President of Whitworth College: "Dr. I. W. Cooper, whose genial fellowship with religious bodies of every creed and helpfulness to the cause of Christianity generally, are well known, preached for the Baptists at the City Hall last Sunday morning a sermon that edified and uplifted all who heard it." What The Leader says of Dr. Cooper is true: his catholicity and brotherliness extend far beyond denominational lines.

The Bluff Creek camp meeting, which is held near Grangeville, La., will begin next Friday and continue until August 25. A large attendance is expected. Rev. J. G. Snelling, of New Orleans, and Rev. J. B. Williams, of Clinton, are announced as the preachers of the occasion. Those who know these brethren are sure that the Bluff Creek people have in store for them a feast of good things. This is Brother Snelling's second year to hold the meeting there, he and Brother Elton Wilson, of Hammond, La., having been the preachers selected last year.

The interior of our First Church at Columbus, where Rev. W. W. Woollard is pastor, has lately been undergoing a pretty thorough overhauling. The pastor's study has been touched up and rendered generally more attractive. The great auditorium, which is one of the finest in the South, has also been given attention and is much improved in appearance. Reports reaching us from various sources indicate that this congregation is taking on new life and activity, and that an excellent report will be sent to the next session of the Annual Conference.

From the Jackson (Miss.) Daily News of August 6, we clip the following: "Advices to friends from Bishop and Mrs. W. B. Murrah report their safe arrival in England, on their way to the Orient. They had the good fortune to secure passage on the Imperator, and Mrs. Murrah writes that language is inadequate to describe the magnificence and completeness of that mammoth vessel and wonderful triumph of marine architecture. The Bishop and Mrs. Murah expect to travel overland from Cherburg to Brindisi, taking a steamer thence to Hong Kong."

A note from her brother, Rev. H. B. Watkins, of Natchez, Miss., states that the operation that Mrs. Bessie W. Lipscomb underwent at that place more than a week ago seems to have been a complete success, and that she has every chance for a quick recovery. This will be most gratifying news to Sister Lipscomb's many friends throughout the Church, whose name is legion. We trust that a favoring Providence may soon enable her to return to her post at Nashville. As is well known, Mrs. Lipscomb is the Home Base Secretary of our Woman's Missionary work.

Our pastor at Mer Rouge, La., Rev. R. W. Vaughan, has informed us of the death of Mrs. H. D. Causey, which occurred at that place on July 31. She was a most excellent woman, who had been a member of the Methodist Church from girlhood, and whose life in every respect had been most exemplary. She will be greatly missed in the community. She left to mourn her departure a husband, two sons, a sister and brother, and a wide circle of sorrowing friends. We extend sympathy to the bereaved, and pray that the Heavenly Father may graciously comfort and sustain them.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of Mendenhall, Miss., under date of the 8th inst., writes: "We have just closed a great revival at Thomasville—pronounced by the people the best in the history of that church. The membership of the church was greatly quickened and there were 10 accessions, three of them coming from the Baptists. A prayer meeting was organized, and 4 new subscribers to the Advocate and three renewals were secured. The pastor, Rev. O. S. Lewis, is a fine man to work with, and is in high favor with his people. I go next to Summerland." In a note to our office, Brother Lewis speaks in terms of high appreciation of the service rendered his people by Brother Ramsey, stating that he has never had better help in a meeting.

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1913. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

LOYD HAYS HENDERSON (better known as "Little Hays") was born December 17, 1892, and died at his home in Walnut Grove, Miss., June 22, 1913, aged 20 years 6 months and 5 days. He died with congestion of the brain. He suffered only about 32 hours, but oh, how severe was the pain! When ten months old he had an attack of meningitis which left its effects upon him. No child ever received better attention than he did at the hands of his mother, brother and sister, grandfather and grandmother Hays. Hays was a great boy in many ways. He never murmured nor complained at anything. He always did as he was taught. Hays did not mind death because his life was so pure, noble and true. In the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends we laid his remains in the Beech Springs Cemetery on the evening of June 23, to await the resurrection of the just. May the spirit of the living God cheer and comfort the bereaved ones and bring them safe to the home "not made with hands," eternal in the heavens!

Their former pastor,

G. P. FIKES.

FROM THE COLPORTER.

This is the season for special revival and evangelistic meetings, particularly in the country churches. For these occasions much care is given to securing preachers and singers, and other helpful forces. But one very valuable aid is too often overlooked. The pastor who fails to provide for the circulation of religious literature in these meetings fails in the use of one of the most potent agencies for promoting the work and conserving its results. The sermons, songs and prayers may be forgotten and their impress lost, but the good book or tract left in the hand or home will abide for instruction, edification, and comfort.

This was one of the means used continuously by John Wesley in his great rivival movement; and in the conferences with his helpers, he always laid great stress on the importance of "being more diligent in circulating the books." And this practice continues to this day with the most noted and successful revivalists and pastors.

They speak not wisely who oppose this work with the plea that it is harmful to the interest of the meeting. Away with such an idea that is born of ignorance and used by the enemy of God and souls! A little turning on of the light of information will remove all such unfounded prejudices.

As these occasions are designed to reach many people with gospel preaching who are not otherwise reached, so they afford opportunities for reaching many with the written Word and other Christian literature that would not be otherwise reached. And it is in evidence that thousands of Bibles, Testaments and religious books and tracts have been circulated in revival meetings and proved to be fruitful of good. Let us, then, awake to visions of these opportunities and our obligations for sowing the good seed while the enemy is busy sowing tares in the field.

Let the pastor take our catalogue and select a few books, pamphlets and tracts for each meeting; handle them himself or appoint some one for the purpose, making public announcement and explanation of that work as a part of the meeting. He may invite his Colporter or other representative of the Publishing House to help him. Do not be afraid of any harmful effects; where one may be prejudiced, scores will be benefited.

Others are taking advantage of their meetings to sow broadcast their doctrinal literature. Why may not we do likewise, with such tracts as "The Things Methodists Believe," $1.00 per dozen; "Jesus Not Immersed, But Baptized," 40 cents per dozen; "Why I Am a Methodist," "Why I Am Not a Baptist," each 25 cents per dozen; all postpaid at these prices.

Let "The Little Hymn Book" be used in all our meetings and for all services in our churches, and every home supplied with at least one copy. The prices are very reasonable—only $20 per 100, cloth binding, and $12.50 per 100, leatherette, express charges not prepaid. Leatherette binding, only $2 per dozen by mail, postpaid. Cloth binding, $2.50. Forty copies and upward, at 100 rates. Round or shape notes, as may be desired. This book is growing in popularity where studied and used. Orders are coming rapidly. Let us have yours, for it and other needed books. When you see a book advertised that you want, favor us with your order.

All those indebted for books will bear in mind that the amounts due, however small, are much needed. Some accounts are of long standing—far beyond the time limit, and from which no response can be as yet obtained to requests sent. Brethren, these things ought not to be so. It is expected that each one concerned will at once act his part to relieve the situation by some kind of response.

REVIVAL AT OKOLONA.

We have just had with us at Okolona, Miss., in a twenty days' revival campaign, Rev. W. M. McIntosh and his efficient wife, and singer, Mr. Anderson. It was a union meeting, all denominations taking part. It was held under an improvised tabernacle. The weather was ideal, the folks were in a good humor, and Bros. McIntosh and Anderson were at their best. It was indeed a great meeting. It is regarded generally as the greatest meeting ever held in Okolona.

The results in numbers were more than 100 conversions and about 100 additions to the different Churches. We received on profession of faith into our Church 26, and by letter 12, making 38, with 6 more to be received. We had just previous to the meeting recived 20 on profession of faith and 7 by letter. This is 65 we have received up to date, and several more are yet to come in.

One of the most perceptible results of the meeting is in the moral and spiritual uplift which has come to the whole town. All our churches have felt its power.

Brother McIntosh does a work that abides. He is an ideal man for leadership in a union meeting. All denominations are helped alike, and a fine spirit of unity is cultivated. His sermons are Scriptural; his wit is of the real Irish kind; and his appeals to Christian and sinner are almost irresistible. He is a safe and sane evangelist. Mr. Anderson is a great choirister; his voice is smooth and strong. He is fine help in a meeting.

Best wishes to the Advocate.

J. H. HOLDER.

Tidings From the Field

Houlka, Miss.

We have just closed an eight days' meeting at Concord, one of my country churches, which resulted in one of the best revivals ever held in this section. We had 33 accessions to the Church on profession of faith, and a general spiritual quickening of the people. We were assisted by Rev. J. H. Bass, of Columbus, Miss. No one need fear to have Brother Bass in a meeting, for he knows what to do, and when to do it. If I know what preaching is, he is one of the strongest gospel preachers we have. In my opinion he could fill almost any pulpit in the Church acceptably.—W. N. Dodds, P. C.

West, Miss.

We held our meeting at West the week following the second Sunday in July. Brother Tom Lipscomb, of Starkville, did the preaching. He is one of our strongest young preachers. To say that he preached well and won the hearts of all the denominations is putting it lightly. The church was greatly revived. There were showers of blessing all the week, and especially on Friday, when that princely layman, Brother Edward Brock, held an old-fashioned love feast. There were two additions to our church membership as a result of these services. On the fourth Sunday in July Dr. Henderson, of Lexington, helped me in a meeting at Bowling Green. He is an excellent preacher. By his fine social gifts he won the hearts of the people, and they will always remember his strong messages of love and truth. We had 4 accessions to the Church—three of them on profession of faith. The charge is in very good condition.—Your brother in Christ, W. A. Clark.

Lorena, Miss.

We have recently had a fine meeting at Gasque Chapel. It embraced the third and fourth Sundays in July. The congregations were large from the beginning to the end, except one day when it rained. The preaching was done by our very efficient and able pastor, Rev. F. B. Ormond. His sermons were deep and eloquent from first to last. People of all denominations who heard him were delighted and many were lifted to a higher plane of Christian living. There were two accessions by profession of faith and the church was revived. Brother Ormond's discourses on the last day of the meeting would be hard to excel. At the 11 a. m. service he preached to the parents on their responsibility and their duty to God and the generations to come as it is taught in the Word of God. At 4 p. m. he preached to men only. There was a large attendance from among all denominations. He spoke to them on the great necessity of a pure life, both ecclesiastical and political. His discourse met with the almost unanimous approval of all present.—E. F. Lane.

Bunkie, La.

On July 24 we closed an eight days' meeting at the Bay Hill Church, resulting in a revival and 11 accessions to the Church on profession of faith. Rev. L. N. Hoffpaulr, of Jennings, did the preaching and the singing was led by the pastor, Rev. W. B. Perritt. Brother Hoffpaulr was pastor of our church six years ago, and after an absence of four years returned and assisted Dr. Parker in a meeting here, and the people of this community again requested that he should assist the pastor in their meeting this year. This goes to show how much the people think of Brother Hoffpauir and thoroughly attests their confidence in him. He is a good revivalist and an excellent preacher. His sermons were interesting and uplifting, and we feel sure that we are upon a higher plane than we were before the meeting. Services were held both morning and evening, and with each succeeding one, a deepening interest, as well as an increasing attendance, was apparent until the meeting closed. Scores of people resolved upon a better life; some entered into newness of life, and almost everyone said the meeting was a blessing to him. Brother Hoffpauir is strong and absolutely fearless in his denunciation of sin, yet tender and loving, and almost irresistible in his appeals to the sinner. His great faith and courage are only equaled by his humility, his tact, and his brotherly love. Choicer spirits are seldom found. We believe that there are greater possibilities in the future for our Church and we are praying toward that end.—Chas. Hatfield.

Haynesville, La.

I preached a few days this week at Shongaloo, La., which is about 12 miles west of Haynesville, and is one of the churches on the Haynesville Mission which I am now caring for in addition to my regular work. Much interest was manifested in our services and while we were hindered in some ways from accomplishing what we had hoped for, we have plans under way that will mean a new church for us at this point in the near future. Also I secured five new subscribers to the Advocate. This places the paper in every Methodist home at Shongaloo. We held our meeting at Athens the week following the fourth Sunday in May. I had the help of Rev. W. F. Boggett, of the Mississippi Conference, who preached to the delight and edification of our people. We had several accessions to the Church, and interest in the work was otherwise quickened. Our new church building at Athens is nearing completion and will be a gem of beauty. Our people at that place have wrought well this year, and deserve much praise for what they are doing. They have been kind and generous to their pastor in many ways. Our people at Haynesville are interested in advancing the interests of the Church, as is seen in their provision for the parsonage and the fine new Sunday school rooms recently added to the church. These rooms have been a long-felt need with us; but we have them now and hope to start a new era in our Sunday school history. The other points on the charge are not sleeping, but I shall speak of them later. I have sent in 59 subscriptions to the Advocate this year and hope to send still others before the end of the year. We like the Advocate in this neck of the woods.—W. W. Perry.

August 1, 1913.

Harriston Charge, Mississippi Conf.

We have just closed a five days' meeting at Mizpah, Brother Gunn of Gloster doing the preaching for us. There were no accessions, but the church was strengthened and uplifted greatly. This is one of the few sections of our Conference where almost every one in reach is a member of some Church. Brother H. B. Watkins of Natchez will begin our meeting at Cane Ridge on the third Sunday. Pray for us there.—Yours in Him, M. F. Adams.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

The amount paid to wipe out the deficit against our Louisiana Conference Sunday School Board np to August 1, was as follows: Previously reported, $112.90; H. E. Hartner, of Urania, in the Alexandria District, $5; J. M. Miller, of Minden, in the Ruston District, $10; in the Shreveport District, R. T. Moore, of Mansfield, $10; S. A. Kidd, of Mansfield, $10; Prof. J. S. Johnson, of Shreveport, $5; J. B. Hutchenson, of Shreveport, $5; total, $161.90. Balance due, $588.10.

During these days of revival efforts attention should be given to preaching to the children. It is too much to expect the same sermon that is ordinarily preached to adults to apply with equal appropriateness to children. Their bodies, minds and hearts are all at different stages of development, and their viewpoints are those of the simple and inexperienced. To have them sit through a whole series of meetings with no attention paid to them is a most serious neglect. They are just at the stage in life when to believe is natural, and a few services for them, well directed, may yield more for the kingdom of God and for the membership of the Church than any other effort for an ingathering that could be made. And in this connection a Decision Day should be held in the Sunday school on the last Sunday of the revival, when teachers should join with the pastor and the superintendent in a well planned effort to lead the scholars to confess Christ and to unite themselves with the Church. Then they might be taught through the week by the pastor as to the duties of church membership, and a week later when they are received into the Church, while still at the altar, let their parents and teachers come forward and take the communion with them, and have them learn from the first both their privilege and duty in taking the communion. "It is the will of your Father that none of these little ones should perish."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Mr. R. A. Maddox.

If you take a missionary collection, be sure to give missionary instruction. Children should give intelligently and systematically.

News comes from Brother C. H. Ellis of the Pachuta charge that his Sunday schools are getting along finely, but he states that he will be glad to have the Field Secretary at any time. Brother Ellis is a very godly man, and gives his time faithfully to looking after the cause of Christ and the interests of the Methodist Church.

Some of the problems of the country Sunday school can be solved by training the workers. Organize a training class of the young people in the school. Another problem may be solved by forgetting that you are too far from the church to go to Sunday school. Brother Luster of the Cayuga school goes five miles, and Mrs. L. D. Hurst of Redbone goes six miles every Sunday. Religion and determination will make most any Sunday school go. Don't you think so?

A suggestive plan for Sunday school collections: Let the first Sunday be for missions; the second and third for the running expenses of the Sunday school; the fourth, for the Orphans' Home, and the fifth Sundays for the support of the Sunday school work in your Conference. Suppose that you try this plan a while. I am sure it would be a great help to the Sunday School Board, and Brother Williams at the "Home."

The Primary Department of the Sunday school of the Capitol Street Church of Jackson (with the following corps of workers: Mrs. J. W. Marley, superintendent, and Mrs. Ollie Jelks, Miss Eddie Brown, and Mrs. Ware as teachers), has equipped a room for its work, putting a very beautiful rug on the floor at a cost of $49.00. The little folks in this department did this without any "entertainment" of any kind. They earned the greater part of the amount they gave by their own efforts, apart from the regular Sunday school collection. If these little folks can do this, why can not grown-up people take the hint and equip the village and country Sunday school for work?

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

In some Teacher Training classes each member pays ten cents a month to a common fund for the purchase of a good reference library for their own Sunday school.

The picked class of six or more prospective teachers which meets at the regular Sunday school hour has many advantages. Such a class in two years can accomplish wonders. Do not consider this a class of substitute teachers, but let them feel free and easy for study every Sunday.

Every boy's class should not only be organized and have a name and motto, but should have a hero and the Field Secretary would welcome a letter from every such class, stating the hero selected, and why, expressed in the boy's own way. We shall grow very much like the ideals that we cherish.

The teacher in the small and isolated school should send to Dr. Hamill and get the books and methods which he stands ready to supply, and should enroll with him and secure a certificate. Many not only do good work for themselves in this way, but catch a full breath of the uplifting air of the great student fellowship.

Do not hesitate to start a class composed of 15 or 16-year-olds, beginning with our Legion of Honor Bible section. Many fine teachers may be discovered and captured before other interests rush in to consume time and ability. And be sure to take time for careful work, under the keen and capable eyes of skilled teachers.

It is not too early to begin planning for a Teacher Training Class in every Sunday school, for such classes should start in September. And remember, if only one or two are willing to make the effort, it is well worth while. Teacher training means more than training the teaching force; the superintendent needs this work, and the secretary needs it, as also does every other officer in the Sunday school.

One secret of Sunday school work is to plan ahead. The school that will hold its boys at 16, will do so by beginning to hold them at 12. Not caring who Tom's friends are is criminal indifference in any one who professes to really care for Tom. It does seem strange that we have been so slow to discover that the strategic thing is to help Tom find his friends within the Church's jurisdiction. So says Foster in "The Boy and the Church."

Here is another paragraph for a teacher's note book from Coe's "The Core of Good Teaching": "The core of good teaching consists not in displacing present interests, experience and ideas, but in expanding them in the right direction." For example, the little child's attitude toward its father is to be expanded toward perfect trust in the Heavenly Father; the small boy's interest in fair play in games is to be expanded, little by little, toward the Christian ideal of brotherhood; the adolescent's interest in heroes is to be expanded so as to include the distinction between true and false greatness.

The Farm Burden Bearer

YOU and your farm wagon spend a great deal of time together. Of all farm tools, it is your standby. Its wheels bear the burden of big loads—towering racks of hay and grain, sacks of produce, loads of sand and gravel, anything that needs moving, over miles of roads to market. It takes solid strength to stand up long under that. When next you ride on a load, listen to the constant racking, creaking, groaning sound of the wagon box, wheels, and running gear as the load pitches back and forth over the road ruts. Not an unpleasant sound, but the strain that causes it is hard on the wagon. I H C wagons—

Weber New Bettendorf

give the buyer the most he can get for his money becanse they defy hard usage for the longest time, and are easiest on the horses, which is no small item.

These are a few of the things that contribnte to the making of the unbeatable I H C wagon reputation. Selection of the finest grades of lnmber, oak, hickory and pine, and of the best quality steel and iron; many months of toughening air-drying for every piece of wood; skilled assembling of parts, fitting of bolts and rivcts, and perfect shaping and ironing; application of the purest paint to act as wood preservative and to prevent shrinking and warping of the wood. When the wagon is ready for the farmer, it is practically perfect in every detail and thoroughly up to the I H C standard.

And there are many other reasons we have not room for here why I H C wagons are the best to buy. Weber and Columbus wagons have wood gears; New Bettendorf and Steel King have steel gears.

A visit and a talk at your local dealer's, where the wagons may be seen and studied, will soon convince you as to the wagon you want. Get catalogues from the dealer, or, write the

All the Corns
In America Could be Ended This Week

If all people used what millions are using, there would be no corns next week.

Every corn would be treated at once with a little Blue-jay plaster.

The pain would stop instantly. Then the B & B wax would gently loosen each corn. In 48 hours all the corns would come out.

You can prove this yourself in two days. Try a Blue-jay on that old, old corn.

Note how it acts without any discomfort. Note the absence of pain or soreness. The corn is completely forgotten.

Then note in two days how the whole corn lifts out.

Blue-jay keeps millions free from corns. When you stop paring—stop old-time treatments—you will have freedom too. And all people sometime will know this.

A in the picture is the soft B & B wax. It loosens the corn.
B stops the pain and keeps the wax from spreading.
C wraps around the toe. It is narrowed to be comfortable.
D is rubber adhesive to fasten the plaster on.

MR. J. R. BINGHAM ILL.

Dear Brother Meek: Brother J. R. Bingham has been absent from his place in church and Sunday school for two Sundays. About the first of August he was seized with sudden illness which proved, upon diaguosis, to be appendicitis. On the 4th inst., he submitted to the necessary operation. We are glad to inform all friends that the progress he has made toward recovery is satisfactory. Sister Bingham was visiting in Alabama when her husband was taken ill, and in response to the summons hastened home, arriving with the surgeon who performed the operation at their home in Carrollton. Brother H. M. Thompson is faithfully acting as Sunday school superintendent during Brother Bingham's illness.

TAYLORSVILLE, MISS.

Dear Doctor Meek: Probably a few notes from Taylorsville Circuit will be appreciated. We are moving along nicely, having made about $200 worth of improvements since March. Our people are good about responding to the needs of the Circuit. We began our first protracted meeting here at Taylorsville on the first Sunday in July. Brother T. J. O'Neil was with me throughout the week, and all who heard him say he is one of the best preachers in the State. The Church was greatly strengthened, there being four additions. On July 13, Brother G. S. Harmon was to have been with me at Mize, but for some reason he did not come. Rev. J. Loyd Decell came to our relief on Monday and preached three great sermons. On Tuesday evening that godly man, Dr. I. L. Peebles, came to us and preached some of the strongest sermons we ever listened to, both in spirit and doctrine. The meeting lasted throughout the week, and resulted in twenty-nine additions to the Church, several conversions, the community as a whole being greatly strengthened, and in Methodism being built up. Dr. Peebles was also with us at Oakahoy. A good meeting was enjoyed, Methodism was strengthened, and there were two additions to the Church. On the fourth Sunday, Brother Geo. Galloway came to us at Fairmont. Here we had a great meeting. The results secured will be lasting. Brother Galloway preached with such power and simplicity that the Church was greatly strengthened, especially from his sermon on "Love thy neighbor as thyself." Two were added to the Church. Now, Dr. Meek, since coming on the work our membership has increased 64, and 35 of these joined by baptism and vows.—A. W. O'Bryant, P. C.

CAFFEINE IN BEVERAGES.

In the year 1909 the United States consumed sixteen million, two hundred and forty eight thousand two hundred and twenty-one pounds of caffeine in the form of coffee, tea, chocolate and cocoa. As the population of that year was estimated to be ninety millions and as there are three hundred and sixty-five days in a year, this gives an average of three and one-half grains of caffeine per capita per day.

In Great Britain the average is a little higher and in Germany a little lower than in the United States. In view of the fact that infants, children and many adults do not use the caffeine-containing beverages it is fairly safe to estimate that the average user consumes seven grains of caffeine per day.

A glass of Coca-Cola contains only one and twenty-two-hundredths grains of caffeine so that you would have to drink about six glasses of Coca-Cola per day to get as much caffeine as the average coffee or tea user gets. Although Coca-Cola contains only about one-half as much caffeine as a cup of tea or coffee, it possesses one great advantage over both of these beverages in that it contains none of the acrid vegetable substance known as tannin or tannic acid which makes tea and coffee disagree with some people.—Adv.

SHOES AT WHOLESALE

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE Readers are SAVING from ONE to TWO DOLLARS a PAIR by Ordering Their Shoes DIRECT FROM FACTORY BY PARCEL POST.

Would the cutting of your FAMILY SHOE BILL one-third or more mean a very big yearly saving to you? Figure it out. The present high cost of shoes is due to two things, the Middlemen's profits which the consumer must pay and the enormous decrease in raw materials. The new Parcel Post System gave us an idea. By selling our shoes direct to the wearer, cutting out the middlemen entirely, we could save the consumer fully a third on every pair of shoes and still make our usual wholesale profit. The plan is a great success. New Orleans Christian Advocate readers are realizing the opportunity of saving and great numbers are writing for our catalog which is sent free to anyone on request. It tells how cheaply high quality shoes can really be bought under this fair method of selling. Every shoe sold is guaranteed perfect in fit, material and workmanship—your money will be refunded if unsatisfactory. Write for your catalog to-day. A trial order will please and result in our getting your entire shoe trade. PARCEL POST SHOE CO., 258 Meeting Street, Charleston, South Carolina. (Advertisement.

They paid this quarter $54 of the foreign pledge. Such activity on the part of Second Church should stimulate the zeal of the other churches of the city and prepare the way for a larger missionary interest.

LETTER FROM MISS HELEN JOHNSTON.

Dear Mrs. Holt: It is gladdening to hear of so much enthusiasm among the workers at home. We on the field realize how much the success of the work here depends on you. Indeed, only as you make it possible can we carry on the work to which the Master has called us. God bless you, and may your number so increase that every call for the evangelization of the world may be answered.

Last year was a good year, even though there was much to try one's faith. However, by his guidance much was overcome and our hearts rejoiced because the seemingly impossible became possible.

The work of this year is encouraging. Our school rooms are full and we have as many in the boarding department as we can comfortably accommodate.

News has come that at the last meeting of the Council $20,000 was appropriated for a school building here in Ribeirao Preto. We have a lease on the building which we occupy only until the end of this year. Now that there is a certainty of our building, it may be that we can stay on until the building is completed.

Miss Andrew, now at home on leave of absence, wrote that a lady of Louisville, Ky., had given her $700 for the building of one of the dormitories. I wonder if there is not some one in the Louisiana Conference who would like to help us in a similar way. Material and labor are very dear. $20,000 will hardly be enough to put up the building that we really need. We shall do the very best we can with it. The Martha Watts Annex in Piracicaba cost some $35,000. Here we need a building that will accommodate the entire school.

Mrs. Alexander of Greenwood, La., is going to send us a scholarship. One of our girls who was a scholarship girl in the school for some years was married a few weeks ago. Although she did not marry a "crente," I am sure she will do all she can to make her home a Christian home. This is what Brazil needs to-day.

May our Father's richest blessings be yours. Sincerely yours,

HELEN JOHNSTON.

WHAT THE BROOKHAVEN MISSIONARY SOCIETY IS DOING.

Our missionary society since its union three years ago has made steady progress. Not only has the membership increased, but also the general attendance and interest. We are wide awake, each officer working with the co-operation of all the members to make every department interesting.

The first Monday is the regular business meeting; the second Monday is devoted to social service; the third Monday is the time fixed for holding our Study Circle; and on the fourth Monday is held our social meeting—we are entertained once a month at the homes of the various members. The program outlined in the year-book is used with a few additional musical numbers. A free-will offering is a feature of this meeting, the amount being used whenever it is needed most. When there is a fifth Monday a prayer service is held.

We have done a good deal of charity work, not confining our gifts to our own people. A large box has been sent this year to Mrs. Meekins at the Mary Werlein Mission, and a number of nice, new garments to our Orphans' Home valued at about $40.

Five of our ladies made a trip to the country and organized by request an aid society. This little band of women will have our special care. With their determination and our interest to see them succeed, we hope to have them develop and grow into a real missionary society.

Especial mention should be made of the President and other officers of our society who have done such good work, but a word should be spoken for the members, too, who are so willing at any time to respond to any call. In fact we are just one great big family, all working in unison trying to help, not only ourselves, but those who come in touch with us. And with our Father's help we want to add our voices to the mighty cry, "Our Kingdom for Christ!"

AN INCIDENT.

At the recent session of the Seashore Assembly near Biloxi, Miss., after an urgent appeal on "Life Work Decision" a beautiful, talented, cultured young woman came to the platform and offered herself for definite service. She will enter the Methodist Training School in Nashville in September, and will begin her work as a Kindergarten teacher. As a result of that service several others have been led to serious thinking as to what God would have them do with their lives.

We know that the pastor and the pastor's wife are busy people; so let us ask that all Christians who may chance to read this incident may speak to some promising young woman or young man and urge the claim of Christ upon his or her life for definite service. In our own church 800 ministers, 175 home workers, and 40 foreign missionaries are urgently needed. We know that the spirit of God is moving upon the hearts and minds of our young people, but many of them are being misled by the voices of the world. They need to be trained. Once in the Training School they are sure to find themselves and to find their place in the plan of God.

The Methodist Training School begins its fall term September 17. Will you not try to influence some one to enter upon this training for definite service. "He that winneth souls is wise." How much wiser is that one who is instrumental in persuading a winner of souls to realize the greatest possible efficiency.

In addition to the handsomely illustrated catalogue which explains the tremendous saving in price, the convenient plan of payment, and which pictures and describes the various styles of pianos and self-player pianos offered, we have printed an attractive booklet containing the letters received from Club members who have received their instruments and have experienced the benefits of Club membership. Both of these booklets will be sent free to any reader upon request.

Editorial

AN AFFRONT THAT CALLS FOR ACTION.

From the Memphis Commercial Appeal of Sunday, August 10, we take the following:

"The Directors of the Tri-State Fair have decided formally to open the fair on Sunday, Sept. 21, and have the date read Sept. 21-27 inclusive. In order to entertain the crowd more thoroughly a mammoth sacred concert has been planned, and "Pastor" Russell of the Brooklyn Tabernacle will deliver an address, hurrying home from an European engagement in time to meet that appointment. A small admission fee will be charged, but there will be no charge for the seats in the grandstand where the concert will be given.

* * * * * * *

"The speaker of the day, Charles Taze Russell, has gained international reputation as an interpreter of the Bible along certain lines. He holds the pastorate not only of the Brooklyn Tabernacle, but also of a tabernacle in London and one in Washington, crossing the ocean many times in order to meet his appointments and give other lectures beside—his lectures being always free."

We have seen no announcement in a long while that we consider more outrageous than this. That the Managers of the Tri-State Fair, which is held annually in Memphis, should blazon abroad their purpose to have a Sunday opening this year, with "Pastor" Russell as the chief attraction is nothing short of amazing. Tennessee, Mississippi, and Arkansas—the States participating in this exhibiton—are largely Christian commonwealths, and that a man of Mr. Russell's religious views and general repute should have been called upon to take a prominent part in it, is an affront to their citizenship which cannot be ignored. Not only are his views thoroughly at war with the accepted teachings of orthodox Christianity, but his methods of operation have been exposed in the courts and shown to be quite discreditable. Indeed, by practically the entire Christian press of the country he is regarded as the greatest religious fakir in the nation, and his propaganda is considered a positive menace to the moral and religious welfare of the American people. He is nothing like as sound in his teaching as was the late John Alexander Dowie.

And let it be noted that this announcement in the Commercial Appeal not only states that Mr. Russell will be present and speak at the opening of the Tri-State Fair, but that it parades him as a very great man and, by implication, commends him. Such an endorsement as these Directors have given him by thus engaging him and writing about him is calculated to make his insidious assaults upon Biblical Christianity much more influential for harm in this section.

In view of the foregoing facts, we urge the Christain people of the three States co-operating in the maintenance of the Memphis Fair to register at once a ringing protest against having Mr. Russell in any way connected with it. This should be done at the earliest moment possible, and if the Directors will not heed their voice, we think a rigid boycott should be instituted against the exhibition until it is better managed. We cannot but wonder if with his characteristic shrewdness "Pastor" Russell has purchased from these Managers the privileges which they propose to accord him. We do not affirm this to be true, but we should not be surprised if it were. As an adroit and effective advertiser this religious mountebank has had no rival in the United States within recent years.

CARING FOR SUPERANNUATED PREACHERS.

Nearly all the denominations are recognizing to an increasing extent the duty of making better provision for their aged and retired ministers. This obligation has a sound basis in right and justice, since the salary of the average preacher is kept so close to the line of his absolute necessities that he has little chance to lay anything aside for his later years when he can no longer work. To use these men as long as they have strength to serve efficiently and then cast them off to suffer want, is a course which the Church of God cannot afford to pursue. The various movements which have been started to take better care of these veterans in life's eventide are timely and highly creditable.

We were pleased to note in the New Orleans Picayune a few days since the following appreciative reference to this very important matter:

"The shamefully inadequate provision made for the support of the aged ministers of the Gospel of most denominations in this country is in marked contrast with the superb provision made for them in Germany. The Christian Herald is authority for the statement that in Germany the young minister gets a minimum salary, usually $500, and a parsonage. This salary is increased every few years, until, at 65, the minister, even if he has changed his parish, receives $2500, the largest compensation permissible, to which is to be added the use of the parsonage and certain fees given him. At 65 the minister can withdraw on a pension if he shall so elect or if the parish shall so desire, or he can continue by general consent five years longer. On withdrawing he receives as a pension for the rest of his life two-thirds of his last and highest salary. On his death his widow receives an adequate pension for the remainder of her days, and also does each of her children until his sixteenth or eighteenth year."

One of the Churches in the United States that has lately been specially active in planning to acquire a fund to safeguard its aged ministers from want is the Protestant Episcopal. For the past three years it has had in existence a Commission of able clerymen to study this question, with Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts as chairman, and the report of this body, which was recently submitted, is a most informing one. It shows that there are in the Episcopal Church 5,500 ministers, whose salaries aggregate the sum of $8,000,000 annually. The plan which the Commission suggested purposes "not only to pension the whole body of the clergy when they become 65 years old, but also to pension the widows, to educate their orphan children, and to take care of clergymen disabled at any age." The pension allowed will amount practically to half-pay, and the plan will embrace foreign missionaries as well as workers in the home field. It is estimated that not less than $7,000,000 will be required to start the operation of this scheme, and that at least $500,000 will thereafter be annually disbursed to those who are to be helped. The suggestion made is that this yearly expenditure of half a million dollars be provided for by a tax on the local churches graduated according to the age at which the clergyman was ordained. It is computed that this assessment would be about 6 per cent of the pastors' salaries.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was one of the first denominations to take up the work of making some provision for its superannuated preachers, but it must be admitted that, though she has done more in this direction than most of the other Churches in the United States, her progress in raising money for this purpose has been regrettably slow. Our General Superannuate Fund, which we have been gathering for many years, now foots up about $320,000. Our Annual Conferences raised and disbursed to Conference claimants last year, according to the General Minutes, $278,877. What we have to appropriate to them allows each only a very small sum. Last year the Mississippi Conference paid its claimants from $25 to $275; the North Mississippi, from $25 to $240; and the Louisiana, from $75 to $225. Beyond any question, we need to bestir ourselves more energetically to take proper care of these dependent and needy ones. Among the many calls that are coming to us, none is more deserving and sacred than this.

AS THE PRESBYTERIAN SEES IT.

Not only the Southern Methodist papers, but the religious press of the entire nation, so far as it has expressed itself, has with most remarkable unanimity disapproved of the Kirkland-Carnegie transaction concerning the Medical Department of Vanderbilt University and commended the course of our Bishops. Among the latest journals to comment on the affair is The Presbyterian, of Philadelphia, which is one of the most conservative and ably edited church periodicals in the United States, and here is an extract from its utterance on the subject:

"Mr. Carnegie has not succeeded in breaking down the distinctive character of our denominational educational institutions to the extent he evidently hoped to. He did catch some college presidents and boards napping; and a few weaklings swallowed his bait, exchanging their birthright for a mess of pottage. But when he attempted to catch the Board of Methodist Bishops, in connection with Vanderbilt University, in Tennessee, he miscalculated his mark. The Bishops resented his offer, and gave him to understand that a Christian school could not be bought with billions, let alone millions. This effort of Mr. Carnegie has done more to uncover his hand and reveal his designs than anything else he ever undertook. If there were any doubts as to the purpose of his 'Foundation,' those doubts are forever dispelled, and the real purpose revealed."

THE VANDERBILT CONTROVERSY.

(The following exposure of the sinuous course of the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University and defense of the Bishops is from the virile pen of Col. E. C. Reeves, of Johnson City, Tenn. Col. Reeves is one of the foremost members of the bar of the Volunteer State; he was the private secretary and campaign manager for Andrew Johnson during his successful campaign for a seat in the United States Senate subsequent to his retirement from the Presidency; he has frequently represented the Holston Conference in the General Conference, and is at present a member of the Book Committee. We trust that our readers will not be misled as to the attitude of Tennessee in this controversy—the State in which Southern Methodism is so strong, and for which she has done so much. Nashville is the only plague spot within its borders.—Editor of the Advocate.)

The Real Issue Stated.

"But He perceived their craftiness, and said unto them, show me a penny. Whose image and superscription hath it? And they said, Caesar's. And He said unto them, then render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's." Right here lies the crux of the matter. Whose "image" does Vanderbilt University bear? That of the Church or that of Caesar? Is it an institution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, or a secular institution to be controlled by Caesar? Settle that question and in reason the controversy is at an end.

Relation of the Church to University.

That the Church, through some of its annual conferences, founded Vanderbilt University is beyond controversy. That the Church organized the university and made it a going concern none but the mendacious, or ignorant, will deny. That it was a Southern Methodist university was a conceded fact by all intelligent church-informed people; and if correctly reported, by none more clearly than by Chancellor Kirkland. The Church claimed, and asserted, her right of control of the university, under the terms of its charter, through a Board of Trustees selected by the Church directly, or through its agency, and through its College of Bishops, who were ex-officio a board of visitors, the two boards constituting a governing board of the university.

Now, if Vanderbilt is a Church institution how is it related to the Church? It was not organized for pecuniary profit, nor has it power to declare money dividends. It is what is known as an eleemosynary institution, a corporate entity with corporate powers common to such a corporation, but founded by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for the promotion and diffusion of knowledge, and for religious training. Being simply an eleemosynary institution of the Church its only relation to the Church is through its government by the Church. If the Church has not the right and power to control Vanderbilt University through trustees elected directly by the Church, or through her agency, and through her College of Bishops as a board of visitors, then she sustains no relations whatever to the university, and it is no more a Church institution than is the State Normal School at Johnson City, Tenn. I challenge anyone to show what other relation the Church can sustain to Vanderbilt except that of the governmental.

Persistent Effort to Eject the Church.

Those who are familiar with the history of Vanderbilt know that, not long after the advent of Chancellor Kirkland, a scheme was set on foot to secularize Vanderbilt. Some wiseacres became obsessed with the opinion that so long as the university was under the control of the Church its sphere would be limited, and that the "image and superscription" of Caesar should be substituted for that of the Church. This could not be done while the Bishops constituted a part of the governing board. The process of eliminating a part of the Bishops was undertaken, but Bishop Hoss, the "bravest of the brave," and among the wisest of the wise, set himself against the unlawful innovation. A new, or amended, charter was next attempted, but the scheme, as we now remember, was throttled, and principally through the opposition led by Bishop Hoss. A Church commission was created to define the rights of the Church, and the powers and duties of the College of Bishops, with reference to the government of Vanderbilt University. Able lawyers were named for that commission, among them being a Supreme Judge of the State of Kentucky.

There was no let up, nor halting, in the effort to secularize the university, so another move was made, and that was to correlate Vanderbilt and Peabody. Unfortunately, most of the Bishops were induced by promises, never fulfilled, to withdraw opposition to a sale of part of the Vanderbilt campus. The sequel of that unfortunate deal is that Caesar romps over a lovely part of the original campus, while Vanderbilt lies prone, gashed and bleeding. Vanderbilt pays the penalty of that stupendous folly committed by the majority of the Board of Trust. While that folly was enjoined by the Bishops, they were criticised and villified, as now, for being narrow bigots governed by prejudice. It was a great mistake a majority of the Bishops made in being overpersuaded to release the injunction. That a body of men who promoted that unfortunate scheme should now deem themselves to be possessed of more wisdom for the guidance of the destinies of Vanderbilt than would a board of control as provided by the charter of the university, is a marvel of self-importance but a degree removed from a baseless egotism.

But Caesar never tires nor slumbers. To get Vanderbilt from under the control of the Church was the consuming idea. A bill was prepared and introduced into both houses of the Tennessee Legislature, and quietly passed two readings, and was referred to the Committee on Education. Diplomacy is said to be the art of concealing ideas by words. The one who drafted that bill was a past-master in diplomacy, and could put a Spanish minister to the blush. Methodist members of the Legislature were told that the measure was primarily for the benefit of Vanderbilt, and it so appeared from a cursory reading of the bill. Its passage into law meant an end of Vanderbilt as a Church institution. It was gliding through the Legislature without opposition until Dr. DuBose saw it and, perceiving its craftiness, hurried to the writer and informed him of the stealthy game that was being played, and he, in his simplicity, hurried to the office of Dr. Winton and informed him of the scheme being worked to get Vanderbilt away from Church control, but was amazed to find the editor of the Christian Advocate, the Church organ, standing pat with the forces of Caesar. A stay was procured and a day set for a hearing before the two committees. Bishop Hoss, a sick man at Tate Springs, was informed by wire of the status of affairs and he hastened to Nashville and led the fight to the ignominous defeat of Chancellor Kirkland and his coadjutors. Is it any wonder that Caesar's guns are all trained on the great and good Bishop? He is a power in any field of action.

Bishops Well Within Their Rights.

The Bishops have been much censured for their veto by some who are conversant with the facts in the case, and abused by others who are densely ignorant of the facts involved. The Bishops are charged with acting from prejudice, and even the Nashville Banner has repeatedly made that charge. Whether or not this criticism of the Bishops is well founded is not to be determined by the ipse dixit of anyone, but by the facts bearing on their action.

The Church Commission reported its findings, which, in part, were as follows: "That the College of Bishops is a board of common law visitors of the University." "That the General Conference has the right to select the Board of Trustees in such manner as it may elect, either by direct election by the conference itself, or through such agency, or agencies, as it may designate." The General Conference ratified these findings and elected N. E. Harris, A. W. Biggs and V. A. Godbey to fill the three vacancies on the Board of Trust; and then declared that in the future all trustees put upon the Board of Trust must first have their names in writing submitted to the General Board of Education and confirmed by said educational board.

Thus was the law of the Church, declared by its law-making body, and such Church law must control, if authorized by the charter of the university, and within the scope of the power of the Church under the law of the land. Later, the Chancery Court held the action of the General Conference valid. Thus three tribunals, one a church commission, composed of able lawyers; the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, its highest tribunal, and the Chancery Court, one of Caesar's courts, stand as a unit in affirming that Vanderbilt University is a Church institution to be governed by a Board of Trust whose members are to be elected by the Church, or selected by agents, or agencies, designated by the Church, together with the Bishops of the Church, who are ex-officio a board of common law visitors of the university. But the concurring actions of these three tribunals have been ignored by Caesar and his cohorts, and the Church defied. The refractory part of the Board of Trust, having a majority of the members, proceeded to fill vacancies in defiance of the Church, thereby placing a number of pretenders on the board; and that body, contaminated by fraud and illegal in its composition, ignored the body of common law visitors, a legal part of the Board of Control of the university as adjudicated by the Chancery Court, and sought to bargain away from the Church one of the departments of her university. But Caesar is bold and unscrupulous.

The General Conference, at Asheville, further provided, as touching these matters, "The Bishops of the Church are hereby instructed to take whatever steps they may deem necessary to maintain the rights and claims of the Church."

It is significant that no member of the contumacious part of the Board of Trust, nor any of its defenders, in their onslaught on the Bishops, has either directly or indirectly referred to the instructions given the Bishops by the General Conference of their Church, nor has intimated whether or not those Bishops should in good faith discharge the obligations imposed upon them by the Church. I have no argument to make to any so perverse as to contend that the Bishops have been false to their Church. With specific instructions to maintain the rights and claims of the Church to the control of her university, when the donation of Mr. Carnegie was tendered on condition that the Medical Department be put under the control of a set of governors not provided for in the charter of the university, and in the selection of whom the Church was to have no voice, in reason and good conscience would it have been maintaining the "rights and claims of the Church" for the Bishops to have assented to such a conditional gift being made? There can be but one answer to the question. But more: Mr. Carnegie never made any offer to the Board of Control of the university, of which board the Bishops were an elemental part. He was too well schooled in the scheme of Caesar to do that. In fact, the terms of the conditional gift embodied a denial of the rights and claims of the Church. We may put it stronger and say, the supreme condition was to exclude the Church from having any say in the control of the department where the million was to be lodged. Should the Bishops, under their instruction from their Church, have been so false to the Church as to have either actively or passively assented to the direct assault made on her rights, as claimed by her, and as adjudicated by the Chancery Court? And yet, because the Bishops, in good faith, sought to discharge the obligations resting upon them, they are lampooned as purblind from prejudice.

The Truly Culpable Ones.

There have been other husbandmen besides the Bishops working in the vineyard of the Church, and responsible to it as its servants. The Church put two of her sons into high places of trust and honor, and thus magnified their influence and power, and unquestionably was entitled to loyal service. One was made Chancellor of the crown-jewel in her educational system; the other was made editor of the Christian Advocate, the connectional organ of the Church; and both were put on the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt. Were they not in duty bound "to maintain the rights and claims of the Church?" But they at once became leaders in the scheme to take from the Church her great university and put it under the control of Caesar. These latter husbandmen said: "This is the heir, come let us kill him, and the inheritance shall be ours." Choose ye between the acts of the two sets of husbandmen.

Chancellor Kirkland more than intimated in one of his published articles that the veto of the Bishops was for the purpose of influencing a decision in their favor in their suit pending in the Supreme Court, and asks why the Bishops did not delay action until the rights of the litigants were settled by a decision in that case. Does not the learned Chancellor underestimate the intelligence of a reading public? Is not his inquiry provocative of a huge smile? Who selected the time for the performance to begin? Why was Mr. Carnegie's million heralded to the public when, at least $800,000 of it was not to become effective, if at all, until after said suit was decided? Why did not Chancellor Kirkland and Mr. Carnegie await that decision since the donation was conditioned on the character of the decision, and might never become effective? Men act from motives. What was the motive for publishing to the world and keeping it before the public for eight months that $800,000 would be donated if the pending suit should be decided in favor of the trustees and against the Church? That that vast sum might exert a great influence on the public opinion, would be a reasonable inference, but how could the Bishops influence public opinion any more by acting promptly than by being dilatory? The intelligent reader will answer these questions to his own satisfaction. As I see it, Chancellor Kirkland should have been the very last to intimate that an attempt was made to influence a decision through a manufactured public opinion. The Bishops simply acted when the matter was put up to them by Messrs. Kirkland and Carnegie. Free from diplomacy or guile, and scorning to deceive anyone by silence for a season, they acted promptly and frankly in their effort "to maintain the rights and claims of the Church," whose servants they are; nor have they turned the artillery of the Church, put into their hands by their Church, against their Church!

Some Dubious Dealing.

Chancellor Kirkland, in his letter to Mr. Carnegie, suggested that one of the conditions of the gift be that the medical department be put under the control of a board of seven governors, to be selected by the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt independently of the Churches, and Mr. Carnegie made that a pronounced condition of his possible gift. Whether the one was Kirklandized, or the other was Carnegieized, or it was a case of "two souls with but a single thought"—to oust the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, from the control of one of the departments of her university—may not be material. But the gift thus loaded with dynamite is that which Dr. Witt unwittingly urged the Bishops to accept on moral grounds, on a reconsideration of their veto action, as if treachery to their Church by her Bishops, specifically instructed, could be sustained on moral grounds. The doctor wrote charmingly, and in good spirit, but whether the Bishops should have followed the instructions given to them by the Church to "maintain the rights and claims of the Church" was a question he did not refer to, but like all of his party, sought to "play Hamlet, with Hamlet left out."

The majority of the Board of Trust, in so far as it was able, accepted the Carnegie donation, the supreme condition of which was to put the medical department, into which the million was to be lodged, under the control of a board of seven governors, to be named by the Board of Trust. The contract was completed and the doxology was sung; "All went merry as a marriage bell;" for that board of seven would oust the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, from the control of one department, at least, of her university. But another idea forced its way into serious consideration. If the Board of Trust of the university be a self-perpetuating board, by implication as claimed (and on which idea Caesar's all is staked), why not likewise the new board? Then followed ex parte proceedings by the Board of Trust to denude the bantling board of its power of control and nullify the Carnegie contract in its most essential part. Of course any well-informed person of sound reason knows that those ex parte proceedings are based on nothing more substantial than the baseless fabric of a dream. Yet Chancellor Kirkland, Dr. Winton, and others, presumably because they had nothing better to offer, cite those ex parte resolutions as of binding force and affect to so believe. But the Chancellor gave his case away when he unwittingly stated that said board of seven trustees was in a sense a committee of the Board of Trust. And the learned Chancellor is right, for if said board of seven trustees be anything but a farce, it is merely a committee of the Board of Trust, and Mr. Carnegie was bamboozled outright. Of course that board is simply an abortion, and the Chancellor is wise enough to build no hope on it, but to rely on the claim that the Board of Trust is self-perpetuating and supreme, and that the Bishops, as a Board of Visitors, are no part of the Board of Control of the university.

Mr. Carnegie and Dr. Winton.

Mr. Carnegie is the greatest captain of the iron industry of this or any other age so far as history shows, but he appears to be densely ignorant of what the Churches have done, or are able to accomplish, in the field of higher education; and in his extreme ignorance of modes of operations in the schools of the Protestant Churches he fell into the egregious error that denominational tests were exacted by the Churches of students entering their schools for an education. Referring to Mr. Carnegie's peculiar views, but with no word of disapproval, Dr. Winton says: "Yet, despite all that, he has agreed, provided he can be assured of an administration of this one department that will guarantee that no strictly denominational tests shall be applied therein, that he will finance our Medical Department. This in the interests of human welfare and of the South in particular."

Now, Dr. Winton knew as well as he knows that he has a soul to be lost or saved, that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, never applied any "denominational test" in any of its schools of any grade to any student desiring to enter such schools to get an education. I am amazed at that artful putting of Mr. Carnegie's stupid blunder.

Dr. Winton did not say directly that the false assumptions of Mr. Carnegie were correct, but he did use them absolutely in the sense of being true. Why did he not defend his Church that had honored him, and still honors him with an office of profit, from the unjust charges of Mr. Carnegie, doubtless made honestly but ignorantly? But Dr. Winton is not engaged, just now, nor for a long season past, in defending his Church. He pays tribute to Caesar.

Nashville Banner's Distorted Vision.

The Nashville Banner has insisted that because theology is not taught in the Medical Department the Bishops could consistently join in accepting the gift. What a fallacy! Waiving the many other valid reasons why they could not, I notice, that if this department can be set off to a separate set of governors because theology is not taught therein, then, for the same reason, every scientific department of the university could be put under the control of as many sets of trustees, as theology is taught in but one, and instead of a community of departments, which create a university, no two would be under the same government, and there would be no university. This idea of one department being put under the control of a separate set of trustees is an innovation, probably unknown to any university, and is unwarranted by the charter of Vanderbilt University, was designed to rob the Church of the control of one of the departments of its own institution, and is null and void. These are some of the reasons, outside of the instructions given the Bishops by their Church, why they were in duty bound to demur to the acceptance of the conditional gift.

The Banner said it could not see the difference between Mr. Carnegie's gift to Emory and Henry College and the donation to the Medical Department of Vanderbilt. The reason it could not was that the Banner did not know the facts connected with the Emory and Henry gift. This writer is a member of the Board of Trustees of Emory and Henry College. Mr. Carnegie said to our board, "You raise the sum of $75,000 and I will add $25,000." That was the only condition. Had he added to his one condition, "and put the college under the control of a new Board of Trustees to be selected independently of the Church," of course his offer would have been promptly rejected.

But One Issue Involved.

Objects take their coloring from the medium through which they are seen. The Nashville daily papers see this controversy through the medium of commercialism. A million dollars dumped into Nashville almost makes them "fitified." Money by the million is the supreme argument from the commercial point of view. But whether or not that million dollars would double, or treble, the efficiency of that department; whether the Bishops have personally contributed much or little, or nothing, to the university, or whether the Medical Department was leased for a number of years to a board of physicians; or whether or not Nashville and the South would be largely benefited by the donation, not one of those things is to be considered in this controversy until the great underlying question, which affects all Protestant Churches, is settled. If Vanderbilt University be a Church institution, then in reason and in accord with the law of the land, and of God, she has the right to control it; and the intermeddling of Mr. Carnegie to destroy that control is offensively officious; and none the less so if he does come with a million dollar bribe to turn Church loyalty into treachery.

If Vanderbilt University belongs to Caesar, "render, therefore, unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's;" but if Vanderbilt is a Church institution, render, therefore, unto the Church the things that are the Church's, and thus fulfill the divine law.

GIPSY SMITH AND SAM JONES' HOME.

Rev. John Paul.

Two subjects in one article. Remarks upon the former is my object; speaking of the latter is incidental. We take up the incident first.

The annual tabernacle meeting originated by Sam Jones in his home town, Cartersville, Ga., has been held but two or three times since the death of the great evangelist in 1906, though Mr. Jones appointed a local committee of loyal friends to perpetuate it. Certain unhappy developments intervened—developments which are being cured by time and the grace of God. The work was revived last year in a successful meeting held by "Bob" Jones, a young evangelist of unique gifts and strong capacity, from Montgomery, Alabama. He was "platform manager" this year. Gipsy Smith was the leading preacher, though he had several invited helpers, chief among whom was John Calahan, superintendent of the Hadley Mission in New York.

One is impressed with the fact that Sam Jones' town believed in him, and every member of his family believes he was one of the best men that ever lived. There is a vein of friendliness and hospitality in the Jones family, to which there seems to be no exception. Their dining table is about twenty feet long; and the size of the dining table illustrates the size of all their hearts. Not only do they bear a lion's share of the entertainment of the many guests who come to the meetings, but they have a reputation for remembering the poor; and many dine at their table who could never make them a dinner in return. Brother Jones' family have made mistakes; the failure of some of them to know their father's God in his life-time caused his great heart to bleed; but in his death he seemed to do more for them than in his life, and the family as a whole is closer to God than ever before. Sister Jones is a beautiful, devout Christian character. I heard touching testimonies from his daughters who were not given to seriousness in the years that are past. They had one son who gave his young life to the ministry, but finished his labors on earth soon after they had begun.

And what shall I say of Gipsy Smith? The fact that five continents had called him, that there had undoubtedly been works of grace out of the ordinary under his ministry made me want to know why. I suspected that I knew; and, if what I suspected was true, I knew that it would help me to get in touch with him. All other things being equal, I believed that the measure of a man's success, and the extent in which the panting heart of humanity would turn toward his ministry, would be determined by the measure in which the Holy Spirit had been received by that man; for it is implied that the Holy Spirit is given by measure (John 3:24), the measure being determined, of course, by the fitness of the vessel to receive him, the way he prays, and the elevation and tone of his obedience to God. My conjectures were exactly justified when I met with Gipsy Smith. A study of his record will convince a man that a train of miracles has followed his ministry—not miracles of physical healing, tongues, etc. (he takes no stock in these, it seems, lest they should divert his audience from the main theme—full salvation in Christ)—but miracles of grace, in the salvation of improbable cases, and in the casting out of such devils as are unapproachable to some of us—miracles which cannot be duplicated by the magicians of Egypt.

Here are some of his premises:

He is humble in referring to his moral and spiritual attainments; humble almost to the point of charging himself with sin; yet he believes in sanctification, and believes that he has it. He does not seem to know that there has ever been a wrangle upon that subject, or that anybody has ever doubted it. I sat facing him at Sam Jones' table when he hung his head as a lady at his side was praising the sanctity of his life, and said, "I spoil every day that I live; I fall below the standard; I could have done so much better."

He is sensitive to the slightest call of duty, and the smallest propriety. His conscience seems as tender as the apple of his eye. He is shy at the very approach of evil. His prudence in talking with women and coming in contact with them inspires the very feeling of virtue. He does not talk too much; he does not let his mouth go off; he cannot be trapped into foolish remarks. He does not scold or seem to get mad; he does not chafe or seem impatient when people refuse to do what he asks them to do, even though he is right and they are wrong and disrespectful. He has a simple, artless way of being sensible when people try to parade him, or when in the public service the common sense of some other person takes a vacation.

About the time that somebody thinks he is too sweet to be firm and do justice to the terrible side of the gospel, he hurls out rebukes of sin and worldliness that coil and sizzle over the souls of the audience like live wires which have broken from their insulators.

Do the "premises" which we have described explain the fact that God entrusts Gipsy Smith with an unusual measure of the Spirit, or does this unusual measure of the Spirit make possible these facts in his life? Our verdict is that they act upon each other. This may furnish to some a paradox, and we will not consume space in explaining. Sufficient to say, the two sole conditions to receiving the Holy Ghost in the New Testament are obedience and prayer. Tenderness of conscience must come before the fulness of the Spirit, and an attitude of obedience which amounts to full consecration. The evidences referred to above, in the life of Gipsy

Smith, are the fundamental proofs that a man has an unusual volume of the Spirit's fullness. Not the least among these is spiritual wisdom and prudence. If a man receives a blessing that does not enhance his common sense, that blessing is not from God. The Lord is careful with whom he entrusts the gift of the Holy Ghost. Men with loose consciences can not have him; nor does he ever abide in the heart of a fool.

Gipsy Smith is not a marvelous sermonizer; and though sometimes very eloquent, he is not a great orator. These facts and the fact that he is quiet and not stormy will prevent some people from seeing as much in him as I have claimed to see. Maybe their eyes are better than mine, but I think I have some spirit of discernment; and I believe that the soul winner of tomorrow will have to be in closer league wth God, to represent more lightning in proportion to his thunder, and depend upon the Holy Spirit rather than the severity of his own logic and the artillery of his own methods.

Dr. H. B. We have enrolled in our Sunday schools 5,307, and had an average attendance during the third quarter of 3,153. We raised on Children's Day, $578.20.

It is interesting to note that his ardent missionary spirit seems to have borne fruit in his own household.

So far, we have not seen a single religious paper of any denomination that has spoken approvingly of the Kirkland-Carnegie transaction concerning the Medical Department of Vanderbilt University. The Western Methodist, of Little Rock, Ark., was at first quoted as having endorsed the proceeding, but Dr. Anderson, the Editor, quickly declared that he had been misunderstood. He has announced that the attitude of his paper will be one of neutrality, and in this respect it stands alone among Southern Methodist journals.

The Midland Methodist declares that the Cherokee word, Junaluska, does not mean "the undaunted" as some of our church papers have been stating, but simply the "child (or son) of Yonaguska." Yonaguska means "big bear." Junaluska was an Indian chief of the Cherokee tribe. This name is quite musical, and we think the conclusion to appropriate it as the designation of our great Southern Methodist chautauqua is a happy one. There is much poetry in Indian names. What, for instance, could be more beautiful than "Swannanoa" as the name for a river; and how prosaic in comparison with it is the appellation, "French Broad!"

Even a casual reading of our church papers shows that revival fires have not ceased to burn in Southern Methodism. In glancing over our exchanges this week we noticed that the Main Street Church of Cleburne, Texas, has recently had a meeting with more than 100 conversions and 86 additions; that the Church Street congregation of Selma, Ala., has lately closed a series of services with 100 accessions, 85 of which were on profession of faith, and that Rev. Ivan Lee Holt of Cape Giradeau, Mo., has added 165 new members to his roll during the present year. Such reports as these (and there are not a few of them) should cause us to "thank God and take courage."

Dr. Dinsdale T. Young has been honored by being named as the prospective President of the British Wesleyan Conference. He was born in 1861, and entered the ministry when he was eighteen years old. He has been the occupant of Wesley's pulpit at City Road Chapel since 1905, and is an author of distinction. He was fraternal messenger to the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, which met at Birmingham in 1906, and made a great impression on this side of the Atlantic. He is a public speaker of brilliant gifts, differing much in this respect from Rev. Samuel F. Collier the present executive head of British Wesleyanism, who is more noted as an organizer and a man of affairs than for his platform ability.

The Presbyterian, of Philadelphia, is authority for the statement that the Young Woman's Christian Association of that city gave a dance some time since to which the members of the Y. M. C. A. were invited. This new departure is said to be one of the fruits of the social service work of the Men and Religion Forward Movement. We have never had much opinion of this Movement, and this development is certainly not calculated to cause us to revise our estimate. Threatened by an invasion of both worldliness and unsound teaching as to the Scriptures, the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. are in peril. It is to be hoped that something will interpose to avert the wrecking of these institutions and keep them true in every respect to the principles and regulations of evangelical Christianity.

It is stated that the Methodists of Illinois will expend $500,000 in caring for the moral and religious welfare of the Methodist students (said to be about 1100) attending State institutions in that commonwealth. This is doubtless a needed work, but one which, in our judgment, should be approached with some degree of caution. We are inclined to think that perhaps the best way to discharge this task is through the local churches, which ought to be specially equipped and prepared to render this service. The erection of buildings and sending of denominational chaplains to State colleges and universities for this purpose would, we fear, tend to disintegrate our church educational system, and in the end probably do more harm than good. We do not believe that the best religious teaching and training could be done in such an atmosphere as prevails about the average secular seat of learning.

CONFERENCE OF FEMALE COLLEGE PRESIDENTS.

The Conference of Presidents of Women's Colleges met in the Assembly Room of the Methodist Publishing House in Nashville, Tenn., on Aug. 5, and continued in session for two days. The following were present: Dr. S. B. Turrentine, Greensboro College for Women; Dr. C. R. Jenkins, Wesleyan Female College; Dr. S. D. Long, Martha Washington College; Dr. Z. M. Williams, Central College for Women; J. M. Williams, Galloway College; H. E. Stout, Howard-Payne College; Dr. J. W. Repass, Logan College; Dr. I. W. Cooper, Whitworth College; Miss Mary Norman Moore, Athens College; Rev. H. G. Hawkins, Memphis Conference Female Institute; and W. T. Wynn, Martin College. Dr. I. W. Cooper was elected President, and Miss Mary Norman Moore, Secretary.

Matters immediately concerning school work among girls, including requirements for admission, the privileges of the special student, and a proper course of study, were discussed. A resolution favoring the reduction of the number of professors required in an A or B-grade college from seven to six, and specifying that the President of the college could not be one of those professors was adopted. Another resolution favoring the forbidding of the entrance of conditioned students was adopted. The General Secretary, Dr. Stonewall Anderson, was present and put the following interrogation before the Conference, which was unanimously answered in the affirmative:

"When provisions have been made by the General Conference for the organization of Junior Colleges, according to the plans suggested by you; when the entrance requirements for admission to college have been made flexible to the extent of your recommendations; and the requirements for graduation liberalized according to your suggestions, will you support an educational organization for the entire Church made up of four classes of institutions, excluding unclassified schools?"

A permanent organization to be known as "The Association of Presidents of the Women's Colleges of the M. E. Church, South" was effected with the following officers for the first year: Dr. C. R. Jenkins, Macon, Ga., President; Dr. H. E. Stout, Fayette, Mo., Vice-President; and Miss Mary Norman Moore, Athens, Ala., Secretary.

THE SARDIS DISTRICT.

There are very ardent efforts being made throughout the district for advancement in everything. Revival services are being pushed now with great earnestness from one side to the other. In many places great success has crowned the efforts of the pastors and those who helped them. The work began early in the spring time at Courtland. Many were converted and joined the churches. Brother Park, with a warm heart and fluent mouth, came over to occupy the pulpit. He did it well, and will have a hearty welcome over this way when he can come again. A great time at Como and Sardis soon followed. Others which, it may be, were not on so large a scale, but were as deep and significant, took place at Crenshaw, Olive Branch, Charleston, Oakland, McGee's Chapel, Senatobia, and many other places. More will follow. It is a revival time up this way, for which we are grateful to God.

The improvement of church property is occupying the minds of the people and their pastors. On one circuit, every church has been improved or will be before many more days. In this particular, Courtland is on a boom, five of their seven houses having been touched up and made neater. The others are awaiting the magic hand of that young pastor. The finishing touch has been put on Como's house of worship, and Batesville is laying brick for a splendid church home. Thus Lockhart is happy, having a burden partly lifted from his shoulders. He is not through, though, for the burden is not all gone, even when the shingles are in place. When it is finished, they will have a lovely church at Batesville.

The benevolences will also share in the general improvement. Crops in this section are fine. On all sides, we hear that they were never better. There will then be little excuse for less than "Collections in full" at Conference. We are all doing our best to accomplish this. Courtland again carries the banner, in this district, and in the Conference, so far as I am informed, the pastor having reported last Friday, Aug. 8, "All collections, ordered by the Conference, in full." That, too, with other financial interests amounting, for the third quarter, to, approximately, $1600 cared for.

For the advancement in these various interests, we are thankful and pressing forward.

IS METHODISM CONNECTIONAL?

Rev. J. C. Morris, D. D.

City churches everywhere are seriously perplexed by the fact that there are many persons living within their bounds who, though members elsewhere, are as separate from them as if they belonged to a different communion, or to none. The pastors of these non-resident church members are often responsible for this. They have said to them, "You have been a long time here, and we need your names and your contributions," or, "you need not be in a hurry to join the church there. Wait and look around, and later you can write for your certificates."

This difficulty of the city church is sharply accentuated in the Far West. The sense of connectionalism is very weak where a few hundred miles separate us. Some of the preachers have said to members coming West, "I doubt whether our Church exists out there at all," and have preoccupied their minds with discreditable prejudices.

Any interference of the preacher such as I have indicated is unworthy, springs from a selfish motive, hinders the connectional spirit in the Church, and endangers the religious character, and perhaps the very salvation, of those who are influenced by it, as well as that of their families. Besides, it makes the work in the West doubly difficult.

It is vitally important that our members coming to this section of the country promptly identify themselves with the Church here. On the old cable car when the gripman was nearing any change in his direction or in the grade he invariably tightened his grip. It would be a wise thing for every Christian to tighten his grip on his religious life with every change in his outward condition. A change in residence is as critical from a religious point of view as it is in point of health, business, or anything else. It means a life among strangers. It is a sad but notable fact that many reputable church members relax their Christian carefulness when they are away from home. They indulge in things which they would not allow where they are well known. In the city where they are strangers they give rein to curiosity and social custom, following the crowd.

This is especially true in the Far West where the people are far removed from the conservative ways of their old homes. Here the life is strongly affected by the change. The business, social, political, and religious conditions are as radically different as is the climate, and there are few people who are the same here as they were elsewhere. The secular life is at high pressure. Everybody is for making more money; they are speculating. Real estate comes first, and then follows the whole train of schemes to get rich. The business life is at high pressure. The stimulus of the climate is intoxicating—wholly unlike anything to which we have been accustomed elsewhere. The atmosphere is buoyant, the sky is always clear, there are no storms, no extremes of temperature, the land is luxuriant in flowers, and fruits, and the sea with all the thousand enticements of "the beach" lies right by. There is a delirium in nature. And when business hours are over, or a holiday comes, the people betake themselves to pleasure with abandon. Sunday is the weekly fourth of July.

The religious world is sensibly affected by these things. Here are all the freaks and vagaries. And not a few of the orthodox churches have fallen into extremely sensational methods, justifying them as efforts to countervail the general spirit of dissipation. With all these distractions, any one who is not deeply rooted and firmly grounded in his religious life is in serious danger, and all religious people need to be exceedingly careful to keep close to God and his Church.

There is another phase of this subject even more important than the protection of these individual members who are coming to the West. I mean the interest of the Church as a part of the kingdom of Christ. Our church in Los Angeles is doing a monumental work. Trinity charge has now under construction a church home—the Trinity Auditorium Building—which has not an equal in American Methodism. It is located close to the business heart of this wonderful city, contains an auditorium, with a capacity of 2500 and all the necessary accommodations for its many-sided institutional work, with commodious store rooms for business and a clean home for men (of 330 rooms) with all modern conveniences; all of which will be under the immediate supervision of the Church. The cost of this building will be $500,000.

The Church is not sectional, and this enterprise is neither sectional nor sectarian, but positively denominational. We are not here to promote any such interests. We could not justify our presence here upon such grounds. This is simply an effort upon the part of the Church to do a much needed work for the large body of homeless young men who are coming to Los Angeles. It is for the salvation of men, whoever they may be, from whatever part they may come, and whatever may be their views on any secular subject. It means the advancement of the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ—this, and nothing more and nothing less.

This is a great undertaking, exceedingly bold in its faith. I know no other like it, and I know no other city whose conditions would justify such an enterprise. For this work we need the sympathy of our entire Church. This is not an appeal for money. The enterprising men of the congregation and the business corporation which is financing it are confident of its success without any appeal to the Church at large. Rev. Robert Paine Howell, the pastor, is the wise head of the entire work. Bishop R. G. Waterhouse is giving it large inspiration and help, and the congregation is standing nobly by it. They have a right to ask the interest and prayerful sympathy of the connection—preachers and laymen—to bring it to completion. We appeal to every member of our Church coming to live in Los Angeles to identify himself with this work. Any believer who is not bigger than the local church in which his name is written is not worthy to have it written anywhere. He is a member of the whole Church. Its solidarity is as real as that of the nation, and his removal from one place to another does not absolve him from the superior obligation to the larger service. Brethren, "Come thou with us, and we will do thee good." "We seek not yours, but you."

"POOR" CHRISTIANS.

Dear Doctor: There is a class of people about whom I have been thinking a good deal of late. Whether you have thought of them very much it remains for you to tell, if you care to do so. These are the "poor" Christians. There are so many of them and their kind seems to be on such a rapid increase that it seems like we will just have to do something for them. There does not seem to be any way around that. What we are going to do I do not just exactly know yet. It may be that there always were a good many of these "poor" Christians, but there never seemed to me to be so many before. My! what is the Church going to do with all these "poor" people? The Church is now trying to get the Gospel preached to them so that they will understand it. It seems to me that the Church is doing all in its power to get them ready to die. When they die I wonder if they will be so "poor" that the Church will have to take up a collection to bury them too.

They are just so "poor" that they can hardly meet their own expenses. When the preacher asks them for something for foreign mission and for the other benevolent collections they have so little money that they have to give it all for the support of their own local church. Then when the stewards come around to collect for the preacher they are so "poor" that they are not able to pay more than about one-fourth or one-half of what they paid the year before. They are just getting "poorer" and "poorer" all the time. I do not know what is going to become of them.

What is the trouble with these people anyhow, Doctor? Can you tell me? Some time ago I saw a lady (she was one of these "poor" Christians) with a great big hat and one of these plumes on it that the ladies call a willow plume. They tell me those things cost a lot of money, too. She was dressed in some kind of a fine dress and had on high-heel shoes and silk hose. As for the gems and the jewels that she had on, well just don't you ask me anything about that. Then there was another one of these "poor" Christians. This was a man. He was telling about a big trip from which he had just returned. He was talking about the big time that he had had and how much he had spent while he was gone from home. Then there are others of these "poor" Christians who are building houses and buying automobiles and doing all sorts of things like that. I would just like to know where these "poor" Christians get all those things. It takes a lot of money for other people to do things like that. If they are not able to give a few dollars to the Lord and to his cause, how in the world can they do all the things that I see them doing? Where do they get these things anyhow?

I have been thinking some about this and have come to some conclusions of my own. If I am wrong, will you please set me right, Doctor. One thing that I have decided is that these people are not so "poor" as they would like to have people believe, but that they are just down-right selfish. That is all. Another of my conclusions is that they are "poor" because they spend so much of their money in foolish and useless display. Another conclusion to which I have come is that they speak more truly than they think when they say that they are "poor," because while they are not so "poor" in earthly possessions, they are really very "poor" in love for God and for his cause. This is why they are not able to give anything hardly to carry on God's work in the world. Then, my last conclusion is that the Methodist Church would be a great deal better off if the Methodist people would pay more attention to the rule given them by Mr. Wesley, when he said for Methodist people not to do those things that they know are not for the glory of God and to do those things that they know are for his glory.

Now, my dear Doctor, if you can give any light on this question of these "poor" Christians, I would like to hear from you. With best wishes, I am Your ever faithful,

WILLIAM.

(We think our friend, "William," has sized up these "poor Methodists" pretty well. We heartily concur both in his diagnosis and prescription. We shall only add that a genuine case of Holy Ghost religion would make such Methodists clearly see the wisdom of Mr. Wesley's injunction. People are always ready to give to the things that they love.—Editor of the Advocate.)

A 6 BY 9 RHYME.

A queer little boy who had been to school
And was up to all sorts of tricks,
Discovered that 9, when upside down,
Would pass for the figure 6.

So when asked his age by a good old dame,
The comical youngster said,
"I'm 9 when I stand on my feet like this,
And 6 when I stand on my head!"
—Unknown.

A BIT OF HUMOR.

"My little daughter Helen recently had her first introduction to geography. Her father thinks that perhaps she is destined to become a great Arctic explorer.

"'If you stood with your right hand toward the east and your left hand toward the west, you would be facing the north,' said the teacher. 'Now, tell me, what would be back of you?'

"'My hair,' answered Helen in a patient tone."—Woman's Home Companion.

WHAT HIS UNTRUTHFULNESS COST HIM.

A schoolboy of Harrow was walking one day in the fields when he observed a portly farmer on horseback, who was in a little difficulty because he could not easily open a gate. The boy ran to the man's assistance.

"Thank you," said the farmer. "Would you mind telling me your name?"

The boy thought he saw an opportunity for a joke.

"Green," he replied, giving the first common name which came into his head.

"What is your father?"

"A cheesemonger in London. He has a small shop in Theobald's Road." This was a wholly fictitious reply.

"You are a good sort of chap," said the farmer, "and I shall not forget you."

He left the lad chuckling over the "sell." But his love of romancing had cost him a fortune! Years afterwards advertisements appeared in the newspapers for a young man named "Green," whose father had at some time kept a cheesemonger's shop in Theobald's Road, and to whom a big legacy was devised in recognition of a service rendered at Harrow.

As this published clue to identity was entirely false, the money, of course, could never be claimed.—Scottish American.

BENT NAILS.

"Draw the nail out carefully, my boy. Be careful not to bend it."

"I could straighten it, if I did bend it, couldn't I?"

The carpenter smiled into the earnest face of the young man who was learning the trade under his teaching.

"You might get it quite straight, but it never would be as strong as if it had not been bent. It would bend easier next time, and you could not drive it just as true to the spot as you did at first."

It was a lesson the young carpenter never forgot—the nail which has been bent once will bend easier next time. It never is as strong to resist a blow as it was in the beginning.

The power in us to resist the inclination to do wrong is like a bright nail. Once bent, it will bend easier next time. Yield to temptation today, and tomorrow you will have less strength to hold fast.

Just as long as you stand up bravely and say, "I do not think this is right; I cannot do it!" just so long the metal is strong and true in your heart. It is easier the next time to say the same thing. But as surely as you say, "I'll do it for this one time!" the steel is weakened and your lifework endangered.—Our Juniors.

HIS FIRST SIXPENCE.

A famous author tells how he earned his first sixpence. For twenty-seven years his father had been contesting a suit in Chancery, and had at last gained his cause. The whole of the estate, however, had been swallowed up in expenses, the residue being only three shillings and sixpence.

The father placed the seven sixpences in a row on the breakfast-table.

"My boy," he said, see what comes of going to law in Great Britain! Your mother has told you that I have won my suit in Chancery?"

"Yes, father."

"Well, then look! That is all I get of it."

He pointed grimly at the sixpences.

Now this boy had no idea that "a suit in Chancery" was not composed of a coat, waistcoat, and trousers. He opened his eyes widely.

"All you get of the whole suit?" he said, with a puzzled air. "Why, father, these are only the buttons!"

"It was that remark," said the writer, "that earned me my first sixpence, for my father, laughing, tossed me one of the seven, and I rushed off with it like a dog with a bone."—Scottish American.

SOME NEW BOOKS.

A Treatise on Sin and Depravity. By the Rev. R. A. Ellis, a Member of the North Mississippi Conference. Published for the author by Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn.

This is a paper-bound volume of 83 pages, neatly printed, with a striking likeness of the author as a frontispiece. The table of contents is as follows: Introduction; I Depravity; II The Interposition of God; III Conversion; IV Is Sin an Entity? The principal part of what is contained in these chapters formerly appeared in contributions to the New Orleans and Texas Christian Advocates. The problem of the origin and prevalence of evil on the earth is recognized as one of the most difficult to solve that is known to the human mind, and any discussion of it must be largely speculative. Mr. Ellis frankly acknowledges that his is not the generally accepted view, but contends that it is the most Scriptural one that has yet been put forward. He believes that infants are born in both a justified and regenerate state, and does not think that there is a universal necessity for the new-birth subsequent to the coming of the millions of mankind into the world. We think that the author is to be commended for not trying to claim that his theory is in harmony with the Methodist Standards, as is wrongly done by so many who hold similar views. The spirit which he manifests throughout the discussion is admirable, and he writes with remarkable ease and fluency. A copy of this volume may be had by writing the author at Yazoo City, Miss.; or Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn., or Dallas, Texas; or Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss.

Religious Unrest and Its Remedy. By Rev. James A. Anderson, D. D., LL. D. The Fleming H. Revell Company, New York and Chicago, Publishers. Price 75 cents net.

An attractive volume of 128 pages, which is divided into two parts: (1) "Religious Unrest;" (2) "Where Rest Is Found." Dr. Anderson is what may be called a progressive in theology, as distinguished from those belonging to the conservative and ultra-radical schools. He thinks that the advancement of human learning necessarily affects the religious views of men, and that our theological teaching, to be effective, must adapt itself to modern conditions. The book is suggestive and contains much valuable information. The style of the author is clear and there is never any doubt as to his meaning. Though we do not concur in many of his conclusions, we think the discriminating reader will be profited by a perusal of this discussion, which undoubtedly, from begnning to end, deals with live questions.

FINDS IT EASY AS WELL AS DESIRABLE.

Rev. J. L. Neill of the Mississippi Conference has the interests of the Conference Organ on his heart, as is evidenced by the fact that he has done a double portion of work this year for the Advocate. Brother Neill served the Broad Street Church of Hattiesburg the past seven months of this year, and during that time he has sent us a number of subscribers from that work. Two weeks ago he was transferred from Hattiesburg to serve our First Church in Laurel and already he has secured a good list of renewals, which he says is only a beginning. In a letter to the Advocate dated Aug. 15, 1913, in which was contained a remittance of $13.50, Brother Neill writes as follows:

"Dear Brother: The mailing list for Laurel came yesterday. I was glad to get it, but mighty sorry to see that we have so few Advocates coming to this office when we have three Methodist churches in the town.

"I saw all but two on the list who were members of my church and enclose check to cover the cost of the subscriptions secured. I feel sure that when I can see the other two the results will be the same—a renewal. Most of those sent in this mail were in arrears; you had discontinued the paper to two of them, and you did right in so doing. Both of them were glad to pay up old scores and give a renewal."

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

In this week's issue of the Advocate there appears a list of Sunday School Institutes to be held by R. A. Maddox, in the Port Gibson District. Brother Maddox comes to the District by my arrangement, and I earnestly urge all the pastors and Sunday school leaders and workers to attend all these meetings where it is possible. Let us have a mighty Sunday school revival.

"SAWING WOOD."

Some time since, when we called attention to the action of the General Board of Education in undertaking, under the leadership of Dr. Stonewall Anderson, to dictate to the Annual Conferences what educational institutions they may make appropriations to, we ventured to say that this usurpation of authority is now so illegal that, for the present, it will amount to little; but the danger is that such legislation as would sanction this assumption of power may be shoved through the next session of the General Conference. That this is the purpose of Dr. Anderson is clearly apparent from the following interrogatory which he managed to get answered affirmatively at the recent Conference of Female College Presidents (about a dozen were present), held in the city of Nashville:

"When provision has been made by the General Conference for the organization of Junior Colleges, according to the plans suggested by you, when the entrance requirements for admission to college have been made flexible to the extent of your recommendations, and the requirements for graduation liberalized according to your suggestions, will you support an educational organization for the entire Church made up of four classes of institutions, excluding unclassified schools?"

Not having before us a full statement of the plans and suggestions of the College Presidents referred to, we cannot now enter into a detailed discussion of this matter; but from the light that gleams from this formal interrogation it is obvious that, aside from allowing our educational institutions somewhat more flexibility in conforming to the standards that have been set up, Dr. Anderson is bent upon carrying out the scheme that he unfolded at Dallas and which he defended at length in the New Orleans Christian Advocate some weeks ago. This question of his clearly shows two things: (1) That the right of the Annual Conferences to control largely their own educational affairs will, if he has his way, to a considerable extent, be taken from them; (2) that our unclassified institutions will be outlawed, and perhaps sacrificed and destroyed. (Comparatively few of these were represented at the recent Nashville Conference.) We think it is a fair inference if he is permitted to consummate his plans that little, if any, opportunity will be given for local initiative in enterprising methods to meet our varying educational needs in different parts of the connection—that about all that will be left for the masses of our Methodist people to do will be to pay, and patronize, and submit to having things managed for them by the General Secretary and his seventeen associates.

Undoubtedly, this issue is squarely joined. The rank and file of our membership must determine whether this Board is to be their servant, or their master. Surely, we will not sit quietly down and allow ourselves, ere we are aware of it, to be bound hand and foot. The Doctor is evidently busy "sawing wood," and every Annual Conference ought to meet him at Oklahoma City next May with a ringing protest against this attempted usurpation of power. We thoroughly believe in the General Board of Education as an advisory and co-operative agency in our educational work, but not as a supreme overseer and dictator. For our part, we do not want any outside bureau to manage the colleges in which we are interested and which we have helped to build up; and especially do we object to the rule of one with an Executive Secretary who evinces such imperialistic notions.

In our judgment, there is nothing that to-day more imperils the welfare of Southern Methodism than the threatened reign of a bureaucracy. The effects of this menace are already felt in nearly every department of the Church. Our various Boards should be made to realize clearly what their duties are, and each of them given to understand that it must keep distinctly within the limits of its powers. If those directing these bodies cannot learn this lesson, it would, in our opinion, be well to put in their places others who can do so. We believe that the 2,000,000 Methodists of the South are capable of exercising with a fair degree of intelligence some of the functions of self-government in Church matters, as well as in the affairs of State. More rulers is about the last thing that they need.

GEOGRAPHY SHOULD NOT FIGURE.

Rev. W. W. Sawyer, in a letter to the Baltimore-Richmond Christian Advocate, dealing with General Conference matters, says: "We want a Bishop elected from the Virginia Conference, and we are informed that if he will send a delegation who will agree upon and support one man, he can be elected. We do hope that we may elect such a delegation."

At the present time, it does not look as if there will be any need of electing any Bishops next May. We have been informed that when the Committee on Episcopacy reported in favor of electing seven Bishops at Asheville, they expected two to be placed on the retired list, whereas none was superannuated. It is not likely that more than that number will be declared ineffective by the next General Conference, which would still leave us eleven active Chief Pastors—quite enough to do the work devolving on the Episcopal College.

But even if the General Conference should decide to strengthen the episcopacy by additional numbers, the matter of geography ought not to exercise any influence in making the selections. As a matter of fact, it does, but it ought not to. The best men that can be found in the Connection ought to be chosen, no matter where they hail from. The Church should lay her hand on those who she thinks would render the largest amount of service in this great office, and then use them where she most needs them. We do not say that such a man, or such men, might not be found within the bounds of the Virginia Conference. We know at least one son of the Old Dominion who, we think, is of episcopal size, and, for aught we know, there may be others. But there is also good timber in some of the other States, and which commonwealth offers the best material we shall not presume to say. We will make one other observation, however, and that is, that no man who seeks the episcopacy is worthy of the position.

EXTRAORDINARY, BUT NO LONGER EFFICACIOUS.

As a great bluff, the talk of some of the partisans of the majority of the Vanderbilt Trustees of appealing from the action of the Bishops to the people of Southern Methodism deserves, in our humble opinion, to rank high among famous feats of that kind. It reminds us of the following Chinese fable which we read some years ago:

"A monkey was captured by a tiger. He whined that he was thin, and his flesh of a poor taste; but he knew of a fine fat donkey for the tiger. The tiger consented to be led to where the donkey was tied. When the donkey saw them coming, he was frightened, but recovered his composure and bawled in his masterful donkey voice, 'Monkey, you used to bring me two tigers. Why only one to-day?" The tiger did a record hustle back to the jungle."

The trouble, however, about the bold bluff that the Trustees and their sympathizers are now putting up is that they have rather overworked that course of procedure. We heard that there was no doubt about them carrying the General Conference at Asheville, and our knees trembled; but one lone shrill voice was the only one we heard in the negative when the Conference voted on the report of the Committee on Education. We heard that there was not the least question but that they would win the lawsuit in the Chancery Court of Davidson County, Tennessee; but Judge Allison did not in his decision leave them a single plank to stand upon. The truth is, these gentlemen have talked so big and done so little, that we have ceased to quake and shudder when they parade themselves before the public with a stride like Goliath of old. Even bluffers to maintain their standing must sometimes "make good."

OUR VIEW OF THE MATTER.

One of our leading contemporaries declares in favor of requiring all the undergraduates in the Church to take the Correspondence School work, reserving, however, to the Annual Conference Committees the right to pass finally upon the examinations of the young men pursuing the prescribed courses of study. As this work is now arranged, we do not think that this is a wise proposal. In our opinion, it would not be best to have all of our young ministers to obtain their instruction from a single source. It would probably tend to type them too much after one pattern; there is some merit in variety. Moreover, if they were all required to quaff at one Pierian spring and its waters should become impure, the whole ministry of the Church would in consequence soon become poisoned. In our judgment, any denomination is in peril that has only one theological school. We think that one of the most helpful things in Southern Methodism to-day is the fact that the trend is toward the maintenance of a Biblical department in all of our leading colleges.

To be sure, we need to direct and assist our young preachers in their studies, but let us devise some other good plan and not think of committing this responsible task for the entire Connection to a small body of men in Nashville. Why not have the Biblical department in each of our colleges to do this work for the patronizing Conferences? Trinity, for instance, could do it for North Carolina; Milisaps, for Mississippi, Centenary, for Louisiana, and so on. This would bring the work closer home, and probably make it more effective. It may be urged against this suggestion that some of these schools are not supplied with Bible teachers; if so we answer that they ought to be, and that the adoption of this kind of a system might tend to correct their deficiencies in this respect.

We heartily agree with our contemporary that the Annual Conferences should hold on to the right of passing finally upon the fitness of all ministerial students to be admitted into the traveling connection and advanced from one class to another. The following observation which he makes concerning the practice of another denomination is, we think, quite suggestive: "The Presbyterian Church has developed its seminaries as thoroughly as any branch of the Christian Church, but the candidates for ordination are always examined by a committee of the Presbytery. There is excellent reason for such a method."

WHAT WOULD HE SAY NOW?

We take the following from John Wesley's Journal—a part of his entry for Sunday, April 8, 1782:

"I came just in time to put a stop to a bad custom which was creeping in here (Warrenton): a few men who had fine voices sung a psalm which no one knew in a tune fit for an opera, wherein three, four, or five persons sung different words at the same time. What an insult upon common sense! What a burlesque upon public worship! No custom can excuse such a mixture of profaneness and absurdity."

We wonder what Mr. Wesley would think if he were alive and should attend a service in one of our fashionable city churches in this day.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Mr. John M. Fletcher, of Kosciusko, Miss., and Mr. R. B. Meek, of Clarksdale, Miss., were appreciated callers at our office last Monday.

Louin, Miss., has recently been blessed with a gracious season of spiritual refreshing. The pastor, Rev. C. H. Strait, had with him in these services Rev. M. L. White, who did most excellent work. Thirteen names were added to the membership roll.

Rev. J. M. Bradley, formerly a member of the North Mississippi Conference, but who is now connected with the St. Louis Conference and stationed at Sikeston, Mo., recently underwent an operation for appendicitis at St. Luke's Hospital in St. Louis. We are glad to state that our latest information is that he is doing well, and that all the indications point to a speedy recovery.

Dr. Theodore Copeland was engaged last week in a successful meeting at Big Springs, Texas. The attendance upon the services was large, and the entire town is said to have been considerably stirred. In Dr. Copeland's absence, his pulpit in St. Louis (Cabanne) was filled on Sunday, August 10, by Dr. C. C. Woods, Associate Editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate.

From Summerland, Miss., under date of August 16, Rev. T. A. Ferguson writes: "We are now in the midst of a gracious revival at the Hebron Church. Evangelist E. L. Whiddon is doing the preaching. We have had several additions to the Church already and are expecting greater results to follow. Brother Whiddon is a strong doctrinal preacher and a forceful and effective revivalist."

A card received from Rev. W. A. Bowlin, bearing date of the 13th inst., reads as follows: "I am just in from a fine meeting with Rev. T. E. Yancey on the Tremont (Miss.) charge. We had a great victory and 22 were added to the Church. Brother Yancey is in high favor with his people. I have no engagement for the fourth week in August, and would be glad to assist some pastor who has need of my services."

The month of October has been selected by the congregation of the Algiers (La.) church for an evangelistic campaign. Rev. D. A. Morris, an evangelist from Ohio, has been engaged to do the preaching.

A profitable revival meeting has recently been held in our church at Bayou Chicot, La., the pastor, Rev. Louis Hoffpauir, being assisted by his uncle, Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir, presiding elder of the Lafayette District.

We acknowledge ourselves indebted to Rev. Thomas L. Porter, of Hickory Flat, Miss., for a nice club of six months' subscribers, sent in a few days since. He reports the work to be progressing favorably in his charge.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, of Jackson, Miss., recently assisted Rev. J. B. King in a successful meeting at Deasonville, Miss. He will tell our readers about his pleasant visit to that community, where he was pastor more than twenty years ago, in the next issue of the Advocate.

Special evangelistic services are now being held in Baker, La., in which the pastor, Rev. S. D. Howard, has the help of Rev. C. A. Battle, of the Felicity Street Church of New Orleans. Brother Battle's pulpit on next Sunday will be filled by Mr. W. H. Black of McDonoghville.

According to the local paper published in Greensburg, La., Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, will occupy the pulpit there on the fifth Sunday of this month. The Greensburg congregation no doubt will have two choice sermons to feed upon on that day.

A new church has been organized at Greendale, Miss., composed of those members of the Hamburg church who lived in or near Greendale. The pastor, Rev. G. G. Yerger, recently closed a very successful meeting at the latter place, in which he was ably assisted by Rev. E. C. Gunn, of Gloster.

Now is the time to push the circulation of the Advocate among your people. The Publisher's announcement that he will take subscriptions for six months for 50 cents gives every pastor in Louisiana and Mississippi a golden opportunity to place the Conference organ in the homes of his parishioners.

Elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate appears an anouncement of the death of Mr. James Upton Medlock, a son of the late Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Medlock, which took place at Seattle, Washington, on July 4. We regret to chronicle this sad occurrence, and we extend sympathy to the bereaved relatives and friends.

Rev. L. C. Wilson, the pastor, is holding a revival meeting at Franklinton, La., in which he is being assisted by Rev. R. M. Brown, pastor of our Church in Algiers. Brother Brown is specially endowed with evangelistic gifts, and we predict that the meeting will be rich in spiritual blessings. The services began last Sunday.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, of Sardis, Miss., who has been experimenting in order to find out which hour is the most suitable for the Sunday morning preaching service, resumed holding services at 11 o'clock last Sunday. He tried the hour of 9 a. m., but says "for a number of reasons the Sunday school and church hours have been changed back to their regular time."

A night telegraphic letter received last Tuesday morning from Rev. L. W. Cain, of Leland, Miss., reads as follows: "Last Sunday was a red-letter day for Leland Methodism. We had two splendid services and twelve men and women were received into the Church by baptism and otherwise. The number received into this church since Conference is 39, a net gain of 36."

Rev. C. W. Crisler, the popular pastor of our Main Street Church of Hattiesburg, recently paid an appreciated visit to relatives and friends at Vicksburg, Miss. Brother Crisler served the Crawford Street congregation in the Bluff City last year, and left behind him a record that will not soon be forgotten. He is one of the strongest and most efficient men in his Conference.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, the pastor of the Washington Street Church of Vicksburg, says: "We held our last service in the old church last Sunday night (August 10), and will use the Speed Street School House as a place of worship until we get our new church ready for occupancy. We will hold our meeting at Redbone the week following the fourth Sunday in this month."

The end of improvements is not yet, so far as the McDonoghville (La.) congregation is concerned. The Committee on Improvements last Tuesday decided to have constructed concrete sidewalks and guttering in front of the church and all around the parsonage. The Committee will pass finally on the plans for a new or remodeled church during the early part of October.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, of Carriere, Miss., in a note to our office, says: "With Rev. J. W. Campbell to assist, we have just closed a revival campaign covering a period of more than three weeks. We held meetings at Picayune, Nicholson, and McNeill successively, which resulted in great good to each of these towns, many bright conversions, and 22 accessions to the Church by vows and certificate."

In striving to raise a fund to help needy and deserving students at Centenary College, Dr. Wynn is moving out on the right line. We have been pleased to note that the Shreveport and Ruston Districts have each pledged $1000 to this cause. What are the other Districts in Louisiana going to do? Why not sit down at once and send a check to be thus applied. No better investment of money could be made.

Echoes of the effective work that Rev. W. H. Coleman is doing on the Baton Rouge District continue to reach our office. This does not in the least surprise us. As a pastor, Bro. Coleman was a marked success, and as a rule a first-class pastor can be depended upon to make a good presiding elder. Wise, aggressive, and tactful leadership count for much in the work of the Church, as well as in other spheres of action.

A card from Rev. H. Armstrong, of Olla, La., states that he is sick in a hospital at Shreveport, and that he is suffering greatly. Brother Armstrong's note was written on August 14, and we have had no later news. We deeply regret to be apprised of the illness of this esteemed veteran, and we pray that his attack will prove to be of brief duration. Let the brethren remember him at the throne of grace.

The St. Louis Christian Advocate highly commends Dr. William A. Webb, the newly elected President of the Randolph-Macon Woman's College, who has been at the head of Central College in Missouri for a number of years. He has also for the past three summers been the Professor of English Literature at the University of Colorado. He is the son of a minister, and a nephew of "Sawney" Webb, of Bell Buckle, Tenn.

Just as we are closing our forms the mail brings us from Mrs. L. M. Lipscomb an account of a great meeting at New Albany, Miss., conducted by Evangelist J. B. Andrews, of Siloam Springs, Ark. There were over 200 conversions and reclamations, and 45 joined the Methodist Church and 36 the Baptist Church. This interesting account of this great awakening will appear next week.

The Jackson (Miss.) Clarion-Ledger of August 10 contained a charming letter from Mrs. W. B. Murrah, bearing date of July 30, which gave a remarkably bright and interesting account of hers and the Bishop's voyage across the Atlantic on The Imperator. Mrs. Murrah wields an unusually facile pen, and we hope that she will find it possible to write to the home papers often while making her long journey to the Orient and back.

We take from a personal letter from Rev. H. S. Spragins, the beloved presiding elder of the Greenville District, the following reference to conditions in the Mississippi Delta: "Never has this country had a better prospect for a crop than at the present time. From the outlook now before us the District ought to pay every cent of its benevolent claims. We have had some good meetings this year. A larger number than usual have been received into the Church. In this our hearts have been made glad."

A most delightful reception was given on last Friday evening by the ladies of the Parker Memorial Church of New Orleans in the church parlors to Rev. Frank Singleton and wife. Brother Singleton has filled the Parker Memorial pulpit acceptably for the past six weeks, and has since last Sunday returned to his home in Texas. Rev. H. R. Singleton and wife, who have been in Europe for more than two months, returned last Tuesday evening, and hereafter Brother Singleton will be in his own pulpit.

The press dispatches report the death of Mr. R. P. Moore, of Jackson, Miss., which occurred in Memphis last Sunday after an operation. His remains were brought to Jackson for interment. Mr. Moore was a citizen of great worth and a most estimable Christian gentleman. We had known him for years and held him in high esteem, and in common with his host of friends deplore his comparatively early death. May the Heavenly Father have the bereaved family and other stricken loved ones in his gracious keeping!

The article, entitled "Poor Methodists," which we publish this week deals with an important subject in quite a quaint way. This is not the first time that our friend "William" has hit the nail squarely on the head in a communication to the Advocate. Some time since a pastor from away down in Florida wrote us a letter and asked, "Who is your correspondent that signs his name 'William?' He is a good one." This secret we are not privileged to tell. We will only say that he is a gifted young minister in the Louisiana Conference.

Dr. J. T. Sawyer preached at the Mary Werlein Mission, New Orleans, last Sunday evening, and reports that he was greeted by a large congregation and that they had a delightful service which was followed by the administration of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, of which many partook. The Doctor states that it is always a pleasure to preach to this choice band of Christians. Dr. Sawyer is due to be at Sun, on the St. Tammany Circuit, on the fourth Sunday in August, where he is to assist the pastor, Rev. T. V. Peters, in a revival meeting.

A Jackson (Miss.) correspondent sends us the following item: "Rev. G. W. Eichelberger, of Mississippi, Hon. H. H. Spooner, of Connecticut, and Dr. H. S. Carson, of Nebraska, have been appointed a committee to prepare a program for the National Anti-Saloon meeting in Columbus, Ohio, which will have for its object the launching of a campaign for nation-wide prohibition. It is expected that 20,000 delegates will attend. The fact that Mr. Eichelberger is on this committee guarantees that the South will be well represented on the program arranged for this great gathering."

Rev. W. L. Duren, of Tupelo, Miss., reports his work as progressing very well, considering the fact that this is the dull season with the Church, as well as with most other things. We regret to be informed that Brother Duren's father, a citizen of Carroll County, is still far from well. He underwent a serious operation several months ago, from which he recovered, but which did not bring the hoped-for relief. In consequence, he had to submit to surgical treatment the second time. He is now able to be at home, and we pray that he may soon be entirely rid of the malady which has given him so much trouble.

Rev. A. F. Moore, who serves the Lake Cormorant and Hines charge (North Mississippi Conference), has lately been engaged in some helpful meetings. He says: "We have just closed our second revival, which was held at Hines' Chapel. Rev. J. B. Randolph, of Como, was with us and preached some strong sermons, which went to the hearts of those who attended. The church was revived and there were five additions to the membership. The week preceding this, Brother J. B. Connor, of Sardis, was with us at Eudora, where he delivered some soul-stirring messages. The church at that place was spiritually strengthened, but there were no accessions."

Rev. J. L. Neill, the gifted pastor of our First Church at Laurel, Miss., continues to send in subscriptions to the Advocate. It is needless to say that we appreciate his good work in behalf of the Conference organ, and we hope that he will find that our paper effectively re-enforces his labors in his new field. Read what Brother Neill has to say about his experience in securing subscribers on Page 7. Of his charge at Laurel, Brother Neill says: "Our work here is indeed a pleasant one. Dr. Weems builded wisely. We have by far the best church of any denomination in the town, a splendid choir, and a church membership at work. We have received eighteen members up to this date, pretty good work for three weeks, we think."

Rev. T. W. Adams, the active presiding elder of the Port Gibson District, has arranged a series of Sunday School Institutes for the charges under his supervision, of which a full announcement is made elsewhere. Mr. R. A. Maddox, who is principally to conduct these meetings, also sent us a schedule of them, but as we already had one in type we did not deem it necessary to go to the trouble and expense of having another set up. Brother Maddox' note contained the following exhortation: "Let all persons wishing to attend any one of these Institutes write the pastor at the place where it is to be held. These Institutes were planned for the purpose of doing good, and it is hoped that all who possibly can will attend them. Let the pastors call attention to them from their pupits, and let the superintendents urge heir teachers to go. It would be a good idea for the preacher in the town where an Institute is to be conducted to communicate with all the near-by pastors, and also to see that the meeting is announced in the county paper."

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1913. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

Obituaries.

Died July 4, in Seattle, Washington, JAMES UPTON MEDLOCK, eldest son of Rev. J. W. Medlock, deceased, and Mrs. Frances Medlock. An attack of pneumonia proved fatal and his spirit went home to God who gave it. We mourn not as those who have no hope, for his testimony was, "I love God, and have always believed." May we meet him in that better world.

ONE WHO LOVED HIM.

On the morning of July 16, 1913, just as the sun was spreading his beautiful rays over the earth, and the birds were singing their sweet songs, the death angel entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. V. C. Lewis, Jr., and took from them their little daughter, Evelyn. She had been sick two months and six days when the end came. God knoweth best. She was 10 years old and was loved by all who knew her. She was laid to rest in Greenleaf cemetery. Earth has lost its look of gladness, and Heaven seems to us more bright since the spirit of our loved one took its happy homeward flight. Grieve not, dear parents; when the cares of this life are over, Evelyn will be the first to greet you. A FRIEND.

Coldwater, Miss.

Over the home of Cecil E. Herring and wife hangs a heavy mantle of sorrow and loneliness, for the death angel visited the office of Drs. H. C. Watkins and B. P. Evans and plucked a beautiful little bud to bloom in heaven never to wither nor die. God giveth and God taketh away. Little SAMPS was 10 months and 8 days old. He never knew of sickness until he was taken ill on June 23, 1913. He died July 17, at 11 p. m., of a disease that was more than skilled physicians and loving nurses could control. His precious little body was quietly buried in the old home cemetery near Pachuta, Miss., on July 18, at 4 p. m. We think of him as last seen sleeping so sweetly and peacefully in the arms of Jesus. He left us heart-broken, sad, and in sorrow here below, but some day our Savior will show us why he willed it so. Little Samps O'Neal Herring was born September 9, 1912.

PAPA AND MAMMA.

Mrs. H. D. CAUSEY (nee Bessie May Ashley), was born at Vernon, Jackson Parish, La., March 7, 1859. She died in Mer Rouge, Morehouse Parish, July 31, 1913. She was married to Mr. H. D. Causey, Nov. 6, 1879. Three children died in early life; two sons, now grown, a heart-broken husband, a devoted sister and brother survive her. After services in the Methodist Church at Mer Rouge, her remains were interred in Mount Hill Cemetery on August 1. She lived 54 years 4 months and 24 days. Sister Causey joined the Methodist Church when but 12 years of age. She lived a consistent, ardent Christian life, and she was devoted to the church of her childhood, and was most faithful, loyal and active to the close of her noble life. We cannot doubt that a life so useful as hers, and so devoted to the highest principles will have a glorious reward in the glorified kingdom of her God. We can but point her broken-hearted loved ones, her host of friends and the church and Sunday school where she will be so greatly missed to the God she served, and pray that he may give the only comfort and consolation that the human heart can find in such grief and sorrow.

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN.

TOBIAS BOOTH was born near Vicksburg, Miss., May 5, 1835; was married to Susan E. Roberts, October 18, 1865; and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Edwards, Miss., in 1867. Thus has passed from earth to the reward in heaven a true and faithful member of the church at Edwards. Brother Booth was known and loved by all the preachers who have served the Edwards church since he became a member. He was a man above reproach, without ostentation, going about the daily walk of life in a God-fearing way, treating his neighbors right, and conducting himself as becometh a member of God's kingdom. His life was of that pure type which is seldom found. For three years this writer was his pastor, and when the illness that finally culminated in his death began I visited him. He said that he had no fears and no desire to stay in this world always. His life was pure, hence his record clean. He died at his home in Edwards on July 16, 1913, having lived beyond the allotted time of man—"an example of the believers, in word, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity." His faithful wife and two daughters survive. May the blessings of an All-wise God rest upon them. GEO. P. McKEOWN.

Mrs. MARY GRACE STRONG (nee Hamblen) was born in Vossburg, Miss., on March 12, 1887, and died at her home in Natalbany, La., on July 15, 1913. She was married to Mr. W. D. Strong on July 3, 1905. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in her childhood, and lived a devout Christian life. She was a faithful member of the Woman's Missionary Society, had a cheerful and happy disposition, and was a kind, loving and considerate wife. She was a woman of great zeal for the Master, and loved his cause. We think of her as having been like the one who poured the precious ointment upon our Savior. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." Her pastor,

J. S. RUTLEGE.

At his home near New Hebron, Miss., ALBERT J. TURNAGE departed this life on June 29, 1913. He was born in Cheraw, Chesterfield County, South Carolina, November 14, 1840. When but a boy he moved with his parents to Covington County, Miss. He enlisted in the Confederate Army, being one of the first volunteers in 1861, and served until the end of the war. He belonged to the 7th Mississippi Regiment, Company I, Chalmers' Brigade, late Sharps' Brigade. His enlistment under the Stars and Bars was what he felt he owed his State, but best of all, he was enlisted under the Blood Stained Cross of Christ, under which he fought until he was summoned to the great roll call of God's soldiers.

After the struggles of the sixties he was maried to Miss Louisa Bullock, to whom were given eleven children, eight of whom are living. After the death of his wife in 1892, he was again married to Mrs. Nancy Leggett, who survives him. As the sad message of his death was sent out to the world, many hearts were saddened, for he numbered his friends by the multitude, and had touched many lives during the period of his long and useful career only to bless them and comfort them. A man without ostentation, he went without the blowing of trumpets about the performance of every Christian duty. Putting himself behind the cross, he successfully carried forward many Church enterprises.

A number of times was he elected to represent his Church in its Conferences, and a more conscientious delegate was never admitted into the Councils of the Church. Living near New Hebron, Miss., where the church of his choice was composed of a small congregation, he was always a loyal Methodist, a true supporter of every claim of his church, and a wise counselor of his pastor. There were no doubts to disturb his spiritual life when the summons came for him to come into the presence of his Master. The preparation for this time had been made many years ago, and there was a sublime confidence in God through Christ. To him death was only the servant of the Father giving transportation to the celestial home. The writer, his pastor, being absent from his home, the funeral was conducted by Rev. J. B. Quin of the Prentiss Baptist Church.

SLATE SPRINGS, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just closed a good meeting at Bethlehem. It began on Aug. 2, when our presiding elder, Rev. B. P. Jaco, was with us in the third quarterly conference. He preached two fine sermons. The writer took charge Monday morning, and the church was soon revived and there were many penitents. The fire continued to burn until the meeting closed. Some backsliders were reclaimed; more workers were brought into the vineyard, and two members were added to the Church on profession of faith. We also organized a weekly prayer meeting. I wish for you and the dear old Advocate much success. I enjoy reading it very much, especially the editorials. I must not fail to mention that we had a fine Children's Day service on August 3.—James C. McElroy, P. C.

JENNINGS, LA.

The work here is moving on nicely in spite of the many difficulties that are in the way of our rapid progress. Our Sunday school is holding up in attendance wonderfully well, considering the hot weather. Congregations are fine and on the increase, and by careful work they can always be kept up, because we have the best location in town, and we do not have to depend on immigration for our future membership, but we have the young people to keep our church up in the future. There are more young people who attend our Church and Sunday school here than any other local church of its size. The prayer meetings are good and are well attended by our members, as well as by many of other churches. Last Thursday night we had 33 present, and the lowest number that we have had at any time was 19. We would like to see any of the churches in other places beat that, for we have nine Protestant churches that draw their support from the town. The Woman's Home Mission Society is preparing to put a new coat of paint on the church building, which will add greatly to its appearance. I have also been in some good revivals with the brethren. I was at Sulphur with Rev. A. J. Bonnett for ten days. We had a good revival, ten being added to the Church. Brother Bonnett, who is in great favor with his people, had things in good shape for a revival when we arrived on the ground. After closing there and resting two days at home, we went to Bay Hills Church on the Marksville work to assist Brother Perritt, who is also loved very much by his people. He had made things ready for a revival, and we had several conversions. Nine were added to the Church. It is a very easy matter to have a revival with such yoke-fellows as Bonnett and Perritt. Now, Doctor, in reference to our work here in Jennings, if we can get the Mission Board to hold on a little longer, and put a little money behind the movement, and not get discouraged and give up, there is hope of building up a good, strong church here. Pray for us.—Lastie N. Hoffpauir, Pastor.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Whereas, there are to-day many strange influences, commercial, professional, political, and social, tending to minimize the influence and power of the home; therefore, be it

Resolved, that we, as leaders of our Church, will do all in our power to check these hurtful tendencies, and to re-establish the home in its rightful and royal place of power.

PORT GIBSON DISTRICT SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTES.

Arrangements have been made to have Mr. R. A. Maddox, our Sunday School Field Agent, to spend the first fourteen days of September in the Port Gibson District. To this end a series of brief institutes has been arranged in which Brother Maddox is to take a leading part. We regret that he cannot visit every charge, but we hope neighboring charges will arrange to send representatives to the points indicated, and that the whole district may get the benefit of their inspirational and educational value. Please let all pastors and superintendents notice these dates and arrange acordingly:

Rolling Fork: Sept. 1, 8 p. m., and September 2—three services.

Washington Street, Vicksburg, Sept. 3, 8 p. m., and Sept. 4—three sessions.

Port Gibson, Sept. 5, 8 p. m., Sept. 6, and 7.

Gloster, Sept. 8, 8 p. m., and 9—three sessions.

Utica, Sept. 10, 8 p. m., and 11—three sessions.

Fayette, Sept. 12 and 13—two sessions.

Jefferson Street, Natchez, Sept. 14, all day.

Brothers Purcell and Gray, members of the Sunday School Board, will each attend three of these meetings and take part in the program.

AT BLACK HAWK.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just finished the revival meeting at Black Hawk for the year 1913. A great audience was present most of the time, and there were 18 additions to the Church. The congregation generally "had a mind to the work" and there were intimations for good almost from the beginning. Dr. H. G. Henderson of Lexington was with us from the third day unto the finish, and, by the favor of Him who helps, did captivating sermon work. At every coming together he was much enjoyed; also in the social circle.

The Conference chiefs are not strangers at this historic location—preaching has reverberated hereabouts for near a century—but this Lexington pastor and ex-minister from St. Louis, Brownsville, Columbus, etc., evidently touched the high water mark of any previous precedent in pulpit ministrations and left a fine impression among the people, which we think shall helpfully abide as the years pass. Most of the large congregation were greatly benefited, and the few still lingering in the gloom of the valley below will no doubt be aided as the time goes by. The singers did finely and much heart-interest existed; God came very near, and not a few "sat together in heavenly places." The visiting minister enjoyed the occasion, and delivered the message "in demonstration of the Spirit and of power, and many times his words were eloquent and beautifully sublime.

Rev. W. S. Shipman, "The Elder," is to be with us soon, and the Acona congregation is next in order.

Sunday School

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

We are not hearing of enough Sunday school picnics this summer. If the child enjoys the Christmas tree at Christmas, he enjoys the outing of picnics in the summer season more, perhaps. It is not too late to consider this.

Rev. J. C. Rousseaux is teaching a Legion of Honor Teacher-training class in his school at Zwolle, and says that he is learning more about the Bible in this class work than he ever learned in any other way. Other pastors would no doubt profit by leading their teachers in the same line of work. This class meets weekly on Friday nights.

In the matter of teaching our teen age classes, would it not be practical to have doctors and trained nurses teach them the delicate matter of sex hygiene at suitable times and places? The boys and girls could be taught separately if the occasion should demand. If the modern Sunday school is to do all for our boys and girls that they need, this is worthy of our most serious consideration. Other specialists could address them on tithing, the claims of the ministry, etc.

Our people at Charlieville, on the Mangham charge, have just put a nice iron fence around the grave of Rev. H. O. White, who was buried at their church at his own request. It is a beautiful spot under magnificent moss-covered oaks on the banks of Boeuf River. These same friends, among whom Brother White died, had before this erected over his grave a nice tombstone. Brother C. M. Nobel, a member of our Sunday School Board, is Sunday school superintendent and general church leader at this place.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

One in every four of the world's population is enrolled in the Sunday school. Japan has 100,000 members.

"A person cannot attend church one hundred and four times a year for twenty-five years, and do nothing else for the Kingdom, and keep his Christianity," says a great thinker.

Superintendent J. H. Ledyard, of Tupelo, has a fine class of teen-age girls—25 in number, and 25 present nearly every Sunday. He calls them his 100 per cent class. They are taught and led in beautiful ways by Miss Moselle Strain.

Bethel Sunday school, on the Rienzi Circuit, is making renewed efforts toward securing a better organization. The Field Secretary recently enjoyed a Sabbath afternoon with them. Danville, on the same charge, has a fine evergreen Sunday school and they, too, are planning better things.

Bishop Quayle's answer to the question "is teacher-training needed?" is too attention-riveting to pass unnoticed: "The vocation of a Sunday school teacher is beautiful enough to be the task of an angel. For Jesus' sake and the sake of childhood, youthhood, adulthood of the world, busy and tired women and men take Sunday, which they greatly need for rest, and give themselves to teaching the Book of God and its holy lessons. They will be set down as real and unusual philanthropists by those who in the future write the deep history of the world."

Several months ago Mrs. Hewlett, of the First Methodist Church of Corinth, went to the communion table with all her lovely teen-age girls. The pastor and superintendent felt impressed with the opportunity to tie the school more firmly to our great Church Sacrament; so on August 3, the church service followed immediately the close of the Sunday school, and the classes all came in and took the Sacrament with their teachers. Never has there been a more beautiful or uplifting service in Corinth. The memory of those classes of grown men and women, lovely teen-age girls, and many boys and the sweet-faced children, all blessed by the service, will linger long in the hearts of many.

FOXWORTH, MISS.

As the year advances our Lord's work is advancing comparatively well at my six appointments. We have enjoyed the association and the instructive and inspirational sermons of our able presiding elder, Rev. Robt. Selby, at two quarterly conferences. We anticipate another soul-stirring time at Hopewell on the occasion of our third quarterly conference, Aug. 9 and 10, at which time Brother H. J. Maddox will be engaged with us in a revival there. Children's Day has been successfully observed at each appointment. A good showing was made financially and otherwise. The three-cent assessment has been paid at each of our six Sunday schools, which we rejoice to report as doing good work. With the assistance of Brother B. F. Cook at Summer Chapel, and Brother David Ulmer at Hickman, we held, in the first part of July, revivals, the result of which I feel confident will be long felt. There were 4 accessions at Summer Chapel by profession of faith, and 13 at Hickman, and also one by certificate. There were quite a number of reclamations and conversions at both churches. Brothers Crook and Ulmer preached the truth, clearly and practically, with a reasonable amount of doctrine, always minifying the man and magnifying God. Beginning on July 25, Brother M. B. Sharbrough aided me in a meeting at Sandy Hook. The presence of the Holy Spirit was graciously present with both the messenger and the hearers. Two persons united with our Church: one by profession of faith, and one by certificate. Brother Sharbrough's earnest and convincing sermons were helpful to every one. We are constantly reminded of our great commission, and our repeated experiences in the Lord's vineyard giveth joy unspeakable.—Chas. E. Downer, P. C.

FAVORS DISTRICT TENTS.

I believe every presiding elder could use a tent in his District to a great advantage. I have just completed a 7 days' meeting in Tiger, Miss., a saw-mill town, and my efforts in the tent meeting there resulted in the organization of a class with ten members, and the securing of pledges to the amount of $200 for the payment of a pastor for next year. In addition to this, I received $40 for my services. Mr. J. M. Griffin, the operator of the saw mill, offers to give free use of a parsonage, to build and furnish a church building by October 1, and to place in it a nice organ, which he has already purchased. There are four other saw-mill towns within ten miles of this place that want pastoral attention. I believe it would pay to have a man in the Mississippi Conference, equipped with a good tent, whose entire time should be devoted to the building up of the Church in the "white fields" that are now ready for the harvest.

A FRIEND FOR FORTY-THREE YEARS.

J. F. Cherry, of Detroit, Texas, writes: "I have used Gray's Ointment for forty-three years, and can truly say there is nothing equal to it or like it, and I would advise anyone suffering from old sores to give it a fair trial and they will never regret it or be without it. I believe if it had not been for Gray's Ointment my leg would have killed me long ago. There is grateful relief for anyone suffering from old sores, cuts, boils, carbuncles, burns, bruises, festering wounds, ulcers, tumors, etc., in Gray's Ointment. St. Mark's Hall.

One of the places where splendid practical and efficient home missionary work is being done is at St. Mark's Hall in New Orleans. This institution comprises departments in sewing, cooking, and basket-making, a night class in Italian, and religious services on Sunday afternoons. There is a free clinic and a trained nurse who visits in the houses of the sick. At present the enrollment in the different departments is about 200. The Child Welfare Association has just opened one of its stations in the building, and mothers are bringing their babies there for pure milk. The work is growing steadily and its future possibilities seem great.

SOME STATISTICS.

I have been gathering some statistics which I hope will stay with us. The women of Louisiana paid last year for home missions about the price of a cheap pair of shoes per capita; and to foreign missions, the price of a very cheap hat per capita. The average as a whole for all church work was about the price of one barrel of flour. About 6,800 of us read the New Orleans Advocate while 27,398 of us do not; 408 of our 1032 members of the foreign department are subscribers to the Missionary Voice; 495 of the 1787 of the home department subscribe to this periodical. If Methodists perish for the lack of knowledge, some of us will soon be looking thin.

MRS. A. C. McKINNEY.

You will find, as life goes on, that the amount of time you spend alone with God and your own soul has no little to do with your own comfort and your strength and your fruitfulness.—Alexander Whyte.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Report of Conference Corresponding Secretary, Foreign Department, Louisiana Conference, Second Quarter.

Mrs. A. P. Holt reports three new adult auxiliaries and four junior divisons. Three hundred and seventy-five new members were added during the quarter, bringing our total enrollment in this department to 2296. We have 19 life members. There are 537 subscribers to the Missionary Voice and 98 to the Young Christian Worker. Seven hundred and nineteen members are enrolled in the mission study classes. Two missionaries are supported by the Conference, sixteen scholarships, and seven Bible women. A new Bible woman, added during the quarter, is being supported by the Owens' Sunday School Class of Alexandria, La.

HAVE YOU SEEN IT?

We have a chart showing six churches built in this country by the Buddhists of China and the Brahmins of India. This picture is a revelation to many Americans of the danger to our own faith from the coming of orientals to this country. If any one wants an abiding inspiration to home mission work, send and get this chart. Order from Miss Mabel Head, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. Price, 15 cents

THE FIRESIDE LEAGUE.

The Fireside League is the development of the Immigrant Committee of the Council of Women for Home Missions. Every one who becomes affiliated with this League pledges to teach an alien English.

What Are Its Characteristics?

1. The individual meeting of individual need.

2. The simplicity of its plan of work, as simple, as direct, as the method of Jesus himself, who began the building of the kingdom of God on earth by individual work with individuals as he met them by the wayside, in their homes, in their places of public assemblies and taught them.

Its Essential Features Are Two.

1. The teaching of English to foreigners.

2. The teaching of English through Biblical material.

Who Can Do the Work?

You can do the work. I must do the work. We all must share in the work if our country with its annual influx of 1,000,000 immigrants from countries of alien speech and alien ideals, is to remain a Christian country.

How to Begin.

Secure the little book "Early Stories and Songs for New Students of English," illustrated, and read completely the "Suggestions to Teachers." The book may be procured from the publishers, Fleming H. Revell Company, 158 Fifth Avenue, New York, or through any book store. Price, cloth, 60 cts.; or tag board, 35 cts.

WHAT SOME CHINESE WOMEN ARE DOING

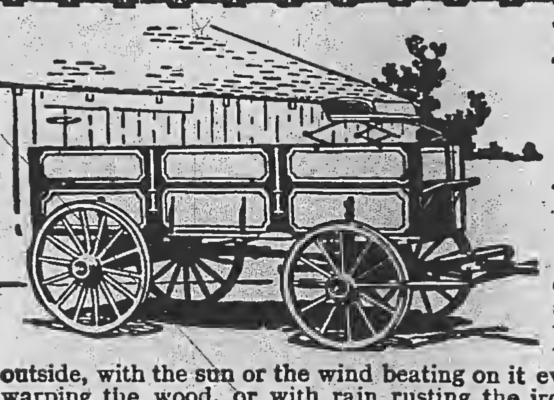
Miss Wu, a fine young woman from Soochow, China, is in the United States preparing herself to give the best there is in her to her own people. She studied at Davidson Memorial and at McTyeire; then spent two years under Miss Cook at Miss Gaines' school in Hiroshima, Japan, fitting herself for kindergarten work. She started the kindergarten school a Davidson Memorial; then came to America for further study. She spent one year at La Grange, Ga., one at the kindergarten school at Atlanta, and goes this fall to Columbia University for further training, after which she will return to her kindergarten work in Soochow. She is being educated by a generous Methodist woman of Alabama.

Eiling Soong, educated at Wesleyan, is governess in the family of Sun Yat Sen. Miss Woo Vi Jan, one of our McTyeire girls, has married Tang Sha Yi, ex-Premier of China, who was one of the four commissioners representing the Manchus at the peace negotiations. Miss Wang Fok Me, many years a teacher in the Susan B. Wilson school, has recently married Mr. Yoen, who represented Sun Yat Sen in the peace negotiations and is now a high official in Peking.

TEACHING FEEBLE-MINDED CHILDREN.

One of the most beautiful and interesting spots in America is Farmdale—the site of the Stewart Home and School, a private institution for the training and development of feeble-minded children. Five hundred acres of beautiful blue grass and stately forest trees! Could any spot in all the world be better suited for such an institution? But the most beautiful thing about Farmdale is the spirit of love and devotion to duty, and the intelligent labor displayed by the officers, teachers and assistants from the superintendent to the foreman of the farm. Everybody works at Farmdale—and it is skilled and professional work of the highest order. Even the games, recreations and amusements are planned and executed with a view to the mental development of the children. The methods of teaching are, of course, quite different from those employed in the ordinary schools, for the problem is a vastly more difficult one. Physical, as well as mental defects have to be contended with. It is here that manual training is most helpful. The teaching is largely individual in character and realistic, for the crippled mind does not grasp ideas quickly. Patience, born of an intelligent understanding of the child's infirmity, plays an important part in securing the desired results.

An interesting booklet describing the work of the Stewart Home and School may be had by addressing the Superintendent, Dr. John P. Stewart, Box 19, Farmdale, Ky.



Endurance Counts Most

WHEN your sheds are full of machines and one or two are crowded out into the open, which is it that invariably stands outside, with the sun or the wind beating on it every day, drying and warping the wood, or with rain rusting the iron? It's the wagon. Other machines are stored away, dry and covered, yet many of them work for short seasons only. The wagon works the year around, is always under the strain of heavy burdens. It can't stand the strain of such a life for many years unless, like I H C wagons—

Weber New Bettendorf
Columbus Steel King

it has built into it the utmost of endurance, toughness, and sturdiness. I H C wagons are built of wood of very best quality, every bit as good as they look. Examine them closely; you find no cross grained, knotty, split, or faulty timber. Every stick—oak and hickory for the wheels, yellow or bay poplar for box sides and long leaf yellow pine for bottoms, is selected from first grade lumber and carefully inspected. Every stick is toughened and seasoned by two or three years of air-drying. No brittle kiln-dried lumber has any part in I H C wagon building.

All steel and iron parts are chosen with the same end in view—greatest durability and longest life. Experts test and verify every part. The timber, metal, shaping and fitting, painting, every detail down to every brace and bolt, must be just right.

Buy one now, watch its steady service on your farm, and mark this—your future reliance will be on the I H C wagon. That future order is our ultimate aim. Columbus and Weber wagons have wood gears; New Bettendorf and Steel King have steel gears. Ask the dealer to show you the I H C wagon best suited to your needs. Editorial

THE CONDITION OF THE HOLY SPIRIT'S INDWELLING.

"And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God." So wrote the Apostle Paul to the Ephesians. This is an injunction that every Christian may well carefully meditate upon. To have the conscious indwelling of the Holy Ghost is the gracious privilege of every believer; but to realize his continuous presence the disciple must move upon a high plane and keep his heart pure. If he neglects his duty, if by any sinful thought, or temper, or word, or act, he fails to measure up to the best light that he has, the Divine Paraclete will correspondingly withdraw the manifestation of himself. And since it is his province to illumine, to quicken, and to strengthen, this tends to bring darkness upon the soul and disaster to the religious life. There is no forward way spiritually except that of faithful obedience to one's deepest convictions and noblest impulses, under the promptings of the great Helper whom God has sent. A fitting prayer for every struggler in the unceasing conflict with the forces of evil, both within and without, is voiced in the following lines:

"Mighty Spirit, dwell with me;
I myself would mighty be—
Mighty so as to prevail
Where unaided man would fail,
Ever by a mighty hope
Pressing on and bearing up."

OUR MISSION TO THE MANY, NOT THE FEW.

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate says: "The Roman Catholic Church has in this country 88 seminaries, 230 colleges for boys, 684 academies for girls, and 5,258 parochial schools. The Roman Catholics believe in the education of their people, and of other people, and they believe that the work ought to be done by the Church."

So they do, and it is worth noticing that they believe in maintaining secondary schools. And we think the Protestant denomination would do well to imitate their example in this respect. If Christian education is a necessity, what sense is there in letting our youth go without it until they are ready to enter upon their college courses? Are not the early years the ones in which the deepest and most lasting impressions are made? In our opinion, Southern Methodism needs a chain of academies throughout her territory far more than she does a few conspicuous institutions of learning. The schools that are close to the people—the common schools—are the ones that wield the mightiest influence.

Sometimes we fear that as a Church we need to re-learn the tremendous truth that Wesley so well understood, namely, that our call is to serve and uplift the great masses of humanity. There has never been a really great religious leader or movement that was not concerned with the people in general. This was especially true of our Lord, who turned away from the circles of wealth and aristocracy and puffed-up earthly learning, to minister to the lowly, the outcast, and the needy. He knew that the sublimest possibilities beneath the sky lay undeveloped in the struggling, suffering, sin-cursed human beings amongst whom he moved. Therefore, to them he gave his time, and upon them he spent his strength. Here is our high calling, brethren, and woe be unto us, if, smitten with "the aloofness of culture" or affected by a spirit of exclusion of any kind, we dare to disregard it.

THE AREA OF NEW ORLEANS.

The Times-Democrat, a few days since, in answering a correspondent said: "The population of New York and its Westchester and New Jersey suburbs in 1910 was 6,501,178, and its area is 326.83 square miles. The population of Chicago is 2,307,638, and its area is 191.50 square miles. The population of New Orleans is now 375,000, and its area is 196 square miles. The population of London is 7,252,963, and its area is 699 square miles."

Thus it will be seen that the area of the Crescent City is larger than that of Chicago and more than three-fifths of that of New York. And the fact that it covers so much ground is a factor that should not be overlooked in considering it as a mission field. The question is sometimes asked, why not combine our weak churches here and form a few strong ones? Such a policy would result in leaving many of our people a long distance from any Methodist church, which would be a perilous thing to do. Considering the extent of the city, we have too few rather than too many churches, though some of them are perhaps not as well located as they might be.

A STARTLING DISCLOSURE.

Leslie's Weekly recently contained the following statement: "Of the graduating class of Columbia University, fifty-two confessed that they had never attended the campus chapel service, eight declared themselves without religion, and fifty-two were not sufficiently interested in the question of church-going to answer it. Only one member put himself down as a regular attendant at chapel—only one out of 155! The favorite dances of these young gentlemen were the 'turkey trot' and 'tango.' Thirty-six of these graduates are to become lawyers."

In the face of this showing, how can any man in his senses say that there is no need for church schools and Christian education? One would think that such a disclosure as this would impress even Mr. Carnegie.

STILL AT WORK.

The late William E. Gladstone, the foremost statesman of the last century, is represented as having said to Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler: "Your country is threatened with two dangers—one is your lax system of divorces, which saps the sanctity of the home, and the other is plutocracy, which can buy its way into legislative bodies and executive offices."

Both of these evil influences are still at work in the American Republic, and many of our most profound minds think that the divorce menace is being made vastly more formidable by the feminist movement, which tends to divert the attention of woman from her home and family.

BISHOP CANDLER'S NEW BOOK.

The title of this new volume is "Practical Studies in the Fourth Gospel." It is neatly printed and bound, having been issued by the Publishing House of the M. E. Church, South; it contains 24 chapters and 298 pages. The work is in no sense controversial; the Johannine authorship of the Gospel under consideration is assumed at the outset and the various claims of the higher critics are not given the slightest attention. Nor are these discussions a close and critical examination of the Scripture text, though the verses upon which they are based are printed upon the initial page in each instance just as they appear in the Sacred Canon. They are of a homiletic character—really "practical studies" in the great piece of writing that St. John has given us, perhaps the most remarkable and sublime production that can be found in the world's vast literature. The present volume covers only the first ten chapters of the Fourth Gospel, and a second one is now in process of preparation which is expected to make its appearance not later than next February.

With Bishop Candler traversing such a field as that opened up in the first part of the beloved disciple's extraordinary portraiture of the Master, it scarcely needs to be said that he has given us a book that is highly interesting and instructive. He quickly goes to the very heart of the passage that he is expounding and illustrates and enforces its teaching with a felicity of expression that but few can command. His comments are always suggestive, and often illuminating and inspiring. They are deeply spiritual and are calculated to feed and strengthen the soul. In this day when so many writers are given to parading pious platitudes, it is refreshing to read after one of Bishop Candler's marked originality. His ideas are coined in the mint of his own masterful mind, and they bear his stamp unmistakably upon them. As a thinker he ranks with the foremost in the modern Church, and he is as gifted with his pen as he is with his tongue. We sincerely hope that this latest product of his busy brain will have a wide circulation.

A series of Biblical expositions so calculated to stimulate the student of the Divine Word and to enrich one's religious life ought to find its way into the library of every preacher in Southern Methodism and into the homes of thousands of our people. The price of this volume is $1; it may be ordered of Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tennessee, or Dallas, Texas; or of Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss.

THE WAYS OF PROVIDENCE.

By William Morley Punson.

There are no trifles. Arks as frail
As bore God's prince of old,
On many a buoyant Nile-stream sail
The ages' heirs to hold.
From Jacob's love on Joseph shed,
Came Egypt's wealth and Israel's bread;
From Ruth's chance gleaning in the corn,
The Psalmist sang—the Christ was born.

PALMETTO LETTER.

The top of the season to you, Meek. When your liver's out of order and the world looks blue, let me give you just a pointer as to what to do; throw the paste-pot out the window, smash the pill-box into "pi," leave the office to "the devil," tell the "gang" good-bye; jump aboard the "train De Luxe," from all your troubles fly, and take a fortnight's outing in "the Land of the Sky." I was on my last legs, not exactly sick, but just run down, no energy, in a languorous, spiritless, lifeless state. I hardly had vitality enough left to "swat" the solitary fly that audaciously ventured into my sanctum, or resent the insolence that called the Southerners "rebels." I could not arouse enough patriotism to voice my indignant disapproval of the appointment of Mr. Walter Page as Ambassador to England. That Page is no Southerner, though of Southern birth. Thomas Nelson Page was the man I had picked for our representative to England, a nobleman of "the old regime," true to the South, the North, the East and the West, a Christian gentleman of the highest type, and a man whose antecedents as well as his literary achievements peculiarly fitted him for that particular post. But Mr. Wilson did not consult me. What a pity!

I started for Waynesville in the North Carolina mountains, but finding that I would have to lay over in Asheville, I dropped off at Hendersonville. There is no prettier country than the country around Waynesville; no finer climate, no better section for health and recreation; but it is off to one side, and that is a serious objection. We Methodists beat the world in some things, and one of them is in making blunders. Look at the monumental blunder they have made out in Texas, in naming the great University at Dallas "The Southern Methodist University." This slams the door in the face of every other denomination, and narrows the institution to our own people. A Baptist, a Presbyterian, an Episcopalian, does not want a diploma that flaunts the Methodist pennant in the face of everybody; and yet there are thousands of young men in these other Churches who would naturally go to that University. A great University ought to be for everybody. In our doctrines we are the most liberal and catholic of all the denominations; but we are not true to our creed, either in the letter or the spirit. I hardly know which is the more deplorable, the looseness which considers itself liberality, or the narrowness that thinks itself loyal; both are obstructive of the truth and a great handicap to progress. But to err is human, to have patience with our errors is, perhaps, divine—where there is any disposition to correct them. We all are liable to mistakes, like the musician who played too high. The band master rushed across the stage and thundered: "Vat do you mean?" "I mistook a fly on the page for the notes." The name of our great University in Texas is like the fly on the musician's page—it spoils the music. Perhaps the men of wide vision in Texas will see the unnecessary limitation it puts on the usefulness of the institution and correct it.

Western North Carolina is the play-ground of Dixie, and I found Hendersonville a delightful place to rest, and recuperate. I had not been there long when a ten-mile stroll was a pleasant walk, and one day finding the distance pitted against the dinner, I made five miles in an hour and thirteen minutes without fatigue, though my locomotor muscles were a "leetle" sore. That sprint fifty years ago would have made me eligible to membership in Stonewall Jackson's famous "Foot Cavalry." Such walking is not practicable in the low-lands, and I have wondered if this does not explain in part the failure of Jackson in the Richmond campaign to hurry along as fast as he did in the Valley. The ozone in that mountain air tones up the blood, and with the Yankees either behind or before, I do not wonder that the Johnnies got over ground at a gait that upset the regulation ideas of the old West Pointers.

As I was leaving home I smuggled into my grip, so as to be sure of recreative entertainment, Forrest's "Christ of History and Experience," Forsythe's "The Person and Place of Jesus Christ;" Walker's "Christian Theism and a Spiritual Monism;" Bergson's "Creative Evolution;" Cocker's "Theistic Conception of the World;" Whetham's "Recent Developments in Physical Science" and Horne's "Philosophy of Education." I can't tell you how I enjoyed these massive books in that fine studio. Meek, did you ever read a book that gripped the very marrow of your mind, away up above the clouds? Be assured it is a bliss worth a long ride to enjoy. We had an unusually quiet and congenial company at the home-like hotel where I stayed—no dancing or devilment; but I slipped away to the heights to enjoy what these great minds have to say about the greatest themes that can engage our thoughts. On the very crest of Mt. Hebron, over three thousand feet up in the sky, with the lovely valley of the French Broad River lying outspread like a map, far below, I read one of Forest's illuminating lectures on "The Method of Christ's Self-manifestation." I read Bergson from cover to cover, not that I believe a word of his philosophy, but because I want to know what the simpletons who do believe it are up to.

When I had finished Bergson, I recalled the story of two negroes. They bought a piece of fresh meat together, and Sam trusted it to Henry to take care of till morning. Next morning when Sam enquired about the meat, Henry said: "Sam, there is a mystery about dat piece of meat. I tuk it down in the cellar and put it in a barrel of brine to keep it. This morning I went to get dat meat, and I couldn't find it. I fished in dat brine, but got nothin! Then I turned up de barrel, and Sam as sho as your name is Sam, the rats had done bored a hole in the bottom of dat barrel, and carried off dat meat." "You don't say," exclaimed Sam; "but Henry, why didn't the brine run out dat hole?" "Dat's the mystery, Sam." Bergson's philosophy is about as mysterious as how the meat got away while the brine remained. But they say people run over one another in Paris to hear him. "Dat's the mystery."

Meek, if I ever leave the Methodist Church I think I'll turn Roman Catholic. With all its errors, the Roman Catholic Church is far truer to the Bible in some fundamental things than the Protestants. Its loyality to the Scriptural truth of woman's place in human society, its firm stand for the sacredness of marriage, and its vigorous opposition to divorce, the resolute stand its prelates have taken against the "abomination of abominations," women in politics—all of this suits me. Did you notice the picture in a recent number of Life? It represented two graves side by side. On one of the headstones was the the word "Chivalry" and on the other "Gallantry," and underneath the statement, "Slain by Suffragetteism." That is what it will result in, has already resulted in where it has prevailed. Hit it, Meek, and hit hard, especially when it comes wearing the robe of "Laity Rights." You are a younger man than I, and you mark what I say: If the various Protestant Churches of the United States commit themselves to this hideous error, and swing out into the broad current of the infidelity that is behind this movement, they will give the Roman Catholic Church a moral advantage that will immensely strengthen its influence in America. You cannot alter the moral constitution of this world as it has been established by Almighty God, and you attempt to do that when you thrust woman into the sphere of politics. Political duties are incompatible with the duties God created woman to discharge; she can only attend to the one by neglecting the other. Looking at the future of our civilization, the most important work before us now is the rehabilitation of "the derelict American Home." We can never redeem the home when the very one on whom the home depends forsakes it for the hustings.

We have a "bumper crop" in South Carolina this year, and the farmers are all in a good humor over Brother McAdoo's call of the Wall Street "bluff." Margaret Fuller said, "I accept the Universe." I go her one better: I approve the Universe. S. A. STEEL.

THE HOME FIELD.

A District Conference Paper.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Mr. President and Brethren: There are two things assumed in the subject assigned me today: One is "Home," the other, "Field." In the discussion of this momentous subject, we need only to mention, and not elaborate, time-honored truisms and well understood statements in connection with the great missionary movement of the times. We mention these and pass rapidly to the subject engaging our immediate attention.

First. The kingdom of God in the earth is one kingdom. Every nation alike is privileged to share its joys, its service, its sacrifice, and its rewards. The Master's commission is all inclusive.

Second. The responsibility and duty of enlarging the divine kingdom is laid upon the Church in every sphere of her life. Her prayer is enjoined for its maintenance and success; her ministers and agencies, divine and human, are employed for its furtherance, and her mighty faith is pledged for its ultimate victory and glorious consummation.

Third. The Church, from the time St. Paul preached her life-giving gospel from Macedonia to Illyricum, has inaugurated this world-wide movement, and now can halt, withdraw, or turn backward, only at the peril of forfeiting her God-given destiny among the nations of the earth. I have adduced these well established truths, not to oppose or contradict them, but to place them in a fuller, broader relation to the great missionary movement in the Church of today, and from this base proceed to make what appears to the mind of your speaker, an unanswerable argument for advancing the interests of the Home Field.

In all history, there is nowhere a scene of more importance to human good and advancement, than that of Jesus and the eleven disciples upon the Mount of Olives—he imparting and they receiving the great world-embracing commission. For dauntless courage and deathless purpose, Thermopylae, or the charge of the immortal six hundred, scarcely afford a parallel. The world was his by right of creation and redemption, and now shall be won again by the authority given of heaven, and vested in him and his followers. How did these trusted apostles of our divine, risen Lord understand and obey his last command, "But ye shall receive power, when the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth?" (Acts 1:8.)

The orders of a commanding officer on a field of battle must be rightly interpreted, else serious disaster will inevetibly occur. So I hold harm has been done and the advance of his hosts in the great spiritual warfare have been retarded by a false conception of the great commission. After the Spirit in power and plentitude is poured upon the Church they were to be Christ's witnesses, first in Jurusalem, Judea, Samaria, and then to the uttermost parts of the earth. I leave this thought with you and proceed to a consideration of our present needs and conditions in Louisiana. If material things—men, money and means—are to be subsidized for use in the divine kingdom, surely this State of ours promises these in abundance!

Excluding Texas and California, I venture the assertion that there is not a State in this great Union that is our superior in native resources and means for acquiring and maintaining wealth and prosperity. The fertility of our fields is proverbial. No other State produces three great staples together in such abundance. Cotton, rice, and sugar can be grown from Caddo to Cameron. Sulphur, salt, petroleum, and gas, hot and cold, are produced above measure. The magnitude of our mineral wealth can be conveyed to the mind by a few salient facts: We produce two-thirds of the world's sulphur supply. Every time a match is lighted and a fire kindled, no doubt, Louisiana sulphur is burned. Her salt mines rank third in importance in the world. Her oil burns in almost every home of our land, besides the quantity that is consumed for fuel. Forests of pine crown her hills. Cypress, perhaps the finest wood in the world for carpentry purposes, abounds in the swamps of our river valleys, while the vast supply of hard woods astonish and delight the lumbermen from other States. Our fisheries, both inland and coastal, are scarcely surpassed by any, and are a source of untold wealth and pleasure to the people. Our climate is mild, equable, and salubrious—the mean range of temperature on the coastal plain extending across the southern half of the State being only one degree; and it is but two degrees for the remaining part of the State. We now pass briefly to a consideration of the inhabitants of our State. Louisiana is a land populated very largely by the Latin races. Spain and France gave form and color to our civil, political, and social life. The hardy English speaking immigrant from the States further east found a type of civilization older than his own and vastly different. Its crystallized mold of manners, its polished suaviter in modo, its stubborn conservatism, its love for home and fireside, the grace and virtue of its women, and easy morals of its men, have left their enduring mark upon its generation. The native Louisianian is understood by the man from the other States only after years of residence here, and study of our life. As a people to-day we are intensely conservative because we know full well that our way is the best way. We are jealous of innovations, for we have seen these new things tried elsewhere and fail. When the crass reformer comes our way with his cock-sure plans, with native politeness we give him a patient hearing, and then "saw wood, and say nothing." But there is an intensity of purpose and eye to the great end in view, and an unconquerable determination to succeed that sometimes are a sad surprise to the man who encounters these qualities. The graces and virtues of life that are the heritage from a race of cavaliers and gentlemen of an elder day, still survive among us.

We argue that such a land and such people are well worth all the efforts that may be put forth to save them, and will in the future, as in the past, richly repay with more than an hundred fold return, for every shining shekel invested. Now we come to the heart of our subject. What is our Church doing to evangelize and Christianize this fair inheritance? After twenty-five years of work, and of patient and interested observation, I make the assertion, that we are only touching the borders of this fair and promising field.

There is a crying need of more thorough, effective methods and measures in equipping and doing State mission work. I have served the Church in Louisiana as presiding elder, city pastor, circuit rider, station preacher, and missionary, and have seen these needs pressing sorely upon us. Ignorance, father of suspicion and misconception confront the earnest worker. False views as to missionary ends and purposes are to be contended with. Only by earnest and continuous effort can real substantial progress be made, and permanent results brought about. The object to be achieved challenges our faith and courage. Shall we falter and fail to possess in its entirety this fair heritage for our Lord?

The immortal Daniel Webster stood on a peak of the Alleghanies and, with his hand bent trumpet like to his ear, and his great soul lighted with prophetic vision as he looked westward over the vast empire of forest, flood, and plain, said, "I hear the tramp of coming millions." So with rhythmic music of hearts beating with high hopes, the immigrants are coming to our great State. They are possessing the prairies of the southwest, the fertile river valleys of Central and Eastern Louisiana, and the pine vestured nplands, where the winds from the far Southern Gulf sing a minor note of wierd, strange music. They are coming! They are here! They are our brothers, made in the image and likeness of our common Father, redeemed by our Savior, and can be comforted and glorified by the same blessed Spirit of grace and power that enshrines the love of God in our hearts. Oh, brethren, let us be true to our mission in these latter days even as were our fathers in their generation! May God give us grace, wisdom, and faithfulness, never to doubt nor turn aside, but to push the battle to the enemy's very gates and win the day through him who snatched victory from the jaws of death and glory from the cross and tomb.

EARLY TIMES OF METHODISM IN NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

VI.

Among the men who labored in the itinerant ministry in the days of which we are writing appears the name of Joseph Travis, A. M., who was first stationed in Holly Springs in 1838; was President of Holly Springs University in 1839, and again stationed as pastor in the same town in 1840. He was born in Maryland in 1786, from which State his parents moved during his boyhood to Virginia, and thence to South Carolina.

He was admitted into the South Carolina Conference in December, 1806, in which he served for many years, filling many of the most important appointments as pastor, presiding elder, school principal, etc. He was also sent several times as delegate to the General Conference. In 1835 he was transferred to the Mississippi Conference and stationed in New Orleans, and the following year in Vicksburg.

Concerning his going to Holly Springs and his three years' labors in that town we copy from his autobiography as follows: "Our next Annual Conference was at Natches in December, 1837; Bishop Andrew presided. I now for the first time in my life requested a certain field of labor, to be near our only child. The request was granted. I was sent to Holly Springs in North Mississippi. ...."The place was as yet new and but few Methodists of wealth in it. I had hard work to obtain a boarding house for myself and wife. We at last succeeded in securing a very comfortable home with Brother Wyatt Epps and wife, both of whom, with their dear children, have a large share of my affections. We had a considerable increase in our membership this year. At the commencement the Campbellites were far the most numerous sect. They strove hard to get me into a public debate with them: I concluded to pay no attention to their wishes, but proceeded in my usual manner to preach Christ crucified. The result was the increase of Methodism and the decline of Campbellism.

"I was as yet a stranger to the speculative mania pervading a great part of Mississippi, and in this place superabundant. There were at least two shin-plaster banks in our village, affording vast calculations upon very slender and uncertain data. A large and commodious brick house was erected for a college, trustees were appointed and the Legislature granted a charter for a University. I was prevailed upon to permit my name to be presented to the Board of Trustees for the presidency of said University. I had no idea of being elected, there being but one Methodist on the board and a worthy Presbyteran clergyman, a member of the board, being a candidate for the office. The proposed salary was $2000 per annum. I did not even attend the election, but to my astonishment I was elected. This took place just before the sitting of our Annual Conference in Grenada. Bishop Morris presided and by a vote of the Conference I was appointed president of said University.

"Quickly after my return from Conference I began to learn some things about the financial character of the University, as also of the unpleasant feelings of some of my Presbyterian friends in relation to my election; and although I had organized the school and had a friendly and well qualified faculty, with a goodly number of students, I determined on resigning. Accordingly at the first meeting of the board I tendered my resignation, which was peremptorily refused. Hence I had to continue. But, alas! the Trustees were in debt for all, and the ground on which the buildings were erected was claimed by another person. Nothing was paid—neither the bricklayer nor myself were paid to the present day. The University went down, 'unhonored and unwept.' So much for wild calculations upon ahin-plaster banks. Yet I am far from believing that there was any designed fraud upon myself or the workmen by the Board of Trustees; but at an unexpected hour an awful cracking and snapping took place with the banks throughout the State of Mississippi—not more than one or two were viewed as solvent.

"The Conference was held in Natchez in December, 1839, Bishop Andrew presiding. I was again stationed in Holly Springs in charge of our church. This year I had that good and useful man, Malcolm McPherson, for my presiding elder. I knew him well in North and South Carolina; indeed, he claimed me as his spiritual father. To God alone be the glory! I first gave him license to preach and then carried a recommendation to the Conference for his admission on trial into the traveling connection. I would present no man as being absolutely perfect, but Malcolm McPherson professed sanctification and came as near being a perfect Christian and perfect gospel minister as I ever knew. He labored that year on the Holly Springs District with great acceptability and success. The next year he was appointed to the same work, but before the year closed the Master called for him to receive his hire and to occupy a more noble and exalted sphere of action than that of traversing the sandhills of North Mississippi."

In the organization of the Memphis Conference in 1840, which included North Mississippi, Dr. Travis became a member of that body and was stationed one year, 1841, in Somerville, Tenn. At the close of this year, on account of bodily afflicton, rheumatism, he was superannuated, which honorable relation he held the remainder of his life. He taught achool at intervals in Holly Springs, in Panola County, and in Grenada. In his autobiography he writes: "In 1849 we removed to Grenada and I took charge of the male school in that place, and had for three years a full and profitable school. I very frequently preached in Grenada. They provided me a high chair in the pulpit where I could sit and preach, the chair always remaining in the pulpit for my convenience. I also frequently preached in the country where on a certain occasion, preaching to a large and attentive congregation, I entirely forgot myself and atood about two hours. When I attempted to sit down after my sermon, I found that I could not, and called one of the brethren to help me down. From that time my ankle became affected with an ulcerous sore and I have had to preach sitting, up to this time." (April, 1856.)

In 1825 he bought a place and settled (then in Carroll county) about 8 miles west of Grenada, where he lived until his death on September 16, 1858. He was buried at Spring Hill church.

"Brother Travis was a gentleman of the olden school and a Christian of primitive experience and character. Possessed of fine natural abilities, a classical education, and elevating and expansive views of the pan of salvation, he was eminently prepared for usefulness in the Church of God. Hence, we find him filling with ability and usefulness some of the most important stations in the South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, and Memphis Conferences." Dr. and Mrs. James Cannon celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage at their home in Waynesville, N. C., on August 12. A large company of friends gathered at their residence to extend their congratulations and good wishes.

Dr. T. W. O'Kelley, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Raleigh, N. C., whose election to the presidency of Mercer College at Macon, Ga., was mentioned in the Advocate last week, has declined the new position tendered him, preferring to continue his pastoral work.

During the ninety years of Unitarianism that denomination has only doubled its original number of congregations, and within the last decade its membership has only increased two per cent, while the average increase of other Churches has been about sixty per cent.—Midland Methodist.

The proceedings of the late General Missionary Conference at Waynesville, N. C., including all the addresses made before the body, were taken down stenographically and will be published in book form at an early date. The price of the forthcoming volume is $1.

Brown University (Rhode Island), a Baptist institution, has set aside $225.000 as a fund for pensioning its teachers. If we remember correctly, Justice Charles E. Rev. T. H. Haden, D. D., and family, after two years in the United States, have sailed for Japan, where Dr. Haden is one of the leading missionaries of our Church. His stay in America was in the interest of the Christian University for Japan, and the Pacific Methodist Advocate states that his efforts in its behalf were very successful.

It is stated that the new Westminster Central Hall in London—the great center of Wesleyan Methodism—will have upon its walls portraits of prominent representatives of Methodism the world over. Miss Belle Bennett is said to have had her heart long set on establishing a farm for the instruction and training of Negro boys. At the recent missionary conference at Waynesville, N. There are 220 charges in the Texas Conference in which every official member subscribes to the Texas Christian Advocate. This is a good showing compared with the state of things throughout the Church, but as a matter of fact, this ought to be true of every pastoral charge in Southern Methodism. An official who does not take and read his church paper is a poor example to the rest of the flock.

A GOOD TIME AT DEASONVILLE, AND ELSE.

I was pastor at Deasonville for three years, more than twenty years ago. I had not been there since I left in December, 1891; so when Brother J. B. King 'phoned me to come and help him in a meeting, I readily accepted the invitation, and in less than twenty-four hours I was in the pulpit at New Hope Church. It was a treat to me to visit the place where so many were converted and joined the Church long years ago. I spent five days, preaching twice a day, except on one day, to large congregations. We had a glorious meeting. It did me good; it helped the pastor, and was a blessing to the people. The weather was warm, but otherwise all we could have desired.

In the afternoon on Wednesday we had an experience meeting which gave all who wished to do so an opportunity to tell what the meeting had been to them. A large number, consisting of men, women and children, told what a blessing the services had been to them. It was good to be there. Brother King has his work well in hand; he is doing a fine work. By the way, Brother King joined the Church under my ministry 34 years ago. Now he is successfully telling the "Story of the Cross."

A good Baptist brother, Mr. J. J. McGraw, took Brothers King, Bruce, Pepper and myself out riding in his car one afternoon, giving us a 20-mile ride. Also Dr. Harton Frezell took several of us to Brother Hardy Swayzee's. It was a treat to me to get in Brother and Sister Swayzee's home once more. I was their pastor three years. Brother and Sister Swayzee and their daughter, Miss Josephine, are among the best people in Yazoo County. Take the Advocate? Yes; all true Methodists read their church paper and have their babies, if they have any, baptized.

So many have passed over the river since I was in this community—the Ellisons, Kings, Peppers, Bristers, and others. We shall see each other again in the "sweet by and by." H. P. LEWIS.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

Shreveport, where the college is located, is the most enterprising and rapidly growing city between Atlanta and Dallas. Prohibition has been enforced for a number of years and there has been a steady rise in moral sentiment. The city is blessed with an aggressive church life. The First Methodist Church is completing a building which, with its furnishings, will cost $125,000. The great Sunday school, with its splendid equipment, organization, consecrated officers and teachers, will be attractive to young men and boys.

The college is beautifully located in a high-class suburban section, with natural gas for heating, lighting and cooking and other advantages of the city, at the same time quiet, close to nature, and favorable to study. Faithful men will take personal interest in the boys committed to their care, seeking to discipline their minds and to inspire true Christian manhood. Athletics will be encouraged in such a way as to promote a healthful college spirit, and regulated so as to aid rather than hinder study.

Students who board in the dormitory will have the refining presence of a number of Christian women, including the matron, a lady teacher in the fitting school, and the professors' wives. For any who prefer it, private boarding can be secured at a reasonable rate in refined homes in the college neighborhood.

Students who are prepared for seventh grade work in public schools will be admitted to the fitting school, exception to this being made in case of the older students who are backward through no fault of their own. The curriculum of the preparatory department of the college is fully up to required standards, and courses will be thorough.

On Wednesday, September 17th, Centenary will enter upon its seventy-fifth year, dating from 1839, when Centenary offerings were taken in Mississippi for establishing a college. It has had a history that can compare favorably with any school in the South. Let Louisiana Methodism rally anew to its support and let all unite to make 1913-14 an eventful session, closing with a diamond jubilee.

If you have a boy to educate, send him to Centenary. Engage a room at once. If you have no boy to send, send a check to swell the Loan Fund.

NOTES FROM GRENADA COLLEGE.

Dear Dr. Meek:

On taking charge of Grenada College three years ago, I at once saw that its greatest need was the improvement of physical conditions, that it might be attractive and comfortable for students. It had two good brick buildings, but they lacked much of being up to my ideals and I set to work to improve and equip them as rapidly as I could in keeping with my contract with the Board of Trustees which forbade my running the school in debt. For three sessions we have had a patronage that paid the cost of board and tuition, leaving me free to use all the Conference collection and other funds, amounting to about $2800 per year, for equipment and improvements, at the same time giving the students one hundred cents on the dollar in good fare and competent instruction. If an unendowed school can make a better showing, I should like to learn how it may be done. We have now expended $10,000 for improvements and I have not broken the contract with the Board. Every living room in the buildings has been papered; a new set of hot-water furnaces has been installed, heating both buildings throughout by this method, and displacing smoky hot air furnaces in the annex; the unkempt campus has been graded, sodded, and made beautiful with shrubbery and flowers; excellent granite walks have been laid around and across the campus; a very fine collection of mineralogical, biological, and geological specimens has been added to the museum; a chemical laboratory has been installed; the dining room has been refinished and refurnished, being now a "thing of beauty"; the roofs have been repaired and painted; much new furniture has been purchased; the woodwork has been painted; many books have been added to the library—all without calling either upon the church or the people of Grenada for any special contribution. I thank God and take courage.

During the summer campaign I have had at the hands of our preachers and people most courteous and kindly treatment, though a few benighted persons still affect to think that Mississippi can not afford a good school and send to other States for education (?). I should like to tell such persons that the Magnolia State has at least four colleges for girls that are higher by two years than practically all the unendowed schools in the South, and to inform them further that endowed schools for girls do not have to canvass, or to employ agents at enormous salaries to persuade the unwary to patronize Pierian springs whose sole recommendation is "mountain air"—very much rarified air, at that. But distance makes enchantment easy—and illusion complete. I had started to say that our prospects are bright for all the boarding pupils we can accommodate, thanks to the appreciation of our preachers and people. We place but two girls in a room.

Our curriculum is up to "A Grade", but with the present size of the school, we do not need to employ as many teachers for the college department as our General Board of Education demands of "A" grade colleges. We must have another building and have room to grow. Practically no further advance is possible till we have this, and I feel that our people will see the need of doing something worthy for the education of our girls when the matter is properly presented to them. We have added one teacher since I came here, and will have an assistant added with the opening of the next session.

Our special departments deserve mention. We have five music teachers, three of them having been trained in Europe, the other two in leading American colleges. Their classes last year numbered 112. The art department was very fine last year, displaying more than 1000 pieces at the exhibit during Commencement. The same teacher returns. We had a large class in expression and the excellent work done in physical training, free to all students, doubtless contributed largely to our phenomenal health record.

Far best of all, our girls are religious, studious, well-behaved and loyal. Their success is shown by the fact that graduates under my administration are teaching in the high schools of Oxford, Okolona, Batesville, Corinth, Amory, Eupora, Maben, Baldwyn, and other such places. Calls came for more than we had ready to teach, but we shall grow. Watch us!

Governor Majors of Missouri recently issued a proclamation the key-note of which was, "Pull Missouri out of the mud." He set apart August 19 and 20 as "Good Roads' Days" and called for volunteers to devote their time and implements to hard work. It is reported that more than 2000 miles of good roads were built without costing the State a cent from her treasury.

A destructive storm swept over Manitoba, Canada, on August 16, which caused a $10,000,000 damage to wheat crops there. The drouth in the Middle West has caused ranchmen to hurry their cattle to market and sell them at a sacrifice. The apple crop of Missouri and Arkansas is said to be largely a failure, due to the dry weather. These things have wrought financial ruin in many sections, and doubtless during the next year higher prices for meat, flour, and fruit will prevail.

Major Julien Felix, an army aviator, was the pilot of the machine during the demonstration.

Southern colleges since 1900 have made a remarkable advancement, not only in entrance requirements but in libraries, laboratories, buildings and equipment, according to a statement of the United States Bureau of Education issued on Aug. 6. Miss Elizabeth Avery Coulton, secretary of the Southern Association of College Women, who reported on conditions, declared that in 1900 only three Southern colleges had standard requirements for entrance, while this year 160 institutions had adopted such standards.

The Dock Board of the city of New Orleans is not satisfied with the treatment the ship lines and railroads are according to cotton dealers and farmers in the way of warehouse privileges. The Board has prepared an ordinance, which has been approved by nearly all the leading cotton men, levying a bond issue of $5,000,000 for the purpose of constructing cotton warehouses. If the measure is finally adopted and the warehouses are built, there is little doubt but that New Orleans will take a long stride forward in her rank as a cotton port.

Some time ago Mexico failed to float a loan of $100,000,000 in France. The reason the French capitalists gave for refusing the loan was that the United States had not recognized the Huertan government. Recently Mexico was driven to the point of desperation for money, and offered to give a mortgage on the Mexican Government's Railroads as security for $27,500,000. This offer was promptly accepted by American financiers. With American financiers holding mortgages on the government utilities of Mexico, and the American Government refusing to recognize the present administration, it looks very much like the Republic to the South is not far from the rocks.

Infantile paralysis, which is generally believed to be a disease brought on by excessive heat, has again appeared in different parts of the United States. Warning has been sent out to physicians in those parts of the country where extreme heat has prevailed for the past two weeks, and advice has been given as to how to apply preventive measures to children threatened with this disease. Dr. Simon Flexner, a noted physician of New York, announced last March that he had discovered the exact cause of the disease, and the remedy that he has suggested, known as the Flexner Discovery, is recommended as the best treatment of it. While the disease may be contracted as the result of heat, it is also said to be transmitted by the stable fly. For his discovery during the past year of the danger from stable flies in carrying the infantile paralysis bacilli, Dr. M. J. Roseneau, of Boston, was awarded a gold medal.

MONTROSE COLLEGE NOTES.

President O'Neil has spent most of his vacation helping the brethren in meetings and canvassing for the school. He has met with encouragement in almost every community where he has been, and reports the outlook for the next session to be very flattering.

Some improvements are being made on the school building and grounds which will add to their attractiveness and to the comfort of the student body.

The next session of the school will open on Wednesday, September 3, with a sermon by Rev. C. W. Crisler, pastor of the Main Street Methodist Church of Hattiesburg, Miss. Brother Crisler's ability guarantees to all who may attend the opening an intellectual and a spiritual feast. Free entertainment will be given all who may come.

Respectfully,
P. L. BLACKWELL,
Secretary of Board of Trustees.

A GREAT REVIVAL AT NEW ALBANY, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: I am sure you are always glad to hear good news; so I will tell you about the wonderful revival meeting which has just been held in our town. It began on July 20 and lasted twenty-two days. Rev. Jno. B. Andrews, of Siloam Springs, Ark., did the preaching, and Brother L. C. Smith, a consecrated young man and an accomplished musician of Chicago, led the singing. He was assisted by Miss Foster, pianist and Miss Rubye Jane Andrews, violinist. The meeting began in the Methodist church but the crowds grew so large that it was deemed best to hold the services up town in a large hall which will seat 1500 people. The crowds kept on increasing until the building was about full, and the interest kept increasing until scores were converted at every night service.

Brother Andrews preaches the plain, simple gospel so simply and clear that a little child can comprehend. He does not believe in sensationalism, but he appeals to one's reason and intellect as well as to his heart. He also is anxious that his meeting shall leave lasting results, and I believe that this will be the case in our town. Some of the worst sinners here were reached, men who had resisted every appeal, gamblers, drunkards, and those who cared nothing for God or his Church. As a result of this three weeks' campaign, there were 204 conversions and reclamations; we have a cleaner and purer town; a young men's prayer meeting has been established, and plans are now being formed to establish a Y. M. C. A., which is very much needed.

Yesterday (August 17) was a great day in New Albany. At the Methodist church 45 members were received, ranging from middle-aged men down to ten-year old children. At the Baptist church on last night a thing occurred which I don't suppose ever happened before in Mississippi. Union services were held there, the sermon was preached by the Presbyterian pastor, after which 36 candidates were immersed by the Baptist pastor and two (who preferred this mode of baptism) were baptized in the same pool by the Methodist minister. Truly, this old world is growing less selfish, and denominational lines are fast decreasing. Everybody says this union revival meeting is the best ever held in New Albany. Last Wednesday night there were 127 present at our prayer meeting—some were there who had never been before. May all who have come out on the Lord's side be faithful until the end!

THE CHARGES AGAINST OUR BISHOPS.

It is interesting to study the charges which certain parties are vigorously pressing against our Bishops. To note how far afield from the issue some gentlemen of "trained intellects" will venture in search of support for their contentions and what motives some professing Christians do not hesitate to charge in public print for opposition to their schemes, is to gather phenomena for an unpleasant study in the possibilities of the human mind when it is the mere tool of strong desire.

The grave charges against our Bishops, as I see them, are:

1. They have BRAINS. While some gentlemen were endeavoring by adverbial and adjectival distentions to adjust their faculties to the necessary dimensions for the adequate comprehension and appreciation of that marvelous million, our Bishops easily discerned and promptly pointed out the fatal hook within the alluring bait. To those whose mouths were watering and whose perceptions were dim this seemed an absurd and unpardonable crime.

2. They have SELF-RESPECT. The gift (granting it to be so) accompanied by an insult to their Church and its history is scorned. The instincts of a gentleman dominate them.

3. They have COURAGE. Though they well knew what a wasps' nest they were stirring up they did not hesitate to state their convictions and do what they clearly saw to be their duty.

4. They are capable of righteous INDIGNATION. When their Church is insulted and solicited to abandon a trust and desert a sacred field of labor, they express their disapproval in terms which show how their virtuous souls revolt at the proposal and how impossible for them is any thought of compromise.

On these charges I am ready to bring in a verdict of "Guilty," and to thank God they are true. The Church has every reason to congratulate herself that her leaders are men of such mind and soul.

The pity is that some of those who have been entrusted with the administration of one of her greatest institutions lack capacity to appreciate these high motives and to applaud this fidelity.

VOCATION DAY INDORSED.

Dr. Chappell, the Sunday School Editor, and Dr. Rawlings, the Educational Secretary of the Board of Missions, have kindly agreed to set apart the fourth Sunday in September as Vocation Day. The lesson material for the Day will be provided by Professor J. L. Cuninggim, Superintendent of the Department of Ministerial Supply and Training of the Board of Education. Back of the movement for a Vocation Day in our churches and Sunday schools, therefore, are the three connectional Boards; namely, the Sunday School Board, the Board of Missions, and the Board of Education.

As Professor Cuninggim has shown, the important reasons for the observance of such a day are: (1) The need for an increase of Christian workers, both lay and clerical, for both the home and foreign field; and (2) the very great need to lay skillful hands upon our prospective Christian workers while they are yet in their youth, that they may be properly trained and fitted for the best possible service in God's kingdom. We have depended in the past too much upon mere haphazard in the matter of the supply and training of our ministers and Christian workers. Vocation Day is undoubtedly a move in the right direction.

It is devoutly to be hoped that our people will everywhere co-operate with the superintendents and teachers of the Sunday schools and with the pastors of our churches to make the first Vocation Day indeed a great day. Other churches are using Vocation Day with good results, and so may we. STONEWALL ANDERSON.

BROTHER BINGHAM ANSWERED.

Dear Dr. Meek: I did not intend in my communication to the Advocate some weeks ago on the Vanderbilt question to provoke a controversy, and Brother J. R. Bingham is the last man I would like to "spute" with. I have neither time nor inclination for such things; and just a few words in reply will satisfy me. In writing that communication I was doing what I felt was my duty to the great Church that I have loved and given the best of these forty years and more; and I felt it was due you as a member of the same Annual Conference to endorse publicly the brilliant and effective defense you have made of the Church's side in this regrettable controversy.

Yes, indeed, the Bishops are "ensamples to the flock," and they have proved themselves worthy of being followed even by the majority of the Vanderbilt Board, and that they have not been is one of the great surprises to me. I am like an old brother who lived at the door of a church not his own. He would go five miles away to hear the Methodist minister preach. The pastor of the near-by church on one occasion said, "Brother Smith, why is it you leave me here at your door and go five miles away to hear the Methodist brother?" He said, "Ah, my brother, when the Methodists bark there is something up the tree," and the Bishops sure have some big game up a tree.

I am surprised and cannot but wonder what has come over Brother Bingham, whom I have loved and looked upon these years as a true and loyal Methodist, that he should have spoken disparagingly of the Bishops, and have come to openly oppose the Church. The place he holds on the Board is not by the authority of the Church, but against her expressed will as defined in words easy to be understood. I think Bishops Murrah and Lambuth did just what every loyal Methodist should have done when they refused to serve on that Board against the will of the Church.

My long-time friend ought to know that this is not a question as to what Bishop McTyeire, Chancellor Garland, and Bishop Wilson did or would do now, but what the Charter of the University says. It does not say that the Board of Trustees is self-perpetuating, and we challenge him and the majority who are acting with him to show it. As a matter of fact, it has never been such. Brother Bingham knows and that Board knows that the very gentlemen named in the Charter itself immediately resigned and were elected by their several Annual Conferences. May I ask, did Bishop McTyeire, Chancellor Garland, and Bishop Wilson ever vote against a proposition like the famous Bradfield resolution which affirmed the ownership of the Church? Has not Bishop Wilson told that Board what he thought of their piratical course in terms they will not soon forget? As to Bishop McTyeire and Chancellor Garland, is there a living man who can reasonably doubt their loyalty to the Church under conditions now existing?

But does my brother really wish to know if I would include these worthy and ever-to-be-honored men in my condemnation? If they were here, and should vote with the majority of the Vanderbilt Board in their various actions to throw off the authority of the Church, they would receive the same unmeasured condemnation from me that it has. If every Bishop in Southern Methodism to-day were with the majority of that Board they would not overawe me. I am as little afraid of Bishops as Brother Bingham seems to be; but I have respect for official position anywhere, and nowhere more than in the Church of God. However, high position does not entitle even a Chancellor to more consideration than I claim for myself.

POSITION WANTED.

Experienced man teacher, with college training, wants school work for the coming session. Address "R," this office.

"WORK DAY" FOR THE LOUISIANA METHODIST ORPHANAGE.

In accordance with our annual custom, and in harmony with the Conference resolution, we are asking all the Methodist congregations and Sunday schools of the Louisiana Conference to set apart Saturday, October 11, as "Work Day" for the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.

It is hoped that every member of the Methodist Church in the State of Louisiana will contribute the proceeds of this day's labor to the Orphanage. We hope to have every child in our Methodist Sunday schools to find something to do, and to make as much as he possibly can on that day and give it to the Orphanage. We are urging the superintendents of our Sunday schools to call together their teachers, and by class organizations have all the pupils of the Sunday schools make what they can and bring it with them on Sunday, October 12th—"Harvest Day"—and give in what they have made, or what they desire to contribute to the Orphanage. We are also urging our preachers to present this cause to our congregations on that Sunday and ask for contributions for the Orphanage.

We hope, in this way, to give every member of the Methodist Church and of our Methodist Sunday schools, a chance to help in this great and worthy enterprise. If we can thus secure the united effort of our preachers, Sunday school superintendents, teachers, and other church workers, we confidently believe that we can raise $5000 or $6000 for our Orphanage. If this can be done, the full assessment for the Orphanage will be secured, and with what help we can receive from friends to our cause outside of the Church, we will be enabled to care for the nearly eighty children already in the Home, provide for others that need to come, pay the deficit of two months' arrears now staring us in the face, meet our note of $2,000 due January 1, 1914, and soon place our Orphanage on a firm, durable financial basis.

Fix the date in your minds; begin to plan for it; talk about it among the children in the Sunday schools and in the homes, and let every loyal Methodist in the State of Louisiana make Saturday, October 11th, the most profitable "Work Day" we have ever had.

In behalf of the homeless and destitute children of our State, I am

Your faithful servant,
ROBT. W. VAUGHAN,
Supt. of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.

"GOD BLESS MY MOTHER!"

A little child with flaxen hair,
And sunlit eyes so sweet and fair,
Who kneels when twilight darkens all,
And from those loving lips there fall
The accents of this simple prayer:
"God bless—God bless my mother!"

A youth upon life's threshold wide,
Who leaves a gentle mother's side,
Yet keeps enshrined within his breast
Her words of warning—still the best;
And whispers when temptation tries:
"God bless—God bless my mother!"

A white-haired man who gazes back
Along life's weary, furrowed track,
And sees one face—an angel now!—
Hears words of light that led aright,
And prays with reverential brow:
"God bless—God bless my mother!"

THE STORY OF EDISON AND HIS MOTHER.

"I was always a careless boy," says Thomas Edison, in his autobiography; "and with a mother of different mental caliber, I should probably have turned out badly. But her firmness, her sweetness, her goodness were potent powers to keep me in the right path. I remember I used never to be able to get along at school. I don't know what it was, but I was always at the foot of the class. I used to feel that the teachers never sympathized with me, and that my father thought I was stupid, and at last I almost decided that I must really be a dunce. My mother was always kind, always sympathetic, and she never misunderstood or misjudged me. But I was afraid to tell her all my difficulties at school for fear that she, too, might lose her confidence in me.

"One day I overheard the teacher tell the inspector that I was 'addled,' and it would not be worth while keeping me in school any longer. I was so hurt by his last straw that I burst out crying, and went and told my mother about it. Then I found out what a good mother was. She came out as my strong defender.

"Mother love was aroused; mother pride was wounded to the quick. She brought me back to the school and angrily told the teacher that he didn't know what he was talking about. In fact, she was the most enthusiastic champion a boy ever had, and I determined right then that I would be worthy of her and show her that her confidence was not misplaced.

"My mother was the making of me. She was so true; and I felt that I had some one to live for, some one I must not disappoint. The memory of her will always be a blessing to me."

GREEDY TOMMIE TOBEY.

Nobody in the Tobey family liked to have company. It wasn't because they were mean and stingy, either, for all the Tobeys, big and little, just loved to make other people happy and comfortable. No, it was because Tommie Tobey had such dreadful table manners. All his brothers and sisters blushed rosy red for shame when anyone came to dinner.

One day a carriage, drawn by two splendid black horses, stopped before the Tobey cottage, and Great-Aunt Sarah Stickney Stevens hobbled out. Mother had to hustle around and get dinner. She was so busy that she quite forgot to whisper to Tommie about being greedy. Poor Tom lost all his manners when he saw the good things on the table. He ate his chicken with his fingers, he gobbled up his ice cream, and worst of all he leaned over and snatched a piece of chocolate cake just as Aunt Sarah was going to take it.

Aunt Sarah Stickney Stevens was very much shocked indeed, and smiled a most dreadful smile. When she was leaving, she said: "Tomorrow, young man, I'll send you a new brother, and you must let him eat with you every day."

"Thank you, Aunt Sarah," said Tom politely. Aunt Sarah looked at his greasy hands and at his face, which was dotted with currant jelly and chocolate ice cream, and smiled again. Then she went away, and all the Tobeys tried to tell Tom how ashamed they were of him.

"Huh!" said Tom, puffing himself out like a fat little pigeon. "Aunt Sarah is all right. She isn't going to send the rest of you anything, is she?"

All the little Tobeys looked at each other and wondered why Aunt Sarah Stickney Stevens had liked such a greedy boy. The next day, when the Tobeys were at dinner, Tom's present came. He jumped up and down with delight. He broke the string, threw it on the floor, tore open the brown wrappings and threw them on the floor; and when he saw Aunt Sarah's present inside he grew very red, and was going to throw that on the floor, too, but father reached over and took it. "What did the mean old thing want to send me that for?" snarled Tom. All the Tobeys crowded around to look at it. It was a pig, a big plaster pig. In its mouth was a card, which said: "I've come to eat with you, Brother Tom. Put me beside your plate."

"Aunt Sarah is a wise woman," said father, and leaned over and put the pig down beside Tom's plate. "There, my son, we'll let him stay there until you learn to eat like a gentleman."

Tom cried and screamed and screamed and cried and didn't eat any dinner, but the pig stayed there. For three long weeks he stood guard over Tom's plate—breakfasts, dinners, and suppers. Every time Tom was greedy, father pushed the pig nearer Tom's plate. How Tom hated that pig! He hated him worse every day. Who could take any comfort eating while a pig was watching him? He began to eat slowly and take small mouthfuls and let the other children be served first. One morning when the Tobeys came to breakfast the pig was gone. He never came back.

Aunt Sarah Stickney Stevens says Tom has the best table manners of all the Tobeys, and gave him a silver dollar the last time she came to dinner.—Mary Davis, in Christian Register.

THE UNEXPECTED WILL SOMETIMES HAPPEN.

The date of the beginning of the Magee revival meeting was unknown to anyone to within less than two days of the time the meeting started. Some of our best members had planned to go on journeys, others were not at all prepared for a revival meeting, and many more were fatigued because of having attended a Baptist meeting. Many thought I should be advised not to start the meeting, but none cared to advise me. Many said, "I am with Brother Phillips, for he has been praying all night and claims that he has orders from on high to begin, and in answer to prayer he has in a very remarkable way secured desirable help. We had better stand by him."

Doctrines, dangerously false, had been preached to the people of Magee. It had been stated in substance time and again that when a man accepts Christ as his Savior, his past, present, and future sins are all forgiven. It is further reported by some of the best people of Magee that the preacher said that if he were to now kill a man, that crime would at once be wiped off from against him without his repentance, it having been in fact forgiven two thousand years ago. Such doctrines were preached by him for four or five days, twice a day. He even dared to say that after God once forgives a sinner, Christ having paid the debt of sin, he would be unjust to require a further settlement on the part of the sinner, and that therefore the sinner is blameless, no matter what he may do. I'll confess that I was just a little nervous, and that I could not sleep well until that doctrine was soundly rebuked.

I called the meeting, and every member of the Methodist Church in Magee, so far as I am able to recall them, living in town and able to attend, was in his place at the first service and remained there until the last one was held. There was not a word of complaint from any one. I never knew of a church that stood by its pastor better than did ours at Magee.

Brother O. B. Culpepper reached us on the fifth day of the meeting, and I gladly turned things over to him. Some of my people said that what I had preached was just enough of its kind, and another similar sermon might do harm. Brother Culpepper is certainly a good evangelist. He reminds me of a mother spanking her baby all over before it has time to cry, and then just loving it "to death" because it does cry. He can do more in less time than any evangelist that I have known.

The meeting was a success in every way. We received a class of 21 into the Church by vows, 14 of whom were baptized. Some four or five gave their names for membership in the Baptist Church, and two joined the Presbyterian Church.

Soon after the Magee meeting we began a revival at Sharon's Grove, a little church four miles east of Magee. It was organized four years ago with a small membership, and at that time was overshadowed by other denominations. It was generally contended that our Church had no right to be in that community, and at first we were made to feel quite unwelcome. People said our church would go down, and many said that I would not get a member in the meeting that I was just starting. The promised helper did not come; so I began the meeting alone, the first service ending with an altar service in which all took part and some led in prayer for the first time in their lives.

From the beginning to the close of the meeting the power of God was made manifest. Methodists, Baptists, and Presbyterians took part and were blessed. Some of the hardest sinners in the country were converted. One old man walked four miles to attend the meeting and was present at nearly every service. We received 18 into the Church, 14 of whom came in by baptism. We also baptized 13 infants. Others have promised to unite with our Church at my next appointment, among whom are a Baptist preacher and his wife. He is a man of promise, and is fully committed to our doctrines. He desired to withdraw from the Baptist Church in a proper manner before uniting with ours.

THE TRIUMPHANT MARCH OF PROHIBITION.

Despite the fact that there are so many who attempt to decry and depreciate it, prohibition has made vast progress in the United States and has accomplished much for the welfare of the American people. In an interesting summary of the situation in the various States relative to the legalized sale of intoxicants, which appeared in a late number of the Review of Reviews, Rev. Ferdinand Cowle Iglehart says:

"The saloon has been expelled from one-half of the population and two-thirds of the geographical area of the country. In 1868 there were 3,500,000 people living where the drink traffic had been outlawed; in 1900 the number had increased to 18,000,000; in 1908—during the short time of only eight years—the number had doubled to 36,000,000; and to-day there are 46,029,750 persons, a fraction over half of the population of the country, living in no-license territory."

The following are the States where prohibition is in force: Georgia, Kansas, Maine, Mississippi, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Tennessee, and West Virginia (to take effect in 1914). Besides these, in the following commonwealths from 50 to 85 per cent of the people reside in "dry" territory: Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Vermont, and Virginia. Of all parts of the Union, the South leads both in the sobriety of its citizenship and the extent to which the sale of liquor has been suppressed. Dr. Atticus Webb estimates that the annual drink bill of its 28,000,000 people is $150,000,000, while that of the 4,700,000 of New York City foots up fully that much, and according to some calculations, considerably more. The New Yorkers drink about six times as much as the Southerners per capita. One-third of the nation's whole population live in the South, and they use about one-twelfth of the country's consumption of intoxicating berevages.

The old and much-used fallacy that prohibition tends to destroy the business prosperity of towns and cities is clashing with the stern logic of facts and receiving some pretty hard blows in these days. Touching upon this point and also upon the question of the effect of the no-saloon regime upon the amount of drinking to excess, the Wesleyan Christian Advocate says:

"The prohibition law has not ruined business in Atlanta. In 1907 the building permits of the city were $4,554,771; in 1912 they were $9,978,444. In 1907 the property valuations amounted to $91,840,350; in 1912, the figures had gone to $154,827,487. In 1907 the arrests for drunkenness numbered 6,480; in 1912, 3,021. In 1907 the tax receipts were $1,234,660; in 1912 they had reached the huge sum of $2,059,787. Bank clearings also show a big gain. In 1907 these amounted to $254,965,800; in 1912 they had reached to $691,941,254. Two facts are demonstrated by these figures: First, prohibition does not increase drunkenness, and second, prohibition does not ruin the business of even as big a city as is Atlanta."

A TAXING AND UNNECESSARY DRUDGERY.

Mr. Joe Cook, President of the Mississippi State Normal College, at Hattiesburg, recently made quite a hit in his discussion of the water supply problem in the average country home. What he had to say on this subject was printed as a special bulletin of the United States Bureau of Education and scattered all over the land. Among other things, Mr. Cook said:

"The getting of the water from the source of supply to the point of application requires more manual labor than any other item of housekeeping. The water for the kitchen has to be lifted from the well, carried to the kitchen, poured into a kettle, poured out of the kettle into the dish-pan, and from the dish-pan out of doors. This makes six times the water is handled; and a bucket of water containing two gallons, with the containing vessel, will weigh twenty pounds. When this is handled six times, the total lifting is 120 pounds. The cooking of three meals a day on a meager allowance of water will necessitate ten buckets, which will make for cooking alone 1,200 pounds of lifting per day. When to this is added the water necessary for bathing, scrubbing and the weekly wash, it will easily bring the lift per day up to a ton; and the lifting of a ton a day will take the elasticity out of a woman's step, the bloom out of her cheek, and the enjoyment from her soul."

All this drudgery, says Professor Cook, could be obviated by an outlay of $250, even on the most isolated farm, through the installation of a pumping system.

We are not an authority concerning the matter of a water supply in the farmhouse or anywhere else, but we are in most hearty sympathy with any undertaking that has for its object the lessening of the burdens borne by the mothers and daughters of the nation. In view of the fact that the home is perhaps to be occupied for life and that it is so large a factor in the welfare and happiness of the family, we think everything that is possible ought to be done to make it comfortable, convenient, and attractive. Far too many people live for long years as if they were camping out. Fathers can do no wiser thing than to invest their spare money in improving their residences and making them worthy in every respect of the loved ones whom they shelter. The helpful influence of a well arranged and well kept dwelling is beyond computation.

PROGRESS OF THE NEGRO RACE.

If there be those who think that the Negroes are making no intellectual and material advancement in the United States, they are very much mistaken. Such a question cannot be determined by brief superficial observation, restricted to a limited area. The status of the colored people in all parts of the country must be considered, and their present condition compared with what it was in former decades, before an intelligent conclusion concerning the matter can be reached. The Negro Year Book, recently issued, gives the following figures bearing on this subject, which will doubtless be read by many with interest:

"Fifty years ago the Negroes owned only a few thousand dollars worth of church property; now their church buildings are valued at $57,000,000. In 1867 there were 1800 schools for freedmen, with 2000 teachers and 110,000 pupils; last year there were 1,700,000 Negro children in Southern common schools and 100,000 in normal schools and colleges, with 34,000 teachers. Fifty years ago virtually all Negroes were farm hands, and few owned their farms; now, while agriculture is still the predominant occupation, there are Negroes in every line of work, and 900,000 farms are operated by them. They own more land than is embraced in the State of South Carolina. Thirty-six thousand Negroes are engaged in business; they own 64 banks, capitalized at $1,600,000. No other emancipated people have made so great progress in so short a time. The Russian serfs were emancipated in 1861; fifty years afterwards it was found that 14,000,000 of them had accumulated about $500,000,000 worth of property, an average of about $36 per capita, or $200 to the family, and that about 30 per cent of them were able to read and write. In fifty years the 10,000,000 Negroes of the United States have accumulated over $700,000,000 worth of property, about $70 per capita, or an average of $350 to the family; and 70 per cent of them have some education in books."

These statements are certainly striking and suggestive, and they constitute a factor which cannot be ignored by students of the race problem in the American Republic.

WARFARE AGAINST THE CIGARETTE.

It is stated that the use of cigarettes in Germany has within recent years been growing by leaps and bounds. In 1897 1,900,000,000 cigarettes were manufactured in the Empire; this year it is stated that the number made will reach the enormous total of 12,400,000,000—six times as many as were made sixteen years ago. Dr. Herman Von Weylbach declares that the cigarette habit is seriously hurting the German people both physically and morally. He says: "Where we find confirmed cigarette smoking, we immediately begin to discover increasing insanity. The cigarette smoker cannot think clearly; whatever he plans to do is marked with uncertainty of action. His thoughts instead of being elevated are low and growing lower. His capacity for physical endurance diminishes."

In view of the foregoing facts, it is not surprising that the German Government, led by Emperor William, has decided to wage a vigorous and persistent warfare aginst this pernicious and widespread evil. And in this respect our own Federal and State Governments might well imitate the example of the Kaiser and his coadjutors.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Among those who have lately been forwarding names for our subscription files is Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, of Forest, Miss. Thanks for your good work, brother!

We are grateful to Rev. D. C. Bennett, of the Merryville (La.) charge, for some excellent work recently done for the Advocate. The work is going successfully forward in his field.

Mr. J. B. Streater, of Black Hawk, Miss., is now in Petoskey, Mich., where he goes in the late summer every year to escape hay fever. North Mississippi Methodism has no choicer layman than Brother Streater.

Dr. Thaddeus P. Bell, of this city, called at our office on Friday of last week, and, in our absence, left his card on our desk. We are sorry to have missed this esteemed physician and genial Christian gentleman.

Whitworth College will lend assistance to two young ministers who desire an education and have not the money to secure it. Work which will not interfere with their studies will pay for their board. Write at once to Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss.

Rev. M. F. Adams, of Lorman, Miss., sends us the following note: "On last Wednesday (the 20th inst.) we closed our meeting at Grand Cane. Great interest was taken; the attendance was good, especially at night, and the services were very helpful. Brother Watkins' sermons were inspiring and uplifting."

Rev. J. A. Wells, of Topisaw, Miss., reports that the work in his charge is making good progress and that the outlook is most encouraging. His third quarterly conference, held on the 16th inst., was an occasion of much interest. We are indebted to Brother Wells for some subscriptions to the Advocate, sent in a few days since.

Rev. A. W. Turner, Superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, requests us to state that there will be a Workers' Conference of the Friends of Temperance in the office of the Anti-Saloon League, over the First National Bank in Shreveport, on September 1, at 2 o'clock p. m. All persons interested in the work are invited to be present.

Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Superintendent of the Louisiana Orphanage, requests us to state that after September 1 all communications to him should be addressed to Ruston, La. Read Brother Vaughan's announcement of "Work Day," which appears on another page. It is to be earnestly hoped that all the Methodists of the State will cooperate in making this occasion count for the utmost that is possible.

Rev. W. D. Bass, of Corinth, under date of August 22, sent us the following note: "I am just home from the Longtown Circuit, where I conducted a great revival for Rev. J. A. Biffle and his people. There were about 200 conversions and reclamations. If some other circuit pastors would follow Brother Biffle's wise example and unite two or more of their churches in a revival, I should be pleased to make engagements to conduct two more such meetings in September and October. I begin with Brother Martin at Woodland, Miss., on the fourth Sunday in this month."

We reproduce the following Jackson (Miss.) dispatch to the Times-Democrat: "Rev. W. M. Williams, Superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage near this city, states that he has purchased the old Garland place of nearly 200 acres, which he will convert into a training farm for boys of his institution. There are 200 children being taken care of at this Orphanage, and the plan is to have the boys make crops sufficient to furnish food for all, and at the same time learn how to be independent when they go out into the world." Brother Williams is a remarkably fine manager, and we predict that under his guiding hand this venture will prove to be a great success.

President J. R. Countiss, of Grenada College, writes that the prospect is flattering for a fine opening of that excellent institution. This is as it should be. The Methodists of North Mississippi can find no better place than Grenada for their daughters, search where they may. Information has reached us that "educational poachers" have been unusually active in the northern half of the Magnolia State this summer. It is most regrettable that our people should for one moment lend a listening ear to the siren songs of such canvassers. The fact that the representatives of a school have to leave its legitimate territory and adopt "cut-throat" methods to get pupils is enough in itself to discredit the character of its work. The better class of institutions do not have to resort to such tactics.

Every pastor in Louisiana and Mississippi ought to give us a list of trial subscribers under the generous offer that the Publisher is now making. How about you, brother—have you sent yours in?

According to a press dispatch from Fernwood, Miss., to the New Orleans Picayune, Rev. W. B. Hogg, the pastor, began a revival meeting there on Thursday, August 21. He is being assisted by Rev. W. W. Holmes, of Ruston, La.

We are informed that Mr. J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton, Miss., who some time since was operated on for appendicitis, is improving, but that he is still confined to his bed. We trust that he will soon begin to mend much more rapidly.

For the first time in two months, every Methodist pulpit in New Orleans will be occupied next Sunday by its regular pastor. Brothers Sutton, Brown, Battle, Snelling, and Singleton, all of whom have been away, have either already returned to the city or will do so by that time.

The managers of the Memphis Tri-State Fair have decided to do away with "Pastor" Russell and the Sunday opening. But they didn't retreat very gracefully. Moreover, they gave Mr. Russell an immense amount of free advertising. In our humble opinion, this fair urgently needs some new directors.

Rev. T. V. Peters, who serves the St. Tammany (La.) charge, sent us a club of 9 six months' subscriptions on the 18th inst., for which we extend him our thanks. Brother Peters has a large field, which is developing wonderfully in response to his energetic efforts. We doubt if any peacher in Louisiana is doing a better work than he is.

Word received from Baker, La., where Rev. C. A. Battle is assisting the pastor, Rev. S. D. Howard, in a revival meeting, is to the effect that large congregations are hearing some excellent sermons. The statement that Brother Battle is preaching instructive and inspiring sermons at Baker is no surprise to those who have heard him.

Rev. W. E. Dickens, of Meehan, Miss., has recently brought us under obligations to him for a club of subscribers. We regret to be informed that Sister Dickens has been ill a great deal during the present year, and that she is now confined to her bed. Brother Dickens requests the brethren to remember his family in their prayers.

Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, of Columbia, Miss., continues to present the claims of the Advocate to his people with gratifying success. He favored us with an additional club of subscribers last week. Manifestly when he starts a good work he has the commendable gift of not stopping too soon. Perhaps this accounts in some measure for his habit of achieving results where he labors.

We acknowledge our indebtedness to Dr J. W. Price of Clarksdale, Miss., who serves the Tutwiler charge, for a club of trial subscriptions, sent in a few days ago. Dr. Price is one of the veterans of the North Mississippi Conference, and no minister in the Mississippi Delta is more generally loved than is he. He has done much to make Methodism what it is in that fertile section.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, of Ruston, La., was in New Orleans on Wednesday, Aug. 20, and paid our office an appreciated call. He brought with him a nice list of trial subscriptions to the Advocate, which pleased the Publisher. Brother Holmes was enthusiastic over the outlook for the work in his charge, which is universally conceded to be one of the most inviting in the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. R. A. Ellis, of Yazoo City, whose recently issued book, entitled "A Treatise on Sin and Depravity" was briefly reviewed in the Advocate last week, calls our attention to an error which we made in stating that the volume may be purchased of Smith & Lamar, at Nashville, or Dallas. It is being sold only by the author, at Yazoo City, and by Rev. G. W. Bachman, of Winona, Miss.

Rev. T. A. Ferguson, of Summerland, Miss., has just closed a revival of unusual power at that place, in which he had the assistance of Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of Mendenhall, Miss. The church received a great spiritual uplift and there were ten accessions to its membership. The people affirm that it was the best meeting held in that community for many years. The pastor is reported to be doing a fine work, and he is highly esteemed by his flock.

Rev. H. Armstrong writes as follows from Shreveport, La.: "Through the kindness of Sisters Bliss and Wynn, and other Methodist ladies here, I now have a room to myself in the Schumpert Sanitarium, where all is quiet. I am not suffering as I did at first, but am yet unnerved. I am having a number of visitors, and, best of all, God is with me." We are pleased to hear of the improvement in Brother Armstrong's condition, and we pray that he may soon completely recover.

Rev. Dan B. Kelley, who is one of the growing evangelists of the Church, sent us last week the following note, which reached us too late for the last issue of the Advocate: "I am now assisting Rev. A. M. Broadfoot in a revival, which is being held under a brush arbor twelve miles from Forest. God is honoring the work and souls are being saved at every service. It is easy to hold a revival with a man like Brother Broadfoot. He loves God and everybody, and everybody loves him."

In renewing her subscription to the Adocate Mrs. Senie Phillips of Coffeeville, Miss., speaks in terms of appreciation of her pastor, Rev. W. V. Shearer. She says: "He is a hard worker, and preaches four times on some Sundays." This has been Brother Shearer's reputation ever since he has been in the itinerant ministry. We know of no higher compliment that can be paid a pastor than to say of him that he spends the full measure of his strength to promote the Master's cause.

Brother J. M. Miller, an esteemed laymen of Minden, La., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, takes time to commend the paper for its ardent loyalty to the Church in the Vanderbilt controversy. There is no doubt where the vast majority of the people stand on that issue. We do not feel that we have done any more than our duty, but nevertheless we appreciate the many expressions of approval that we have received from the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi.

We clip the following from a recent issue of the Texas Christian Advocate: "En route to the State Epworth League encampment at Corpus Christi, Dr. F. S. Parker spoke in Houston, delivering a great address for the people of the First Methodist Church on the subject, 'The Leadership of the Epworth League.' Dr. Parker is one of the most distinguished officials in the Methodist Church. He is a son of the late Bishop Linus Parker, of New Orleans, and is known throughout the South as an editor and preacher."

The Oxford Eagle of August 14 contained an interesting acount of the Oxford Camp Meeting which recently closed an eight days' series of services, under the direction of Rev. W. W. Mitchell and Rev. J. E. Stephens. The preaching was ably and effectively done by Rev. L. W. Cain, of Le, land, Miss. The writer in The Eagle says: "On the whole, the camp meeting was a glorious success. A number were converted, and all who put themselves under the influence of the services were blessed and encouraged in their Christian lives."

From a recent issue of the Lexington (Miss.) Advertiser, we take the following: "The contract for improving the Methodist church at this place was closed Monday with Mr. W. G. Googin, a contractor and builder of Durant, Miss. The improvements will cost $1700, and most of the money to cover this has been collected and placed in the bank. The subscriptions taken by Dr. H. G. Henderson some time ago were also to secure a new pipe organ, which will be purchased and installed as soon as the contractor has completed his work of enlarging and improving the church."

Rev. W. W. Perry, of Haynesville, La., who we stated last week had sent in 59 subscriptions to the Advocate since the Annual Conference, has added 4 more to the number, so that his list now stands at 63. We again make grateful acknowledgement to this stirring pastor for the fine service that he is rendering the Advocate, which we believe is also a help to the Church and the cause of Christ. When a people read their church paper they become more generally informed concerning the affairs of the Kingdom, and are not swept about by every wind of dictrine.

Mrs. Daisy McLaurin Stevens, of Brandon, Miss., spent some days in New Orleans recently. Mrs. Stevens, who is a daughter of the late Senator A. J. McLaurin of Mississippi, and the widow of the lamented Judge W. F. Stevens of the same commonwealth, is being prominently mentioned for the presidency of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, who will hold their annual meeting in this city next fall. She is a woman of remarkable brilliancy, and would undoubtedly grace the distinguished position with which her name is being connected, should she be elected to it.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of Mendenhall, Miss., in a note to our office, says: "The statement appearing in your "Personal Column" last week that a new church has been organized at Greendale, on the Hamburg charge, is misleading. The Pastor. Rev. W. H. Young, and I organized that church in July, 1912, and when the last Conference met the church building had been about completed under the faithful administration of Brother Young. Honor to whom honor is due." The "personal" referred to was gleaned from a Mississippi weekly paper. We regret to have been led into making this error.

In a personal note to the Editor, under date of August 20, Rev. H. M. Ellis, of Memphis, Tenn., says: "Brother J. A. Bowen, now of Birmingham, Ala., began a meeting at the Buntyn Church last Sunday morning. Monday he was too unwell to preach, and used me to chink the crevice; but he went on with the work Tuesday with every promise of success. The Washington Heights Church of this city is also holding a revival, with Rev. Burke Culpepper, a successful evangelist who lives here, in charge. Memphis is big enough for several revivals at one time, and, like other cities, she needs all that she can get."

On Tuesday, August 19, while alighting from a street car on Canal street in New Orleans, Rev. Frank Singleton was run down by another car and badly injured. His little child, which he was carrying in his arms, had his arm fractured. Brother Singleton was taken to the home of his brother, Rev. H. R. Singleton, where his injuries were treated. After being confined to his bed for five days, he is now able to be on the streets. Brother Singleton's injuries, according to his statement, were due to the carelessness of a street car employee, who failed to close the gate opening onto another track, and permitted him to step off the car directly in front of another car.

Rev. L. I. McCain, of Bogalusa, La., who is recuperating in the West, writes us as follows: 'My wife and I have been at Colorado Springs and Manitou for the past few weeks enjoying the vacation which our friends at Bogalusa gave us. We have met or seen several of our Southern Methodist preachers here, among them Dr. W. F. McMurry, of Louisville, Ky. The climate is not the only attraction here. The splendid scenery and excellent mineral water are also a great pleasure. We expect to return to Louisiana about September 10, and hope to be ready for work again by the middle of that month. Notwithstanding my three months' disability, I expect to have a good report at the Annual Conference."

Rev. C. C. Gibson requests us to state that the camp meeting at the Palmer Creek Camp Ground, which is within the bounds of the Coalville (Miss.) charge, will begin on September 26 and continue ten days. Those coming from a distance will find conveyances at Wortham, on the G. & S. I. Railroad, which is about two and a half miles from the Camp Ground. Brother Gibson makes the following statement concerning the work of his charge: "Our third quarterly conference, which was held August 16 and 17, was a very pleasant occasion. Our presiding elder, Dr. W. H. Huntley, was with us and gave us some very edifying sermons, and some most helpful talks on church history and church government. I was able to report 17 infants baptized and 69 members received, only one of which was by certificate."

Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, our pastor at West Monroe, La., writes: "Our Field Secretary, Rev. P. O. Lowrey, has just held a two days' institute at West Monroe. It was a success. There were delegates from seven churches in attendance. A Monroe delegate, who is a competent critic, said that this was the best institute that she had ever attended (she had been to some presided over by celebrities). It did my people much good. Brother Lowrey has grown within the last year, and is now doing most excellent work. It would be a great mistake for the Conference Sunday School Board to take him out of the field. But he cannot be maintained in the work by mere compliments and endorsements. Let the Sunday schools meet the pledges they made to Brother Holloman at Conference. A few phone messages will not meet the emergency again. Now is the time to act. At West Monroe we have held Children's Day and sent in the collection. We want to do our part."

A TENNESSEE FARMER'S COMMENT.

We take the following paragraph from Mr. Will T. Hale's recent article in the Banner: "The reference to the Bishops recalls the remark I overheard by a plain farmer who happened to be on the Glendale car quite a short time ago. It seems worth repeating. 'Well,' he said, 'a heap is said in the papers about the Carnegie gift an' the Bishops refusin' his money. Whether they air right or wrong, it's still comfortin' to know that they's ten men still left in the world that can't be stampeded when a milyun dollars is jingled in their faces. As fer Brother Hoss, ef I had a friend that was meditatin' an attack on him, I'd advise that friend to hesitate with great violence.' "—Nashville Christian Advocate.

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1913. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

Obituaries.

Miss JOSEPHINE MORRIS was born May 5, 1865, and died Aug. 15, 1913. Miss Josie joined the M. E. Church, South, at Jackson, Tenn., when just a girl in school, and upon returning home, put her church letter with the Methodists at Beuna Vista, Miss., where she continued in the faith till the death angel called her home. Miss Josie was a beautiful Christian character, and the patience with which she endured her sickness enabled her to be cheerful almost to the end. She died with that lingering disease, tuberculosis. She was confined to her bed the most of the year, but was patient and hopeful to the last. She passed out without a struggle. She went to sleep in Jesus to wake up in glory. Her dear old mother stayed close by her bedside all the while and ministered to her sufferings only as a loving mother could. God bless the dear old mother and the sister, Mrs. Charles Evans. Miss Josie is not dead, but sleepeth, and we shall see her again after while. We buried her in the Buena Vista cemetery. HER PASTOR.

Our sister, Mrs. BETTIE SHELBY OLIN, was called suddenly to her reward by our Heavenly Father on August 8, 1913, and the Woman's Missionary Society of Greenville, Miss., sustained the loss of one who has been a faithful and efficient member for many years, and whose charitable heart and Christian zeal endeared her to the whole community. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That her membership with us is held in sacred remembrance, and we pray that her influence and example may continue with us for our consecration and renewed spiritual interest.

2. That we offer our sincere sympathy to the family and to the bereaved circle of friends who loved her and who mourn their loss.

3. That these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy sent to the family, and one sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: Mrs. John G. Archer, Mrs. John Dunn, Mrs. J. D. Barbee.

Mr. W. C. HARVELL was born on May 14, 1835, and died at his home near Harvell's Mills, La., on Dec. 6, 1912. He moved to this section from Mississippi in 1855, and in 1858 he married Miss Elizabeth Self. They were blessed with eleven children, one of whom is Rev. W. H. Harvell, a member of the Louisiana Conference. He was again married to Miss Annie Smart in 1907, who, together with his two sisters—Mrs. Sallie Watson and Mrs. Sue Fletcher—nine children, and a host of friends, lives to mourn his loss. His life was one of activity. As a citizen he was always ready to stand on the right side and contend for it. He did a very extensive milling and furnishing business, and was also a successful farmer and stock raiser. I consider that he was a very broad man. He joined the M. E. Church, South, at Pipkin's Chapel, in 1862, in which church he lived until his death. His doors and purse were ever open to the preachers. His home was theirs during a part of, or all of, every revival meeting held at his church for the past sixty years. Oh! how we will miss him, but he has gone to his reward.

J. S. RUTLEGE.

Miss GEORGIE V. STEPHENSON, of Oak Ridge, Miss., was born Dec. 7, 1873, and died Aug. 2, 1913. Early in life she joined the M. E. Church, South, under the ministry of Rev. R. Bradley. But she said it was not until a year after her union with the Church that she became wholly converted. She received that happy experience at Bradley Chapel in a meeting conducted by Rev. W. Dominick. From this time until her soul winged its flight to the God who gave it, she had faithfully attended upon the ordinances of the Church, had taken delight in its communion, and had rejoiced in its prosperity. She was prompt and careful in the discharge of every duty, and has left a vacancy in the home that cannot be filled, and her community is robbed of that influence and power that came from her pure life. She was chaste in her speech and pure in her thoughts, and we feel that the words of her mouth and the meditations of her heart were acceptable in the sight of God. Earth is poorer, but heaven is richer. May the spirit of God cheer and comfort the bereaved ones and bring them safely to the home "not made with hands," eternal in the heavens.

ROBERT E. SELBY.

Miss ELLA FLORENCE MORRISON was born May 29, 1855, and died in her home at Gold Dust, La., July 29, 1913. She was converted and joined the Methodist Church in 1873, and remained a faithful member until death. She devoted her whole life to ministering to those with whom she lived, and those who knew her best never doubted her integrity, or sincerity in the faith that makes us more than conquerors. We mourn her death, but not as those who mourn without a hope, for we know when this life is ended, and we near the shore where the Sun of Righteousness reigns, where sorrow and grief are unknown, we shall see again the one that we learned to love so dearly here on earth. The home and community in which she lived is better to-day because of the savoring influence of the Christian life that she lived. Late in the afternoon of July 30, in the presence of a large crowd of friends and relatives, the funeral was conducted by the writer, and we laid her away to rest in the White's Chapel Cemetery. May God's love and richest blessing rest upon those whose hearts are sad because of her death, and may we so live that we may meet her in that house of many mansions.

Her pastor,
LOUIS HOFFPAUIR.

On Aug. 11, 1913, just as the evening sun was sinking, the death angel visited the home of Mrs. H. G. Turner and claimed the spirit of Mrs. FANNIE TERRELL WELLS. She was born July 2, 1866, near Auburn, Miss.; was converted when quite young, and at the Adams Camp Ground joined the M. E. Church, South, of which she was still a member at her death. A full consciousness of spirit-life filled her last hours. She had a cheerful and happy disposition and was a kind and loving mother and sister. After a few months of illness, she died from the much dreaded disease, pellagra. The faithful physicians, children and sisters ministered to her tenderly, but God called her home. She is gone from us, but we trust that she is in a fairer and better land where there is no trouble, sickness, or death. It was her request that Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr., should perform for her the last sad rites, but owing to his illness, he could not come; so her pastor, Rev. J. S. Parker, conducted the service, after which her remains were laid to rest under a beautiful collection of flowers, in the family cemetery two miles south of Auburn, in the presence of a large assembly of grief-stricken friends and relatives, to await the resurrection morn. She leaves her children, Dr. H. A. of Johnston; H. M., of McComb; H. B. and Gladys, of near Summit; also her sisters, Mrs. H. G. Turner and Mrs. C. W. Chisholm, of near Summit, to mourn their loss. 'Tis sad to say farewell, dear mother, but we hope to meet thee again. HER CHILDREN.

Tidings From the Field

Oloh, Miss.

We have recently held two meetings on the Oloh charge: One was at Baylis Chapel, where we were assisted by Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson, who did some good work and fine preaching. There were no accessions to the Church. There were many, however, who said that they had been lifted to a higher life because of his preaching. The other meeting, which we have just closed at Oak Grove, and in which we were assisted by Rev. G. W. Huff, resulted in 16 accessions to the Church, and we yet have hope of receiving others. Many who were already members testified to an awakening to a sense of their duty. The Lord is blessing us this year.—A. H. Steele.

Buena Vista, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: So far we have had good meetings on this charge. We had with us at Buena Vista Rev. S. A. Brown, of Booneville, Miss. His preaching was of a high class and burned its way into the hearts of the people. Brother Brown is in high favor with our people. We had a good meeting in the church. There is not much material out of the Church at this place. Rev. J. H. Holder, of Okolona, was to have been with us at McCondy, but sickness prevented his coming. However, we had a glorious meeting, with 17 additions to the Church. Rev. W. M. Young, of Amory, was with us at Boone's Chapel and did us great work. His preaching was thoroughly enjoyed by all who heard him. We had a great meeting, 12 being added to the Church. Rev. R. M. Evans, of Strong, will be with us at Macedonia; Rev. W. C. Carlisle, of Shuqualak, will be with us at Pleasant Grove, and Rev. W. L. Duren, of Tupelo, will be with us at Egypt. We are looking forward to the coming of these brethren as a blessing to our charge. Pray for us, Doctor. We have some of the best people on the Buena Vista charge that can be found anywhere. May the Lord save them all!—T. J. Durrett, P. C.

Etta, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: Our boy preacher (?), Rev. R. P. Goar, has just closed an eight days' meeting at Salem in which he did all the preaching. It was one of the best revivals ever held in this section of the country. Brother Goar is a deeply consecrated man—not only a good gospel preacher but a splendidly faithful pastor. His ability to conduct a revival meeting was proven during these services. His sermons were strong and easily understood and were so accompanied by the Holy Spirit that they carried with them the force of conviction. As an evidence of the general benefit derived and the uplift of our people to a higher plane of Christian living, some have enlisted in the prayer meetings and are outspoken in their determination to live more devotedly and carefully. Quite a number of family altars were erected, and we feel encouraged to believe that lasting good was accomplished. Neighbors who misunderstood each other were reconciled, people learned to love each other and the Church better, and God supremely. Apart from the spiritual benefit derived from the meeting, we feel that there is yet in store for our church and community many other good things as a direct result of the meeting. About 50 were converted and reclaimed, and 18 joined our Church. Long live Brother Goar, and may the Lord give him many other as good meetings! Wherever he may go, he will have the best regards and good wishes of the people at Salem.—Geo. W. Busby.

Victoria, Miss.

We have recently held two revival meetings on the Victoria charge. In the first one, Rev. W. T. Woodward of Sicily Island, La., was our helper, and the meeting was held at Victoria, beginning July 27 and continuing fo one week. It was successful, in that the church was revived and we added 2 new members. Brother Woodward's strong, manly character and earnest, practical preaching won the friendship of all the people. An offering of $30 in cash and two Jersey calves valued at $35 were given to him.

At Red Banks we were ably assisted by Rev. W. L. Broome. This meeting was a genuine revival—not a sudden outburst, but a gradual drawing of the people closer and closer until at the close of the meeting the people grasped Brother Broome's hand and told him that they had been blessed. In this meeting there were 8 accessions to the Church.—J. M. Carpenter.

Tremont, Miss.

In many respects this is the most pleasant charge I have served. The people are big-hearted, kind, good, and religious. We love them all. May God bless them! I am now holding my revival meetings. Brother I. D. Borders, of Aberdeen, came to us the third Sunday evening in July, and stayed till the close of the meeting. We had a great meeting. Brother Borders was unselfish and untiring in his labor of love, rightly dividing unto us the Word of Truth. Both pastor and people were drawn closer to God by his excellent work, and bound to him by the ties of brotherly love and friendship. We shall always be glad to have Brother Borders to visit ou charge. Our people say, "We wan you to get him next year if you can. * * * At Mt. Olive we had loca help. Brother Tom Clark rendered us fine assistance. Brother Clark is one of our local preachers who loves his Church, and is his pastor's friend. The meeting here was a success. Amen! * * * At Mt. Pleasant, Rev W. A. Bowlin was with us. He did most excellent work. We had a gracious revival. Twenty-one were adde to the Church. Brother Bowlin leave many friends here who will long remember him for his work's sake. W closed with the sacrament of th Lord's Supper. * * * At Asbury we had no ministerial help, but w had a good meeting. From the beginning to the close of the meeting grea interest was manifested. The Asbury people are noble-hearted and wer satisfied with their pastor's efforts not wishing any outside assistance. We have received 28 into the Church to date.—Thos. E. Yancey, P. C.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Rev. H. N. Harrison, of Lafayette, has tried a plan to have the church members sign a card pledging attendance on twelve prayer meetings during the year, and the testimony is that the plan works well, since when once started some continue to come after the twelve meetings have been attended.

The pastor, Rev. R. S. Walton, reports that three from his school at Kentwood have recently received Teachers' Diplomas, and that the school is holding an attendance of over 100 this summer, 124 being present the last Sunday in July. There are two or three organized classes in the school, and 62 babies on the Cradle Roll. Brother Walton's having for a time been a teacher, stands him well in hand in running a Sunday school.

Mr. T. W. Holloman, our Conference Sunday School Treasurer, reports the following additional Children's Day receipts: Indian Village, $8; Haynesville, $4.35; Slaughter, $4; New Salem, $5; Oak Ridge (on the Elmore circuit,) $3.47; Grand Cane, $8.40; Pipkins Chapel, $6.25; total to date, $831.99. Additional on the last year's deficit: Dr. R. D. Webb, Minden, $25.00; Lachute Sunday school, $10; Charlieville Sunday school, $5; total to date, $202.90; balance needed, $547.10.

The Lake Charles Methodist Men's Bible class has recently built a class room, at a cost of about $700, and entered it July 1. It has comfortable seats and when completed will have electric fans and sanitary toilets. The class now has fifty members enrolled and sometimes as many as 35 are present. Brother J. B. Kent, at one time a traveling preacher in our Conference, is the teacher, and is now following the policy of inviting visiting speakers to address the class from time to time. He had Mr. Funderburg, a splendid Baptist teacher, to address the class on Aug. 10, and expects later to have the Jewish Rabbi and Mr. Leon Locke, a member of the State Legislature. The latter is expected to deliver his popular lecture on "Books." After trying both a mixed and a men's class, Brother Kent decidedly favors the latter.

An unusual outgrowth of the Sunday School Home Department is the Aletheian club of Lafayette, which originated with Mrs. Crow Girard, who is now its president. The club meets weekly and studies the Home Department lesson from our Methodist Quarterly and has a good social time, with refreshments, etc. The Club's membership is composed of women of all or no denominations one Jewess being a member, and is displacing other social gatherings with their cards, raffles, etc. In addition to the lesson study, special speakers are sometimes invited to address the meetings, one address of considerable note recently being by Rev. H. N. Harrison, on "The Origin of the Bible—Its Manuscripts and Their History." Each of the Club's members pay 25 cents a year on a scholarship for a girl in Sophie Newcomb College.

About the most needy public buildings to be found anywhere are our rural churches. Rarely are the seats comfortable, the houses are sometimes not heated at all, and sometimes the panes are out of the windows. Such a thing as a rest room for mothers with their babies and suitable arrangements for privacy are almost unknown. A convenient supply of drinking water is also often wanting. And yet we expect people to come to church and Sunday school and stay for several hours at a time, and be reverent and attentive both to the teacher and the preacher. Such lack of conveniences at a railroad station or hotel, or schoolhouse would not be tolerated for a moment, but since it is a church we seem to think it is all right. Would it not be well to have the State Board of Health extend its jurisdiction over churches as well as over other public buildings? Something needs to be done.

A new "day" in the Sunday school calendar is Vocational Day, which is to be observed on the last Sunday in September. The purpose of this special day is to impress upon Sunday school boys and girls of suitable age the need for more workers in the mission fields and in the ministry, and in a general way to deal with the question of putting the life where it will count for the most; just as Decision Day deals with the question of openly confessing and following Christ. This day should be a time of stock-taking by our Sunday schools, to see how much the working force of the Kingdom has been recruited from each, and to plan definitely that some one or more is given to the active work of the ministry or to some phase of mission work. If Christ sought out those who were to "go everywhere preaching," and the Apostles cast lots for a successor to Judas "who by transgression fell," and it was the Church that was to set apart Paul and Barnabas, then it would seem that we should be interested in finding those who must needs give their whole lives to this active work in the Kingdom.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The following is the semi-annual report of the Galloway Memorial Class of the First M. E. Church, Corinth: Total number present, 634; number of visits to sick and strangers, 854; number of Bibles brought to class, 99; number of flowers sent to sick, 141; number of trays sent to sick, 51; number new members added, 11; total collections, $32.15.—B. F. Worsham, teacher; Mrs. M. C. Nash, president; Mrs. J. F. Chambers, secretary.

On the third anniversary of the Morris Class at Eupora, the loved minister, for whom the class was named, was holding a revival service and 25 men out of the class, in public testimony, pledged themselves to lives of greater usefulness. Two of the six unconverted members came into the Church during the meeting. This class is busy all the time and never grows weary in well doing. It is a fine exemplification of the solid benefit such a class can bring to a church and a town.

The place of the story in training children has long been recognized, and it would be well to consider the equally important place of the picture. The attention of the child must be secured, and it is stimulated by curiosity. Interest and curiosity create a sort of intellectual hunger—a reaching out for knowledge, a desire to know. There is really no better way of arousing curiosity, and awakening interest, thus securing the attention of and influencing the lives of little children, than through the use of the right kind of pictures, with decided emphasis on the word "right." (1) There should be a lesson in the picture; (2) the picture should be beautiful from an artistic standpoint, and no more satisfactory ones can be secured than those of the old masters; (3) as often as possible use pictures of birds, flowers, children, etc., which illustrate the lesson of the hour. There is no more uplifting and really ennobling interest that can be builded into pliable young lives than that which springs from good pictures, good music, and beautiful ideals.

A certain men's class has a valued and erstwhile busy class-member, upon whom sickness has laid its compelling hand, and who is a shut-in, deprived of the Sunday hour of instruction and fellowship. On a recent Sabbath day, word went all along the line that an unusually good attendance was desired and the class-room was filled to overflowing. With the teacher in the lead, the class filed quietly out and in a body went down to the home of the greatly missed friend and brother and overflowed the commodious living room, the veranda, and even the green sward. Sweet songs had been prepared and all the accustomed business of the hour and the lesson were carried on as usual. And such a memorable class hour it was—a real sacrament and one long to be remembered by all! If we could only begin to realize what we allow those whom we love to be deprived of for the want of a little thought, flowers and fruits would be sent, auto-rides arranged, and many loving things done. The heart of the man referred to above was hungry for a Bible lesson and a warm hand-clasp.

I TOLD YOU SO.

The manufacturers of Coca-Cola, the popular soda fountain beverage, have had an excellent chance in recent years to taunt the public with the old gibe, "I told you so." When the product was first put on the market the manufacturer frankly told the public its composition and explained that it was composed of syrup (sugar), caramel and caffeine with fruit flavors.

It seems, however, that some people preferred to believe the slanderous reports rather than the actual facts; and as slanders travel fast they soon came to the attention of the Government. In order to ascertain the exact character of the product, the Government seized a shipment of Coca-Cola at Chattanooga, Tenn., and brought a suit against the Company in the Federal court. Expert scientists were summoned from all parts of the country and labored on the case for nearly four weeks at a cost to the Government which has been estimated at approximately $100,000.00.

It was another case of the "mountain laboring and bringing forth a mouse." They found the sugar and the caramel and the caffeine and the fruit flavorings. That's all.—Adv.

Get Aboard the Buckeye and Ride to Success

The way has been paved for you. The demand for machine-cut ditches is larger than ever before. All you need to get on the inside of the contract ditching business is a

BUCKEYE TRACTION DITCHER

This machine will set you up in a business that will pay you from $15 to $18 a day, digging drainage ditches for the farmers in your neighborhood.

The Buckeye ranks with the threshing machine and tractor for good, all aronnd efficiency; it is helping thousands of farmers to get a bigger and better crop production by teaching them the importance and necessity of well tilled land.

It cuts from 100 to 150 rods of true, straight, perfectly graded ditches a day. It does the work more than twice as fast as hand labor and so much better that there's no comparison.

Look up the Buckeye Exhibit at the State Fairs at Indianapolis, Detroit, Sedalia, Missouri, or Springfield, Illinois. It will pay you to get acquainted with this strong, sturdy, money-making machine.

In the meantime write for catalog 33.

TWO LITTLE CHINESE GIRLS.

The names of these two little girls were "Huo-wing," meaning "peace and harmony," and "Dai-kai," which stands for "love received." They were patients in the "Bird's Nest" Hospital in Mid-China.

Little Huo was blind, which made her mother very unhappy, because her recovery was so hopeless. But she heard of the wonderful Christian doctors who were able to cure many blind people. So, with her little girl, she walked three whole weeks to the place where they were, begging their way from village to village.

The doctor found that it was just a film over her eyes and that he was able to remove it, and then she could see and she was so happy. Her eyes had to be handaged fo: some time, and so she stayed in the hospital. There she made a friend of little Dai-kai.

She, poor little thing, had a bad sore on her leg, which the doctors could not heal. She was very sick, and they thought nothing could save her but the skin from a healthy person grafted on the place. Little Huo heard this repeated in her own language, and she said: "The doctor took the bad skin off my blind eyes, and I want to give some of my good skin to Dai!"

The nurse said, "No, your mother will fetch you soon, and you wouldn't be ready for her!" "But my mother would wait," she assured her. A Christian girl who helped the nurse heard about the case.

"I have no mother to fetch me. Won't you take a piece of my skin, doctor?" She begged so hard, that at last he did it. Little Dai got well quickly after this, and the young nurse was so thankful that she had been able to help in her recovery.

THE VITALITY OF MORMONISM.

Few aspects of the virile civilization of the West are to-day charged with deeper interest and significance for the American people than the great fact of Mormonism. * * * The Mormon Church, so far from becoming less powerful through opposition, has heen expanding in a manner little short of amazing, so that today it is much stronger and more ambitious than ever before. * * * According to Mormon authorities, upward of 2000 missionaries are constantly in the field, most of them young men, and all under the supervision of experienced leaders and directed from headquarters at central points.

* * * * * * * * * * *

The idea that the Mormons oppose education for the purpose of keeping religious control of the people is entirely erroneous. They encourage education, but, like the Catholics, they seek to direct it themselves, having Mormon teachers everywhere. * * * The Church never lets go its people, even in leisure hours. Beginning with Brigham Young, who well knew that it was human nature to seek amusement, the Church * * * has even assisted in the establishment of opera houses and theaters, and has encouraged music, both religious and secular. * * * Every where in the Mormon country one is aware of church authority. One perceives that it has a tremendous power over the people, and yet no outsider may venture to define its limits.—Ray Stannard Baker, in The Century.

SOME MISSIONARY NOTES.

The China Inland Mission has 1046 missionaries.

There is a medical college for women in Canton, for which a Chinaman contributed $35,000.

In East Africa a missionary is teaching shorthand to a class of natives, at their request.

A new prison is being built in Fu Chan, China. It will have a chapel for Christian services in connection with it. This is a great forward stride for China.

Home Mission Paragraphs states that there are 25,000 men employed in the forests of the State of Washington, and only 3,000 of these have a Christian service to attend, and that only once in six weeks. What becomes of the 22,000 who are deprived of services of any kind?

AMONG OUR MISSIONARIES.

Misses Claiborne, Drake and Peacock sailed from Vancouver for Shanghai on the "Empress of Russia" on August 13.

On Aug. 12, Misses Eva and Bessie Hardie, and Agnes Graham left San Francisco for Korea. They went in company with Mr. and Mrs. Wasson.

Misses Attaway, Mitchell, Bliler and Dr. Hattie Love will sail for China on the "Empress of Asia" on September 10.

Misses Baxter and Webb will sail for Brazil from New York on the "Vestriss" on September 6.

"RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT."

Whereas, it pleased our Heavenly Father on June 23, 1913, to remove from our midst our beloved sister Mrs. H. C. Morehead, and whereas we appreciate the fact that she has been a faithful and efficient member of our Woman's Missionary Union; therefore be it resolved by this Auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, of Sidon, Miss.:

First—That while we bow in humble submission to the will of our Lord, whom she loved and faithfully served, we feel that in her we have lost a large part of our spiritual strength, a wise counselor and faithful co-worker.

Second—That the example she set for us by her earnestness and sincerity in the cause is held in sacred remembrance. In her quiet and unassuming manner she performed her duty daily, and when the transition was made we felt the appropriateness of this passage of scripture, "She hath done what she could."

Third—That we pray that the example and influence she left may continue with us as an inspiration to fuller consecration and increased faithfulness to our Master's cause.

Fourth—That we offer our sincere sympathy to her family, with the prayer that the gospel seed that she has sown in their hearts may continue to bear abundant fruit, that she being dead may yet speak through them.

Fifth—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her children, one to our local papers, and that a copy be spread upon our minutes.

Signed, Mrs. A. J. Hatch, Mrs. G. G. Defoore, Mrs. J. H. Farmer.

ADDRESS,

CAMDEN BUSINESS COLLEGE,

J. L. HINES, Principal, CAMDEN, ARKANSAS.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

Dear Dr. Meek: I thought when we left Mississippi that I would write to the Advocate often, but I have found that a pastor in the West who attends to his work has little time for correspondence. Since coming here I have received communications from several brethren back East inquiring about conditions out here and asking for my opinion concerning the future of our Methodism in this country. For lack of time I have been unable to answer these brethren, but will in the near future give them some information and offer some suggestions through the columns of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Well, I always enjoyed reading the dear old paper, but more so now than ever. Its weekly visits to our parsonage home are looked forward to with anxious anticipation I want to say to the Methodists of Mississippi and Louisiana that they have one of the best papers published by our Church and that its Editor is one of the safest and most capable leaders among us. Success to the Advocate and blessings upon you, Doctor, in your contention for the truth and in your loyal stand for the rights and interests of Southern Methodism!

Perhaps the brethren in the Mississippi Conference will read with some degree of interest an account of our work here. Santa Ana is a splendid little city with a population of about 12,000 right in the heart of the orange, walnut, lemon, and apricot country. We have no saloons to blight and curse our people and the town is remarkably free from lawlessness of every kind. The twenty-eight churches, eight excellent public schools, and other benevolent institutions in Santa Ana indicate the intelligence and moral character of these people. Just eight miles away is the mighty Pacific whose beaches at this time of the year are thronged with thousands of people. We are connected with the coast cities by both steam and electric railways and several public automobile lines. Santa Ana has a large Southern population. There are quite a number of Mississippians here and I am glad to say that no one of them casts a reflection upon the Great Old State. The City Attorney is a Mississipian and a Confederate soldier. This is one of the strongest points of Southern Methodism on the Pacific coast. We have 425 members here and we would be much stronger than we are if all the Southern Methodists who have come to Santa Ana had been true to their own Church. Because of the greater numerical strength, superior prestige, and popularity of the M. E. Church in this country, many of our people have gone, and are still going, to that Church. I shall have more to say of this feature of our work out here in my next letter.

Our house of worship here is a brick building, thoroughly modern in architecture and arrangement. It represents an expenditure of $30,000. The organ cost $3000 and the pews and other furniture are first-class. Our parsonage is an eight-room, two-story building on an adjoining lot. It is splendidly furnished and is valued at $4500. There is no indebtedness on this property. Both buildings are in good condition and well insured. The pastor is not responsible for any of the business affairs of the church, as the stewards manage all the finances, etc. All of this indicates that the Official Board is composed of up-to-date business men. This church and the one at Fernwood, Miss., are the only churches I have ever served where the pastor did not have to get out and hustle up the Conference collections and all other finances of the church except his salary. May their number multiply until the laymen throughout the Church shall relieve their pastors of all responsibility for the finances of the church! It ought so to be.

We run all the machinery of Methodism here. Our Sunday school is thoroughly organized and is up-to-date in all the departments of work. The Epworth Leagues and Missionary Societies are doing splendid work, and the congregations at the preaching services have been good all the year. We have had 60 accessions to the Church since Conference, which is more than twice the number received during the two preceding years. The pastor's salary is $1500. The congregation paid for, all purposes last year $6250.

Now, in my imagination, I can hear the brethren in the Mississippi Conference saying, "Scarborough is delightfully situated." In many respects I am, but in others I am not. Life out here is awfully strenuous, with everybody. The preachers have to work like Trojans three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, and a great portion of nearly every night. The pastor of the Baptist Church here said to me some time ago: "I have to do three times as much work here to accomplish the same results that I did back East." That has been my experience exactly. If I ever return to my native State and home Conference it will be because of my physical inability to keep up with these fast, restless people and do the work of a pastor in this field of many problems and trying difficulties. My advice to all of the brethren back East who are doing well and who do not need to come West for their health is to stay where they are. If you have but little domestic responsibility resting upon you and have a burning zeal to do missionary work for our Lord, there is no place in the world where you are needed more than out here in the great West.

Now, Mr. Editor, I fear that I have already written too much for one letter. If you see fit to publish this, I will be more considerate of your forbearance in the future.

Yours in the Master's work,
D. SCARBOROUGH.

BOOKS FOR SALE.

I own a set of books entitled, "Footsteps of the Man of Galilee," in 4 volumes. The set is a practical self-interpreting Bible, with maps, helps, and a running comment on each chapter in the Bible. It is just the book for a busy Sunday school worker, an exhorter, or layman. The books are profusely illustrated. I paid $21 for the set, but am willing to make a sacrifice, because I want to turn the money into other books that I need worse than this set. Let me hear from you, if you want to consider my offer. MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

Wheras, God in his all-wise providence has taken from our midst our beloved sister, Grace Strong; and whereas, Sister Strong was a member of our Woman's Home Mission Society, having served as Secretary, and one whose Christian life should be an inspiration to us all, but whose death has saddened the hearts of this Society and all who knew her; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That our Woman's Home Mission Society has lost one of its most faithful and earnest members—one who was a true example of Christian character, always ready and willing to do whatever she could for her Master, and whose life and influence were worthy of emulation by every one.

2. That we extend to the entire family our heart-felt sympathy in the death of this loved one, and while not being able always to understand God's dealings with us, we can be assured by his promise that he doeth all things well; and may we by faith bow in humble submission and say, "Thy will and not mine be done."

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family; and that they be published in The New Orleans Christian Advocate, The Louisiana Sun, the Southern Vindicator, and spread upon the minutes of this meeting.

Signed by: Mrs. Ada Hamilton, Mrs. J. T. Felker, Mrs. J. D. King, Committee.

DR. J. M. WEEMS.

(Resolutions adopted by the Third Quarterly Conference of the First Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., August 11, 1913.)

Whereas, by the dispensation of our Divine Master, our late pastor and brother, Dr. J. M. Weems, has been removed from this world to receive the reward promised to those who are faithful to their trust; be it Resolved:

1. That the work done by Dr. Weems during his three and one half years' pastorate with us was one that endeared him to us with ties stronger and more sacred than those of this world, and that his influence, from precept and example, cannot be measured until time shall cease to be and the Book of Life is opened.

2. That from the time of his laying the corner-stone of this building, with the simple words, "In the name of God," until its completion a few weeks prior to his death, his entire wisdom, energy and zeal were lavishly expended upon the work, and the result we regard as a fitting memorial to his consecrated life work; and that while we grieve for our loss, we are grateful that he saw the work he had so earnestly planned so successfully completed.

3 That we tender to his sorrowing family our earnest sympathy, with the assurance that their loss is also ours.

4. That copies of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Conference, sent to his family, and published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

FROM A NORTH MISSISSIPPI VETERAN.

Dear Brother Meek: The Tutwiler charge is in good shape. We have had two good meetings: one at Tutwiler, and the other at Cherry Hill. At Tutwiler the pastor did the preaching and Prof. I. N. Price, of Chattanooga, did the singing, with the help of a good choir and congregation. The solo work by Prof. Price was well done.

At Cherry Hill, Brother Ward, of Friar's Point, did the preaching. Say, did you know Ward is a fine preacher? Well, he is; any charge in the Conference would be pleased with Brother Ward.

Now listen! Two weeks ago at Tutwiler, at the close of the sermon, I concluded to exhort a bit, my subject being the New Orleans Advocate—one of the best edited papers in Southern Methodism, so say all worthy "brothers and fellows." Well, I held up a copy of my subject and said, "This is our paper, our Conference organ. Does it come to you once a week, bringing the news from all parts of the Conference and from the four winds—news religious and news secular? The price is no longer an objection, as I am instructed to offer you this paper for six months for 50 cents. How is that?' Won't you take it at that price? I think you will." The enclosed list is a part of the results of my exhortation; others will follow.

And now in conclusion, let me say, I stand pat with our good Bishops in their Vanderbilt contention. God bless them and the great Church they represent, and the Lord preserve the simple who are knocking them! Amen and Amen!

With best regards for yourself, our loyal editor, I am fraternally,

J. W. PRICE.

HIS LAMB.

The Buffalo News tells of a traveling man who, on his marriage, was given a month's vacation. He and his bride passed their honeymoon in a quiet summer resort.

One evening as they entered the dining room and sat down, as usual, in a secluded corner, the young husband noticed a good customer at the table near by.

"Say, dearest," he whispered, "there's Mr. Jones over there. You won't mind if I go over and dine with him, will you? Think how fine it will be if I get back from my wedding trip with a smashing big order."

The little bride agreed rather ruefully. Her traveling man hurried over to Jones, shook hands with him and ordered his dinner, which included roast lamb. Then he began to talk business.

He talked so earnestly and at such length that he didn't notice when the waiter removed his meat dishes and placed a desert before him. Then suddenly he looked down at his plate.

"Why," he exclaimed, "where's my lamb?"

A little voice in the corner piped out, "Here I am, dear!"

THE ADVOCATE COMMENDED.

Dear Doctor Meek: I am taking this opportunity to express my very high appreciation of the way in which you are taking care of the Kirkland-Carnegie matter. It comes with a degree of refreshment difficult to express to realize in the weekly visits of the dear old home paper the very feelings and convictions expressed that one would gladly voice himself, only in, doubtless, very much better form and stronger statement. You vented my own feelings when you stated in the issue of the 14th inst. that the cause of the majority Trustees couldn't carry a District in all Southern Methodism. And this is not the only thing that is to be said to the great credit of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. It has always ranked among the leaders in Christian journalism in things doctrinal, experimental and ecclesiastical, and it has done so no less under the present administration. Blessings on you!

AN UNANSWERABLE ARGUMENT.

"I hear lots of talk 'bout de women folks votin'," said the old colored brother, "but I ain't takin' no stock in it. Dey ain't no mention of Eve ever tellin' Adam dat she wanter to go to de polls an' vote. No; she stayed home, she did, mindin' de chillun' and darnin' Adam's sox."

"Hol' on dar," cried a brother in the congregation. Adam didn't wear no sox, an' dar wuz no darnin' needles in his day an' time, an' de only polls dar wuz fishin poles."

But the old man was equal to the emergency. He said:

"You talks lak one er de foolish brotherins. Ef Eve didn't have a needle how come she sewed dem fig leaves an' made a dress? An' ef dar wuz no politics in dat time, what wus de Devil doin' dar?

SHOES AT WHOLESALE

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE Readers are SAVING from ONE to TWO DOLLARS a PAIR by Ordering Their Shoes DIRECT FROM FACTORY, BY PARCEL POST.

Would the cutting of your FAMILY SHOE BILL one-third or more mean a very big yearly saving to you? Figure it out. The present high cost of shoes is due to two things, the Middlemen's profits which the consumer must pay and the enormous decrease in raw materials. The new Parcel Post System gave us an idea. By selling our shoes direct to the wearer, cutting out the middlemen entirely, we could save the consumer fully a third on every pair of shoes and still make our usual wholesale profit. The plan is a great success. New Orleans Christian Advocate readers are realizing the opportunity of saving and great numbers are writing for our catalog which is sent free to anyone on request. It tells how cheaply high quality shoes can really be bought under this fair method of selling. MISSIONARIES MUCH DISTURBED IN MEXICO.

President Wilson's advice to all citizens of the United States who are in Mexico to leave is disturbing very much the mission work of the various Protestant denominations that are operating in that country. Dr. John W. Butler, superintendent of the Mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Mexico, sent the General Board of that denomination a few days since the following message: "Washington instructions for American exodus much resented by colony. The reasons given appear inadequate. Union mission conference representing four Churches objects to ejection from undisturbed territory. What does the Board recommend in the present emergency?"

Similar dispatches were received by other Mission Boards, and after a conference among themselves and communicating with Mr. Bryan, the Secretary of State, the Northern Presbyterian, Methodist Episcopal, and some of the other Boards sent to the missionaries in Mexico the following reply to their inquiries: "While cautioning prudence, we leave it to the Missions to decide the question of policy in the premises. It is our judgment that the women and children should be recalled to places of safety. Let men use discretion, avoid risk, keep in touch with the United States' representatives, and register property."

We infer, however, from a dispatch sent out from Nashville on August 30 that the Southern Methodist Church has not seen fit to concur in this policy. The message referred to is, in part, as follows: "In line with President Wilson's recent message, the Mission Board of the M. E. Church, South, has ordered its missionaries out of Mexico. Telegrams to this effect have ben sent to the six missionary centers. * * * A number of the missionaries have replied asking to be allowed to remain. No action has been taken on such requests. The Southern Presbyterian Board has not yet issued orders."

The following is the estimate of the number of workers that the leading denominations have in Mexico (this does not include the families of missionaries): Northern Presbyterian, 15; Methodist Episcopal, 60; Southern Presbyterian, 11 (only 5 are at present in the field); Southern Methodist, 46, of whom 21 are now away. Many of these missionaries are engaged in school work, and it will be especially regrettable if these institutions of learning have to close down. Such a result would probably strike them a blow from which they would not recover in several years.

With our meager knowledge of Mexican affairs, we have little disposition to criticise our Government for the course which it has pursued in the management of our relations with that unfortunate country. War is an unspeakable calamity, and everything that is consistent with self-respect and honor should be done to avoid it. There is, however, quite a widespread feeling in the United States that the policy of the present administration in dealing with foreign powers has been lacking in vigor and firmness. Whether this is true, we shall not presume to say. But it is doubtless a fact that a nation that establishes a reputation for being slow in guarding its rights will find them often encroached upon.

THE METHODISTS AND ROMAN CATHOLICS.

All dependable religious statistics show the Roman Catholic and Methodist to be the two foremost religious denominations in the United States. The former is chiefly an urban, and the latter chiefly a rural Church. Because of its way of estimating its membership the Catholic Church is commonly regarded as much the stronger of the two, but that this is true is by no means certain when the calculation as to numerical strength is made upon the same basis. Upon this point we quote from a recent issue of The Christian Guardian, of Toronto, Canada:

"Dr. H. K. Carroll, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Secretary of Ecumenical Methodism in the Western Section, is recognized as one of the leading authorities on religious statistics in the world. Many times he has rendered the Churches incalculable service by his careful compilations, and not least so is an article which he contributes to the current number of the Methodist Review, making a numerical comparison between the Roman Catholic Church and the Methodist Churches in the United States. Dr. Carroll, of course, calls attention to the fact that the Roman Catholic Church keeps no record of communicants, but reports according to population, and then always in round numbers, never giving anything under the thousands. Unifying the methods of compilation as well as he can, Dr. Carroll makes the following statements covering the United States proper, Alaska and Hawaii: 'Methodism, not including the two bodies of United Brethren and the two bodies of the Evangelical Association—all of which are thoroughly Methodistic—has in the territory covered by the foregoing comparison, 6,865,258 communicants. Multiplying this number by three, we have as a result a Methodist population of 20,595,774 to compare with the Roman Catholic population of 15,207,776. In other words, the Methodist population in the United States exceeds that of the Roman Catholic Church by 5,387,998. If every sixth person is, by this showing, a Roman Catholic by confession or preference, every fourth person is a Methodist by confession or preference.' Dr. Carroll points out that the Roman Catholic Church had received by immigration during the decade that ended with 1910, by the most conservative estimate, upward of two million and a half people of Roman Catholic leanings whom it counted in its fellowship, whether they definitely so related themselves or not. There is a wide divergence between the Roman Catholic figurs as sometimes given, and as furnished by Dr. Carroll. He is, however, everywhere recognized as an authority."

DR. GLADDEN ON THE VIRGIN BIRTH.

Dr. Washington Gladden, who preached the Commencement sermon at Vanderbilt University last June, and was one of the lecturers at the Vanderbilt Biblical Institute, though an eminent minister in the Congregational Church and an author of distinction, can by no means be regarded as thoroughly orthodox. A sample of his liberalism is seen in the following quotation dealing with the virgin birth of Christ, which is from his "Present Day Theology.":

"It is not disputed that the life of Jesus was sustained in the same way that our lives are sustained. Food and drink and sleep and exercise were as needful for him as for us. He claimed no exemption from the common experience of humanity in the maintenance of his life. He would not have been the Savior that he is, if he had not shared with us all these human experiences—if he had not known what it was to be hungry and cold and weary. And I confess that I should be glad to know that he was one with us in the origin of his life as well as in the maintenance of it. It seems to me that this idea of the virgin birth tends to throw some discredit upon the sacredness of marriage, which is a tendency to be deprecated. At all events I protest against making any man a heretic because he believes that Mary told the truth when she said to Jesus in the temple, 'Thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing.' The truth is that nothing is added to the moral greatness of Christ by insisting on this doctrine, and nothing subtracted from his essential divinity by the belief that he entered the world in a way that God has sanctified for all his children; and all disputation about the subject is not only unprofitable but unseemly."

It must be admitted that Dr. Gladden here states his cause with great adroitness and in about as favorable a light as is possible. We do not think, however, that his point that the miraculous birth of the Savior tends to discredit marriage is well taken. The incarnation was to be a unique and unparalleled event and there is nothing incongruous in the view that extraordinary means were used in its accomplishment. On the contrary, if a perfect and supernatural Being was to be brought into existence, something other than the ordinary processes of generation would seem to be necessary to effect that result.

It is, of course, possible that God might have brought about the incarnation by some other method than that of the virgin birth, but two of the Gospels expressly state that this was the plan which he adopted. It was also foretold in the Messianic prophecies. Thus it will be seen that Dr. Gladden's effort to repudiate the virgin birth amounts to nothing more or less than an attempt to invalidate and cast aside some important portions of the canonical Scriptures. But so small a thing as this does not trouble the liberal theologians of this day very much. Indeed, the talk of exalting Christ, while discrediting the divine revelation which testifies of him, is one of their most outstanding characteristics. They apparently think it is entirely proper to ignore utterly any part of the Bible that does not harmonize with the theories that they adjudge to be rational and plausible. A religion whittled down to fit the finite understanding is what they are striving for. But the strange thing is why Methodists who claim to be sound in faith should call upon such men to instruct our young ministers in theology.

UNPUBLISHED POEM BY THACKERAY.

Herewith appears an unpublished poem by Thackeray which has been discovered comparatively recently by Mrs. Ritchie. It is a nearly perfect rendering of Beranger's famous verses and is entitled "A Castaway:"

A castaway on this great earth,
A sickly child of humble birth,
And homely feature.
Before me rushed the swift and strong,
I thought to perish in the throng,
Poor puny creature.
Then crying in my loneliness,
I prayed that Heaven in my distress
Some aid would bring.
And pitying my misery,
My guardian angel, said he,
Sing, poet, sing!
Since then my grief is not so sharp,
I know my lot and tune my harp
And chant my ditty.
And kindly voices cheer the bard,
And gentle hearts his song reward
With love, and pity.

METHODISM SIXTY YEARS AGO AND METHODISM TO-DAY.

By Rev. Samuel Jackson.

(An extract from an address delivered at a recent meeting of the Veterans of the Cross at Bedford, Mass.)

In the bygone years more dependence was placed on the agency of the Holy Spirit in the work of regeneration than is the case to-day. The presence of the Spirit was constantly emphasized and insisted on as the "sine qua non," without which all preaching was vain, and all prayer was vain, and every effort hopeless of results. You might have every other equipment but that, intellectual, musical, moral; but without the Divine Spirit to inspire, energize and convict, you would be weak as water, and be as men beating the air. But with His presence, His baptism of grace and spiritual power, the weakest and most unpromising instrumentalities become mighty through God, overcoming the prejudices of men, pulling down the strongholds of sin, and changing, transforming, the chief of sinners into saints of God. An illustration of what the Spirit can do you have in the case of the day of Pentecost, in the quickening and enlightening of the disciples, who, up to that day, were as timorous as hares, afraid of their own shadows, and incapable of comprehending the teachings of Jesus, but who when baptized by this Spirit were bold as lions, and preached the doctrine of a crucified Christ with such convincing power that thousands of Jews were converted to the faith. How much Paul made of this Spirit his epistles show. And it was the main reliance of the Methodist preacher sixty years ago.

Does this doctrine have to-day in the pulpit and in the prayer meeting this old-time prominence and pre-eminence? Is it emphasized now as then as the one thing absolutely necessary in the conviction and conversion of men, and in their upbuilding in the spiritual life? How often now do you hear from the pulpit discourses elevating it to the place where Jesus enthroned it as the spiritual dynamic which alone could shatter the works of darkness, and usher in the kingdom of God in the earth? Its presence makes both the Church and the individual invincible; its absence is fatal to faith. I mean to say that the Holy Spirit is not as much in evidence to-day in the services of the Church as sixty years ago. Disciples to-day, many of them, if they were asked if they had received the Holy Ghost when they believed, could answer as truthfully as did John's disciples, "We have not so much as heard that there was any Holy Ghost." The Church has everything else that is requisite. There is the train complete. The engine, the fuel, the boiler, the cars, the crew, are all there. But the train does not move. It stands still. There is no motion whatever. What is the matter? There is no fire. Start that, and immediately there is life. You have got the power, and at once there is motion, and speed that is irresistible. That classic little work of William Arthur, "The Tongue of Fire," uses this figure with great effect. It is in this spiritual power that modern Methodism is deficient. This is what is wanting in our worship to-day—the celestial fire, the Divine breath, the invisible presence, the Holy Spirit. Call it what you will, it is the one reality, without which worship is a desert waste, and with which it is a fountain of life.

Sixty years ago the working machinery of the Church was much more simple and more easily operated than it is to-day, and the results achieved in the conversion of souls were greater. The only church organizations, aside from the Church itself, were the Sunday school and the Ladies' Aid. The Church and the minister then had a clear field for their operations, and their minds were unhampered by side issues.

Now the Church is encumbered with machinery as complex as that in Ezekiel's vision—wheel within wheel, each independent of the other, and of diverse character, the multiplication of which is quadrennially increasing, varying in number from half a dozen to a dozen or more, each insistent on recognition, and the rumbling of all together confusing and distracting, interfering seriously with the prosecution of the legitimate work of the ministry. A friend of mine in a distant State writes that in his Church, which is a very large one, are twenty-two distinct and separate organizations, local and general, small and large, male and female, and for all ages, the oversight of which is largely thrown on the pastor, and he says: "You can imagine how the minister is handicapped in his work." A few years ago one of our ablest ministers asked of the Conference a retired relation. Soon after, I asked him why he took such a step when he was physically and mentally well equipped for a dozen more years of active service. He told me that while he could preach and do all the pastoral work with more satisfaction to himself than ever before, yet there had sprung up so many different societies in the Church, each claiming his attention, so as to tax him beyond the measure of his strength, that he felt he could not give as much time to his legitimate work as it called for and should have. These organizations, praiseworthy in themselves and in their purposes, nevertheless crowd into the background what is really the one mission of the Church—that of converting men by the knowledge of the truth.

Another difference between Methodism sixty years ago and Methodism to-day, and the last I shall consider, is that then pastoral visiting was considered as much a part of the minister's work as was preaching, and as necessary to the largest success. The general plan was to visit the homes of the people quarterly, and as often between as special cases called for. And these visits were helpful to both pastor and people—to the pastor in giving a more intimate acquaintance with the people, with their needs, their circumstances and peculiarities; and to the people in arousing a deeper interest in the minister, and insuring a larger attendance upon his ministry. And such faithful pastoral work was not only no hindrance to the minister in the preparation of his sermons, but it was an inspiration that helped him to do better work in the pulpit. I have in mind several brethren who have passed away, of whom it has been said that their marked success as ministers was due more to their pastoral work than it was to their preaching. We have men among us now of whom the same remark can be made. Indeed, I will mention one name, J. O. Peck.

This practice, however, is now falling into disuse. More preachers than I have fingers on both hands have told me that they don't believe in going from house to house to call upon their people, and make no calls at all excepting as they are sent for. They say that their place is in the study, and that their value will appear in the pulpit. Yet from what I have heard about such ministers, it would seem as if their preaching was not of such a superior character as to attract large congregations. A lady sent me a few weeks ago a church calendar of recent date, containing this standing notice: "Persons desiring a pastoral call will fill out the following, and hand it to an usher or place it on the collection plate." And there follows a space for their address, and the reason why they wish the pastor to call. This is very unlike the old custom, and I am convinced that ministers who have adopted this method are making a very great mistake. Men known by name to all of us, who have been signally successful in leading scores and hundreds of people into their Churches in every charge they had, attribute their success to direct personal approach at the homes and places of business of their people.

Any one familiar with Methodism ten years ago cannot fail to be startled by the changes presented to-day. If one of the older preachers of that day could return to the earth now, he would not recognize the Methodism of to-day, so different is it from that of the past in regard to many features, and especially those features that distinguish Methodism from other Christian bodies. Time would fail me to specify these changes at length, and I will make only brief mention of them in closing. The question uppermost is: "Are they in the line of progress, or are they reactionary?" To be sure we are told that the times have changed, and we must adapt ourselves to these changes. Yes—but let me ask a few questions:

How about our itinerancy—that which was the corner-stone or basic feature of our polity? That really received a crushing blow when the time limit was removed a few years ago, practically constituting two classes of ministers among us where previously there had been but one—a settled ministry for comparatively a few, an itinerant ministry for the majority and less favored ones. To what will that lead as years go by?

What shall we say of the class-meeting, and the reasons for its extinction? For extinct it certainly is. What a great purpose the class-meeting served in the training of converts and in the general edification of the people religiously and socially!

Where has the love-feast gone, and why has it been given up? What a source of rich content it was to Methodists two generations ago! True, each Annual Conference holds a love-feast on the Sunday morning of its session, but the old spirit seems to have vanished from them.

And, what of the watch-night services that used to bring us so close in thought to eternity, so impressive and solemn, and yet so joyous in the emotions produced?

And have you forgotten, can you forget, the spiritual power, the religious forvor, that used to be the usual accompaniments of all the religious services of those days? No one was afraid to shout, and no one was disturbed when "Glory" and "Hallelujah" rang out from lips inspired by the love of God.

And then, too, what singing they used to have in those days! They sang enthusiastically. They sang with the spirit. They sang heartily, spontaneously, and independently of all instrumental music.

But all those features that were peculiar to Methodism, and helped to make Methodism distinct from all other denominations, and entered so largely into the building up of Methodism to the front rank of Christian Churches, have been gradually disappearing until scarcely any traces of them remain. And why? For a similar reason as led the Israelites to demand a monarchical form of government so that they would be like the nations around them. We know the result in the case of the Israelites. So Methodists wanted to be like other Christian bodies. And they have succeeded by dropping those features that really constituted their grandeur and glory, but at the expense of their vitality and power. I may be mistaken, but I think that the slogan of the Church should be: "Back to primitive Methodism; back to the fathers; back to primitive Christianity; back to Jesus Himself.'"—From Zion's Herald.

SOME OBSERVATIONS AND REFLECTIONS.

By Rev. H. G. Roberts.

Doctor: I beg pardon for asking so soon for more space in the columns of the Advocate. I realize that there are more than four hundred preachers, to say nothing of the laymen, within the territory of our Conference organ, and of course one cannot expect very much space. Besides, I have always felt, and still feel, like it would be more becoming and much more edifying for me to read what others write than for me to attempt to write myself. But, inasmuch as I am laboring under certain conclusions that are so entirely averse to the more optimistic minds of our Church, I shall, with your permission, commit some of my thoughts to the public, hoping to be corrected as to any erroneous idea which I may be holding.

The present spiritual state of the Church, and how to obtain the highest results in our ministry, are questions that have for the last two or three years caused me much serious reflection and prayer. About the time I was entering the ministry, the presiding Bishop asked all the members of the Conference who realized that God had honored their efforts with the conversion of sinners to stand. To the surprise of many, one of the eldest and ablest men of the Conference failed to stand. Upon being asked his reason for not standing, he said that it was not for him to know the results of his ministry. I consoled myself by holding to that brother's position for the first five years of my ministry, believing it was my duty to preach the gospel and not to bother about the results. This position fails to satisfy me any longer.

Some of our laymen tell us "not to be alarmed; that we have more and better church buildings, and more members, etc., than we have ever had before." Yet the spirit of worldliness in the Church is manifest; but few of our laymen pray in public or hold family worship, and the genuine conversions under our ministry are comparatively few, indeed. And what is worse still, there is a disposition upon the part of some of our own people, officials as well as others, to discourage the ministry in proclaiming the whole gospel. That some of our preachers wink at these things, and occasionally one publicly insists that some forms of evil are necessary and educative, is enough to make heaven blush with pity and shame. I have a few times noticed in the society notes of our secular papers where a son or a daughter of some of our Methodist preachers had won the first prize at progressive rook. It is even reported that one of the presiding elders asked another if he thought a certain pastor's wife was capable of taking her place in society in a certain prominent charge.

Now, Doctor, it does seem that there is a lost chord somewhere. It is said that there is a lost chord in music, and that the lost chord is the spirit of religion. Is it possible that this is the case with our ministry?

Suppose we call Ezekiel, that mighty prophet of God, upon the scene. His vision of the valley of dry bones is very significant. We read that these bones were very many and that they were very dry. "And he said unto me, Son of man, can these bones live? And I answered, O Lord God, thou knowest. And he said unto me prophesy and say: Thus saith the Lord God unto these bones, Behold, I will cause breath to enter into you and ye shall live;........and ye shall know that I am the Lord." So here we see that the Church had at this early day drifted into a deplorable condition. It is evident that the spiritual state of the Church all through the ages has ebbed and flowed, and doubtless will continue to do so until the end of the world. It is also evident that God has always come to her rescue in the time of need. God is not dead, but is the same yesterday, to-day and forever. Rationalism teaches us, however, that God in the beginning placed his creation under fixed laws and left it and does not watch over it any more. But Ezekiel teaches us that God can cause these bones to live.

There are those, and they are many, who contend that the Church should not attempt to correct the lives of men. And it is likely that some of our young preachers get this idea instilled into their minds while preparing for their life-work. I have lying before me a text-book that is being used by some of our best colleges, and it is surprising to see in it so much that is antagonistic to the Word of God. The book in question is Dealy's Sociology. On page 146, Mr. Dealy ridicules the Church for "laying down rules for human conduct, and arguing that in so doing it acted by divine authority;" and adds that "philosophy and science defend their right to promulgate their conclusions, even though they are at variance with theological teaching. Educational systems refuse longer to be subordinated to religious dogmas." According to Mr. Dealy, God has had but little to do with this world. Time and evolution will right all wrongs. We as a Church need not bother. Mr. Dealy dwells extensively on man's animal ancestry, and quotes Lester F. Ward, page 191, as saying that "the human race is supposed to have existed a quarter of a million years; that it has been conscious of its existence about 10,000 years, and really alive as psychic beings less than 5,000 years." How is that for a text-book for our preacher boys, as well as other boys, to study in a Methodist college? We need not be surprised at our people departing from the faith of our fathers, when our educational system so completely counts God out. To many of our people, God occupies a very insignificant relation to the affairs of this world. The Literary Digest reports Rev. Geo. R. Wallace, a minister of Toledo, Ohio, as sending out letters to 120 of the most prominent business men of that city, inquiring into their faith regarding the existence of God. Practically all believed in his existence, but did not believe in his personality. Mr. Wallace says that those who believed in God as our Father were very few. Is it possible that the ministry and the religious press, as well as our colleges, are responsible for such a dearth? Some men would have us believe that science is all fact and that religion is only fancy.

That the above conditions exist in our pulpits, in the pew and in our colleges cannot be denied. What then is the remedy? "Is there no balm in Gilead? is there no physician there? Why then is not the health of the daughter of my people recovered?" (Jer. 8, 22.)

BISHOP HOSS' VOLUME.

By H. M. Du Bose, D. D.

He is more than a genius whose words in judgment of the events and concerns of yesterday are found to be the oracles of to-day. "Methodist Fraternity And Federation," a volume containing seven addresses by Bishop Hoss, delivered on as many important and epochal occasions in the history of world-wide Methodism, during the past twenty years, illustrates the prescience of sound conviction and wise judgment. These addresses had already been accepted as establishing safe and notable precedents in the matters discussed in them, but in the permanent form of the present publication, in which they assume a logical alignment, they are worthy to be accepted and put into a long use as "State Papers" of Methodism.

In the first place, it is noteworthy that the three principal of these addresses were delivered successively before the General Conference of the Methodist Church of Canada, the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States of America, and the Conference of the British Wesleyan Connection. What other Methodist ever discharged a succession of tasks so full of ambassadorial responsibility and opportunity? And none has, at any time, been set in the families of Wesleyanism who could have more effectively discharged the commission.

The seven addresses of the volume are named as follows, in the table of contents: "Greetings to Our Canadian Kinsfolk;" "Salutations to Our Twin Sister of the North;" "A Message to the Mother Church of Methodism;" "The Religious Newspaper;" "The New Demand Upon Methodist Authorship;" "At the Gathering of the Tribes;" "Some Conditions of Organic Union." Four of these addresses—the Messages to the Canadian and "Northern" Churches, and the papers on Methodist journalism and authorship were delivered prior to the author's election to the episcopacy, the one on journalism being heard at the Ecumenical Conference at Washington City in 1891 and the one on authorship at the Ecumenical Conference in London, in 1901. "The Message to the Mother Church of Methodism" was the regular fraternal address from our Church, delivered before the Wesleyan Conference, at Sheffield, England, in 1903, the year after the messenger's election to the episcopacy. "At the Gathering of the Tribes," was the address of welcome delivered at the Ecumenical Conference held in Toronto, in 1911, while "Some Conditions of Organic Union" was delivered at a meeting of the Joint Commission on Federation and Union, in Baltimore, in November, 1911.

Although these addresses were prepared and delivered under widely varying conditions, and some of them widely separated periods, they reveal a unity of thought, a continuity of conviction, and a persistence of the historic and prophetic sense to an extraordinary degree. In a general way, they treat of Ecumenical Methodist relations, of the wider problems of Wesleyanism, of Methodist faith and thought in their current and crucial aspects, of Methodist literature and authorship, and of the specifically American Methodist issues of federation and organic union.

One can see at a glance how much more effective these occasional and time-matured utterances are in developing the issues discussed, than could be a set discussion, however purposeful and spirited. The element of time is scarcely less essential to the successful solving of living problems than it is to the writing of history. Indeed, argumentation in vital questions is a species of history writing or recital. The volume under review testifies to the fact that the thought consistency of twenty years is a good manifestation of the consistency of a life time. Methodism is a phenomenon of history. It will be a perilous day for us, if those who are devoid of historic acumen and skill, are left to shape its destinies.

In what may be described as the Ecumenical drift of these addresses, are found many utterances which the younger men of our connection would do well to study, for they more than intimate conditions already forming against the sky-line of the future.

Rev. John P. Lowry, the well known Arkansas evangelist, who has been quite unwell physically for several months, has recovered sufficiently to take up again his "loved employ." He has lately held a very successful meeting at Achille, Oklahoma.

Southern Methodism seems to be still forging forward in North Alabama. We notice that a $40,000 church will be dedicated at Prattville on November 30, and that a movement is under way to erect a $15,000 house of worship at Fairfield.

It is stated that over $300,000 has been pledged for the Representative Church at Washington City, and that of this amount $169,000 is already in hand. The erection of this urgently needed structure will mean much for Southern Methodism at the National Capital.

Dr. E. M. Bounds, who for many years had had a wide acquaintanceship throughout Southern Methodism, died at his home in Washington, Ga., on Sunday, August 24, at the advanced age of 78. At one time Dr. Bounds was Assistant Editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate.

On Sunday, September 14, the Northern and Southern Methodists of Maysville, Ky., will celebrate the centennial of the dedication of the first Methodist church erected in that city. Bishop David H. Moore and Bishop E. R. Hendrix are expected to be present and take part in the exercises.

Dr. H. M. Hamill, the accomplished Superintendent of the Sunday School Training work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is now the Chaplain General of the United Confederate Veterans. Dr. Hamill scarcely looks as if he were old enough to have done service in the War between the States.

Dr. T. H. Lewis, of the Methodist Protestant Church, whose golden eloquence as an advocate of union among the Methodist bodies of the United States has won for him international fame, has lately announced his opposition to the proposed merging of his own denomination with the United Brethren. He asserts that the terms submitted are too one-sided, the Methodist Protestants being asked to do most of the surrendering.

According to the report of the statistical secretaries of the late World's Sunday School Conference at Zurich, Switzerland, the number of Protestant Sabbath schools in all lands is 297,866, a gain of 11,864 since 1910. The enrollment of these schools is 28,701,489, an increase since 1910 of 690,295. The Samoan Islands showed the largest percentage of growth; that of the United States and England was only moderately good. The figures from some countries were not complete.

Dr. Charles M. Sheldon in a letter to The Christian Herald declares that his alleged utterance concerning the need of a Protestant "confessional" was evolved out of a wholly different statement which he made. He says: "All I meant by the term was a regular opportunity offered by the pastor to his people to confide in him and pour out their troubles, in order to secure the help of such a close personal friendship. I had no thought of advocating a confessional like that of the Roman Catholics."

The Christian Observer, in referring to the Seventh Day Adventists, says: "This sect orignated in 1833 with William Miller, a fanatical student of prophecy, who claimed with absolute assurance that the year of the second coming of Christ was to be 1843. As that prophecy failed, it was laid to the miscalculation of the dates, set by prophecy, and repeated failures greatly diminished the number of the Millerites who at that time are said to have numbered 50,000 adherents. In 1855 they settled permanently at Battle Creek, Michigan, where their headquarters are to-day."

Bishop Hoss has begun his round of Conferences, having commenced with the Denver Conference, which met at Aztec, New Mexico, on August 28. Following this will come the Missouri Conference on September 3, the Southwest Missouri on September 17, and the St. Louis on Sept. 24. The Bishop is reported to be much improved in health, and it is thought that he will be able, with proper care, to stand this continuous strain of work, though naturally his friends will feel some solicitude concerning him, as this is his first attempt to render steady and active service since his physical breakdown about a year ago.

Bishop Lawrence, of the Massachusetts diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and Rev. Arthur B. Papineau, rector of the Episcopal Church at Wayland, Mass., have each lately been sued by a woman residing in Wayland for refusing to administer the communion to her and alleged defamation of character. We notice that Bishop W. P. Thirkield, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has also lately been sued by a colored preacher at Jackson, Miss., who gave as his reason that he had been dispossessed of his pastorate without being given an adequate opportunity to defend himself. We have observed that in such cases the authorities enforcing discipline are seldom at fault.

Rev. J. M. Glenn, the alert Editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate, has recently made a visit to Junaluska, N. C., and he gave last week in his paper a very interesting description of that attractive seat of the Southern Methodist Chautauqua and its environs. We think, however, that he has run some risk in picturing at such length the sunset scene that he viewed from the summit of the mountain. Can Brother Glenn have forgotten that a famous Congressman once won for the like of that a soubriquet which stuck to him through life? However, in that case the gentleman's initials co-operated in enforcing the suggestion upon the public mind; and the absence of this factor may save our esteemed confrere from a similar fate.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE RUSTON DISTRICT.

Dear Brothers: You are now entering the last quarter of the annual race. You are entering with fair prospects of a good finish. So far as things material are concerned, we have had a good year. Some of us have left undone what we ought to have done ere this. There has been little accomplished in the matter of the "collections ordered by the Annual Conference." The ability of our people to pay these "debts of honor" has never been better in my knowledge. We have been abundantly blessed in "basket and in storehouse," and it behooves us, if we sustain our standing before God, not to be behindhand in these matters. Don't be afraid to press the Lord's claim against any man. The love that does not give is not the love that saves; so also the faith that does not permit giving, has no notice taken of it here or hereafter. What a person does for a cause or person is always the measure of his love for and devotion to that cause or person. The measure of the love is the value of the gift, and likewise the value of the gift is the measure of the love. This will always be true. God so loved that he gave. And what a gift! Yet nothing less than that gift could have measured his love. The greatest grace of the good news is liberality.

At this juncture I can not forbear to make a quotation from a great preacher upon this same subject: "Remember the saying: 'Scanty sowing, scanty harvest; plentiful sowing, plentiful harvest. Let every one give not grudgingly, or under compulsion; for God loves a cheerful giver. God has power to shower all kinds of blessings upon you, so that, having, under all circumstances and on all occasions, all that you can need, you may be able to shower all kinds of benefits upon others. (The Scripture says: 'He scattered broadcast, he gave to the poor; his righteousness continues for ever.' And he who supplies 'seed to the sower, and bread for eating', will supply you with seed, and cause it to increase, and will multiply the fruits of your righteousness.') Rich in all things yourselves, you will be able to show liberality, which, with our help, will cause thanksgiving to be offered to God. For the rendering of a public service such as this not only relieves the needs of your fellow-Christians, but also results in the offering to God of many a thanksgiving. Through the evidence afforded by the service thus rendered, you cause men to praise God for your fidelity to your profession of faith in the Good News of the Church, as well as for the liberality of your contributions for them and for all others. And they also, in their prayers for you, express their longing to see you, because of the surpassing love of God displayed toward you."

Read this letter to the churches, for there be many who will never hear of it if you do not. May the grace of God be with you.

Your fellow helper,

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Lights and Shadows of Seventy Years. By J. E. Godbey, D. D. The St. Louis Christian Advocate Company, St. Louis, Mo.

This is a most readable and entertaining book—a charmingly written autobiography of one who has had a long, varied, and useful life. The son of a Methodist minister, Dr. Godbey gives some most suggestive glimpses into the itinerancy in pioneer times. The memorable Civil War period and the trying years immediately following are touched upon in an interesting and informing manner. The author's career as a circuit rider, station preacher, presiding elder, editor, and college professor is briefly reviewed, and terse comments are made upon various persons and events. Being a man of virile intellect and of unusual insight into things, his reflections are always of a character to impress the reader. His style of writing is admirable in every respect. It gives us pleasure to commend heartily this meritorious volume to the public.

The Bible Champion (continuing the Bible Student and Teacher); Jay Benson Hamilton, D. D., Editor. The first number of this monthly made its appearance in August. It is published by the Bible League of North America, 86 Bible House, New York City. The editor is a distinguished minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who has lately taken up the gauge of battle against heretical teachings in that denomination. The avowed purpose of this periodical is to defend "the faith once delivered unto the saints." We think such a journal is urgently needed, and we are glad to note its establishment. The price of a year's subscription is $1, and of a single number, 15 cents. As a sample copy, the September issue, containing Dr. Luther F. Townsend's famous discussion of the Book of Jonah, may be had for 10 cents. We think our preachers would do well to subscribe for this magazine; besides the excellent reading matter which they would thus obtain, they would secure information as to where the best answers to the cavilings of the skeptics of this day, both inside and outside of the Church, may be had. Such knowledge is well-nigh indispensable to the minister who desires to keep abreast of the times and to safeguard his flock from the pernicious literature which is being scattered broadcast over the land.

The statistics issued by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States for the past year show that New Orleans ranks second as a port in this country, leading Galveston, Boston, and all other ports except New York.

The taxable property of the State of Louisiana increased $23,415,910 during the year ending June 30, according to the figures given out by the State Board of Equalization on August 28. It is said that more than $10,000,000 of this increase was in New Orleans.

Forty-one State Legislatures were in session during this year, and in thirty States laws were enacted for the prevention of the spread of tuberculosis. There was a total of $5,000,000 appropriated for prevention and research work in the interest of sufferers from the dreaded white plague.

Emperor William of Germany on August 23 made public the announcement that from now on he would not taste malt or vinous liquors of any kind. With the Kaiser of Germany a teetotaler, we hope the Germans may be encouraged to drink less beer. Drunken public officials are becoming less numerous, and we shall hail with joy the time when the American people will refuse to cast a vote for any man unless he is a total abstainer.

Mr. Wm. McGilvary, State Labor Commissioner, has found a law on the Louisiana statute books which makes it imperative that all mechanics employed to work on public buildings shall have paid their last poll tax assessment or be subjected to a fine, if they are laboring in a city of more than 10,000 population. The law referred to is Act 271. The object of the law is that no man may be privileged to profit by labor for the State who has not sufficient regard for his civic duties to pay his poll tax. Mr. McGilvary has issued a notice to all contractors in the State that the law will hereafter be rigidly enforced.

Governor Hall has called the Louisiana State Legislature to meet in special session on September 15. The principal object of this meeting is that the Assembly may give to the Governor the authority to call a Constitutional Convention. The condition that has made the calling of such a convention necessary is the fact that there exists a State debt of $11,000,000, for which bonds have been issued but which thus far remain unsold, with no prospect of buyers. The Governor believes that a Constitutional Convention will solve the problem by writing into the Constitution of the State such a clause as will enable him successfully to float a $11,000,000 bond issue.

Governor Samuel M. Ralston, of Indiana, on August 26 served notice to race track operators that he would enforce the anti-gambling laws of that State if he had to call out the State soldiers. That the Governor is the Chief Executive of the State is well known, and it is comforting to hear of one who has the courage to really execute the laws of his commonwealth, in spite of the negligence of local officials and so-called popular opinion. It is a matter of common knowledge that gamblers and saloonkeepers have no regard for law, and that it is by habitually breaking it they sustain themselves; yet public officials for the sake of votes wink at these violations in many places. What we need is more Governors of the Ralston type.

PERSONAL.

We regret to know that our long-time friend, Rev. G. W. Bachman, continues to be annoyed quite a good deal with an impaired eyesight. We are glad, however, to be informed that his physicians hold out to him the hope of some relief, which we trust may speedily come. Brother Bachman is one of the best Methodist historians in this section of the country, and the articles dealing with past times that he has been giving us in the Advocate have been both entertaining and instructive.

In a personal note to the Editor, Rev. W. S. Lagrone makes the following reference to his work at Greenville, Miss.: "We are moving along about as usual. We have been holding our Sunday evening services during the hot season on the lawn just behind the church, and this plan has proven quite a success. We had 250 chairs at the last service and nearly all of them were occupied. I am planning to begin my meeting here on the fourth Sunday in September. Brother Spragins and I will do the preaching, and Mr. I. N. Price will lead the singing. We need a great meeting, and there are some signs of its coming."

Rev. C. W. Crisler, pastor of the Main Street Church of Hattiesburg, will begin a series of revival services on October 19, with Rev. T. H. Dorsey, of Water Valley, Miss., to do the preaching, and Rev. O. C. Seevers, of Meridian, to conduct the singing. Brother Crisler received a young lady into the Church on profession of faith on Sunday, Aug. 24, and a prominent lumberman in the same manner at the prayer meeting on the Wednesday night preceding. Besides these, four young ladies have committed themselves to join within a few days. The prayer meeting on Wednesday evening, August 20, which was conducted by Judge J. M. Stevens, was an inspiration. The laymen are conducting these mid-week services, and are making them a great success.

Rev. J. D. Ellis, the faithful and alert chaplain of the Mississippi Penitentiary, recently published in The Issue an article expressing appreciation of the assistance given him by the Trustees of that institution in his work. These gentlemen, it will be remembered, have lately had their administration investigated and have been the subjects of a vigorous prosecution. We know nothing of the merits of this controversy, but it is to the credit of these officers that the Chaplain thinks that their management has been helpful to him in the performance of his duties. Brother Ellis has lately made an earnest plea for better facilities for religious work among the convicts in a a report to the Trustees. This, we hope to notice at some length in a later issue of the Advocate.

SOME GOOD MEETINGS.

Dear Doctor Meek: Since my last communication to the Advocate was written, it has been my great pleasure to assist in several revival campaigns, some of which were highly successful.

On August 3 we closed a most gracious meeting at Georgetown, Miss. In this meeting the interest was deep from the very beginning. Large congregations attended all the services and responded readily to the call of the Gospel. The church was revived and quite a class of converts were received into the Church on "profession of faith." Rev. J. V. Bennett is the pastor in this new and growing town, and he is not only in high favor with his people, but is making full proof of his ministry there. As an expression of their appreciation of him, the congregation, on the last night of the meeting, presented him with a sum of money with which to defray his expenses while on his vacation, which he spent with his family in Leake County. Brother Bennett is regarded by his parishioners as a splendid preacher and a diligent pastor.

From Georgetown we hastened, on Monday, Aug. 3, to the old and historic town of Benton, Miss., where we were booked to begin at 8 o'clock that evening. Here we had a really good meeting. The Spirit of the Lord was with us throughout, and a most enjoyable time was had. The stores all closed for the services, large crowds heard the Word as it was preached, and many were converted or reclaimed and a good class of converts was baptized by the pastor and received into the Church of Christ. An interesting feature of this meeting was the splendid "pounding" given the pastor's family.

Closing at Benton, with the service for men only, at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, I hastened over to old Midway, another appointment on the Benton charge, and, at night, took up the work which the pastor had begun at the morning hour. Here, as at Benton, the congregations were good and grew steadily until the end of the meeting, but owing to conditions which we could not control, we were unable, so far as immediate or visible results were concerned, to accomplish much good.

From Midway, by pre-arrangement, we went to Zeiglerville, also on the Benton Charge, where on the morning of the 17th we began what proved to be one of the most gracious meetings I have known of for many a day. The whole country, for miles around, was brought under the influence of the Gospel, and a real old-fashioned revival was realized. There were many reclamations and conversions, and a fine class of converts was baptized and received into the Church. It was particularly pleasant for the writer to labor with the good people of Zeiglerville. Twenty years ago, when a boy-preacher, he spent a most pleasant year with them as their pastor, forming many strong attachments, which all the years that have intervened have not dissipated or affected, unless they have served to deepen and strengthen them. The good people of Zeiglerville hold their pastor in high esteem, and as an expression thereof overhauled him the last night of the meeting and gave him a good "pounding," one good sister bringing with her a live pig which she offered upon the altar of her devotion to her spiritual teacher.

The pastor of this important charge is Rev. J. O. Ware (a nephew of our lamented brother, J. N. Ware), one of the most genial and lovable characters I have ever known. Brother Ware has been bringing things to pass on the Benton charge and will come up to Conference with a good report. Not only does he "give diligence to reading," to preaching "the Word," and looking well after the flock of God committed to his care, but he has wonderfully improved the material affairs of the charge. This is particularly true of the situation at Benton, where he has transformed both the parsonage and church, at a cost of several hundred dollars. Brother Ware is a "live wire" and will give a good account of himself in the coming years.

To-morrow I will be off for North Mississippi for a campaign. I am enclosing a list of subscribers for your most splendid paper, The Advocate.

UNANSWERED APPEALS.

Some people do not understand why the Board of Missions is always complaining of the inadequacy of funds and asking for more. The extracts quoted below from recent letters from our missionaries will be a sufficient answer to any man whose heart responds to the inspiration of opportunity and the call of need.

"We are in the very midst of heathenism. It rolls like an ocean all around us. We cannot step out to our front gate without seeing a half-score of people who know absolutely nothing of our God and his Christ. If we walk a few blocks we see hundreds. There are 75,000 people in Sungkiang and only 250 Christians. There are more than a hundred heathen temples, and only three Christian churches. For 75,000 people there are only five ordained preachers. Oh, that the Church at home could but see the fields as we see them! 'The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth laborers into his harvest.'"—Rev. L. D. Patterson, Sungkiang, China.

"What opportunities! Would that I could sound it aloud from every housetop in the homeland! China's salvation is in the hands of the Christian Church. Will the Church fall in this day of her opportunity?"—Rev. John C. Hawk, Changchow, China.

"Since our last Conference more than a hundred people have joined the Church. There is a great stir and move in this land toward the Church of God. All of our chapels are entirely too small to meet the rapidly increasing needs. Do let our people know!"—Rev. J. L. Hendry, Huchow, China.

"We are turning patients away, all for lack of room, and I am averaging one major operation a day. I do not know what we are to do. We need our new doctor and new hospital at once."—Dr. John A. Snell, Soochow, China.

"In Japan there yet remain 25,000,000 wholly unevangelized farmers, 1,000,000 fishermen, 8,000,000 practically untouched business men, 743,000 factory employees, 300,000 Army and Navy men in active service, and a large body of students, who are still without God, and most of them know too little to be called in any sense evangelized."—Maud Bonnell, Kobe, Japan.

"In the villages in reach of Kyoto there are more than 200,000 people who have no one to give them the gospel. My heart is going out toward these people, but what am I and my small force 'among so many?' We pray and trust that the Lord will multiply the loaves as we hand them out to the people."—W. A. Davis, Kyoto, Japan.

"There isn't anything needing attention more than the villages, and there is almost nothing being done in them. I need a tent, a phonograph, a cornet, and a Japanese worker to assist me in this work. I simply must be placed in a position to do it, and you are the man for me. What do you say?"—Rev. T. W. B. Demaree, Matsuyama, Japan.

SOME WORDS OF EXHORTATION.

To the Pastors and Official Members of the Lafayette District, Louisiana Conference:

Dear Brethren: The meeting of our Annual Conference draweth nigh. I have almost finished the third round of quarterly conferences. At most of the appointments successful revival meetings have been held. Numbers have been converted, many blessed, and a goodly number added to the Church; for all of which we render sincere praise to Him who giveth the increase.

In one thing, however, I notice we are far behind; up to date very little has been raised on the collections ordered by the Conference. It would surprise and perhaps tend to discourage you, should I turn to the record and give you the exact figures. I will not do it. It is sufficient to state that very little has been done. Suffer a word of exhortation from your little Elder who loves every one of you and wishes to see every one of you succeed. It is very difficult to make up lost time. Much I know can be accomplished on the "home stretch," but if you have not been running some from the "start," the chances for "winning out" in the end are against you.

Make these last few months tell. Go to your closets in prayer. Get the matter on your hearts. Call your official boards together in prayer and counsel. Get the matter on their hearts, and let each pastor and official board determine to make the closing of this Conference year the best ever. Do this for the glory of God, and because the Church and what she stands for means something—everything—to you. These sacred claims—the Superannuate Preachers', Widows', and Orphans' Fund, Missions, Church Extension, Education—but why name them? They are all sacred, all needy, and our people have the means wherewith to help. God is wonderfully blessing our whole State this year. The Lafayette District is rejoicing in a bountiful crop and beautiful harvest weather. Press the claims of God upon the people.

How I wish that the entire Louisiana Conference understood the importance and needs of our French Mission work here in South and Southeast Louisiana. One trip to the beautiful Terrebonne country, one visit to Mermenteau, Port Barre, St. Martinville and other places—to stand one time before those eager crowds with anxious upturned faces and preach to them the words of life—and all of you would be enthusiastic in your support of the French Mission work. Hebert, the native-born, pioneer, veteran foundation-layer, and Breithaupt, the energetic, tireless, wise, wide-awake and willing worker—how much these men need help! Instead of only two or three workers in this field, we need ten. But I am off my subject. See to it, brethren, that you raise every dollar possible. If it is not raised, let it not be your fault.

Lovingly and fraternally.

REV. G. A. KLEIN, EVANGELIST, AND THE SARDIS REVIVAL.

The people of Sardis, Miss., are like the little boy with a penny. He looks at candy, apples, raisins and marbles with longing eyes and wishes that he could buy all, but alas, has only a penny to spend! We of Sardis won a bargain, our penny is a message to the world, and we want to get the most we can for it. Our greatest desire is the glory of our risen Lord. Listen! what are the things you hear on the streets? "I am greatly benefited"—"I can never be the same man again." What is heard in the home? "Our family relations are sweeter now"—"Home is dearer to me now"—"Thank God for a Savior who goes into the kitchen with me when the cook does not come to get breakfast." What of prayer meetings? The general prayer meeting is an inspiration; the men's prayer meeting (something over 40 young men and boys attend every Monday night) is a power for good; the young girls' prayer meeting is good; the ladies' prayer meeting is enjoyable and well attended. Is there more study of the Bible? "I hurry through my work now, not to read the magazines, but to read my Bible"—"I never loved to read my Bible before." Pocket Testaments are carried and many have promised to read a chapter each day.

Is the Bible understood better? "Never read it much before, for I didn't understand it"—"Words grow luminous as I read and my heart is strangely moved." For years faithful, godly men have sought to inspire us with higher ideals and loftier aims, but we failed in our conception of the power of God. Our present beloved pastor, R. H. B. Gladney, has preached the truth to us for eighteen months, until he introduced Brother Klein, of Nashville, Tenn., to us. Brother Klein, in his own peculiar, God-given way "read the law distinctly to the people." A Nehemiah indeed, he set us to rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem, and they are growing higher. The penny is burning the little fellow's pocket, the candy looks so good, he is dancing first on one foot and then on the other. O he just can't wait! We have found and broken some of the cords Satan had used to bind us and are a freer people. The whereunto we have attained by the grace of God we will uphold, expecting more and more the liberty of Christ. As a church we are more united and are willing that Brother Gladney should lead us into deeper, wider things than we have hitherto known, and he, like the Master, is working in and through others. In gratitude to God for the thing he hath wrought for and in us and believing that the preaching of Brother Klein, and the songs of his helper, Brother P. M. Boyd, were the channel of blessing and power to usward, we spend our penny and tell it to you, that if he is the man you need you may know where to find him.

MRS. J. S. CARLTON.

A WORD FROM BROTHER ELLIS.

I thank you, Dr. Meek, for the mild and excellent spirit of your notice of my book, "Sin and Depravity," in the Christian Advocate. Knowing that the contents of the book were not in line with your views on the subject, I looked for something a little more caustic, but the grace of restraint prevailed.

While I yield to the fact that my utterances cannot be made to square with the verbiage of some of the statements termed "standard," I am not altogether ready to admit that the contents of the book are seriously in conflict with the spirit of our Twenty-Five Articles of Faith.

That we are inclined "of our own nature to evil and that continually," is a fact not to be successfully controverted, and for the reason that it convicts Adam of possessing a sinful nature before he sinned. This we have to admit, or thoughtlessly and foolishly assume, that he ate the forbidden fruit without being inclined to do so.

If the deadly effect as threatened against Adam in case of disobedience was inflicted, then it is plain that man cannot act in response to moral behest until acted upon, which action must result in the impartation of moral inclination and ability to respond to rules looking to the development of a Christian life and character.

The commission to preach the gospel to every creature seems to be projected on the fact of the "going-before" grace preparing every creature for responding to rule, looking to the development of that "more abundant life." (John, 10:10.) And this response is life in action, is it not? This view furnishes the valid ground and reason for man's reprehensibility and punishment, should he fail to respond.

R. A. ELLIS.

IF WORDS WERE BIRDS.

"If words were birds
And swiftly flew
From tips of lips
Owned dear by you,
Would they, to-day,
Be hawks and crows,
Or blue, and true, and sweet—
Who knows?

"Let's play to-day,
We choose the best:
Birds blue and true,
With dove-like breast.
'Tis queer, my dear,
We never knew
That words like birds
Had wings and flew."

SEWING WITHOUT THREAD.

I like to sew when there is no thread in the machine, it runs so easily," said a little girl one day.

A good many people, I think, are pretty fond of running their machine without thread.

When I hear a boy talking largely of the grand things he would do, if only he could, and if only things and circumstances were different, and who neglects every daily duty, and avoids work and lessons, I think he is running his machine without any thread.

When I see a girl very sweet and pleasant abroad, ready to do anything for a stranger, and cross and disagreeable in her home, she, too, is running her machine without any thread.

Ah! This sewing without a thread is very easy indeed, and the life machine will make a great buzzing, but labor, time, and force will in the end be far worse than lost.—Friend of Boys and Girls.

WHY MINNIE COULD NOT SLEEP.

She sat up in bed. The curtain was drawn up, and she saw the moon; and it looked as if it were laughing at her.

"You need not look at me, Moon," she said. "You don't know about it; you can't see in the daytime. Besides, I am going to sleep."

She lay down and tried to go to sleep. Her clock on the mantel went "tick-tock, tick-tock." She generally liked to hear it; and to-night it sounded just as if it said, "I know, I know, I know."

"You don't know either," said Minnie, opening her eyes wide. "You weren't there, you old thing; you were upstairs."

Her loud noise awoke the parrot. He took his head from under his wing and cried out, "Polly did."

"That's a wicked story, you naughty bird," said Minnie. "You were in grandma's room, so now!"

Then Minnie tried to go to sleep again. She lay down and counted white sheep, just as grandma said she did when she couldn't sleep. But there was a big lump in her throat. "Oh, I wish I hadn't."

Pretty soon there came a very soft patter of four little feet, and her pussy jumped up on the bed, kissed Minnie's cheek, and then began to "pur-r-r, pur-r-r-r." It was very queer, but that, too, sounded as if pussy said, "I know, I know."

"Yes, you do know, kitty," said Minnie; and then she threw her arms around kitty's neck and cried bitterly. "And—I guess—I want—to—see—my—mamma!"

Mamma opened her arms when she saw the little weeping girl coming, and then Minnie told her miserable story.

"I was awfully naughty, mamma, but I did want the custard pie so bad, and so I ate it up, 'most a whole pie; and then—I—I—oh, I don't want to tell, but I 'spect I must—I shut kitty in the pantry to make you think she did it. But I'm truly sorry, mamma."

Then mamma told Minnie that she had known all about it. But she had hoped that the little daughter would be brave enough to tell her all about it herself.

"But, mamma," she asked, "how did you know it wasn't kitty?"

"Because kitty would never have left a spoon in the pie," replied mamma, smiling.—Little Men and Women.

A MODERN MIRACLE.

"Of course, no one believes in miracles nowadays," said Mr. Hardy to his neighbor, Mr. Clark.

"That depends on what you mean by 'miracles,'" said Mr. Clark, thoughtfully. "I believe in them myself."

"You mean that you think miracles occurred in the time of Christ. They certainly don't occur now. Miracles belong to the age of superstition, to the childhood of the race."

"I don't know about that," said Mr. Clark. "If you agree that a miracle is a change due to supernatural power, I can show you a miracle to-night right here in this city. Will you go with me and promise to look and listen without prejudice?"

"Surely I will."

The two men met after supper that night, and Clark took his friend to a part of the city in which Hardy had never been before. They went into a little hall between two saloons, and took seats with a crowd of men and women so dilapidated in appearance that Hardy whispered to Clark: "What sort of place have you got me into? This must be a meeting of all the 'downs and outs.'"

"It is," said Clark, briefly.

After the leader had given out a hymn and made a short prayer, a big man with a voice of thunder rose and spoke.

For half an hour he poured forth a perfect torrent of appeal to that roomful of lost men and women. He begged, urged, commanded them to come to God.

When he sat down, a score of men and women went forward, and the big man knelt and prayed for them in a voice so tender that Hardy found his face wet with tears.

He and Clark went out on the street.

"Well," said Clark, "you have seen your miracle."

"I grant I have seen an interesting sight and heard a good temperance talk, but where is the miracle?"

"Nine months ago that man you heard was a professional gambler and thief. He has been in state prison six different times. He has spent a fortune in drink and vice. To-day he is engaged in an honest trade. He has abandoned all his old habits, and every hour he can spare he labors to redeem lost men and women. He is a devout, prayerful man. I say he is a modern miracle, as great as any that Jesus Christ ever performed. Could anything except miraculous power make that man what he is to-night?"

Hardy was silent. Finally he said: "You are right. I shall never disbelieve in miracles again."—Youths' Companion.

ASSIMILATION.

If we would be much like Christ, we must be much with him. If we would become transformed into his image, thoroughly made over so as to be hardly recognizable for the same, we must "with unveiled face" and unclosed eye and untiring mind and uncorrupted will tarry in his presence and look long at his glory. There is no other method. We come thus to take his point of vision in our perception of things; we acquire his habit of mind; we catch his tone; we reflect his views; we adopt his policy; we unconsciously imitate his ways. His words sing into our soul; his plans take possession of us; his very glance inspires us; his inmost purposes become our own; and, scarcely conscious of the process, without knowing when or how, we find ourselves merged into his being—copies of his character. It is somewhat thus that a devoted wife comes in time closely to resemble her husband even in face, a son the revered father, a student the adored instructor. It is not a process that can be very much hurried. Some plates are more sensitive than others to such impression. One part is to cultivate the sensitiveness and see that there is no intermission in the exposure. Given time enough, together with steadfast resolution and a vigorous use of every available means, and the results are both sure and amazing.—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

JUST A BIT OF SOLEMN REFLECTION!

What is the Present? From whence did it come? How many long weary years have come and gone that the present day might arrive? Away back yonder in the past we were told that the great Future held in store for us joys, happiness, success and reward. That "Future" is upon us. The Present is the Future from which we hoped so much. Have our hopes been realized?

The wearied traveller in the barren desert is urged on, hoping that just ahead of him, half-hidden among the green trees, there is an oasis where sparkling waters await him. So we are encouraged and animated to push on and on in the belief that sometime, somewhere we will come suddenly upon a spot in that "great future" which will reveal unto us all the desires of life. But alas!

> "Hope springs eternal in the human breast,
> Man never is—but always to be blest."

Was Pope correct when he laid down that rule as the philosophy of life? Be it so! Let us repeat it: The present is the future from which we hoped so much. Thus on we go until the end is reached, hoping, halting, doubting, until finally the burden is laid down and God says, "it is enough, come up higher!" May I so live that I may some day be an occupant of that "house of many mansions" built by the hand of God himself! Then only can my fondest hopes be realized.

Editorial.

LET US HOPE THAT HE WILL CAREFULLY CENSOR THEM.

A short time since Dr. Ivey, the editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, in a paragraph in his paper, said: "In a few weeks the minds of our readers will be regaled by articles bearing on General Conference legislation." There are doubtless some in the Church who were pleased with this announcement and who will look forward with agreeable anticipations to the fulfillment of Dr. Ivey's promise; but we frankly confess that we are not without some misgivings as to the value of what may be in store for us. We do not say that there ought never to be any discussion in the church press of proposed church legislation—there are, in our judgment, some matters that may with perfect propriety be explained and debated therein—but when the door is opened wide for a general assault upon our teachings and polity by all sorts of innovators and malcontents, we are inclined to think that the results are vastly more harmful than helpful. We had much of this before Dr. Ivey became the editor of our General Organ, and we have been cherishing the fond hope that he would not see fit to perpetuate this feature of the preceding administration.

As we see it, the objection to such a policy is that these criticisms of our laws and system of government are made before the general public, as well as before our own people. Some man who has a grievance trains his gun on the episcopacy, or the presiding eldership, or some other essential part of our organization, and his attack is scattered broadcast over the country to create a prejudice against Southern Methodism. Often it is the case that no defense of the Church against these assaults is made, or if one is put forth, it is perhaps printed in a later issue of the paper, snd in consequence its effectiveness is greatly lessened. There are probably not a few who read these published arraignments who never see any of the replies that are made to them, even if they appear.

What necessity is there for allowing in our own journals this wholesale quadrennial onslaught upon the government of our Church? If one objects to it, he is sometimes in reply charged with a desire to stifle free discussion. But in reality there is little to sustain such an allegation. The right of memorial is accorded to every organization in the connection from the lowest to the highest; individual members may send up petitions to the law-making body, if they so desire; issues raised may be debated in all the Conferences of the Church; the various Committees of the General Conference never refuse to hear at a reasonable length the advocates of any proposal pending; and that great tribunal itself is a deliberative body that operates under the usual parliamentary rules and gives ample opportunity to all of every shade of opinion to be heard.

To insist that Methodists shall settle their differences concerning the fundamentals of their doctrines and polity chiefly among themselves. is, we respectfully submit, not unduly restricting the liberty of public expression among our people. Is not this precisely what the other denominations do? Whoever saw a Roman Catholic, or Baptist, or Presbyterian journal devoting a large amount of space week after week to criticisms of the Church that maintained it? We never have. So far as our observation extends, Methodist papers have had almost exclusively a monopoly of this, to express it mildly, questionable policy.

Holding these views, we cannot but express the hope that when Dr. Ivey opens his columns to such a discussion, according to his announcement, that he will exercise a pretty rigid censorship over the papers with which we are to be "regaled," and that those which are radical and calculated to do harm will be shut out; or that if he admits contributions of this character, he will at least lift a shining lance in defense of the integral features of the Church, whose chief editor he is. Let it not be thought that we stand alone in the views which we have here expressed. The Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who are among the ablest religious leaders that can to-day be found in any land, in their magnificent address to the last General Conference of their denomination, which was held in Minneapolis in May, 1912, made the following ringing utterance on this subject:

"But while the ranks are closing up and the line of battle is changing front to meet new the conditions, it is opportune to remind ourselves of certain pertinent facts, such as these: First, there is no more infallible process for demoralizing an army than to create within its ranks distrust, either as to the effectiveness of its own organization, its plan of campaign, or its constituted leadership. Second, no agencies could be more effective in such a task than those appointed to instruct and inspire the rank and file with hope and courage. A grave responsibility rests upon our Church press, general officers, and leading ministers. We understand that the Church maintains a press for the advocacy of her doctrines and the defense of her polity when assailed, not as a free forum for the vagaries of writers who measure all problems by their own dooryards, or to officially sanction the promoters of disaffection. Every soldier knows that a half dozen contentious camp-guards can make more noise than a brigade of regulars on the march. While we would not restrain dignified and intelligent discussion, we must deprecate reckless and distorted criticism of our Church government. If we must have quadrennial hysteria over our Church polity, let it be confined where it appears, rather than made a public spectacle inviting the ridicule of our enemies.

"The memorial channel to the General Conference, which is the only power that can remedy what may be wrong, is always open. It is far easier to destroy than to build better. Secular organizations are held together by self-interest or by legal compulsion. A Church coheres only by spiritual gravitation born of faith in its mission and the efficiency of its endeavors. We confidently submit to this loyal body that there are limits beyond which public criticism of our Church government may not decently pass. The Church does not belong to us; we belong to the Church. She gathered us at her altars, that she might cherish and nurture us in godliness. What a man has to say of his mother in criticism of her wisdom or ways would better be said only in the family council, or left unsaid."

We scarcely need to say that every line of this impressive declaration, though addressed to the representatives of our Sister Church, applies with equal pertinency and force to our own widely extended communion.

HOW IS THIS?

When the controversy concerning Mr. Carnegie's offer to take over the Medical Department of Vanderbilt University first started, Chancellor Kirkland, in a formal interview which was sent out from Nashville, was quoted, among other things, as saying: "The members of the said Governing Board shall hold office for EIGHT YEARS, or until their successors are elected, but may be removed for cause by the Board of Trust at any annual meeting."

But notice carefully the following, which we take from the Pacific Methodist Advocate of August 14: "The 'conditions' involved in Mr. Carnegie's million dollar gift to the Medical Department of Vanderbilt University have cropped out, and we were given an inventory of them in the Associated Press dispatches recently. They are as follows: To serve until 1921, Dr. J. H. Kirkland and W. R. Cole, of Nashville, and Dr. H. S. Pritchett, of New York, President of the Carnegie Foundation; to serve until 1919, Dr. Edward O. Jordan, of Chicago University; to serve until 1927, Dr. William H. Howell, of Johns Hopkins University, Mr. Joseph E. Washington, of Wessington, Tenn., Mr. John W. Thomas, Nashville, and Mr. Bradford Knapp, of Tennessee."

Let it be noted that, notwithstanding Chsncellor Kirkland's solemn assurance that the members of the Governing Board were to be elected for eight years, the last four—a majority of the body—if the dispatch of the Associated Press as represented by the Pacific Methodist Advocate may be depended upon, have been elected for thirteen, or fourteen, years. Is it true that these regulations, upon which Dr. Kirkland assured the Church she might so confidently rely, have been so soon altered? And if there has been such a change as is indicated, at whose instance was it made? Surely the Methodist public is entitled to some explanation of this seeming discrepancy. Has the Associated Press erred, or have the Trustees already brought into requisition their well known practice of wiggling from one position to another?

MORE LIGHT DESIRED.

Using as a caption, "The Vanderbilt Muddle," the Pacific Methodist Advocate recently contained a lengthy and rather straddling sort of an editorial, which began as follows:

"Yes, it is a muddle. That is evidenced by the fact that the mind of the Church is divided on the question—some on one side; some on the other. The line of cleavage coming from below cuts straight through the College of Bishops."

Will Brother Vaughan kindly tell us how many Bishops this line of cleavage which he sees has left on the side of the Trustees?—and whether or not any are on that side, so far as the Kirkland-Carnegie transaction is concerned? Will he also please state what percentage of the Church he estimates as favoring the views of these gentlemen? If he thinks a considerable part of our membership is with them, we should like to ask him why it did not show any strength of consequence at the last General Conference? And we should like for him to name one District or Annual Conference during this regrettable controversy, which has been going on for years, that that side has ever carried. The truth is, we do not think that we have ever seen the Church more solidly united on any issue of importance than it is on this one, and if we are mistaken in this opinion, we shall be much obliged to Brother Vaughan if he will submit some data to convince us of our error.

WANTED IN THE OFFICE.

The issue of the Advocate of July 24, 1913, is exhausted. We should very much appreciate it if subscribers in the Meridian (Miss.) District who have preserved their copies and do not care to keep them, would kindly mail them to us. We limit our request to a single District since we do not wish to secure more copies than we need.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Have you sent in a club of six months' subscribers at 50 cents each? The time when you may do so is swiftly passing.

Rev. H. B. Perritt, of Greensburg, La., says: "We had with us yesterday Dr. I. W. Cooper, of Brookhaven, Miss., who preached to us twice in his usual strong way. We appreciated his visit very much."

Among those who have recently sent in subscriptions, we note the following to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere: Rev. J. M. Carpenter, Victoria, Miss., 3; Rev. H. L. Norton, Purvis, Miss., 4.

Prof. W. A. Bynum, formerly Principal of the High School at Columbia, La., has recently moved to Covington, La., and will be at the head of the school in that city. He is one of the wide-awake educators of the Pelican State.

Rev. A. J. Gearheard, our pastor at McDonoghville, a suburb of this city, left last Monday for a three weeks' visit to Missouri, his former home State. Mrs. Gearheard and the children had already preceded him there.

According to newspaper reports, an effort is being made by some of the Trustees of Centenary College to persuade the Louisiana State Legislature to purchase the old college property at Jackson, La., and use it as a State Reformatory for boys.

In forwarding us 7 six months' subscriptions from Zeiglerville, Miss., and thereabout, Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, adds: "With a single exception, all of these are new converts." This is the right way to start young Christians out. Good for this stirring evangelist!

Dr. J. W. Moore and Rev. H. W. Jamieson, of this city, have been engaged to deliver a series of practical stereopticon lectures at Kingsley House, which is located on Gaiennie Street, just three blocks from the Mary Werlein Mission, beginning the first of October. At the same time, Miss Norwood will be engaged in special work among the children of the Mission.

Dr. W. C. Black, of the Mississippi Conference, has moved from Tupelo to Meridian, Miss., and is domiciled at 1514 Twentieth Avenue. Dr. Black is widely known throughout the Church, and up to the time of his sunperannuation was generally regarded as one of the best pastors and ablest preachers in the connection. He was formerly stationed in Meridian, and has many friends in that city.

Rev. Hilary Westbrook, of Waynesboro, Miss., reports the work as moving along smoothly within the bounds of his charge. He has lately held three good meetings, with Rev. J. A. Smith, of Clayton, Ga., and Rev. B. F. Crook, of Terry, Miss., assisting him. He states that the preaching of the former at Big Rock and Hebron and of the latter at Fedora was good to the use of edifying. His parsonage is soon to be considerably improved.

We have received from Rev. W. F. Rogers, of Sallis, Miss., an interesting account of the revival campaign that he has been conducting in his charge, which will appear next week. We are pleased to note that the Lord has been richly blessing the labors of this faithful pastor.

In a note to our office, bearing date of August 26, Rev. H. B. Perritt says: "My brother and I are in a meeting at Day's Church, on the St. Helena charge. The Lord is blessing our labors, and we have already had 12 accessions on profession of faith. Pray for us."

Rev. W. J. O'Bryant, of our Main Street Church of Water Valley, Miss., has our hearty thanks for some renewals to the Advocate, and the promise of a club in the near future. Brother O'Bryant's charge is in a flourishing condition. He will tell the readers of the Advocate about the status of things in his parish in our next issue.

It was the Editor's privilege to occupy the pulpit of the Prytania Street Presbyterian Church last Sunday at 11 o'clock a. m., in the absence of the pastor, Dr. W. McF. Alexander, who is away on his annual vacation. This is one of the great Protestant congregations of the Crescent City, and its auditorium is one of the finest in the South.

We are indebted to Rev. J. A. Hall, our popular and worthy pastor at Grenada, Miss., for a fine post-card picture of the beautiful parsonage recently erected by the Methodists of that city at a cost of $4300. It is, indeed, a splendid-looking structure. We fancy that the occupancy of such a residence is well-nigh enough to convert Brother Hall to the belief that the time limit ought to be removed.

We have in hand an interesting account of the revival efforts that have been put forth on the Ringgold (La.) charge from the pen of the pastor, Rev. D. L. Griffin. This appreciated report reached us too late for this issue, but will appear next week. Brother Griffin has been bringing things to pass in his part of the Master's vineyard.

Rev. W. L. Graves, of Iuka, Miss., kindly remembered us with the following cheering item of news: "We were blessed with a great revival last week at Bethel, on the Sturgis Circuit, where Brother Bullard is pastor. There were more than 100 conversions and reclamations, and about 30 additions to our Church and several to the Baptist Church. Brother Bullard is a fine worker, and is much appreciated by his people."

We print this week two exhortations from Louisiana presiding elders, one from Rev. Briscoe Carter, of the Ruston District, and the other from Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir, of the Lafayette District. These brethren are alert, and manifestly have the work of the Church on their hearts. A stirring presiding elder can do much toward setting the pace at which things move in the territory over which he has supervision.

Writing under date of August 30, Rev. C. M. Chapman, President of Port Gibson Female College, says: "We are oiling our floors, adjusting new furnishings, and housing all kinds of provisions for the session that will begin on September 10. We were never in better fix for an opening. Our patronage will be large and of a select kind, as we are taking those who we believe, from their previous records, will 'make good.'"

Rev. W. H. Coleman, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, was in the city last Tuesday and paid our office an appreciated call. He spoke encouragingly of the work in his "diocese," and said that the pastors are, without exception, proving themselves to be a faithful and worthy band. One item of news that he gave us is that the district parsonage will soon be moved from Hammond to Baton Rouge, and that the First Church of the latter city has subscribed $1200 toward this enterprise.

A card from Rev. W. M. Young, our pastor at Amory, Miss., reads as follows: "Brother K. M. Harrison is very low. He was taken ill on Sunday, August 24, and his condition has been dangerous up to this time—the 29th. He was thought, however, to be slightly better to-day. Let his many friends remember him at the throne of grace." We greatly regret to be informed of the illness of this esteemed superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference, and we sincerely hope that ere this he has become very much better.

Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker, of Nashville, Tenn., sends us the following note: "Recently spending a Sunday in Houston, Texas, in the interest of the Epworth League work, I had the pleasure of meeting Rev. R. A. Davis, a superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, who is living there at 704 Belle Ave., with his son. At the same service I met a number of Louisianans, now residents of Houston. Brother Davis especially charged me with conveying his greetings to the brethren, and I beg your permission to carry out this commission through the columns of the Advocate."

The people of Cockrum, Miss., have been blessed with a gracious season of spiritual quickening and refreshing. The preaching in these services was done by the pastor, Rev. R. I. Collins. There were 11 additions to the Church.

Among those who have recently sent in lists of six months' subscribers is Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, of Sardis, Miss. Brother Gladney was blessed a short time since with a gracious revival in his church, all departments of which are now reported to be in excellent condition.

Dr. J. W. Price, of Clarksdale, Miss., was called to Belen, Miss., last week to officiate at the funeral of J. Clem Davis, the youngest son of Brother T. J. Davis. We are sorry to be informed of this sad dispensation of Providence, and we pray that divine grace may be vouchsafed to the bereaved ones in this sad hour.

A very successful meeting was in progress at Taylorsville, Miss., last week, conducted by the pastor, Rev. A. W. O'Bryant, and Dr. I. L. Peebles. Seventeen had joined the Church when our correspondent wrote, and the services were still continuing with much interest. Brother O'Bryant has lately favored us with a club of subscribers from his charge.

Rev. J. D. Harper, of Zachary, La., has been looking faithfully after the interests of the Conference organ among his parishioners. He sent us on the 25th ult. six subscribers, and added, "More will follow soon." We scarcely need to say that we are grateful to our brother for remembering us in this season when the state of our exchequer is such that it ugently needs replenishing.

Rev. C. N. Guice, of Canton, Miss., delighted the publisher with a fine bunch of renewals and new subscriptions on August 23, with a heartening check to correspond. We make our politest bow to this gifted young minister, who is fast coming to the front in his Conference. Why shouldn't he? It would be strange if one who can sing, preach, and work as he can, did not find his services much in demand.

Since last Conference, Dr. J. W. Moore, the pastor, has received 109 new members into the First Methodist Church of New Orleans. The church is now in a most excellent spiritual condition. Last week there were fifty present at prayer meeting, and 30 attended the prayer meeting service at St. Paul's Mission, which is being promoted by First Church workers. At present, Dr. Moore, and his efficient Junior Pastor, Rev. H. W. Jamieson, are planning to begin a protracted meeting about the middle of October, which they hope to continue until the first of December.

From Itta Bena, Miss., on August 29, Dr. T. B. Holloman, of Port Gibson, sent us the following sad message: "On the morning of August 25 the Reaper came and took from us our little seven-year-old grandson, Jessie Haley Holloman, son of John and Myna Lou Holloman. Following a virulent attack of diphtheria, he lingered through many weeks of intense suffering ere the end came. One by one, God gathers our children home." We extend our deepest sympathy to the stricken parents and grandparents, and pray that the Heavenly Father may graciously comfort and sustain them.

In a business letter to our office, Rev. M. M. Black says: "I am glad to say that the work of my church, Second Avenue, formerly known as Kingston, is in better shape, perhaps, than it has ever been before. In addition to the new pews of handsome pattern, which were put in a couple of months ago, some extensive improvements have been made upon the house of worship, and the interior is now quite attractive. I am having fine congregations. Fifty-four members have been received this year, 15 of these having united with the Church since our revival meeting in May."

From the Taylorsville (Miss.) Signal of August 28 we take the following: "Rev. E. L. Whiddon, of Brookhaven, preached two very strong sermons at the Methodist Church last Sunday. He gave a lecture at the church on Monday night on 'Danger Signals,' which was a very earnest appeal for the protection of young girls. His lecture was interspersed with stereopticon views. There was not an obscene picture or immodest word used. Indeed, so pleased were the people of Taylorsville with Brother Whiddon's lecture that they induced him to repeat it on the following Thursday night."

Dr. W. H. Huntley, presiding elder of the Seashore District, in sending in his fourth round of appointments, says: "We go into the last lap of the year's run with gracious results from revival meetings. May our work be permanent." Dr. Huntley also gave us the following items of interest: "Brother Linfield is back at Biloxi from a vacation furnished by his people. Brother Burton, of Gulfport, is with Chaffin, his only son, on the plantation near Crystal Springs—gone for three weeks. Brother Van Hook is mightily pleased with the outlook for the Seashore Camp Ground School. Send us a boy or girl."

Rev. W. M. Young, of Amory, Miss., writes: "We have just closed a great meeting at Nettleton, in which four Churches joined, namely, the Baptist, the Christian, the Southern Presbyterian, the Methodist, and the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America. These union services have been held annually for four years, each Church furnishing the preacher in succession. This year Dr. J. C. Barr, of the Lafayette Presbyterian Church of New Orleans, did the preaching, which was conspicuous for the magnifying of Christ. He did us great good, and the meeting was a spiritual season that will be of permanent benefit to our people."

The Jackson (Miss.) Daily News of August 28 contained an announcement of the death of Mrs. J. C. Cavett, which occurred at Emory, Va., where she had been spending the summer with her daughter, Mrs. D. G. Patton. Mrs. Cavett was the wife of Mr. J. C. Cavett, the superintendent of the Sunday school of our First Church in Jackson, and was one of the most useful and beloved women in that city. She had been in failing health for more than a year, and her decease can scarcely be said to have been unexpected. The obsequies, which were largely attended, were conducted by Dr. Alfred F. Smith and Dr. A. F. Watkins. We extend to the bereaved husband and other stricken loved ones our most profound sympathy.

From the Richland Democrat, published at Rayville, La., we take the following: "Rev. A. Inman Townsley preached two splendid sermons at the Methodist Church last Sunday. The evening message was to young men, and incidentally dealt with some conditions and pitfalls in Rayville. Attention was called to the pernicious habit of gambling, which seems to be getting a grip on so many of our best young men. We are glad to see at least one of the ministers of Rayville bold enough to beard the lion in his den and call attention to some of the prevalent evils of the town." Our contemporary is right in its estimate of Brother Townsley. He is fearless in attacking sin and is not given to firing into the empty air when he preaches.

Rev. M. F. Adams, of Lorman, Miss., writes: "Yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Cane Ridge Church, near Lorman, the fourth annual session of the Jefferson County Sunday School Convention was brought to a close. Two days were spent in hearing reports and speeches, the principal speakers being Rev. Fred. Long of Jackson, the Rev. Mr. Gray and Rev. Mr. Johnson of Fayette, and Mr. Thos. J. Reed and Mr. P. K. Whitney of Raymond and Natchez. Miss Rosa Lee Edwards, a Sunday school worker from Meridian, also gave some splendid addresses. The officers chosen for the next year are as follows: Hon. J. D. Wallace, President, and Miss Helen Campbell, Secretary and Treasurer. Fayette was chosen as the next meeting place."

Dr. J. T. Sawyer returned to New Orleans last Monday after an eight days' meeting at Sun, on the St. Tammany circuit, where Rev. T. V. Peters is the pastor. He preached to large congregations twice a day, and on last Sunday the Woodmen of the World Hall was too small to hold all who sought to attend the service. Dinner was served on the ground, and in the afternoon two additional services were held: one for "men only" in the hall, and the other, a ladies' service, conducted by Mrs. Tally at the residence of Mrs. John Wood. About 100 men heard the pastor in a strong and effective sermon, after which he took up a large collection for missions. Dr. Sawyer states that Brother Peters is loved by every one on his work, and that he is accomplishing things worth while at each of his seven appointments. He thinks that this energetic young minister is one of the coming men of the Louisiana Conference.

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1913. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

Mrs. JACINTHA A. GOUDEAU was born at Plaquemine Brulee, in St. Landry Parish, Louisiana, on May 24, 1845, and died on August 1, 1913, at her home in Melville, La.; aged 68 years, 2 months, and 7 days. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in early life, and lived a consistent member until the day of her death. Her unwavering faith in her Savior made her a strong and beautiful character, which, as a golden heritage, she bequeathed to her children. Sister Goudeau was married to Mr. Ferdinand Goudeau on April 22, 1869, and to them were born four sons and two daughters—the four sons survive the mother. Sister Goudeau was a member of the Melville church at the time of her death. Her remains were laid to rest in the Big Cane Cemetery in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives after religous services conducted by her pastor, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Burks, the Baptist minister at Big Cane. We hope that her loved ones will meet her where partings will be no more. P. A. SWANN, Pastor.

The death of little FRANCES EVELYN HUGHES, of Amory, Miss., on June 22, 1913, was deeply felt by the community. She was the only living child of Mr. E. M. and HATTIE HUGHES. She was born Oct. 1, 1911, and though not quite two years old she gave great promise. She was well grown, bright and healthy, and when taken ill she was seriously sick from the first and gradually grew worse to the end. The whole community felt deeply for the grief-stricken parents, and also for the grandparents, Rev. L. T. Sargent and wife, and Mr. E. W. Hughes and wife, whose hearts were torn and bleeding both for the loss of little Frances and for the awful stroke to the children in the loss of this, a second child. The parsonage family had come to be deeply interested in little Frances Evelyn, who often came to see us. But she has gone to be with the Lord, to develop amid the glories of heaven. This is an abiding link to draw the father and mother closer to God and heaven. Jesus said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God." May the blessing of our Divine Father abide with the bereaved family!

W. M. YOUNG.

The subject of this sketch, Miss JENNIE PRICE, was born in Copiah County, May 31, 1861, and died at Carpenter, Miss., August 13, 1913. She was a lovely daughter and sister, and all who knew her loved her. She was untiring in supplying the needs of her aged father. She gave her heart to God and her life to the M. E. Church, South, in early childhood, and I have never known a better worker in the Church than was she—always at her post of duty and working for the salvation of souls. She was a teacher in the Sunday school and a member of the Missionary Committee. A better tribute could not be paid than to say, with one of her friends, "Miss Jennie had religion." This home was always the preachers' home, and it was an inspiration to any one to be there. She was a patient sufferer for several weeks before her death, but her faith in God was always strong. We shall miss her in the church and community, but we are assured that our loss is her gain. She leaves a father, three sisters, one brother, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her departure, but we are submissive to God's will, "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. Blessed be the name of the Lord!" May the blessings of our Heavenly Father be upon the bereaved ones, and comfort them in their sorrow!

J. F. CAMPBELL, Pastor.

JOHN BENNETT MARTIN, son of James and Dorothy Martin, was born at the old homestead in Madison County, Miss., June 27, 1842, and died Aug. 19, 1913, at his home in Cameron, Miss. His illness was severe and protracted, but he bore it all with wonderful patience, resignation, and Christian fortitude, thus by his example, teaching to all around impressive lessons in these Christian virtues. While at times expecting the final summons, he would smilingly and earnestly assure his visitors and attendants of his perfect faith in God and of his bright hope of heaven. He was happily converted when quite a young man during a revival at the Soule's Chapel Church. Since then he had lived a life of reverential consecration to the Master. Mr. Martin was one of the South's youngest defenders in the great War of the States, being a member of the famous 18th Mississippi Regiment. He was married to Miss Marina C. Smith in 1868, at Forest Home, near Canton, by Rev. Whitfield Harrington. She was his loving, untiring nurse throughout his illness, and is left to mourn the loss of a devoted companion for forty odd years. She has ever with her the comforting assurance given from his own lips of his secure preparation for the life he has entered. Six children, all married, are left to emulate the virtues of their honored father. His remains were carefully and tenderly laid away in the Soule Chapel Cemetery.

A NEIGHBOR AND FRIEND.

NOTICE EXTRAORDINARY.

This year, 1913, being the centennial of organized Methodism in Mississippi, it is becoming that every Methodist, and particularly the preachers in this State, should celebrate the anniversary by informing themselves, or refreshing their memories, on the rise and growth of our great Church in this and surrounding States.

The most thorough source of this information is Jones' "History of Methodism in the Mississippi Conference," in 2 volumes, including the time from the entrance of the first preacher to the year 1845. The regular price for the two volumes, per set, is $2.50 postpaid. But I make the following LIBERAL SPECIAL OFFER: Until October 15, or until the limited supply now on hand is exhausted, I will send the set, two volumes postpaid, for $1.75—cash with the order.

Remember that all of Mississippi and Louisiana belonged to the Mississippi Conference until 1840; therefore the work covers the territory in both States. No preacher or official layman in either State should fail to possess and read these books before his next Conference session. Send us your orders. G. W. BACHMAN.

Tidings From the Field

Pollock, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just closed a revival meeting at Eden. There was a fine interest manifested on the part of the people. I did most of the preaching and God seems to have blessed my labors. A great audience was present most of the time. There were 16 additions to the Church, two of these coming from the Baptist Church. A spiritual wave seems to have swept over the entire community and I believe the work done was of a lasting nature.—C. B. Powell, P. C.

Bienville, La.

My trip to the Yellowstone National Park was one that I greatly enjoyed. Since my return I have attended District Conference and run three protracted meetings. I was assisted in these by Revs. J. W. Faulk, L. E. Crooks, and H. J. Boltz, at the following places in their order: Ebenezer, Burk Place, and Bear Creek. We closed last night at the last named place a most gracious meeting, having baptized 22 and having received 21 into the Church. Just before starting on my trip to the Northwest, Brother W. R. Harvell assisted me in a meeting at Bienville. All these brethren preached the old-time gospel and we had good meetings at each place. I have baptized 12 infants and 18 adults, and have received 18 by vows and 22 by letter this year. Praise the Lord! My family have been in Boulder, Colo., for two months, but they will return home next week. The Lord bless you!—W. J. Porter.

Poplar Creek, Miss.

Thus far, we have held four of our revival meetings. Many have been persuaded to lead a new and higher life. We had been praying that many who seemed never to have felt the power of religion might experience the old-fashioned kind of religion, and in this we have not been disappointed. We have had with us Brothers T. J. Halfacre and C. R. A. Brantley, both from the Kilmichael charge. They rendered valuable assistance at Bethel and Senter, where they expounded the Word with power and in demonstration of the Spirit. Their preaching was of the Wesleyan type, and the effects were incalculable. We pray that these results may be permanent. We have had 14 accessions to the Church as a result of these meetings; some joined other Churches. Our membership has also been greatly revived. We feel that our members now have the old-time religion; that they are in love and charity with one another, and are in communion with our dear Lord.—J. L. Oaks, P. C.

Okolona Ct. (North Miss.)

Beginning the first Sunday in August we held our meeting at Thompson's Memorial Church. Rev. J. W. York, the efficient pastor of the Fulton charge, did the preaching, and did it well. Our people at that place are now living on higher ground in the spiritual realm, and are in love with Brother York. Beginning the second Sunday in August we held our meeting at Grady's Chapel Church. Rev. J. D. Boggs, of Dumas, did the preaching. As a result of his coming among our people as the servant of the Most High God, showing unto us the way of salvation, souls were saved and the church greatly revived.

Beginning the third Sunday in August we held our meeting at Tranquill, with Rev. W. V. Shearer, of Cofteeville, as our helper. His preaching was of the highest type. He fought sin and won the affections of our people; and with many, "old things are passed away and, behold, all things are new." Rev. W. V. Shearer is one of the men who can find his way into the hearts of people and serve them to the delight of all. We have received, to date, 18 members on profession of faith, and our church has been greatly revived. God bless these men! We are happy on the way on the Okolona charge.—D. R. McDougal, P. C.

Summerland, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: It gives me great pleasure to report on my work on the Summerland Mission. The work has been doing real well all the year, and the prospect is favorable for a good wind-up in the end. We have a real good Sunday school at every appointment. I am making a desperate effort to develop a strong missionary movement by distributing literature and preaching on the work of missions. We have just closed two great revivals on my work. On August 9, Rev. E. L. Whiddon came to me at Hebron and conducted a series of services which lasted until August 18th, and every service was full of the Holy Spirit and there was a great work done there. The whole membership was revived, and there were ten added to the Methodist Church. The people at that place made up money to the amount of $50 for Brother Whiddon. At the close of the meeting he gave his illustrated lecture on the White Slave Traffic which was attended by a full house, and was highly commended. I think that every church and community should have this lecture given. The Baptists of our community rendered valuable assistance, and entertained us royally in their homes. I must say that Brother Whiddon is a man of abilty and usefulness in our Church. His chaste character, sane thoughts and words, and his evangelistic tact unite to make him one of our great revivalists. Though he is never at a loss for words, every word and thought is thoroughly weighed and set in its proper place. I have been in meetings with Brothers D. E. Kelly, Walter G. Harbin, and others, but I must say that Brother Whiddon ranks with any of our men. He is doing a great work in our missionary territory.

On August 17, Brother J. W. Ramsey came to me here at Summerland to hold a meeting. He preached some forceful sermons and accomplished great things for the Master. He exercised tact in managing the people, as there were many more Baptists than Methodists. He soon won the confidence and good will of all, and then made a success of the meeting. There were ten additions to the Church, and the whole membership was revived. We had a real Holy Ghost meeting. Brother Ramsey has been a blessing to our town. May God bless and prosper these men in their work for the Master!—T. A. Ferguson, P. C.

The Sunday School.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Begin now to prepare for the best Rally Day in all your Sunday school or class history. Have a meeting of the pastor, superintendent, and teachers and make the full arrangements, appoint hustling committees along every branch of activity, and in September or October have the Rally Day service. Our Publishing House gets out very attractive literature, but every school has the opportunity of accenting the personal and local note.

The autumn season furnishes some of the greatest Sunday school and class opportunities of the year. Among these are Rally Day, the beginning of Graded lessons and Teacher-training classes, and the election of class officers. Election time should be an event in the class calendar; for what class has not been hindered by incompetent, unsuitable, and indifferent class officers? Make a specially interesting occasion this year of the election of officers.

The other day a loquacious class member took ten minutes to explain what he had received from the class in the years he had been a member. He said that he had received skilled Bible instruction, fine fellowship, missionary enthusiasm, social pleasure, etc. A thoughtful outsider, after listening intently, asked the following pointed question: "What have you given the class for all that?" And the class member then realized that he had only been present at everything, enjoyed everything, and had contributed nothing more than his presence. May not many of us fall under the same condemnation?

In view of the many "unanswered appeals" that are coming to our General Board of Missions, no Adult or Teen Age Sunday school class should sit idly by and not assume some definite missionary obligation. The fields are white unto the harvest and we are missing the great blessing of assisting in this great work, and the class that assumes such responsibilities will gain 100 per cent in information, inspiration, and uplift. Study the country in question by pictures, travel-talks, and the printed page; get some missionary to send you letters from the very heart of your field, and tie your class firmly and enthusiastically to some one of our many needy mission stations. The class treasury will not suffer, but every line of construction will receive more and better attention.

It will be noted that the Children's Day offerings averaged about $8.74 per Sunday school. If the three hundred and more schools not yet heard from will do half as well in contributions to their own work, far more than enough to go to Conference out of debt will be obtained. But if they do not, our Sunday school friends throughout the State must come to the rescue or else leave the Board in debt and unable to continue its work along present lines.

Respectfully submitted,
T. W. HOLLOMAN,
Treasurer S. S. Board.

WORTH A TRIAL?

If you were kept awake at nights from some tormenting skin disease; if you were suffering agonies from some lacerated, festering wound, with the chances of losing a limb from blood poison, would a preparation with a record of relieving and curing thousands of similar cases be worth a trial? For 92 years (nearly a century) Gray's Ointment has been used with most pleasing results in treatment of ulcers, boils, carbuncles, burns, bruises, old sores, poisonous bites, tumors and other skin troubles. YOU CAN WRITE LETTERS LIKE THESE.

The following will give you a good idea of what kind of a letter you will be able to write after you have secured your piano or self-player piano through the New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club:

Charlotte, N. C., Dec. 28, 1912.
"We are all delighted with the piano. It is beautifully finished and has such a sweet tone. All of our friends, including a musician, pronounce it a most splendid piano. I am very much pleased with the Club Plan, because it enables people of moderate means to obtain a fine piano at a small cost each month."
MARY ELLIOTT.

Blythewood, S. C., May 2, 1912.
The lovely piano came yesterday. Am just delighted with it; so are my musical friends. The tone is so full and sweet, and the case is lovely."
MRS. MAY W. FARMER.

Waycross, Georgia.
"The Ludden & Bates Piano that I purchased of you continues to give entire satisfaction. Its tones are exceedingly sweet and do not give way under the changes of season and climate, but preserve the same roundness and fullness as at first" W. E. DEMPSTER.

Leesburg, Fla.
"I am pleased with the Club Plan and more than pleased with my piano. Its tone is the sweetest and construction perfect. I would advise anyone desiring a piano to join the Club and get the best. I cannot say enough in regard to the Club Plan and piano."
MRS. T. F. TODD.

Gaylesville, Alabama.
"Club piano received in good order. We are well pleased with it. Better and nicer than pianos sold here for from three hundred and fifty to five hundred dollars. Our little town is pretty well stocked with pianos of different makes, and it is considered that we have the best piano in town. We thank you for your selection and prompt shipment."
J. R. WILLIAMS.

Vaiden, Mississippi.
"I am perfectly delighted with my piano. I think the Club Plan a capital idea." MRS. RUFUS B. SMITH.

Letters like the above are received by the Club every day. They come from all parts of the South. Everybody is delighted with the Club and not a single complaint has occurred, in fact the Club is so organized that you can not possibly be dissatisfied.

SUMMERLAND, MISS.

A spiritual and intellectual feast has been enjoyed this week by all denominations at Hebron Church, given by Rev. E. L. Whiddon. The results were several conversions and 10 members added to our Church by profession of faith. Brother Whiddon preaches the doctrines of our Church so that other Churches take no offense. He gave a special lecture on "Danger Signals of Modern Society," which was listened to by 200 or more people. The door receipts were about $30. This lecture is one all girls and young ladies, as well as parents, need to hear. I think any one who has an opportunity of hearing Brother Whiddon, or any community that can secure his services, should do so. Best wishes to the Advocate.—(Miss) Clara Easterling.

HEBRON, MISS.

Dear Editor: Our revival began Sunday, Aug. 3, with our beloved pastor, Rev. Hilary Westbrook, as conductor of the two services that day, and in his usual, earnest way he delivered to a large audience two very fine sermons. On Monday we had with us Rev. J. A. Smith, of Clayton, Ga., who is a post-graduate of Meridian Male College, and a young and enthusiastic worker in seeking to save souls. He took up the good work and conducted it until the meeting came to a close on Friday afternoon. Brother Smith said in the beginning of his work that there was no time to be wasted with sugar-coated sermons, so he went straight to work and preached to the point, proving it to be no easy thing to be religious in this present time. Brother Smith and our beloved pastor are faithful holiness preachers, and our Church (and not only ours but a number of others) is waking up to the realization that there is more in religion than just being church members, going to church, and paying our pastor a little once and awhile. Thank God, when we get all he has for us in this sinful world we can and will do more. During our meeting eight believers accepted God as their sanctifier, and four unregenerate souls sought him earnestly with tears and found him as their Savior. The meeting closed with a number of penitents at the altar. Brother Smith went away Friday evening to continue this good work at his next place of duty. That God may keep him always filled with the Holy Ghost and give him power from on high to go on with the great work which he has before him, is the prayer of our church for him.—Minnie Stanford, Aug. 16, 1913.

POTATOES AND PIANOS.

You wouldn't think that there is anything in common between potatoes and pianos, would you? But there is.

For example, the Mayor of Indianapolis, Ind., found that the produce dealers were forcing the people of his city to pay about three times as much for potatoes as they cost on the farm. They were simply fleecing the public. As the poor people of his city almost live on potatoes he decided to stop it. He went to the farmers and bought potatoes in carload lots, shipped them to the city and sold them from wagons on the streets. He saved the citizens thousands of dollars and yet the farmers got just as much for their potatoes as before. The Mayor became very popular with the people, but not with the produce dealers.

It is the same way with pianos, for the New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club works on identically the same principle. Instead of going to the farm for carload lots of potatoes we go to the factory for eight carload lots (100) of pianos. If you see the point write for your copy of the Club catalogue, which explains how you can join with ninety-nine other subscribers and benefit by the big wholesale transaction. The Club will save you over one hundred dollars on your piano or self-player piano and give you better quality, stronger guarantees and easier terms. NOTES FROM THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Pledges.

Let our auxiliaries keep their pledges constantly before their members. Especially urge the early payment of the pledges to the Home Department, as that is needed to make payments on the property purchased at Biloxi for our Wesley House.

Missionary Society of Central Church, Meridian.

The Missionary Society of Central Church, Meridian, realizes the fact that one must know about a thing to be interested in it. This society keeps in close touch with the Soochow Kindergarten Training School through Miss Nevada Martin, who writes to them once a month giving interesting accounts of the work being done there. Having that faith that knows no denial, she writes, "The political situation in China is an uncertain quantity, yet we know that in time the leaven of truth and righteousness will prevail. * * * I found every theory that the modern world holds represented in the various opinions of these Chinese girls, as to the education of women. * * * The young men and women educated in Christian schools are full of enthusiasm for constructive work in their new country. But the general opinion was that the women's schools should at least include the home training that would elevate China's home life." In Miss Martin's letter she says that the thought of those at home praying for her has been an inspiration to her many times. Let us not disappoint this faithful worker during the next two years before her furlough is due.

Organization and Work.

We are glad to report the organization of a Young People's Society at Centenary, McComb City. May they receive fruit from their labors!

The work of the Juniors and Baby Division of Port Gibson is being carefully looked after.

Mite Box Opening.

McComb City Babies and Juniors had a very delightful and instructive Mite Box opening in the basement of the Centenary Methodist Church at the close of the second quarter. Mrs. Clifford arranged a very instructive program, consisting of songs and recitations by the children and talks by different mothers as to the origin of the Baby and Brigade Roll, and also the work outlined by the Council for the children's work for 1913. Our District Secretary, Mrs. E. W. Reid of Magnolia, was present and gave us an interesting talk. About $10 was realized from the Mite Box opening. Our faithful women of the Missionary Society made this Mite Box opening a success. They not only furnished refreshments for the children, but ice-cream, lemonade, etc., was served to seventy-five people.

MRS. J. L. NEILL.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI NOTES FROM THE PRESIDENT'S DESK.

Mission Books.

According to my request, Mrs. J. W. Conger, our Third-Vice President, has selected the following books from those recommended by the Council for our Mission Study, and fixed the month of October for the time for beginning same: Adults, "The King's Business," by Mrs. Raymond; Young People, "The Conservation of Young Life," by Mrs. Montgomery and Mrs. Peabody; Intermediates, "Livingston, the Pathfinder;" Children, "The Story of Livingston" (The foregoing are for the Foreign Society organization.); Adults and Young People, "The New America," by Rev. and Mrs. L. C. Barnes; Intermediates, "Some Immigrant Neighbors," by John R. Henry; Children, "Comrades of Other Lands," by Mrs. Dimmick. (These last are for Home Mission Societies.)

I quote from Mrs. Conger's review of these books: "'The King's Business' is a study of increased efficiency for missionary societies, and is a splendid presentation of organization. This seems to be a defect among our local auxiliaries, and if they would study this book and apply its principles, it would yield an untold amount of good. I consider this a splendid book. 'The New America' I also consider a strong book. It deals with the study of immigration, and is arranged in such logical sequence. It begins with the immigration received by the original Thirteen Colonies and leads up to the present time. The influence which the foreigners exert over our industries and on our social life is dealt with in one chapter. The closing chapters present the agencies which are at work among the immigrants for their guidance and future development."

Miss Daniel to be at Corinth.

A letter has just reached my desk from Mrs. MacDonnell which tells me that Miss Mary Daniel has been appointed to our deaconess work at Corinth. Miss Daniel has been for two years head president of the Wesley House in Atlanta and will bring to us superior preparation. Mrs. MacDonnell says: "She is a lovely woman and you will see that God is good to Corinth, and that we women who handle these things are making an effort to do the best for Corinth, as well as for every other point that comes to us." Mrs. MacDonnell had feared she would not be able to locate a worker at Corinth till September 1, and it is indeed gratifying to know that she has found us a deaconess for the place so soon. Miss Daniel has had about six weeks rest and is now at Jackson, La., and is ready to come to us at once. We feel sure she will receive the same kindly treatment and co-operation from the pastors and good people at Corinth that they gave to our dear Miss Knapp.

Tupelo Home Mission Society.

The Tupelo Home Mission Society was fortunate indeed in its meetings for the month of June. We had two deaconesses with us: Miss Knapp, of Corinth, and Miss Elliott, formerly at our Deaconess Home at Los Angeles but recently transferred to the Blue Grass State. They each related in a most wonderful manner experiences in their lives as deaconesses. An informal reception was tendered them in the ladies' parlor of our church at the close of the service, and a large number of our women had the opportunity of meeting and greeting them.

A $10,000 Farm Given.

Mr. Enochs, of the Mississippi Conference, gave a $10,000 farm for the establishment of an industrial school for Negro boys at our General Missionary Conference at Waynesville. This was given in answer to an appeal made by Miss Bennett on behalf of the work among the Negroes. It now behooves the North Mississippi Conference to make some kind of a move along this line of work. We cannot afford to allow our sister Conference to excel us in good works.

Auxiliary Institutes.

Auxiliary Institutes are being held right along now in the Corinth, Aberdeen, and Columbus Districts, while Mrs. Binford writes that she is planning for an Institute in the Holly Springs District. What about the other Districts? I would like to hear from the District Secretaries and learn of their work and plans. A Young People's society of twenty-four members was one of the results of Tupelo's Institute.

Good Reports.

Gratifying reports have come to me from each and every one of our vice-presidents and superintendents relative to their plans and work, and I wish to urge the auxiliary societies to co-operate with these officers in their plans for the extension of their work. "With a strong pull and a pull all together" we can make this a red-letter year in the history of our work in the North Mississippi Conference.

The Farm Burden Bearer

YOU and your farm wagon spend a great deal of time together. Of all farm tools, it is your standby Its wheels bear the burden of big loads—towering racks of hay and grain, sacks of produce, loads of sand and gravel, anything that needs moving, over miles of roads to market. It takes solid strength to stand up long under that. When next you ride on a load, listen to the constant racking, creaking, groaning sound of the wagon box, wheels, and running gear as the load pitches back and forth over the road ruts. Not an unpleasant sound, but the strain that causes it is hard on the wagon. I H C wagons—

Weber New Bettendorf

give the buyer the most he can get for his money because they defy hard usage for the longest time, and are easiest on the horses, which is no small item.

These are a few of the things that contribute to the making of the unbeatable I H C wagon reputation. Selection of the finest grades of lumber, oak, hickory and pine, and of the best quality steel and iron; many months of toughening air-drying for every piece of wood; skilled assembling of parts, fitting of bolts and rivets, and perfect shaping and ironing; application of the purest paint to act as wood preservative and to prevent shrinking and warping of the wood. When the wagon is ready for the farmer, it is practically perfect in every detail and thoroughly up to the I H C standard.

And there are many other reasons we have not room for here why I H C wagons are the best to buy. Weber and Columbus wagons have wood gears; New Bettendorf and Steel King have steel gears.

A visit and a talk at your local dealer's, where the wagons may be seen and studied, will soon convince you as to the wagon you want. Get catalogues from the dealer, or, write the

MISTAKEN CONSECRATION.

It is nothing but proper to be consecrated to God and his work. Not to be so, means that one has not become a Christian at all in the true sense, or if he has become one, he has backslidden, to say the least of it, if he has not actually fallen from grace; provided, of course, that he is not excusably ignorant. It is possible for one to be quite lacking in his consecration because of ignorance and yet be a good Christian. However, it is the duty of each and every one to study and try to know, and, by the grace of God and the light of his Word, to strive to measure up to the degree of consecration commensurate with his possibilites. God does not require a degree that one is unable to meet, but just as great a degree as he is capable of. Let each one remember that Scriptural consecration is the placing of one's self and all that he is, or has, or hopes to be or have, so completely and perfectly into God's hands that all his thoughts, words, and deeds may be wholly directed for God's glory. Christ expressed the full measure of consecration when he said, "Herein is my Father glorified that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples." (John 16:8.) Paul also expressed it when he said, "For me to live is Christ." (Phil. 1:21.)

By keeping in mind Scriptural consecration, one may easily detect that brand of false consecration in those who neglect home duties to go abroad for the purpose of obtaining high-sounding compliments, newspaper notoriety, or even the almighty dollar. False consecration has caused our Church to lose members. In the absence of appointed pastors, wolves have raided the fold. Does it not argue inexcusable stupidity, folly, or blindness, if not square-cut dishonesty, for any Christian worker, after being assigned a full-salaried field in which he is supposed to give all his labor to become so "consecrated" as to neglect it and spend his precious time elsewhere, and at the same time accept full pay for his neglected and unfinished work? Does it not appear that something is out of harmony somewhere when one neglects his paying charge and allows its members to be neglected and starved for the want of attention while he goes abroad heralding as his excuse that he so loves souls that he must save them at any cost, even the loss of those for whom he is paid to seek to save? Let us stop and meditate, and pray, too, at this point, lest we mistake a vain ambition for novelty, notoriety, and especially the almighty dollar, for real consecration. It will do us no harm to think seriously and to pray over this matter. We shall have to account to Christ in the great Judgment for our way of living. May God help us to be wise!

DON'T BURN YOUR COTTON.

What would you think of a man who would deliberately burn eight hundred and thirty-three pounds of good cotton? He would be destroying about one hundred dollars of good money. No sane man would waste his wealth in such a manner, and yet we all waste a hundred dollars or more each year in thoughtless and careless buying. When we pay more for an article than is necessary we are wasting just that much money and are burning our good cotton.

If your home is in need of a good piano or self-player piano you can save upwards of eight hundred and thirty-three pounds of cotton by uniting with ninety-nine other careful and thoughtful buyers in the New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club. Write for your copy of the Club catalogue, which explains the great saving in price, the convenient plan of payment and the protection against every cause for dissatisfaction. WHAT GOD FIRST DEMANDS.

A contemporary says: "Pharmace sent a crown to Caesar at the same time that he rebelled against him, but Caesar returned the crown with this message, 'Let Pharmace return to his obedience first, and then I will accept the crown by way of recognizance.' So God wants nothing else that we can give while the heart is withheld from him.

THE TEACHING THAT IS PRODUCING RESULTS.

We sometimes hear it said that the pulpit does not command the attention that it once did because it does not keep abreast of the times—that its teachings must be modernized, if it is to grip and influence the public mind. It is noticeable, however, that wherever the so-called liberal theologians have sway the Churches are accomplishing little. Take Great Britain, for instance, where higher criticism of late years has been flourishing to a considerable extent. Since 1907, the Baptists in that country have decreased from 434,741 to 416,347; the Congregationalists, from 498,916 to 490,722; the Primitive Methodists, from 211,673 to 210,667; and the Wesleyans, from 568,344 to 540,251. Of course, it cannot be affirmed that the declension in the numerical strength of these denominations has been wholly due to the preaching of a loose theology—other causes have doubtless contributed to this result—but that this dwindling has taken place where the boasted new teaching has been considerably emphasized, is a point which cannot be overlooked.

It is where the unemasculated Gospel is being preached in its purity and simplicity that the largest numbers of converts are being made and that Christianity is winning its noblest triumphs. One of the latest testimonials to this effect has come from Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, the distinguished American evangelist, who said:

"I am just returned from what, practically, has been a four years' absence from my native land. And out of this unique opportunity for reaching a just estimate I can say truthfully here this evening that all over the world the men who are holding the crowds, the men whose labors are being signally crowned with success, the men who above all others are listened to and followed, are the men who stand foursquare on the Bible as the authoritative Word of the living God, and who are preaching the unimpeachable divinity of Jesus Christ as Son, Saviour and Lord."

"AS MUCH AS IN ME IS."

Such was the measure of service which St. Paul proposed to give to the Christians and to the work at Rome. And such ought to be the measure of every pastor's ministry to his people. He who does not lay himself out fully for the Master's cause in his field falls short of his duty. That was a beautiful eulogium that our Lord pronounced upon Mary of Bethany: "She hath done what she could." And yet if one does less than this, how will one appear in the approaching day of reckoning? Unused talents are buried talents, and for every one of them there will have to be an accounting. The partial worker cannot possibly escape the consequences of his neglect and inactivity.

"As much as in me is." This does not simply include one's natural endowments, but also all that by assiduous industry one may acquire. Our talents are to be traded with, and thus enlarged. The one aim of the Christian minister should be to secure efficiency in his work. Whatever will bring this he should eagerly seek. Intellectual equipment, gifts and graces of speech, information of every helpful kind, a knowledge of human nature, and particularly a thorough understanding of the Scriptures—all these he urgently needs, and for them he should diligently strive. A mentally indolent man is a reproach to the ministerial calling.

But let it not be forgotten that no preacher is capacitated for his duties unless his spiritual furnishment is adequate. He must be taught of the Spirit and filled with the Spirit before he is prepared to be an effective ambassador for Christ. Without this, no matter what may be his learning and accomplishments, a minister is wholly unfitted for the tasks which he is expected to perform. One must himself have life before he can impart it to others. Wesley was eminently right, when he applied, first, a searching spiritual test to those who wished to enter the ministerial ranks: "Do they know God as a pardoning God? Have they the love of God abiding in them? Do they desire nothing but God?" Does not this lack of spiritual equipment account for the barrenness of the ministries of not a few well educated men? Alas! we fear that this is so. A preacher must keep his own religious life up to high tide if he would be effective. Nothing is more important than for him steadily to feed and strengthen his own soul. Otherwise, the saving virtue will pass out of him and his efforts to help others will be unavailing.

"As much as in me is." Everything appeals to the Christian minister to stir up the gift that is within him. No toil is so difficult as his. He must battle with a giant Adversary. The unsaved are disinclined to come to Christ. To win them away from the great Deceiver and the attractions of the world is a baffling and stupendous task. The fact that such acheivements challenge him should incite him to do his utmost. From many directions come calls that should tend to enkindle in his bosom a spirit of heroism. And more than any other vocation, the ministry furnishes the inspiration of sublime opportunities. Other men chiefly invest their energies in things that are material and perishable; but in having to do with deathless souls, the preacher has a chance to perform a work that will endure forever, that will stand forth unimpaired and undiminished when—

"The stars grow old,
The sun grows cold,
And the leaves of the judgment book unfold."

And who has promise of such a reward as the faithful minister? "Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock. And when the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." (I. Peter v. 2, 3, 4.) But this splendid recompense in eternity is by no means the true pastor's only reward. The joys which come to him in this present life are deep and rich and full. We often see men in other callings grow weary of their work and become eager to retire, but usually the saddest day in the history of the Christian minister is when he learns that he must put the harness off; and even after that, his happiest hours are when some exigency brings him back into the pulpit to tell again the story of redeeming love. What has taken place in the future beyond the tomb, we may not for the present know, but the Master's words to St. Peter, so far as they relate to earth, have been literally fulfilled throughout the Christian era: "Verily I say unto you, there is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake, and the gospel's, but he shall receive an hundred fold now in this time, * * * and in the world to come eternal life."

The work of human redemption, under the Divine plan, must be co-operative—must be wrought out through the joint agency of God and man. The principle of synergy applies to every part of it—both to the salvation of the individual and the execution of the whole vast scheme. Where human powers are developed to their maximum and God is most fully enlisted, the noblest results are accomplished. No person of meager attainments, however consecrated, could have done the work of Paul, or Luther, or Wesley; yet these men without God would have been impotent to perform any service of lasting consequence. We must develop our powers if we would have the Heavenly Father to use us largely; hence, as we have already suggested, we need to cultivate both the head and heart—to increase our capacity to the utmost limit. Nor should it be forgotten that even after a person has developed the possibility of being a large "vessel," the extent to which the Lord will make use of him is chiefly a matter which he himself must determine. The Master will operate through him according to the measure of his self-surrender. The Captain of our Salvation does not carry on his glorious warfare by means of conscripts—only true volunteers are trusted and clothed with power from above. God calls men, but it is with them as to whether they will answer. The secret of the marvelous career of the great Apostle to the Gentiles was that he was never "disobedient to the heavenly vision;" that 'as much as in him was', he was ready to serve, wherever he was summoned by the beckoning hand of Providence.

WHOSE HOUSE?

G. Campbell Morgan says: "My father came into my house soon after I was married and looked around. We showed him into every room, and then in his rough way he said to me: 'Yes, it is very nice; but nobody will know, walking through here, whether you belong to God or the devil.' I went through and looked at the rooms again, and I thought: 'He is quite right.' So we made np our minds straightway that there should be no room in our house, henceforth, that had not some message, by picture or wall text, for every corner which should tell that we at any rate serve the King."

NOT READY FOR THIS.

Some time ago we had a word of caution concerning the purpose of the Board of Edncation of our Church, as manifested in a resolution adopted at the meeting of the Board in May, committing the Church to a line of procedure that would make it out of the question for an Annual Conference Board of Education to appropriate any money to any institution of its own which had not been approved for such an appropriation by the General Board. Against that we raised our protest, believing that the execution of such a program would be an invasion of the rights of the Annual Conference which the Board of Education has no right to make, and which would not be for the better interests of the General Board of Education. The tendency toward a centralization of authority and power in our Church is increasingly manifest. Enough of the rights of an Annual Conference have already been surrendered. It is time to call a halt and let the Conferences do some things which they might wish to do without the permission of a board or a bureau.

Some weeks ago there was held in the city of Nashville, a meeting of the Presidents of the Women's Colleges of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In another column of this number of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate will be found the official report of the proceedings of that meeting; and about one feature of that report we have now a word or two to utter.

The report says: "The general secretary, Dr. Stonewall Anderson, put the following interrogation before the Conference, which was unanimously answered in the affirmative:

"When provisions have been made by the General Conference for the organization of Junior Colleges, according to the plans suggested by you; when the entrance requirements for admission to college have been made flexible to the extent of your recommendations; and the requirements for graduation liberalized according to your suggestions, will you support an educational organization for the entire Church made up of four classes of institutions, excluding unclassified schools?"

It is the evident purpose of the general secretary of the Board of Education and of "The Association of the Presidents of the Women's Colleges of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," to support before the General Conference the essential features of the resolution of the Board concerning appropriations to Annual Conference schools adopted by the Board of Education at its May meeting.

We are in perfect accord with the desire and effort of the Board of Education to elevate the standard of college education among our people. We have too long endured the humiliation of seeing schools declare that they are doing real college work when they are really only high schools, thereby deceiving the people and placing the educational work of our Church in a discreditable light before the educators of the world. But this can be done without the centralization of power in the hands of the Board of Education. And in this manner it should be done. It is time to stop this desire for a bureaucratic form of government in the Church. Centralization of power, either in Church or State, is not best and is at variance with the traditions and history of the people of this country.

Let not the General Conference trespass one inch further on the rights of the Annnal Conferences. The Conferences can manage their own affairs without the direction of a Board located at Nashville. Our people need to look carefully at the matter we now have under discussion, and see whereunto this thing is leading.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

EARLY TIMES OF METHODISM IN NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

VII.

In response to a call made in the church papers for items of historic interest pertaining to Methodism in North Mississippi, the writer receieved in 1896 a communication from Mr. W. C. Culberson, of Elcampo, Texas, containing some interesting facts concerning the early days of the Church in Panola County. Mr. Culberson was one of the early settlers of the County and for several years filled important civil offices, such as justice of the peace. circuit clerk, etc. He was a near relative of Senator Culberson, of Texas. He moved to California in 1850; thence to Texas in 1884, where he was living as above stated, at the age of seventy-nine.

We copy from the letter from Mr. Culberson, above mentioned, almost verbatim, as follows: "In 1840 and the early part of 1841, there was a new Methodist church built in the town of Belmont, Panola County, under the supervision of Rev. Wm. S. Jones, the preacher on the Belmont Circuit, and I believe it was dedicated by the Rev. Mr. Travis, a local (superannuate) preacher, living sixteen miles north of Belmont, and who was the father-in-law of Miles H. McGhee. Rev. O. E. Ragland was preacher on the Belmont Circuit in 1842. In May of that year, I, with many others, joined the Church at Belmont. Brother Ragland was a fine Christian gentleman and a good preacher. Many pleasant and happy hours have we spent together in prayer and Christian fellowship. I was at that time in business in Belmont and acting justice of the peace. In 1843 I was elected clerk of the Circuit Court of Panola County and moved to the town of Panola, the county seat, to reside, and moved my church membership to the same place, where there was a small organization. I do not remember who was the preacher-in-charge.

"In 1844 a Cumberland Presbyterian minister by the name of Guthrie held a protracted meeting in the courthouse. He had preached and sung himself down. There had been a good many conversions, and still there were many penitent mourners at the bench. I was acquainted with a Methodist preacher by the name of Morgan who was on the Hernando Circuit, which embraced part of our county. I knew his regular days for preaching at a school house eighteen miles north of Panola. I dispatched to him a letter by Young Goff. That evening he arrived in good shape and fully imbued with the Spirit. He was a good preacher and was valiant and one of the best singers I ever knew. They continued the meeting ten days which resulted in many more conversions and additions to the Church.

"In 1845 we completed a new church building in Panola at a cost of $1000 or $1200. The trustees appointed by the quarterly conference were Col. Henry Allen, Wm. B. Fizer, and myself. In 1846-47 Rev. S. G. Starks was our presiding elder. He was a very able man. The book, entitled "The Methodist Pulpit, South," (1859) has in it one of his best sermons. When I want to think of old times I read that sermon and imagine myself almost in his presence again. His wife was a daughter of Hugh McGhee.

"I have recollections of the preaching of John M. Holland, Wm. McMahon, A. R. Winfield, and others of precious memory, in those days. In 1844, the people—mostly sinners—built a camp ground 16 miles east of Panola which was known far and near as the 'Sinner's Camp Ground.' Here the Methodists and Cumberland Presbyterians held camp meetings jointly for several years. Among the Methodist preachers who participated in these meetings were Samuel Watson (who afterwards went off with the spiritualists but who came back to our Church, of which he died a member some years ago), S. G. Starks, a man by the name of Lambert, and others. The Presbyterian preachers were Wm. S. and Stanford Burney, uncle and nephew. These meetings usually continued two weeks, and were occasions long to be remembered for the many conversions at every meeting. Among the converts was a man by the name of James Clinton, who afterwards became an eminent Baptist preacher.

At one of these meetings Ephraim H. Beanland wanted to go home on Sunday evening, so as to begin picking cotton early Monday morning, but his wife, a religious woman, and his friends prevailed on him to remain for the night service. He sat in a chair near the altar and near the close of the sermon (which I believe was by Brother Starks) he fell prostrate on the ground, from whence he arose after a little while shouting and praising God. His wife was happy beyond measure.

"Among the veterans of these meetings were 'old Uncles' Joshua Brown and Johnny Harris, who took an active part in them. There was a Miss Cherry, who lived at John S. McGhee's, who attended these camp meetings. She was a fine singer and worker at the altar. Her favorite song was:

'There is union in heaven and there's union in my soul
Oh, glory hallelujah!
Sweet music in heaven and it now begins to roll.
Don't you love God? Glory hallelujah!'

The singing of this song would at times produce greater effect than the sermon."

We feel sure that these sketches of the beginnings of Methodism in the good old county of Panoia will be read with interest by many, especially by those who are now enjoying the heritage of a vigorous and prosperous Church, planted by the fathers of those former days. Miss Mary Cherry, above mentioned, was long and extensively known in North Mississippi and elsewhere for her church activities and philanthropic deeds. During the Civil War thousands of Confederate soldiers and their families were blessed by her charitable services in hospitals, prisons, and elsewhere, where religious or material aid were needed. This writer first met with her in 1866 in a revival meeting in Sardis, conducted by the pastor, Rev. A. J. See, in which she rendered very effective services by her impressive singing, earnest prayers, and active work with the unsaved. She was a member of the Cherry family of Tennessee, connected with which there are and have been many Methodist preachers. She died a few years ago in Nashville, Tenn., but her memory is cherished, "for the good works and almsdeeds which she did."

A SUCCESSFUL PASTOR'S VIEW.

Dear Doctor Meek: I am sending with this eight more trial subscribers. I know of no place to stop working for the Advocate until it is in every Methodist home in my charge. During a long ministry I have found that the circulation of the Conference organ depends upon the pastors. Where the pastor will take the matter on his heart and give it attention, it will go; and this it will not do elsewhere, to any great extent. And certainly no work outside of the pulpit is more important. Where our people take and read our church papers, they may, as a rule, be depended on in everything. They are not only religious, but in church matters they are intelligent and connectional. Wise is that pastor, as well as faithful, who encourages his people in this regard. The church paper is his best helper. By diligence and patience, he can usually increase its circulation, and he ought to do so.

M. B. SHARBROUGH.

SOME WORDS IN REPLY.

Mr. Editor:

In the Advocate of the 14th inst. is a letter signed "Methodist Preacher" challenging some statements of mine in an article on the preacher-teacher. It is not my desire to enter into any controversy, but being challenged I must reply. In regard to the thinness of the rolls of our church schools, I will only refer the dear brother to the annual catalogs of the schools. They will answer his question better than I possibly could.

In another place, he states that the past history of Methodism is full of the names of great teachers among her ministers. Correct he is, and that was entirely excusable at the time referred to. It was not easy to get college men in the early days, and as the Church needed teachers she was forced to use a few of her ministers. If my reading of the lives of these truly great men is correct, and I think that it is, they were also frequent and gifted preachers, ready at all times to preach and pray. Some of them had regular appointments. Now it is different. The pew of today is more intelligent than the pulpit of yesterday. All over the land there are gifted, loyal laymen who would gladly go to church schools at a less salary than they receive where they now work. It is not so with the pulpit. Everywhere there is a call for gifted, consecrated preachers—men who love the work, and who have all upon the altar. While the market is over-supplied with teachers, it is under-supplied with able preachers.

The good brother is evidently young, and either connected with a school, or hopes to be. If he will accept a little advice, I should like to suggest that he become a constant reader of the Advocate. If so, he will see some well deserved reproofs administered to preachers who are so disloyal that they are anxious to flaunt it in print. We rarely see a layman flaunting his disloyalty publicly. There are disloyal laymen, and also disloyal preachers. In one of our church schools at whose head is a man who adds "D.D." to his name, Darwinism is openly taught. Yet science is about ready to cast this foolish and outworn doctrine to the scrapheap! Some of the most eminent men in Germany and Austria, and not a few in this country, have abandoned it—not from religious impulse, but because it is unscientific, and absolutely unprovable. Is this loyalty?

He also says, if my contention were "carried to a logical conclusion," the presiding elders would all be laymen. What curious logic? Brother, if you were acquainted with some of the elders that I know, and have known, you would feel ashamed of such a remark. Last year one elder who knows the author of this, said he preached over 300 times! Rarely does an elder preach less than four times a week and upward. They love the work, and the better preachers they are, the better off is the district. Through my grandfather—himself an elder many years—our family has been connected with the Mississippi Conference since 1826. My father and uncles were all Centenary men. In the thirty-three years of my membership in the Methodist Church, I have met many elders, as our home has always been a place that they seemed to love. I know them as few laymen do, and understand the many difficulties that beset them. They frequently confide in me, and let me see their real selves. I have met only one that did not love to break the bread of life. My present elder is an "ex-College President," and a most excellent one he was, too. He endorses my position entirely, though at the time he read the article he was not aware of the authorship. He realizes that there is great prejudice in many minds against preacher-teachers.

In regard to the call to teach, my brother is correct. God does call men to the classroom, and when a teacher feels that he is called, no one objects to his obeying the divine injunction. Only let him surrender his credentials and be what he is—a teacher.

In conclusion, let me say that the name of that splendid layman, L. C. Garland, heads my diploma. No one ever questioned his loyalty to the tenets of our holy religion, and his work among the youth of Methodism will live on and on, long after his name has been apparently forgotten.

Being a graduated and trained teacher myself, I recognize the wonderful seduction of the class room, though it has been years since I have taught. No employment for a layman is half so delightful. But if God called me to his holy ministry, gladly would I go, and no thought of the lost delights would ever arise in my mind.

Reduced to its last analysis, the recent proposal of the Carnegie corporation to have the Church surrender all claim to the Medical Department of the only university that we possess (or do we possess it?) is but a protest against the preacher-teacher. They insultingly flaunt their dollars in our faces, and ask for our school, so that they can free it from the control of the Church. The only apologists I have seen for Kirkland have been preachers—never a layman. Yet our brother thinks that we are inferior in our loyalty. We had best recognize the facts as they are, and quit theorizing. Our schools are not doing what we laymen and the church at large expect of them, and they will not do so until a great change is made in our system. The sooner we make it the better for all concerned.

A METHODIST LAYMAN.

THE VANDERBILT CONTROVERSY.

If the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University should gain the suit pending before the Supreme Court of Tennessee, and if my fellow sufferers will join with me, we will bring suit against the University for having obtained our money under false pretenses and for misappropriation of funds.

No matter what the wording of the charter is, no matter what the custom of the Board of Trust has been, for our contract in subscribing at the solicitation of the general agent, Dr. R. A. Young, for funds to help in building and establishing said University, was made with the distinct understanding that the institution was to belong to and be under the control and management of the M. E. Church, South; that it was a move of the church, which had been long waiting such an institution. If the general agent had explained to us that the University was to be managed according to the claims of the present Board of Trust I do not think he would have secured enough funds to pay half his expenses.

There is a clause in the Federal Constitution which forbids the passage of any law, Federal or State, "impairing the obligation of contracts." We, the subscribers to the funds of the University, made a plain contract, announced by the agent and agreed to by the subscribers—not merely before one audience, but before hundreds of audiences scattered over the South. Our names are signed to that contract. No charter or legislative act can violate this contract.

The history of Dartmouth College furnishes a case in point. A Mr. Wheelock was the founder. He reserved certain rights. But in the days of the bitter political strife between the Federalists and Republicans (Democrats), the trouble for party control found its way into the legislature of the State and certain laws were passed impairing the rights of Mr. Wheelock granted him in the original founding of the college. The great Webster figured in the case when brought before the Supreme Court, and in his speech he brought tears to the eyes of that dignified body of which John Marshall was Chief Justice. The court nullified the act of the legislature because it impaired the obligation of the original contract with Mr. Wheelock.

This applies to the present suit of the Board of Trust; it impairs the original contract with the subscribers to the Vanderbilt fund.

The theological department and all the other departments and schools, agencies, and the Board of Trust were under the same conditions. The Board can not yield to the Church the control of the theological department without yielding all, can not retain some without retaining that.

Now, if the Board of Trust gains its suit, then a multitude of us will have been swindled out of our money.

THE LOUISIANA ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE HAS REACHED THE PARTING OF THE WAYS.

Those who profess to love the cause the League represents must come to its rescue at once with funds for the support and enlargement of its work, or be a party to its failure to accomplish its purpose in this State.

It would be useless and well-nigh criminal to conceal the League's condition from its friends. For several years the League has received a very meagre and unsatisfactory support. But it was hoped, after the Alexandria Convention held last March, the work would start out, not only with a new lease on life, but that it would enjoy an era of prosperity. And to this end, the Headquarters Committee and the Superintendent, with his assistant, Mr. Christian, have labored unceasingly. Many miles have been traveled and hundreds of letters have been sent out, but the response from the people has been entirely inadequate to meet the needs of the cause. Receipts from all sources have amounted to only about one-half of the actual expense of carrying on the work. Notwithstanding, the League's opportunity to fulfill its mission in the State was never better than at the present time. This is evident when you consider that several Parishes are ready to vote dry as soon as an opportunity is given them. A few weeks' campaigning would result in elections being ordered in three or four different Parishes. Again, our prohibition laws are better enforced than ever before, and the unprecedented growth of Shreveport and Lake Charles, as well as other smaller towns under prohibition, has forever refuted the argument that prohibition kills the town. We have reason to believe the next session of the Legislature will give us additional law-enforcement measures, one of which will be to prevent shipment of liquor into dry territory. A bill to prevent the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors is now pending in Congress. This Constitutional Amendment will likely be submitted to the States soon, and it is important that the League forces in every State should be in working order, that this amendment may be carried.

To keep the League in fighting shape, the sinews of war must be forthcoming. We have in our office in Shreveport subscriptions amounting to several thousand dollars. Most of this amount has been subscribed by members of the Churches in Louisiana during the past three or four years. If your subscription is partially or wholly unpaid and past due, please remit at once. If your subscription was given during the past twelve months, it is not past due. Our subscriptions run twelve months, and are due quarterly in advance. If you have never subscribed, and are at all interested in our cause, send us a contribution at ence. If you have subscribed and paid, and feel able to do so, help us again. A few dollars from all who are interested will put us in good shape.

The prohibition question is not primarily a political one, but is a great moral issue, and we appeal to all ministers of the gospel to come to our help. Brother Pastor, please read this article to your congregation, or congregations, if you have more than one, at your next regular appointment with them. If we can get the situation clearly before the people, they will come to our rescue. At this time we have no other method of doing this, except through the religious press and the pastors. Some brother may answer: "I don't think this question ought to be brought into the churches." If this is your position, console yourself with the fact that every saloonkeeper in the State agrees with you.

Respectfully,

A. W. TURNER, State Supt.
CLAUDE L. JONES,
Chairman Headquarters Committee.

The place of meeting of the Pacific Conference has been changed from Hollister to Sacramento, Cal. The date, October 15, remains as it was in the original schedule.

Dr. E. G. B. Mann, the editor of the Central Methodist Advocate, in a recent editorial, said: "The writer believes implicitly in the itinerant system and the whole Methodist economy." Verily, he is a "man" after our own heart. May his tribe increase!

The Pacific Methodist Advocate announces that the Montana Conference, which met on August 13, voted unanimously in favor of changing the name of our Church. But our contemporary diplomatically refrains from giving the figures. We dare say that it did not take the Secretary long to make the count.

Dr. J. C. C. Newton, who is an authority concerning religious matters in Japan, says that it took fourteen years—from 1858 to 1872—to win 12 converts to Christianity in that country. Since that time—approxomately forty years—the number of Christians in the Mikado's dominions has increased to 85,000.

The Publishing Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church will present every Annual Conference with a copy of the General Minutes of that denomination. The Secretaries are expected to keep them on hand, and it is suggested that they will be valuable to the District Superintendents (presiding elders) in looking up the records of proposed transfers.

Bishop J. C. Kilgo is doing some fine writing for the church press these days. We knew that our North Carolina Chief Pastor had distinguished himself as an administrator and pulpit man, but we did not know before that he was so gifted with his pen. Manifestly, in point of versatility he is scarcely second to any man in Southern Methodism. By the way, we notice that Bishop Kilgo has called the presiding elders of the Arkansas, Little Rock, and White River Conferences to meet him for a two days' conference at Little Rock on September 17.

There is soon to be a change in the editorial management of the Western Methodist, Dr. J. A. Anderson having sold his interest in that paper to Rev. W. B. Hays, presiding elder of the Charleston District of the St. Louis Conference (formerly an Arkansas man), Rev. Frank Barrett, and Mr. L. F. Blankenship, a practical newspaper man of Pocahontas. It is understood that Brothers Hays and Barrett will do the editorial work, and that Brother Blakenship will be the business manager. Dr. A. C. Millar will retain his interest in the paper. Dr. Anderson will hold on to the tripod until the brethren who are to succeed him can adjust their affairs and get ready for their new work.

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate says: "Our Georgia Methodists should know that in the library of the Wesley Memorial Church of Atlanta there is to be found about the finest collection of Wesleyana on this side of the big water. There are more than 5000 volumes, and they have not been gathered without reference to their value to the student of Methodism. And here are some things pertaining to John and Charles Wesley and their coadjutors that are not to be found anywhere else on the globe." Our esteemed contemporary further adds, that to Bishop Candler is due the chief credit for bringing together these things which are of interest to the sons of Wesley everywhere.

MISSISSIPPI'S OPPORTUNITY.

Upon the campus of the Mississippi A. and M. College can be found every kind of building imaginable for such an institution, except one devoted to the moral and spiritual uplift of the young manhood of Mississippi.

An opportunity is now before the fathers and mothers of the State, and all interested in the deepest welfare of her sons, to meet this greatest need of a thousand of her young men each year by the erection at the A. and M. College of a Y. M. C. A. Building, adequate, well equipped, and standing for Christian manhood and character, and charging the atmosphere of the institution with uplifting influences.

Every dollar contributed by a Mississippian means three dollars toward the erection of the building; for Mr. Rockefeller, appreciating the need, has generously offered $40,000, if friends of the cause will contribute the additional $20,000 required to erect a $60,000 building, in keeping with the size and needs of the institution. This building will be much more than an assembly room for religious services once or twice a week. It will be a three-story, fire-proof modern structure of gray pressed brick, and in it will be located the college post-office and barber shop—sources of revenue to maintain the building—and game rooms, reading rooms, a gymnasium, baths, Bible and mission study class rooms, and a large assembly room for religious services; also a few guest rooms for the entertainment of visiting speakers, alumni and others.

Already about $10,000 of the $20,000 to be secured is either in hand or in good subscriptions; but the remaining $10,000 must be had by the first of January next, or the offer is withdrawn, and an opportunity to meet a long felt want and fulfill a most sacred obligation to the young men of our State is lost forever.

So the friends of Mississippi's young manhood who are acquainted with the opportunity and the need send forth a most urgent call to all other friends of so worthy a cause to come forward, and by liberal contributions help to make possible the erection of a first class Y. M. C. A. Building (we have not even a second or a third class building now,—none at all, in fact) at an institution appraised at over a million dollars and where over a thousand young men, in the formative period of their lives, assemble annually for study and the development of body, mind, and soul. Surely, the soul should not be put in the basement, where the Y. M. C. A. meetings are now held, or left to sit around on trunks or any old thing, if the Bible is the book to be studied, when such ample facilities are provided for all else.

And surely men of all creeds and no creed recognize that the mind and body, however developed, without character constitute no sure foundation upon which either the home or the State can build, or even commerce thrive. So let every man and woman who reads these lines and who would make a permanent investment in the conservation of character in the young men of our State send contributions large or small, or notes payable this fall or by January 1, to the Treasurer Y. M. C. A. Building Fund, Agricultural College, Miss.; or if further information is desired, write to Dr. W. N. Logan, Chairman, at the same address.

Prof. H. W. Nelson, a man of mature Christian character, who is deeply interested in student welfare, will have charge of the Y. M. C. A. as General Secretary for the coming year, during which time the new building will be erected, unless Mississippi proves sadly indifferent to that which should be nearest to her heart. With a prompt, hearty and generous response let us carry forward this worthy enterprise. As pastor of the Methodist Church at Starkville, I would especially urge Methodists everywhere to respond to this call. Hundreds of Methodist boys annually attend this institution.

Starkville, Miss. T. H. LIPSCOMB.

REV. K. M. HARRISON DEAD.

Rev. K. M. Harrison died on Tuesday, September 2, at 2 p. m., after a severe illness of ten days. He had been quite feeble since last December, but of late had seemed to be better. It had been his habit for years to preach on fifth Sundays, and he said the day that he was taken sick, "If I continue to improve, I shall preach next Sunday." He had not been able to occupy the pulpit since the first of the year.

He leaves his good wife, three sons, and four daughters, who were all with him in his last hours, save one daughter who is in Texas. The funeral services were held in the Methodist Church. All the places of business in the town were closed up, and a host of people gathered to show him respect and honor. We were assisted in the obsequies by Rev. John W. Bell, the presiding elder, and Revs. R. O. and S. A. Brown. The interment was made in the Amory Cemetery, with Masonic honors. W. M. YOUNG.

In some sections of Louisiana a war of extermination is being waged against the buzzard, which is now declared to be a conveyor of deadly diseases among the various kinds of stock. Yet we have on our statute books a law making it a crime to kill one of these carrion crows. Verily, with all his boasted learning, how little man knows. The theories he glories in to-day are sneered at and cast aside to-morrow.

If the cable reports from China can be trusted, that country is yet far from being in a state of good order. Twice, recently, statements have been sent out from Peking that members of Parliament from the southern part of China had been arrested and given a farcical trial and executed. Martial law prevails in Peking, and the President of the Republic, Yuan Shi Kai, says that these arrests and executions have been effected by rioters without his sanction or knowledge. He has promised repeatedly to make an investigation concerning these outrages, but in spite of his promises nine lawmakers were killed on Aug. 27.

A certain Mrs. Sewall recently delivered an address before The Hague in which she said that 2,000,000 women in the United States oppose the fortifying of the Panama Canal. It is not an infrequent thing for public speakers to represent themselves as voicing the views of a large number of people. That two million women have such an opinion as this, is at least questionable, and that they have not expressed themselves in such a manner, is positively certain. For the United States to build the Panama Canal and then leave it defenseless would, in our opinion, be an act of about as rank folly as a nation could commit.

Dr. E. H. Galloway, Secretary of the Mississippi State Board of Health, states that for the six months ending with June 30 incomplete statistics showed 1253 cases of pellagra in that commonwealth, and 267 deaths from that disease. There is no doubt that this dread malady is increasing in the South at a rapid rate. Nearly 200 physicians, who are engaged in studying the origin and treatment of pellagra, met in a conference at Spartanburg, S. C. on Sept. 3, among them being the noted London specialist, Dr. Louis W. Samson, who is considered the chief exponent of the theory that insects are responsible for the spread of this plague.

The New York Independent says: "We know of no objection to the appointment of Francis Burton Harrison as Governor of the Philippine Islands. He is a man of Southern birth and Northern education. We trust that he will follow the example of Mr. Taft when Governor, and treat native men of culture as gentlemen, not inferiors, and the ladies as fit partners to dance with." To be sure! It is an unnecessary waste of words for The Independent to declare in favor of race equality and intermingling. This is well understood to be the darling scheme of this sprightly but most unsound of American periodicals.

The September issue of The Review of Reviews is exceedingly friendly to Governor Sulzer, of New York, in the comment made upon the struggle between him and Tammany. What it has to say in his behalf is quite impressive and is well worth a careful reading. It also holds that the preponderance of argument is clearly in favor of his keeping the Governorship until it is seen whether the impeachment charges made against him are sustained. Our opinion is that, while Mr. Sulzer has probably been guilty of things that are culpable, Tammany, in seeking to have him displaced, is undertaking to control the affairs of the State of New York for its own profit in the boldest and most high-handed manner known even in its shameful history.

The United States has issued a health bulletin giving the history of the discovery of the cause of yellow fever and the most successful way of combating it. The bulletin, of course, gives due credit to the discovery by Dr. Finlay, that the disease is carried by a certain kind of mosquito, and also to Dr. Walter Reed for his demonstrations bearing out Dr. Finlay's claims. With improved drainage conditions, the abolishing of cisterns, and the screening of residences, New Orleans, Havana, Cuba, and the Canal Zone have been entirely freed of the yellow fever pest. The Government's idea in giving circulation at this time to the above mentioned bulletin is to encourage people residing in the semi-tropical sections of our country to take proper measures to protect themselves from such a contagion.

RIPLEY AND BLUE MOUNTAIN.

Dear Brother Meek: I have just finished our protracted meetings and feel that the Church has received an impetus that will result in greater fruitfulness in our Lord's vineyard. Brother E. S. Lewis, of West Point, rendered me valuable service at Ripley. He won all hearts by his gentleness, earnestness, and eloquence, both in the social circle and pulpit. One good result from the meeting was a trip furnished me by the people of Ripley to the General Missionary Conference at Waynesville, N. C.

Brother J. S. Duke, of South Side, Corinth, was my evangelistic helper at Falkner, and the manner in which he performed his work was eminently satisfactory. His sermons were clear, pointed, and convincing, each hearer being made to make a personal application of the message. Sinners were convicted, backsliders were reclaimed, and the Church was stimulated to increased activity. Any one would do well to secure Brother Duke's services for evangelistic work.

Brother T. H. Dorsey, of Water Valley, preached for us at Blue Mountain, and he reached the high water mark in his gospel ministrations. The truth he proclaimed was often clothed in different garb, sarcasm, wit, pathos and logic, yet it always reached its mark, and accomplished that which it was designed to do. All were delighted with his sermons and received a great spiritual uplift from them. The harmony and brotherly love that prevail in the churches at Blue Mountain cannot be excelled.

This will complete my third year on the Ripley and Blue Mountain charge, and should I be returned no preacher will receive his appointment more joyously than the writer.

IN MEMORY OF JULIA DRAUGHAN BALDRIDGE.

By Rev. J. Ivey Hoffpauir.

"Forget them not; though now their name
Be but a mournful sound,
Though by the hearth its utterance claim
A stillness round."

And who, once knowing Julia Draughan Baldridge, could ever forget her? I am mindful of Elizabeth Barrett Browning's caution, "Be abstinent in praise and blame," but I think I can safely venture a few words in memory of this good woman.

She was born on December 1, 1854, at a beautiful Southern plantation home near Woodville, Miss. She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at about the age of seventeen, living ever after a consistent, active Christian life. She was married to Dr. J. W. Baldridge on Dec. 1, 1878. She fell on sleep in Avoyelles Parish, La., on April 2, 1913.

Thus with a few strokes of the pen, we seem to have summed up a life that extended over nearly three-score years. It is not so. A life such as that lived by the subject of this sketch cannot be told in dates or names of places. A peep into the home, and you see in her the wife and mother, refined, gentle, painstaking, directing with thoughtful love and care all the affairs of that humble and happy home. Glimpse her church life, and you have to pen one sentence only, "Faithful in all things." She taught in the public schools of the State of Louisiana for nearly forty years, and few have surpassed her in the art of imparting instruction, of governing and directing aright the child life.

Her husband, Dr. J. W. Baldridge, and eight children live to mourn their loss. The husband, three sons and two daughters live in Louisiana, one daughter in Mississippi, one son in Alabama, and one belongs to the U. S. Navy, and is now somewhere near China. To all of them we offer the consolation of the Gospel of Life, and pray that they may live so as to meet that dear one in the larger life.

"For loved ones in the Homeland
Are waiting us to come,
Where neither death nor sorrow
Invade their holy home:
O dear, dear native country!
O rest and peace above!
Christ, bring us all to the Homeland
Of his eternal love."

AN EXCELLENT RECORD

LOUISIANA METHODIST ORPHANAGE

To the many good friends of our Orphanage, through whose liberality our work has been made possible, I feel quite sure this statement concerning the excellent work being done by the children in the Orphanage and the fine reputation they are making will be a source of gratification.

"OUR PRIZE WINNERS."

No. 1. Birdie May Greer, who made the highest average, winning the first prize.
No. 2. Leola Greer, winner of the second prize.
No. 3. Lois Hammett, winner of the third prize.
No. 4. Allen Bennett, a cripple and having only one eye, averaged 97 6-10.
No. 5. Fannie Darden, who scored a very high average.

The accompanying picture presents five of our children, whom we style "Our Prize Winners." The records made by these five children in their school work are of the very highest order, and were the five highest ones made in the public schools at Ruston. Out of four prizes offered in the school for the best records made, three of the prizes were won by these children. This appears all the more commendable when it is remembered that there were over 600 children in attendance—children from the best private homes in the town, and that is saying from among the best homes in our land. We are very much gratified at the progress and development made by all our children and the promise which they give for the future. Out of about sixty children attendng the public schools from the Orphanage, only three among the smaller children failed to be promoted to higher classes, and nearly all of them made exceptional records in their class work.

We are glad to print the following statement from Prof. J. G. Ray, Principal of the Ruston High Schools for the past three years:

"This is to certify that I have been closely connected with the work of the Methodist Orphanage, located at Ruston, La., for the past three years, and that I honestly believe that it is one of the best organized institutions in the State. The children are well trained physically, morally, intellectually, socially, and religiously. I believe it is the best disciplined home in our country. During the three years that I was principal of the Ruston High School we had from 44 to 56 of the Orphanage children in attendance, and they were most obedient and faithful in the performance of their duties. They obtained the highest marks last year in deportment and literrary achievement. They won three prizes out of four that were offered. I most heartily endorse the high character of work that is being done by the good people in our Orphans' Home, and I believe that these boys and girls will be developed into the highest type of manhood and womanhood—fitted to solve life's problems in a way that will prove a blessing to God and humanity. Yours fraternally, J. G. RAY,

Principal Ruston High School."

With this kind of work being done by our children, and the possibility of their development thus indicated, I believe our great cause deserves, and will receive, the most liberal support of all our people. I feel that in this connection it should be stated that the privileges given us by the Board of Trustees of the Ruston High School have been most helpful in every way. They do not even charge our children the usual incidental fees, and have been most generous in the help they have rendered the Orphange.

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN, Superintendent.

A LOYAL LAYMAN'S VIEW.

Editor Advocate: During my twenty-three years' experience as a layman of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, I cannot recall any issue that has so vitally affected our great Church in its efforts to elevate and train men for usefulness as that pertaining to the Vanderbilt University, now pending in the Supreme Court of Tennessee on an appeal by the majority of the Board of Trustees of that institution. The affirming of the decree of the Chancery Court, where the decision was in favor of the Church, will mean a great deal in the training of our membership to support loyally and liberally our educational interests; for our people are more interested in having our preachers finish their course of study and complete their education at Vanderbilt after passing through our colleges than ever before, because there is a corresponding desire on the part of the laity to educate our boys and girls, and we feel that they should be led along spiritual and moral lines by an educated ministry, and that Vanderbilt should be under the direction of the M. E. Church, South, as we think the charter of said institution plainly indicates.

If our Chief Pastors, led by Bishops Hoss and Candler, have intimated that the conditions of the Carnegie offer were formulated to influence improperly the pending litigation above referred to, I am free to say that this is generally believed, and it is thought that the letter addressed to Mr. Carnegie by Chancellor Kirkland was so worded that he, Mr. Carnegie, very largely embraced the Chancellor's suggestions in tendering his gift in a way that would take the Medical Department of Vanderbilt University from the control of our Church, and also in going further and making a very unkind thrust in saying that our Church was not capacitated to control and direct such an institution of learning. Whether he said so in such language, this was implied in his letter to the Chancellor. To the contrary, we believe that not only has the Methodist Church, South, made successful efforts along this line of work among men, but that other denominations have succeeded in such endeavors, and will continue to do so. Therefore, the minority of the Board of Trustees were right in refusing to accept Mr. Carnegie's gift, conditioned as it was, since it would mean that our Church was to surrender a part of this great institution of learning together with all that this branch had cost us. And our Bishops could not have said less than they did in their address pertaining to this matter. No part of the gift should have been accepted by the majority of the Board of Trustees unless the offer could have been made to the institution without any "strings being tied to it." Of course, if it had been tendered without the imposition of such conditions, it might have been accepted and made the means of great usefulness to men. PARHAM WILLIAMS.

THE RACE.

Adelbert F. Caldwell, in Zion's Herald.

Slow and Sure once ran a race,
(Often I've been at the place),
With Hurry and Worry, by no means kin,
To see which one the prize would win!
After a little, 'twas plain to see
Who in the end the victor'd be.
Though Hurry and Worry had a swifter pace—
'Twas Slow and Sure that won the race!

WHAT A LITTLE CLOCK DID.

A little clock in a jeweler's window in a certain Western town stopped one day for half an hour at fifteen minutes to nine. School children, noticing the time, stopped to play; people hurrying to the train, after a look at the clock, stopped to chat a minute with one another. And all were half an hour late, because one small clock stopped. Never had these people known how much they depended on that clock until it had led the astray.

You may think you have no influence, but you cannot go wrong in one little act without leading others astray.—Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate.

DIPLOMACY OF TOMMY.

Tommy had been invited to dinner at the house of some particular people, and his mother, who was not to accompany him, was anxious about his table behavior. She gave him elaborate instructions before leaving home, and on his return made special inquiries.

"Oh, I got on all right," Tommy assured her, "at least I—I only did one thing wrong, and I couldn't help it, and I got out of that fine."

"What did you do, Tommy?"

"Oh, I was cutting my meat and it slipped off the plate on to the floor."

"Oh, dear boy!" cried his mother in distress. "What on earth did you do then?"

"Oh, I just said sort o' careless, 'That's always the way with tough meat,' and went on with my dinner."—Continent.

BERTIE'S PATIENT.

In his little brass bed, among the downiest pillows, lay Bertie Stuart. He was getting over the measles, and was, as nurse said, "as cross as a little bear."

Nurse suggested reading "Swiss Family Robinson," but Bertie "didn't care to hear about that family a hundred thousand times," so it ended in her telling him of another little boy in the same city, who had to lie all day long in a tiny cheerless room. He had no pretty flowers to look at, not even a nurse to amuse and care for him, and yet he was such a bright, patient little chap.

That evening when mother came in to kiss Bertie good-night, his eyes were fixed on the roses on the table.

"I want those roses taken to a sick boy tomorrow, mother," he said.

"All right," said the mother, "and we will see that he gets some chicken broth, and a little jelly also."

And so day after day, a basket of good things went to the other sick boy. Bertie's mind was kept so busy planning new pleasures for the "other one" that he quite forgot his own troubles.

One morning, some weeks after, the postman brought a letter addressed to "Mister Bertie Stuart," which read:

"Dere Bertie: I kin sit up. Kin you? The flowers is prime an' the jelly an' stuff's just elegant. Much obliged. Yours truly,

TOMMY GRAY."

"Oh, mother," cried Bertie, "I never in all my life was so happy!"

"I think," said mother, "that my little boy is just beginning to learn the secret of happiness."—Sunbeam.

THE POWER OF POLITENESS.

A delightful little story was once told in the Irish Times about a monkey and a dog:

A brave, active, intelligent terrier, belonging to a friend, one day discovered a monkey owned by an itinerant organ grinder seated upon the bank within the grounds and at once made a dash for him. The monkey, who was attired in jacket and hat, awaited the onset in such undisturbed tranquility that the dog halted within a few feet of him. Both animals took a long, steady stare at each other; but the dog evidently was recovering from his surprise, and about to make a spring for the intruder. At this critical moment, the monkey, who had remained perfectly quiet hitherto, raised his paw, and graciously saluted by raising his hat. The effect was magical. The dog's head and tail dropped; he sneaked off and entered the house, refusing to leave it till he was satisfied that his polite but mysterious guest had departed.

IN THE DELTA.

Through the kindness of the good people of the Port Gibson Charge I am permitted to spend a few days in the wonderful Yazoo Delta. About 10 or 12 years ago I made my first visit of any length into the very heart of this region. Having been reared in Yazoo County, contiguous to the Yazoo River, and having served, in my earlier ministry, appointments within this territory, I was not altogether ignorant of the general character of the country; but such have been been the developments within the past two decades that one can scarcely realize the wonderful changes that have been made. Where, even ten years ago were miles upon miles of unbroken canebrakes, undisturbed by the adventurous huntsman, and which were the home of the bear and the deer, are now wide-spreading fields, looking like veritable flower gardens, of white and pink cotton blossoms, and rich with the golden, ripening Indian corn. Comfortably built and screened houses, located as much as possible upon the front, give the appearance of an almost unbroken village. Artesian wells to the depth of 800 to 1000 feet produce a supply of water unsurpassed by any section of the State for excellence and healthfulness. In the matter of handling the water problem, this section has already met the suggestions of Brother Joe Cook in a large measure. When the hole in the ground has once been made, the matter of piping it into houses is of small moment. By the way, I have always resented the idea that our women should be the burden bearers, as described by Mr. Cook, and have never held the man in much esteem who would sit behind a cob pipe and allow his wife to do such drudgery. It is more a question of consideration on the part of husbands and sons than of time and opportunity to lighten the burdens of mothers and daughters.

But I've switched (not side-tracked) for a little. I recall a trip from Mayersville, via Rolling Fork to Yazoo City, in the month of July, which because of roads through forests and quagmires, took two days for its making. Now, over this same section, one sees the automobile flying with its speed of 20 and more miles an hour. Smoother, better kept roads are nowhere to be found, much to the praise of the automobilists.

The steam horse has played a great part in the development of the conditions so apparent, making it possible for the interior to have easy ingress and egress and vastly improving commercial facilities. Towns ranging in population from a few hundred to several thousands dot the country, and the tourist in his car finds no difficulty in making it from town to town with comfort. One does not ride far in any direction without meeting the ubiquitous automobile. Yes, believe it or not, I have met the Methodist pastor out in his car, fairly splitting the wind (shades of Asbury!); and certainly if he had taken more time than was necessary in making the last call, he was not slow in getting to the next. Truly, the days of our fathers were not like these, at least for luxury and speed. It is well that we have Brothers Lewis and Bachman to tell us whence we sprang,

"Lest we forget, lest we forget."

The horse and saddle, with saddle-bags, gave place to the buggy and grip; the buggy, in turn, to the steam car, and now the automobile bids fair to supplant them all. Somehow, just here, I recall the prophecies of Isaiah in the opening of the 40th Chapter—physically, at least, there is food for thought.

Better towns, better churches, and better school facilities are not within our borders, and the appointing powers have never acted more wisely than in sending our strongest preachers to this section. I am reminded of a conversation, reported from Oklahoma, when two parties were discussing the wonderfully rapid development of that State, and one remarked, "What marvelous civilizers the railroads are." An Indian overhearing the remark, added, "And the missionaries." So it would be the grossest injustice to rob the Methodist itinerant of his share in these marvelous changes for good which have taken place in the Delta. By the way, Doctor, I want to record in this connection that some years ago I was told that too much praise could not be given your veteran, Dr. J. W. Price, now at Tutwiler, for his work toward the accomplishment of these gratifying results.

Crops were never better in this section, and the cotton has rarely been equaled; in some fields it is literally breaking down with fruit. And isn't this the time to strike for that $50,000 dormitory? Just turn President Watkins loose in this Delta for two or three months, and by a cyclonic movement, he ought to sweep that cause to victory. Loose him and let him go from the first of November until March.

Your issue of the Advocate of Aug. 28 is at hand, and I have enjoyed every word of it, especially the articles of Brothers Bachman and Lewis. That Palmetto letter from Sam Steel was good reading; but, to save me, I couldn't see much suggestion of recreation for a disordered liver in that great list of books that he smuggled into his grip. The Doctor had better watch lest some thing worse than a torpid liver should grip him while trying to digest such food on mountain air and water.

Having perfect confidence in the wisdom of our Bishops and the justness of our cause, none of the voluminous contributions concerning Vanderbilt have moved me for a minute. With Hoss and Candler to lead, we need fear no danger. By the way, Bishop Candler's latest book is a feast of good things. I am ready to read it the second time.

But Doctor, I must stop; and yet the pen would go on. How does that old Latin phrase put it: "Cacoethes Scribendi"?

I'll call again much later. T. B. HOLLOMAN.

Itta Bena, Miss.

NOT STANDING WITH McTYEIRE.

Every now and then some Vanderbilt Trustee who is acting with the majority of the Board proclaims that his position concerning the control of Vanderbilt University is identical with that of Bishop McTyeire; but such a declaration can deceive only such persons as are very poorly informed concerning the history of that institution. It is true that Bishop McTyeire affirmed that the Board of Trust was a self-perpetuating body, but this question at that time was considered of comparatively little importance. The occasion of its coming up was merely the question as to which body should take the initiative in selecting the Trustees, the Bishop preferring for the Board to designate the men and the Conferences to confirm the nominations made. No evidence that the Bishop ever consulted any legal authorities on the subject has ever been adduced. Bishop Hoss has suggested that Bishop McTyeire, not being a lawyer, was misled by that clause of the Charter which declared that the Board should have "perpetual succession." Certain it is that that expression has impressed many who know little of the forms of such instruments with the view that the Board is independent, whereas it is common in chartering such corporations to fix the time of their continuance by stating that their trustees shall have succession for fifty, or a hundred years, or perpetually, as may be desired. This clause in the Vanderbilt Charter has to do wholly with the matter of the Board's perpetuity, and not with the question of how it was to be constituted. Such was the finding of the five able and impartial lawyers who composed the Vanderbilt Commission and of Judge Allison in his cogent and illuminating opinion. Nowhere in the Charter is it stated the Board of Trust is a self-perpetuating body; nor did the original patronizing Conferences ever concede it to be such.

But, as we have said, we grant that Bishop McTyeire held the view that the Board was vested with the power to elect its members; but it by no means follows from this that his position concerning the University was in accord with that of the majority of the Trustees. Far from it. Let us look somewhat more fully into the matter and see.

The original Charter of Vanderbilt University contained the following provision: "That the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, be and are hereby requested to act as a Board of Supervision of the University, or any of its departments, and jointly with the Board of Trust to elect officers and professors, and to prescribe the courses of study and plan of government." Bishop McTyeire believed with all his heart that this was an integral part of the Charter of the University, and in his last will and testament, he made the urgent request, "That all the Bishops exercise steadily and constantly their charter rights as members of the Board of Trust, directing and controlling." Do the majority of the Trustees stand with Bishop McTyeire on this proposition? Nay, not so. On the contrary, they have declared that this part of the Charter is mere "surplusage" and utterly illegal, and they have ejected the College of Bishops, as an official body, from any participation in the management of the affairs of the institution.

Nor is this by any means all. Bishop McTyeire also held that the Church owned the University. But the majority of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust at its meeting in June, 1910, voted down the following resolution, which was introduced by Bishop Key, Dr. W. D. Bradfield, and Dr. John H. Dye: "The right of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to appoint the Trustees of this University being denied by this Board of Trustees, great unrest is likely to follow to the damage of the University and the Church. To allay as much as possible this unrest and to guard as far as possible—the interests of the University, this Board hereby declares that the trust it holds is a trust for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and that Vanderbilt University belongs to said Church."

But, worse if possible even than this, the majority of the Trustees have come into Court with a formal and lengthy bill in which it is denied that the Church founded the University, or has maintained and patronized it in the legal sense, and which from beginning to end, by logical implication, clearly and emphatically repudiates its ownership. Is not this standing with Bishop McTyeire with a vengeance? The truth is, the majority of the Vanderbilt Trustees agree with Bishop McTyeire only as to the one point which would assist them in eliminating the Church from any legal participation in the government of the University, and that they utterly repudiate his views as to everything else.

In fact, though we thoroughly believe in the right of the Church to elect the Trustees, if Bishop McTyeire's convictions as to the ownership of the Church and legality of the full charter rights of the Bishops were admitted and put into force, the right of choosing the Board of Trust might be surrendered, and yet the Southern Methodist Church would have grip enough on the University to hold and largely control it. But let it be remembered that the rights of the Episcopal College have been challenged and trampled underfoot; that the ownership of the Church has been denied; and that the question as to who may elect the Trustees is only one phase of this great legal battle. And, furthermore, let it be clearly understood that if the majority of the Board are upheld in the contentions which they have set up, the Church will not have left the slightest vestige of authority in the Institution.

Let not these men undertake to shelter under the great name of McTyeire. When they do so they are either self-deceived, or they are putting forward a defense which is specious and which will not bear even the most superficial analysis.

STILL A TERRIBLE THING.

We sometimes hear it said that Christianity has greatly mitigated the horrors of war, and so perhaps it has; but its effects are still inexpressibly awful. The fact that combatants practice less barbarity in fighting than in former times and that the banner of the Red Cross now waves wherever battle flags are unfurled indicates, to some extent, the progress of civilization; but soldiers, as a rule, are still more or less cruel, and the use of deadly weapons and the hardships of campaigning yet necessarily result in the shedding of blood, a considerable loss of life, and a vast amount of suffering. There may be occasions where war is a necessity—when an appeal to the sword is better than dishonor and an ignominious peace; but certainly there can never be any justification for a resort to arms until every possibility of a satisfactory settlement by amicable means has been exhausted.

The Balkan States and Turkey have recently terminated one of the bloodiest and most costly conflicts of modern times. We do not say that the Allies were not warranted in undertaking to drive the "unspeakable Turk" from Europe, and but for their own disagreements and the fighting among themselves, the great price they paid for their triumphs might have been set down by the historian as creditable sacrifices upon their part. As it was, however, the luster of their glory has been dimmed and well-nigh obscured by their divisions and unseemly strife in the hour of victory.

The New York Independent in its issue of August 21 made the following interesting comment upon the outcome of these two fierce and expensive struggles:

"Bulgaria gains according to the Treaty of Bucharest a territory approximately two hundred miles long by sixty broad—that is, about the size of the State of Maryland. She has paid for it over a billion dollars, if we count the lives of her soldiers worth anything. But the other States have suffered as horribly. Their losses are estimated by the correspondent of the Corriere della Sera of Rome thus:

A Balkan Trial Balance.

	Soldiers	Killed	Expenditures
First War.
Bulgaria	350,000	80,000	$ 300,000,000
Servia	250,000	30,000	160,000,000
Greece	150,000	10,000	70,000,000
Montenegro	30,000	8,000	4,000,000
Turkey	450,000	100,000	400,000,000
Second War.
Bulgaria..		60,000	180,000,000
Servia		40,000	100,000,000
Greece		30,000	50,000,000
Totals	1,230,000	358,000	$1,264,000,000

"The total would be vastly increased if one could include the lives lost by the massacres and epidemics, the value of private property destroyed and of the farming and other industries suspended, the bankruptcy of commercial houses, and all the incidental misery and ruin caused by the war. It is to be expected that what was European Turkey will now increase rapidly in wealth and population. That has been the experience of other provinces when freed from Turkish rule. But it will be many years before the monetary loss can be recovered, while the vital loss is irreparable."

CALLED TO HIS REWARD.

It is with sincere regret that we chronicle the death of Rev. K. M. Harrison, of Amory, Miss., an account of which is given elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate. Brother Harrison became a member of the North Mississippi Conference in 1883, and the record which he made in the itinerancy was in every respect highly creditable. He was a man of deep piety, of studious habits, and a forceful and effective expounder of the Holy Scriptures. He left a lasting impress upon every charge that he served, and his name is as ointment poured in many parts of North Mississippi. He had been on the list of superannuates for several years, and since his retirement from active service he had resided at Amory, where he was universally esteemed and loved. He has triumphantly finished his course, and has, we doubt not, joined the innumerable company of the redeemed on high. We extend sympathy to the bereaved, and pray that God may have them in his gracious keeping in this trying hour. We trust that a memoir of the deceased will be furnished the Advocate at an early date.

A MATTER OF IMPORTANCE.

The statement concerning the work and condition of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League which appears in this issue of the Advocate deals with matters of much importance. No State in the South needs such an organization more than Louisiana, and our moral and religious citizens should hearken to this earnest call and promptly give the financial assistance that is so urgently required. We have no more appealing duty to perform than of ridding our commonwealth of the curse of the licensed dramshop, and it behooves every friend of temperance to lend at once a helping hand to our leaders in this noble fight. Lay this cause on the hearts of your people, brethren, and send your remittances to Brother Turner as soon as possible.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. E. McCoy, the pastor, is planning to begin a revival at Queensboro Church in Shreveport on the second Sunday of this month. Rev. E. K. Means will assist in the preaching.

Rev. B. T. Crews, though superannuated last winter, is making full proof of his ministry on the Coushatta (La.) charge. He is now in the midst of a meeting at Coushatta, assisted by Brother Howse, a former comrade from Arkansas.

Rev. W. F. Roberts, who has served the South Mansfield charge, and at the same time attended Centenary College, has, since vacation opened, built largely with his own hands a parsonage at South Mansfield, which he now occupies.

Revs. G. E. Cameron, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Shreveport, and W. W. Armstrong, who has charge of the Noel Memorial Church in the same city, have been enjoying a well-earned rest among friends in the Lone Star State.

Rev. J. W. Faulk, pastor of the Sibley (La.) charge, closed a revival meeting at the Pine Grove Church on the third Sunday in August. He was ably assisted in the services by Rev. L. E. Crooks. There were 8 accessions to the Church.

Rev. R. W. Tucker is delighting the congregation at Leesville, La., with his preaching. Though many years a presiding elder, he seems not to have waned as a preacher. This, in spite of the fact that many charge that office with spoiling men as preachers.

Rev. A. I. Townsley keeps everything on the go at Rayville and Delhi (La.). Rumors are in the air of a handsome new church at Rayville. This charge confidently expects to report "everything in full" when the clans gather in their annual meeting at Crowley.

Rev. W. T. Bazzei, our pastor on the Iuka Circuit, favored us with a nice club of six months' subscribers a few days since. We assure him of our hearty appreciation of this helpful service, and we pray that the Advocate may prove a blessing to the homes into which he has introduced it.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, of Sardis, Miss., recently conducted a great revival at Cold Springs, Miss. There were 80 or more professions of religion, and 40 accessions to our Church.

We are indebted to Rev. H. L. Norton, our pastor at Purvis, Miss., for several subscriptions to the Advocate and a kindly invitation to visit his charge. His work is progressing smoothly.

Georgetown, Miss., has lately had a season of spiritual refreshing, the services being conducted by Rev. T. J. Norsworthy. Rev. J. V. Bennett, the pastor, will tell our readers of this good meeting in the next issue of the Advocate.

Rev. H. T. Young, of the Shreveport City Mission, is now engaged in an open air revival meeting at Cedar Grove, La., a new factory site located in Caddo Parish. Large congregations are waiting upon his ministry, and he is planning to organize a church there in the near future.

After a stay of several weeks in the West, Rev. L. I. McCain has returned to Louisiana. He was in New Orleans the first part of this week, and favored our office with a call. Though still not strong, he is looking well and was in fine spirits. He left for his home at Bogalusa on Wednesday.

Rev. J. C. Ellis, our stirring pastor at South McComb, Miss., has recently brought us under obligations to him for some effective work done for the Conference organ among his people. We highly appreciate this good service, and we trust that Brother Ellis will find the Advocate a valuable co-worker in his field.

We are indebted to the following brethren, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for subscriptions to the Advocate sent in within the past few days: Rev. T. G. Adair, Marietta, Miss., 2; Rev. D. H. Crowson, Paris, Miss., 12; Rev. J. W. Price, Oak Ridge, Miss., 6; Rev. B. L. Sutherland, Wesson, Miss., 5.

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of Starkville, Miss., contributed a brilliant article to the last number of the Nashville Christian Advocate, entitled "Progress and Progressives." Brother Lipscomb is one of the best equipped young ministers in the Southern Methodist Church, and best of all, he has not been spoiled by his accomplishments.

Rev. C. H. Herring, of the Amite (Miss.) charge, writing under date of Sept. 2, reported a fine meeting in progress, in which the preaching was being ably done by Rev. G. C. Yeager, of Hamburg, Miss. The congregations attending were stated to be large, and the outlook was thought to be propitious for a gracious spiritual awakening.

The work of the Church is progressing favorably in West Monroe, La., where Rev. H. W. Ledbetter is in charge. A cozy parsonage has been built at a cost of about $2000, and will likely be paid for this year. Three churches have been repaired, and a piano purchased for one. Two good meetings have been held, resulting in about ten accessions.

The beautiful new First Methodist Church of Shreveport awaits the finishing touch of the furnisher and decorator, after which it will be ready for the opening, which has been announced for Sept. 21st, with Bishop H. C. Morrison as the preacher. This structure is the most conspicuous building in Shreveport, and is admired by all visitors to the city.

Rev. R. H. Wynn, D. D., has up to the present been actively campaigning in the interest of Centenary College. He is now preparing for the opening on Sept. 17th. The friends of the college are jubilent over the prospect of a record-breaking attendance. They are more than ever convinced that no mistake has been made in the choice of Dr. Wynn as the head of this noted institution.

A correspondent writes as follows: "Rev. C. C. Miller, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, of Monroe, La., is making good headway in his work. Both his faithful pastoral visiting and practical preaching are much appreciated. He has sent 59 new subscribers to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Monroe is expected to come up with a creditable report at the Annual Conference."

We acknowledge ourselves indebted to Rev. W. B. Aisworth, of New Hebron, Miss., for a list of subscribers sent in on Sept. 2. In his note, Brother Aisworth said: "Brother Kelley has just closed a great revival at the Bethel Church on this charge. He is now with us at New Hebron. The Spirit's power has been present in every service, and we are expecting a great victory for our Master."

A night telegraphic letter from Ruston, La., received last Tuesday morning reads as follows: "Greatest fall opening in the history of the Ruston Sunday school last Sabbath. There were 477 in attendance. Mr. W. A. McKennon delivered a fine address on "The Church of To-morrow" to a congregation that taxed the seating capacity of the church. A great Sunday school rally was held at night, with speeches by Brothers McKennon, Lowrey, and others."

The Methodist people at Vivian, Louisiana, under the aggressive leadership of Rev. C. M. Morris, expect to break ground for their new church on Oct. 1. The Mooringsport charge, to which Vivian belongs, is in the heart of the great Caddo Oil Field. It is a hard field, but our two pastors, Morris and Holliday, are wide awake, and under them our Church is more than holding its own.

From Corinth, Miss., on Sept. 2, Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick wrote as follows: "I have just returned from the International Training School for Sunday School Workers, where I assisted Mr. W. C. Pearce, the International Superintendent of Adult Work. We had a great school—a fine season of spiritual, intellectual, and technical study; and I am hoping to give it all out to the workers in our Conference as the days go by."

We are indebted to Rev. Paul M. Brown, the capable presiding elder of the Shreveport District, for the following note: "The Board of Stewards of the Mansfield charge granted the beloved pastor, Rev. T. H. Morris, a vacation during the month of August, but instead of betaking himself to mountain or seaside, he spent the month in assisting his brethren in meetings in the country. The revival tidings in the Advocate will echo the result of this vacation labor."

In a letter to this office, bringing a list of trial subscriptions, Rev. C. E. Fike, of Patterson, La., says: "Our work here is showing up well. We have a good Sunday school and the prayer meeting and preaching services are well attended. We will have our protracted meeting the week following the third Sunday in September. I spent four days recently with Rev. J. H. Brooks in a meeting at Prudhomme, where we had several conversions and 6 accessions to the Church. Brother Brooks is making good headway in his charge."

Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., passed through New Orleans last Monday and paid our office an appreciated call. He was en route to McComb City, Miss., to assist his brother, Rev. B. W. Lewis, in a meeting at East McComb. Rev. J. M. Lewis, of Vancleave, and Rev. O. S. Lewis, of Brandon, were also due to be present, thus bringing together to take part in the meeting the famous Lewis quartette. The services were announced to begin last Tuesday evening, and it was expected that they would continue about ten days.

Rev. O. S. Lewis, under date of Sept. 1, sends us the following note: "I have just finished my revival campaign at my country churches. We had a good meeting at every point, and the spiritual life of the whole charge has been greatly quickened. My father was with me in the last two series of services. We had a mighty outpouring of the Holy Spirit on our congregation on the fifth Sunday in August. I do not think I ever heard father preach with more power and freedom than he did on that occasion. I am to be with Brother Terry at Pocahontas this week."

Mrs. Rebecca Ellison Johnston, the accomplished wife of Prof. J. S. Johnston, has returned to her college home at Centenary, after several weeks spent at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, where she chaperoned a number of Louisiana girls and incidentally did some advanced work in her favorite art. She and her husband are both children of men who were much loved and prominent during their lifetime as members of the Mississippi Conference. This son and daughter of the parsonage are giving a good account of themselves.

During his eight and a half months' incumbency as pastor of the Mer Rouge and Oak Ridge charge, Rev. R. W. Vaughan made a most excellent record. He spent $475.25 in remodeling the parsonage, and was instrumental in securing $4335.27 for a superintendent's home at the Ruston Orphanage. The preacher and presiding elder were paid $977.50, and the total amount raised for all purposes was $6,240. Besides this, two successful revival meetings were held. Rev. P. H. Fontaine has succeeded Brother Vaughan in this pleasant pastorate.

Rev. H. W. May, the energetic presiding elder of the Alexandria District, in sending in his appointments for the fourth round, says: "We are having a good year in this district, both in material and spiritual things. I am pushing the collections for missions and other benevolent causes, and saying a word for the Advocate as opportunity offers." We are grateful to Brother May for being mindful of the Conference organ in his rounds. A presiding elder can greatly help the church paper by showing that he considers its circulation a thing of importance.

In a note written on Sept. 2, Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Vicksburg, Miss., says: "Rev. T. W. Adams was with me in my meeting at Redbone last week, and did some excellent preaching for us. He is a busy man and keeps things on the move. He preached a fine sermon at Crawford Street last Sunday morning, and dispensed the Word helpfully at Washington Street at the evening hour. He held two quarterly conferences yesterday afternoon, and will be at Porter's Chapel to-day and to-morrow." This is pretty good hustling for the hot season.

Brother N. C. Norsworthy, of Petal, Miss., states that the Methodist congregation at that place gave up Rev. J. L. Neill, who recently was transferred to our First Church at Laurel, with not a little reluctance, but that Brother Harrison, his successor, is making a fine impression in every respect. He also reports a good meeting at his church, in which the preaching was done by Rev. I. L. Peebles, of Meridian, who made a great impression upon the community. As a result of these services 16 names were added to the membership roll, and 17 infants were baptized.

A letter, written by Sister W. W. Wooliard on September 7, stated that Brother Wooliard, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Columbus, Miss., had had fever for twelve days. His temperature had not been very high, but up to that time his physician had found it impossible to reduce it to normal. It was hoped, however, that the fever would soon cease, and that recuperation would quickly follow. When Sister Woollard wrote their little son, William, had also been indisposed for some days, but was not thought to be seriously ill. Let this stricken household be remembered at the throne of grace.

On a beautiful picture card Mrs. Vic T. Hoyle, of Tupelo, Miss., sends us from Bruin Inn, North Cheyenne Canyon, Colorado, the following message: "Only a word of greeting to you from this point in the Rockies, where one's thoughts are lifted from nature to nature's God." It almost makes us feel envious to think of mountain breezes as we sit sweltering at our desk this hot September evening. But this thought lingers but for a moment—we are glad for our friends to have the pleasure of such air and scenery, even if we may not. Mrs. Hoyle is a great worker in many good causes, and well deserves a season of rest and recreation.

Rev. J. J. Brooks sends us the following sad message from Boyle, Miss.: "It is with sorrow that I inform you of the death of Sister Shivers. A mother in Israel has gone. She died last night at her home here. She leaves five children: Dr. M. O. and Dr. E. E. Shivers, Mrs. Armstrong, Mrs. Stallings and Mrs. J. W. Rogers." It is with no small measure of regret that we chronicle the decease of this worthy woman, who had been an active worker in the Church for many years, and whose home in Bolivar County, near New Salem, was for a long time a center of Christian influence. She wrought well, and has doubtless passed to a rich reward. We extend to the bereaved our deepest sympathy.

In asking that the subscription of his father be shifted to another, Mr. W. A. Price, of Carpenter, Miss., says: "I dislike very much to have to request that this change be made, as I am sure he is one of your oldest subscribers. He has been taking the paper constantly since Bishop Keener was the editor, and has always enjoyed reading it very much. But since the death of my sister, Jennie, ten days ago, his home has been broken up, and he will hereafter reside with me and will have the benefit of my paper." We regret to hear of the sorrow which has crossed the threshold of this long-time friend of the Advocate, and we pray that heaven's richest benedictions may rest upon him in his declining days.

The marriage of Mr. Oliver Sidney Hopkins, of Hickory, Miss., and Miss Bessie Chichester Cooper, of Brookhaven, Miss., which took place in the Mary Lampton Auditorium of Whitworth College on Wednesday evening, Sept. 3, with Rev. Robert Selby and Rev. W. H. Lewis jointly officiating, was a notably brilliant event. The decorations were elaborate and beautiful, the bridal gifts were numerous, and many telegrams of congratulation, from far and near, were received. After the ceremony was performed, Dr. and Mrs. Cooper gave a delightful reception at their residence. Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins are now enjoying a bridal trip in the East, and will return to Hickory, where they will reside, about the middle of October.

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1913. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

JAMES KIZER, of Red Banks, Miss., died in a hospital at Memphis on Aug. 27, 1913, after an operation. Brother Kizer's community will feel heavily the loss of such a character. He had been a steward in the Church for many years, and a truer, more faithful friend to the pastor would be hard to find. He was every inch a man—noble, free from littleness, true to his friends, not seeking notice or praise, and faithful and steadfast to duty. He has gone to the reward of the faithful.—J. M. Carpenter, Pastor.

Mrs. E. F. KELSEY, wife of Dr. Frank Kelsey, died on August 16, 1913. Sister Kelsey was a member of the M. E. Church, South, at Wesley Chapel. Her's was a long life, well spent in service to God and man. She was ever the faithful friend of the Church and her preachers, and there are many of our older men who will recall with pleasure the friendship of Dr. and Mrs. Frank Kelsey. She was a noble character, who had strong convictions and moral courage, and who was warm-hearted and faithful to her friends. Her church, and friends, and loved ones will long feel her loss and bless her memory.—J. M. Carpenter, Pastor.

JAMES WESLEY NEEL, SR., was born in Madison County, Miss., June 21, 1830, and on Tuesday morning at 3:25 a. m., Aug. 26, 1913, the death angel appeared unto him and bade him give up his life to enter into the life beyond; so he closed his eyes in peaceful sleep and his sweet spirit winged its course through the dawn of the early morning to the Master who summoned it from this world. Eighty-three bright and useful years were granted him in this life—a beautiful and happy one. His large, kind heart, lovable disposition, and many deeds of kindness won for him friends everywhere. As a friend, soldier, and Christian, he was the same true man, always at the post of duty. He was the oldest member of the Cayuga Methodist Church, in which he was an active worker until the past year or so, when he commenced to be in failing health, suffering from a stroke of paralysis which confined him to his home, and from which he never recovered. Among friends and loved ones, his body was laid away in the family cemetery at Bethesda.

Lone are the paths and sad the bowers,
Whence thy meek smile is gone;
But Oh, a brighter home than ours,
In heaven is now thine own.

A FRIEND.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, God in his all-wise providence has taken from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. E. J. Eubanks, of Hammond, La., therefore be it resolved:

1. That our Woman's Missionary Society has lost one of its most faithful and earnest members—one who was a true example of Christian character, always ready and willing to do whatever she could for her Master.

2. That we extend to the family our heartfelt sympathy in the death of this loved one, and while not being able always to understand God's dealings with us, we can be assured by his promise that he doeth all things well.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and a copy spread upon the minutes of this meeting.

Signed by: Mrs. Clarence Crook, Mrs. Lula Boos, and Mrs. Chas. Struck.

BENTON, MISS.

We have recently closed a great revival meeting at Benton. We began on Sunday, Aug. 3, and closed on Aug. 10 at 3 p. m., with a special service for the men. The meeting was begun by the pastor and Rev. T. J. Norsworthy came to us Monday night. His preaching was strong and logical. He calls a spade a spade, and condemns sin in all alike. He really believes that the great fish swallowed Jonah. Brother Norsworthy is a strong evangelist—one who helps the pastor. There were quite a number of conversions and six were added to the Church on profession of faith. By way of preparation for the meeting the good people at Benton painted the church on the inside and put down a nice new floor. We made the church building clean and white on the inside and we believe the good Lord honored us and gave us hearts white and clean. We began our meeting at Midway Church on Sunday, Aug. 10, with Brother Norsworthy in charge. He was to have come back to Benton Monday evening, Aug. 11, and preach to the ladies only, but illness prevented him and the pastor had this pleasure. And now, what do you think? While we were at the church worshiping God, the men took possession of the parsonage and left many nice tokens of appreciation, such as meal, flour, lard, sugar, coffee, tea, rice, etc. The table would not contain it all, so some things were put on the floor by the table—for all of which we are very thankful.

The good people all over the work have been very kind and nice to us. Several times this year the different churches have showered us with good things to eat. We have, to date, spent $150 on the parsonage. We have put waterworks in the house and yard, painted two rooms, and ceiled and papered one room and put a twin window in it. Two nice new iron beds, one mattress, and three sets of springs, and other things, have been purchased; and we are not through yet. All the churches joined in repairing and furnishing the parsonage, but I felt that it would not be fair not to make mention of our Woman's Home Mission Society which has made most of these things possible in both the church and parsonage. They are only about twelve or fifteen strong, but how they do work! They pay to both Foreign and Domestic Missions. Our good people at Midway have put in their church a nice new Epworth organ and a lot of our Little Hymnals. The pastor and his wife are happy.—J. O. Ware.

The man who absents himself from the regular services of the church for reasons which are trivial, injures his own soul and robs the church of his influence and helpfulness.

Tidings From the Field

Porterville, Miss.

I write you a few lines to let you know how things are progressing in the Porterville charge. With the help of Rev. W. F. Baggett of DeKalb, R. E. Rutledge of Florence, A. J. Davis of DeSoto, and A. S. Oliver, from Matherville, we have had splendid meetings. My people say they were the best that they have had in several years. The congregations were large and much good was accomplished. We have about 62 conversions and 31 have been received into the Church and we are expecting others to join. God is with us in power in this field. Pary for us that we may continue to grow and be successful in the Lord's work.—H. R. McKee, P. C.

Mechanicsburg, Miss.

We are glad to give you a report of our revival services held in Mt. Olivet Church, on the Satartia Charge, beginning on July 25 and closing on July 31. Rev. G. S. Harmon, of Meridian, was engaged to help our pastor, Rev. H. J. Maddox, but at the eleventh hour wired, "Unavoidably detained." Our pastor was very much disappointed, but his disappointment proved to be God's appointment for him. He preached in the power and demonstration of the Spirit. He is an able expositor of the Scriptures and one of our most eloquent, earnest, consecrated preachers, and an ideal pastor. The Lord honored his word and gave us a great revival. Praise his holy name! Many souls were blessed and brought closer to God. The church was greatly revived; the visible results were 40 accessions, 2 or 3 sanctifications, and 10 additions to the Church on profession of faith. There have been two applications for membership since the meeting closed.

Signed: Mrs. W. T. Stevens, Mrs. J. R. Melton.

Longtown, Miss.

We have recently had some good revivals on our charge. On Sunday, July 13, we began at McGee's Chapel. Brother Dorman came to us Sunday night and did the preaching, and did it well. The Church was revived and is in a better condition than it has been for several years. We received 6 new members......The following Sunday we began at Longtown, the writer doing the preaching. We had no additions, but the Church was greatly revived......The Fourth Sunday we began the battle at Pleasant Grove. Rev. W. N. Duncan reached us on Monday morning and gave us a series of strong gospel sermons that went to the hearts of the hearers. Backsliders were reclaimed, several were converted, and 4 were added to the Church. Saturday evening, Aug. 9, Rev. W. D. Bass began preaching at Beech Springs under a bush arbor prepared for the occasion. We had planned to hold a ten days' meeting at this place, having united three churches in these services, and it proved to be a success. There were about 200 conversions and reclamations. There were 91 accessions on profession of faith. There will be two prayer meetings and one Sunday school organized as a result of this meeting. Ten persons testified that it was their purpose to have prayer in their homes once a day, at least. Brother Bass preaches the gospel in the good old-fashioned way. It was the greatest meeting ever held in this part of the country. People came ten miles to attend. Praise the Lord!—J. A. Biffie, P. C.

Greensburg, La.

I have just closed my meeting at Day's Church on the St. Helena charge. My brother, W. B. Perritt, from Marksville, La., did most of the preaching, and I held the altar services. My brother is a plain, practical gospel preacher; he seemed at his best, and did good, effective preaching. We had been praying and planning for a revival from the beginning of the year and the Lord did not disappoint us, but came in great power and blessed us, one and all. The congregations were very large from the beginning to the end. The interest was good from the first service and increased from day to day. The judgment alone can tell the good work that was done. The Church was revived and gotten on higher ground and can testify for the Lord again; backsliders were reclaimed and sinners were converted. We had 23 accessions on profession of faith and 1 by certificate. We baptized 31 infants; this makes 48 infants baptized on the charge this year. In the beginning of the year we began to pray to God to give us souls for our hire, and then that he might give us a definite number, that number being 25, and as he always does, he has given us more than we asked for—we have received 32. I am sure that we will baptize more than 50 infants before Conference. To the good and merciful God, we give all the praise for what has been done through my brother and myself at Day's Church.—H. Brooks Perritt, P. C.

Sallis Ct. (North Miss.)

I am at home this week enjoying a rest after being out six weeks in protracted meetings. We have three meetings to hold yet. Our first protracted meeting was at Spring Grove. Rev. W. J. O'Bryant, of Water Valley, came on Monday to help us in the meeting, but on account of sickness had to leave that afternoon. His sermon Monday morning was very much enjoyed by those who heard it, and we were very sorry that he was not able to stay through the meeting. After Brother O'Bryant left the preaching fell upon the pastor. The Lord was with us and we had a good meeting; 15 were added to the Church. Since the meeting they have torn down the old church and are building a new one. The Ladies' Aid Society at Spring Grove is doing well; it has raised something over $50 for the new church. We had a fine meeting at Salem; Rev. J. L. Simpson, of Pickens helped us there. Brother Simpson did the preaching after Sunday and he did it well. We had 18 accessions to the church. The people at this place are replacing the foundation and putting on a new roof and new sides; so they will have comparatively a new church. ......Our meeting at Shrock was a success. Rev. V. C. Curtis, of Kosciusko, was with us there, and did us good service. His preaching was of a high type. The meeting resulted in the church being much revived, and in 14 accessions. The Ladies' Aid at Shrock is very active; it has recently painted the church, inside and outside.......We had a very profitable meeting at Bethel. We were ably assisted by Rev. R. A. Ellis, who preached the old-time gospel. Our meeting at Pleasant Hill was very helpful. We had two accessions to the Church by letter. Rev. E. C. Sullivan of Kosciusko did most of the preaching and he gave forth in no uncertain sound.—W. F. Rogers, P. C.

BELLEFONTAINE, MISS.

The church at this place is rejoicing because of the glorious revival we have just experienced, the deep and abiding work which we believe was accomplished for so many, the members that were added, and the extent to which the kingdom of God in this section was advanced.

Brothers J. A. Stone and A. H. Mitchell began the meeting, doing timely and faithful work until Monday evening, when Brother T. J. Halfacre, of Kilmichael, came to us and took charge. The attendance and interest increased at every service, until on Friday morning not less than half a hundred people were shouting the praises of God. Brother Halfacre is a strong gospel preacher; he has great tact in reaching the people in his pulpit ministrations, and understands how to draw them to him in their homes. He appeals to the reason, the heart and the conscience of the people; and hence we believe the work here is deep and that it will prove abiding. The sermon on Thursday night was on "Why I am a Methodist." The result was that on Friday eight joined our Church, three of them coming from the Baptist Church. We received 12 members. A few more will perhaps follow. I find that the people are not generally informed as to what we believe, and that there is a crying need for Methodists to stress their doctrines. We have been too silent, too tender-toed, too mnch afraid we would wound some one's feelings. We ought now to wake up, and have a strong presentation of our doctrines during every protracted meeting.

We have had a hard struggle here. There are only a few Methodists, badly scattered, and the Baptists have here a strong church with 280 members. But we are on the up-grade; we began with less than 25, and now have 97 good, earnest, faithful members. Pray for ns that the good work may go on, and that we may be a force for righteousness in this community.—E. F. Arnold.

CRAWFORD STREET, VICKSBURG.

Dear Brother Meek: Onr third qnarterly was held last night, Sept. 2. The reports showed the finances considerably in advance of the same period last year and the attendance on public worship better than it has been for several years, especially during the hot weather. Brother Adams last Sunday morning took occasion to commend the congregation for their reputation, which had gone abroad, for attending public worship so well during the warm weather. Our attendance at prayer meeting last Wednesday night was the largest this year. Extra chairs were brought and the entire space was occupied. Everything has moved along delightfully with this pastor, and our peope are loyal. We have one of the best Epworth Leagues in the Mississippi Conference.

Brother T. W. Adams preached a strong, practical sermon Sunday morning. His words addressed to the official members of the Church were stimulating and encouraging. It has been said of Brother Adams that "there is not a lazy bone in him." I was associated with him when he was on the Brookhaven District. It can be truly said of him, that our Church has no son more loyal or more untiring in his zealous devotion to dnty. He has the courage of his convictions and does not hesitate to "speak out in meeting," as occasion requires.

I prsented the claims of the Advocate last Snnday and have an agent actively at work. I enclose the list so far secured, and will send others in a few days with check to cover the subscriptions. Yonrs fraternally,

C. F. EMERY.

Sept. 3, 1913.

THE REVIVAL AT TIOGA, AND ELSE.

Dear Doctor. We closed a meeting at Liberty Church, on the Pollock charge Sunday night, August 31. We had an old time Methodist revival." The Rev. C. B. Powell is pastor, and a more consecrated man I have never met. I must also say something about the good people he has to preach to. After spending ten days in their nomes, I conld not think of a single time I heard a man speak evil of his neighbor. They love one another, and they love the truth and the Method'st Church. We conld not tell how many were saved; bnt the people claim it was the best meeting they have had for years. Several were reclaimed, and 13 were added to the Church. Christians came to the altar and consecrated their all to God, and we trust that the work will stand. This is the first time that I have had the pleasure of working with Brother Powell, but I hope it will not be the last.

A personal word: I was a pastor evangelist in the M. E. Church for the past four years, but seeing things as I do, I am now knocking at the door of the M. E. Chnrch, South. I will be in the evangelistic work, and would be glad to correspond with the Methodist pastors who are looking for help in their meetings. I will give as references, Rev. H. W. May, presiding elder of the Alexandria District; Rev. E. J. Vallery, Pineville, La.; Rev. C. B. Powell, Pollock, La., and Rev. W. C. Mann, D. S., DeRidder, La I have three open dates for fall meetings and would be glad to have them taken. My address for 1913 will be Tioga, La. I am also making engagements for 1914.

I preach the Methodist doctrine, which appeals to the hearts of men—justification, through repentance by faith, and that the blood of Jesus cleanseth from all sin. May the Lord bless the Christian Advocate and its many readers.

E. C. WOOD, Evangelist.

BAKER, LA.

I desire to say that I am still alive, and on praying ground with our Heavenly Father. Embracing the fifth Sunday in June I assisted Rev. H. C. Murphy in a revival meeting at Varnado. We had splendid congregations and I believe that much good was accomplished. Brother Murphy is getting along finely.......On July 14 I began with Brother S. D. Roberts, at Antioch Church, and continued with him until Saturday morning. We had a good meeting and it was a pleasure to me to be there, having been pastor there some years before. While there I was entertained in the home of Bro. D. H. Dyer, one of my best and truest friends. I also dined with other friends whom I highly esteem. On the third Snnday in July I opened our protracted meeting at Blackwater Church. On the following Monday my beloved and efficient presiding elder joined me and preached day and night nntil the close of the meeting (which was Friday night), save one day that it rained so much that we were nnable to have service at 11 a.m. Brother Coleman did fine preaching from every standpoint, and his sermons were highly appreciated by all. The rain interfered considerably; nevertheless, we had a good meeting, and time alone can reveal the vast amount of good that was done....... On August 10 I opened onr protracted meeting at Deerford, and on the following Monday, Rev. H. N. Harrison, from Lafayette, joined me and did the preaching until the close of the meeting. Brother Harrison did fine pulpit work. His sermons were Scriptural and logical, and everybody that heard him was delighted. The church was somewhat revived and much good was accomplished......... On August 21 Rev. C. A. Battle, of New Orleans, opened fire in Baker, and for one week he continued to fire day and night. He did excellent preaching and I feel that much good resnlted. We had the pleasure of entertaining Brother Battle in our home during the entire meeting, and we certainly enjoyed his fellowship and association. Both the Protestants and Roman Catholics enjoyed his eloquent sermons. . . . One more item that slipped my mind, I now mention: On the last day of our protracted meeting at Blackwater, Brother Coleman held my third quarterly conference and presided with grace and ability. Reports were made from three churches, which were very good. There was no report from Bethel. The good women at Blackwater had prepared a magnificent dinner, which they served at the church to the delight of all present. May the Lord bless the Advocate and all concerned. Should any brother desire my assistance in a revival meeting, I could perhaps serve him.—S. D. Howard, P. C.

LET THE BRETHREN HELP.

Dear Editor: In your issue of July 24 there was an appeal from the presiding elder of the Port Gibson District for funds to assist in rebuilding the M. E. Church at Fitler's, Miss. To this appeal I responded with a small contribution and wrote our beloved Brother Adams that I praised God that Jesus Christ is alive in the hearts and minds of that people

In your issue of the 28th of August I note a report from the pastor, written from Mayersville, that only two contrbutions (one of which was mine) had been sent to the presiding elder in response to this appeal. I hope that the readers of the Advocate will look up the two issues above mentioned and send in a contribution to Brother Adams. God will bless yon for it.

The trouble with the Church to-day is that we have too many Sunday Christians. I would not give a fig for a religion that will not make me a better man from Monday morning to Saturday night. I have consecrated my life to the service of the Master and I am happy in doing his work. And glory be to God I find opportunities to work every day in the year.

This is not written to give offense. It is my prayer that not a single reader of the Advocate will hear the Master say, "Depart from me, ye cursed into everlasting fire;" yet, if we do not heed the warning now, after awhile it may prove everlastingly too late. Yours in the service,

L. C. MARSH.

A SPLENDID TONIC.

Cora, Ky.—Mrs. Iva Moore, of this place, says, "I was so weak, I could hardly walk. I tried Cardui, and was greatly relieved. It is a splendid tonic. I have recommended Cardui to many friends, who tried it with good results." Testimony like this comes unsolicited, from thousands of earnest women, who have been benefited by the timely use of that successful tonic medicine, Cardui. Purely vegetable, mild, bnt reliable, Cardui well merits its high place in the esteem of those who have tried it. It relieves women's pains, and strengthens weak women. It is certainly worth a trial. MAKING A MOUNTAIN OUT OF A MOLE HILL.

The alarming stories which had been circulated relative to the alleged injurious ingredients of coca-cola received their death knell when the U. S. Government made its searching investigation of the popular soda fountain drink. At a cost estimated in the neighborhood of $100,000.00 the Government brought together the most distinguished array of medical, scientific and legal experts that ever investigated a food product. Professors of chemistry from the big universities, lecturers from the leading medical colleges of America, experts in analytical chemistry and pharmacology, scientists of national and international reputation and Government experts from the Bureau of Chemistry in the Department of Agriculture, labored with the brightest legal minds of America to find something wrong with Coca-Cola.

After years of investigation and nearly four weeks of joint discussion the court found that Coca-Cola was neither misbranded nor adulterated. The manufacturers' statement of the ingredients of the beverages was correct. No alcohol, cocaine or other narcotic drug could be found. Sugar, caramel, fruit flavors and caffeine (the active principle of tea and coffee) were found to be the essential ingredients. Even the caffeine was found to be present in only about one-half the quantity found in tea and coffee. The mountain turned out to be a mole hill.—Advertisement.

If you have tried the usual methods such as sprays, douches, salves, inhalers and the stomach-ruining "constitutional" medicines, you will readily see the superiority of this Smoking Remedy.

Simply send your name and address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton St., Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you a free package containing samples of the Remedy for smoking in a pipe and made into cigarettes, together with an illustrated booklet which goes thoroughly into the subject of catarrh. He will send by mail, for one dollar, enough of the medicine to last about one month.

COULD NOT WRITE.

Versailles, Ky.—Mrs. Elisha Green, of this place, says, "I could not write all the different pains I had, when I first tried Cardui. I could scarcely walk. Now I am able to run the sewing machine and do my work; and my neighbors tell me the medicine must be good, for I look so much better." Crdui is a specific, pain-relieving, tonic remedy, for women, the past 50 years, it has been found to relieve women's unnecessary pains, and female misery, for which over a million suffering women have successfully used it. Try Cardui for your troubles. It will help you. At the nearest drug store.

A GREAT MEETING.

The Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, of Sardis, has just held for Rev. J. B. Connor, at Cold Springs, Miss., one of the greatest revivals ever konwn in the history of the church there. There were 80 professions of religion, and if the writer mistakes not, 40 have united with our Church on professlon of faith; others have come in by letter, and some will unite with other Churches. Brother Gladney came to us with the peace of Christ in his face and praising God with all his soul. He preached the gospel of Christ in such a clear, logical and forcible manner that it fell with weight upon the hearts and minds of all who heard him. Truly, this messenger's great faith was shown by his work at this place. What says James?—"What doth it profit my brethren, if a man say he hath faith but hath not works? Can that faith save him ? * * * Yea, a man will say, Thou has faith and I have works; show me thy faith apart from thy works and I by my work will show thee my faith,"

A CORRECTION.

In the memoir of Rev. J. B. Stone, published in a late issue of the New Orleans Advocate, the types make me say "seven grandchildren," and "the four following named children, survive him." Not knowing definitely the number, I wrote: "Some grand children," etc. The printer, it seems mistook the word some, perhaps not distinctly written, for seven; hence the error.

Brother J. B. Small, a son-in-law of Brother Stone, writes me that he left fourteen grandchildren. The corrected sentence should read: "Fourteen grandchildren and the four following named children survive him."

RIGHT ABOUT FACE

You're headed for the city—in search of opportunity. But you're really running away from it when you leave the farm.

There are big chances lying right within your reach—one of them, a business that will pay you between $15 and $18 a day is contract ditching with the

BUCKEYE TRACTION DITCHER

The farmers right around you will keep you busy. They know the Buckeye—know how clean, true and fast it digs drainage ditches, and they're willing to pay a good price for this kind of work.

The Buckeye can be had with steam or gasoline power. Either will cut 100 to 150 rods a day, at a very small operating expense. And the Buckeye gasoline machine operates just as well on kerosene, thus cutting fuel expense in two.

Look up the Buckeye Exhibit at the State Fairs of Detroit, Sedalia, Missouri, or Springfield, Illinois. The man in charge will be glad to give you a FREE demonstration and tell you just what the machine will do for you.

SHOES AT WHOLESALE

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE Readers are SAVING from ONE to TWO DOLLARS a PAIR by Ordering Their Shoes DIRECT FROM FACTORY BY PARCEL POST.

Would the cutting of your FAMILY SHOE BILL one-third or more mean a very big yearly saving to you? Figure it out. The present high cost of shoes is due to two things, the Middlemen's profits which the consumer must pay and the enormous decrease in raw materials. The new Parcel Post System gave us an idea. By selling our shoes direct to the wearer, cutting out the middlemen entirely, we could save the consumer fully a third on every pair of shoes and still make our usual wholesale profit. The plan is a great success. New Orleans Christian Advocate readers are realizing the opportunity of saving and great numbers are writing for our catalog which is sent free to anyone on request. It tells how cheaply high quality shoes can really be bought under this fair method of selling. Every shoe sold is guaranteed perfect in fit, material and workmanship—your money will be refunded if unsatisfactory. Write for your catalog to-day. A trial order will please and result in our getting your entire shoe trade. PARCEL POST SHOE CO., 258 Meeting Street, Charleston, South Carolina. (Advertisement.

A MESSAGE FROM THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE PRESIDENT.

Dear Sisters: As the quarter draws to a close, a review of our work may inspire deeper consecration and more zealous efforts for the next quarter, coming upon us with such speed that we cannot realize it is the last one of this year. Let us turn the search-light on our own lives. Have we prayed and worked? Have we felt the presence of the Holy Spirit leading us on to higher and nobler deeds for the glory of our Lord? Have we discharged our duty as His stewards, gaurding His vineyard and tending His sheep? Our promise to give $3500 to the Foreign and $2000 to the Home Department must not be broken when so much is depending upon these pledges. When we think of our missionaries laboring so far from home, some of them exposed to the dangers of war, risking their lives for the sake of saving souls, we surely will lend our financial aid, as well as our prayers, to the cause.

Our government demands a great many people and millions of dollars to carry on its work. Why should our Father's kingdom receive the attention of only a few people and be financed on such small capital, when the whole world is His? Only a tenth of the women of Southern Methodism belong to the Missionary Society. In October we want to have a membership campaign to increase this number. A plan which has worked very successfully is as follows: Select two captains and let them choose sides, competing for the largest number of new members; also for new subscribers to "The Voice." At the end of a given time, let the side defeated give a jubilee reception to the winners and new members. Try this plan and see if our women will not become more interested, and if it will not also double your numbers. Then a mission study class will hold the interest and increase the strength of our Societies, Districts, and Conference.

Sisters, I beg of you to put aside all material duties and let us be a united Conference in observing the Week of Prayer, praising our Lord for the inexpressible love and goodness he has bestowed upon us in the past, and asking for a clearer vision of the Christ and a deeper interest in our King's business. The last eight months we have planted; what will be the harvest during the next four months? Very sincerely,

MRS. R. E. JOHNSON.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Two new Societies have been organized in the Corinth District. In other districts three Societies are reported as having been added to the Foreign Department, making five Adult Societies added in that department during the second quarter. Four new Young People's Societies were added, and three Children's Societies have reported to the Treasurer that never did so before—a good record for one of the hot weather quarters and an encouraging indication for what may be accomplished by a united force!

There were good Institutes at Tupelo and Verona. At the last place we had with us the Conference President and the Second Vice-President, and a goodly congregation of all denominations. The Corinth District reports most enthusiastic meetings. —From North Mississippi Conference Bulletin.

PARLIAMENTARY RULES.

The Council has adopted "Mrs. Longan's Parliamentary Rules Made Easy" as the rules to be followed in the Council and Conference missionary organizations. Much confusion in Auxiliary, District, and Conference Society gatherings may be avoided if our officers have some general guide in conducting these meetings. This book makes parliamentary usages simple.

NEWS FROM MEXICO.

Telegrams have been sent to all of our missionaires in Mexico authorizing them to leave whenever they think best, but they seem loath to leave their posts of duty. Miss Moling wrties from San Luis: "If I could see any immediate danger I would be glad to get out of the way of it. What is it that has alarmed you? The Consul advises the missionaries to be ready to go if necessary, but does not see that there is any need to be alarmed at present." From Chihuahua comes the information that school opened in August with 300 in attendance. In Mexico City there were 100 present at the opening of school on August 1st.

CAPITOL STREET AUXILIARY, JACKSON, MISS.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Capitol Street Church is doing splendid work this year. The membership was increased to 115, and each one has a work to do in the Society. The reports of the treasurers have so far been very good. The Home Department's report for the first and second quarters is $429.44; that of the Foreign Department, $59.35. The fourth Monday afternoon of each month is "Social Afternoon," and we have from fifty to one hundred ladies present. This means a great deal to our Society. The second Sunday of last March the Society gave a public meeting which was very successful and helpful in many ways. Special mention should be made of the "Junior Division." They are doing excellent work, as is also the Young Woman's Missionary Society. The latter is planning for a public meeting soon. Capitol Street Church is very much alive. Every department is well organized and working hard. MRS. NEILL.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

In writing from Gold Dust on Aug. 8, Rev. Louis Hoffpauir says: "We had a very fine rally at Bayou Chicot yesterday—a very large crowd and fine interest manifested. We organized a Teacher-training Class of eight members, and also organized the Cradle Roll Depratment. There was dinner on the ground and a good old-fashioned service."

Miss Pauline Randle, the daughter of Rev. Robt. Randle and the Superintendent of the Wesley Senior-Intermediate department of the Monroe District Sunday School Conference, has read the Bible through twelve times already (in how many years she does not say), having started reading it every day the day she started to school. Who among our young people has such a Bible reading record? Miss Randle has taken hold of her official work in the Sunday school Conference with zeal and is proving herself to be a capable worker in her department.

Rev. A. I. Townsley, our Rayville pastor and a member of our Sunday School Board, suggests that each officer and teacher in our Sunday schools give us $1 to liquidate our last year's deficit, and he is raising this amount from his schools. Does not this seem to be a practical way to raise this money? So while we hope to have those who will continue to take the $10 shares with the seventy-five club to raise the original debt of $750, and others of large or smaller amounts, let our officers and teachers either collectively in the several schools or as individuals send to Mr. T. W. Holloman, Alexandria, a $1.00 contribution on this fund. As insignificant as this may seem, it is of vital importance to the future of our work.

Under our present plan of institutes for smaller groups of schools, we have without exception had good programs and at some have had good attendance. To those who have expressed themselves in the matter these institutes are meeting a real need in our Sunday school work. The two nights and a day seem to consume about all the time the workers are able to stay, and allow time for a pretty good survey of the field of present-day Sunday school needs. The following institutes are already planned with programs made or in the process of making: Selma, Sept. 9-10; Bernice, Sept. 16-17; Kentwood, Oct. 9-10; Lake Charles, Oct. 14-15 (or thereabout); Sibley, Oct. 20-21. All schools in reach of these places are expected to be represented in the attendance and to have some part in the program.

Rev. W. H. Coleman, himself once a teacher and a capable judge of educational values, says in a recent note: "We are constantly organizing new schools and building up old ones" in the Baton Rouge District. Such work of a Presiding Elder may not show up much in the Annual Conference Minutes, and some who depend on the annual summer revival and the once-a-month "appointment" in the rural church as a sole means of building up the kingdom may not consider the slow process of teaching of any very great value, but wait until the "nurtured" child has become a man, and the Church that has given due attention to teaching has reared another generation, then the wisdom of such a building process will be evident. Blessed is that District that has a presiding elder and pastors that know how to find the surest foundation and the most rational process for developing strong Christians and a conquering church!

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Any girl who wishes to earn a fine Helen Gould Shepherd Bible can do so by learning 500 verses of Scripture and reciting these to some Y. W. C. A. representative or Adult Bible Class director, who will make proper arrangements for the recitation of the verses and the receipt of the Bible.

The desire is intense in the hearts of Sunday school workers to devise some plan by which Sunday school pupils may become effective Bible students and build the fine moral principles set forth in that great book into their lives and our present civilization. This needs to be begun now. There is no time for delay.

Smith & Lamar have most appropriate Rally Day literature and will send samples for the asking. Let every school emphasize this great autumn home-coming. One fine school has a home-coming month and uses the last Sunday for Rally Day, thus getting the cumulative effect of the work and enthusiasm. Marvin Church, Corinth District, under the splendid leadership of Miss Laura Stout, observed this day on Aug. 27 with a fine program, a large crowd, and much uplift and broadening of interest.

In arranging for the introduction of Graded Lessons, in October, it is often wise to introduce them only in the Elementary Department; and when these classes are ready to be promoted, to introduce the Junior and Intermediate lessons. It is rarely wise to do it all at once, unless the teachers have had previous experience and are well prepared to do the work. Let the Senior classes study the International Lessons until the other graded departments are ready to be promoted. A gradual introduction of these lessons in a small school will not raise the protest, often arising from strong lines of study and the consequent demands, where a very lax system of instruction has heretofore been observed.

The W. S. Harrison Wesley Adult Class, at Starkville, Miss., has lately enrolled with Dr. Bulla. This class has an enrollment of 55 married people. Rev. W. S. Harrison has been the efficient and earnest teacher of this fine class for ten years and it bears his name in recognition of his service. The class was reorganized after the Wesley plan in 1911. Rev. T. C. Wier, a greatly beloved member of our North Mississippi Conference, is president, and Mrs. S. J. Wallace is secretary. It has a busy recruiting committee, as well as a lively attendance committee, and punctuality, loyalty and prepared lessons are the rule in this substantial class. The school, the town, and every home represented by the class members will receive lasting benefit from it.

THE GREENDALE, MISSISSIPPI CHURCH.

Our new church, which is known as Greendale, will be ready for dedication now within a few more weeks. This building is valued by the mechanics at $1500. It was started last year, while Rev. W. H. Young was our pastor, as is shown by the minutes of 1912. We spent about $400 on the house last year, but we made a bad mistake in our workmanship, which made inevitable the overhauling of our last year's work on the building.

When our present pastor, Rev. G. G. Yeager, came on this circuit he found the structure in the above mentioned condition. We have raised this year $700. We got from the Church Extension Board $160, and it will require about $200 more to complete the building, painting, pews, etc., part of which we have on hand. The balance we will raise in a few days. We are determined, as is also our efficient pastor, to complete this house this year, and have it free from debt and dedicated to the service of God.

Rev. E. C. Gunn, of Gloster, and Brother Yeager have just closed a good meeting at the new church, and organized a church there with a small membership. Pray for us.

GET YOUR PIANO THROUGH THE ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB

AND SAVE ONE-THIRD THE COST

No matter where you live, nor what style of piano or player-piano you want, the Club will save you at least one-third the cost. By "bunching" our orders in a club of one hundred buyers each of us gets the rock-bottom factory price and saves from one to two hundred dollars according to the style of instrument selected.

But the big saving in price is only one, and by no means the most important, of the many attractive features of the Club. Read the following brief outline, then write for catalog giving full explanation and particulars.

Features of the Club

1. A clear saving of one-third the cost.

2. Nothing to pay unless, after a thorough trial of the instrument in your own home, you find it perfectly satisfactory and decide to keep it.

3. If, after the free trial, you are delighted with the superior quality of the instrument, the attractive price, the liberal and convenient terms, the protective guarantees, and the Club as a whole, then you accept it. But if for any reason, you are not pleased, you simply notify the Club, and upon receipt of their shipping instructions, return the instrument, freight collect. The trial costs you nothing, puts you under no obligations, and is the only perfect protection against every possibility of dissatisfaction.

4. Freight prepaid, safe delivery guaranteed.

Editorial

To start thee on thy outrunning race,
Christ shows the splendor of his face;
What shall that face of splendor be
When at the goal he welcomes thee?
—Rossetti.

* * *

God does not call men into the ministry to discuss science or philosophy, or to indulge in oratorical displays; but to preach the GOSPEL. We wonder sometimes if those whom we call great preachers will be so adjudged by the Master in the day of final reckoning.

* * *

Do you go to prayer meeting? If not, you ought to—both because you need the inspiration of the service, and that your presence there will help others. This mid-week gathering, as insignificant as it may appear, means much to the spiritual life of your church and community.

* * *

It always sounds to us out of place when a pastor in reporting a revival states that among the converts were some of the most prominent men of the community. Doubtless this is done thoughtlessly, but it is not in harmony with the spirit of Christ. Every lost soul is precious in the sight of the Savior, and with him there is no respect of persons.

* * *

This is the time of the year to quicken the step and work with increasing vigor. The merchant, the farmer, the banker, and the men engaged in nearly all the other secular occupations are beginning to bestir themeselves, that they make the most of the opportunities of the opening autumn. Should not every laborer for the Master do likewise? Much depends upon our faithfulness during the next few weeks.

* * *

Hall Caine is represented as having said, "I verily believe that if strong drink could be wiped out of the earth to-night, humanity would wake in the morning with more than half its sins and sorrows gone." We do not think that this very striking utterance is an overstatement. The blighting curse of intemperance is as old as the race and extends to all lands. And that any State or municipality should foster and encourage it, is one of the most amazing things in the history of human affairs.

* * *

There seems to be an almost inevitable drift toward formalism in religious work and worship. The singing is made artistic rather than fervent and helpful; the preaching becomes scholarly and stately rather than practical and spiritually quickening, and even the prayers are permitted to assume a cold and stereotyped form. There must be a special day for everything, and there is an almost constant extension of the organization and machinery of the Church. Apparently the leadership of the Holy Ghost is little sought. Do we not need to meditate upon St. Paul's declaration, "Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty?" One of the most striking features of a genuine revival is the extent to which formality disappears.

SENTIMENT COUNTS FOR MUCH.

Sidney Smith has said that there were some men so "utilitarian in spirit that they would make soap out of the bones of their grandmothers." Such men call themselves practical. They are always talking of "business principles" and the "necessity of ridding ourselves of sentiment." Judas belonged to this class and objected to Mary's sentimental course in breaking the alabaster box and pouring the ointment on the feet of the Master. Judas before a Board of Trade would have had the better of the argument. Those "practical business men" would have unanimously voted that Mary was a sentimentalist and that her act was foolish. The best in man appeals for its sanctions to something higher than reason or utility. The aroma of a single impulsive act of love fills the whole world with its fragrance.

A NEW WORD COINED.

A Northern Presbyterian has coined a new word which he thinks is needed in ecclesiastical nomenclature—"Uniontarian." It is stated that this new term, though it sounds very much like the word Unitarian, is quite different from that word in its meaning. A Unitarian is said to ally himself openly with his kind and to draw his salary from them; while a "Uniontarian" remains in a denomination with which he is not theologically in accord and antagonizes its teachings, because he does not wish to give up the loaves and fishes. The latter is somewhat of a cosmopolite and may be found in all the Churches and in all lands; especially in places where the pay for ministerial service is good. It is not so affirmed, but we take it that what has led to the coining of this new word is the ministerial output that the Union Theological Seminary has been pouring into the Northern Presbyterian Church.

THE NEED OF A LARGER LIBERALITY.

In a little more than two months the Annual Conferences will be at hand, and another year's record will have been irrevocably made. These will be busy weeks for our pastors, and much will depend upon the outcome of their efforts. After the slackening of the work during the summer, there comes the task of getting all the forces actively lined up again. The minister's first and highest duty in all seasons is the spiritual shepherding of his flock and the seeking and saving of the lost. But in the present condition of the Church there are many other heavy burdens that he has to carry; not the least of these is looking after the collection of the various benevolent claims. Much depends upon getting these assessments in full; if they come up short, there are sacred interests of the Kingdom that will seriously suffer.

Never were the opportunities of Christianity so splendid and inspiring as they are to-day. Never was money so urgently needed to give the gospel to the perishing millions, both at home and abroad, as it is at this hour. It, therefore, behooves every clerical representative of Southern Methodism to do his best to see that his people measure fully up to what is expected of them. The preacher can do much toward expanding the ideals of his congregation as to giving if he will only faithfully try. The truth is, we are making a pitifully poor showing in so-called Christian America in what we are contributing for the maintenance and spread of religion. Last year only about $250,000,000 was expended to keep going the 142,000 churches of the nation. Over against this, $320,000,000 was spent for confectioneries and soft drinks; the automobile bill of our people was double what it cost to run the churches; the jewelry bill exceeded it more than three times, and the theater and moving picture bill by equally as much, while we sent up five times that much in tobacco smoke, and paid ten times that amount for intoxicating beverages.

In the face of these figures, let no preacher present the connectional claims of the Church in an apologetic tone. Not one person in ten in our congregations is paying what he ought. Giving is still the neglected grace. It is both an imperative duty and a helpful privilege. If we could awaken our members to a full realization of this fact the day of petty begging for the Church would be a thing of the past, and there would be no halting of the advancing forces of Christendom for the lack of adequate finances.

The wise pastor will seek to open the eyes of his flock as to this important obligation and enriching opportunity. A tactful distribution of the right kind of literature bearing on the subject, an occasional judicious public reference to the matter, and a loving personal talk concerning it as opportunity offers, will soon accomplish much in this direction. But in doing this the utmost care and good judgment need to be exercised at all times. Men are more suspicious about money matters than almost anything else, and never should a minister let them get the idea that he has any selfish motive in seeking to induce them to give more liberally. He should let them see in this, as well as in all other things, that he does not fail to practice what he preaches.

A CASE OF PESSIMISM.

A contemporary says: "Rev. S. A. Nettles, of the Southern Christian Advocate, is quoted as saying that the absolute nudity of women would be preferable to the present style of dress." We can scarcely believe that Brother Nettles said this; but if he did, he must have done so when afflicted with a downright case of pessimism. The carrying on of some of the sisters is quite enough to envelop one in the somber shades of melancholia. But there are yet millions of good women in the world, and we cannot but hope that things will take a turn for the better in the near future. If our feminine reformers really desire a field in which they may achieve something worth while, we respectfully suggest that here is one that furnishes an opportunity for the exercise of their best powers.

THE LOVE OF GOD.

Could we with ink the ocean fill,
And were the skies of parchment made;
Were every stalk on earth a quill,
And every man a scribe by trade—
To write the love of God above
Would drain the ocean dry;
Nor could the scroll contain the whole,
Though stretched from sky to sky.

—Unknown.

THE VALUE OF THE CHURCH PAPER.

It is impossible to overstate the value of the church paper to the work of Methodism.

It is an assistant to the pastor, an agent for the schools of the Church, a solicitor for the orphanage, and a general helper to all our enterprises.

It carries religious news to our people, stated correctly, as is seldom the case with the secular press.

It bears into the homes of the people instructive and inspiring editorials and edifying articles on the various phases of the Christian life, fulfilling all the offices of an instructive and comforting visitor to the family every week.

When a pastor succeeds in extending the circulation of the church paper among his people he has brought to bear a stimulating influence upon every department of his work.

These things being true, I entreat the brethren of the patronizing Conferences served by the New Orleans Christian Advocate to do all in their power to increase the number of its subscribers. Help the paper, brethren, that it may help you.

It has served well our cause in Mississippi and Louisiana, and it was never more faithful and effective than now. It richly deserves the support which it asks.

WARREN A. CANDLER.

THE CHAINED GOD.

A teacher of a bright class of young people, in teaching the recent lesson about crossing the Red Sea, announced to his pupils that God never did anything in contravention of the laws of nature. He then proceeded to explain the division of the Red Sea and the crossing of the Israelites, and the failure of the Egytians on a mere naturalistic basis. Some of the pupils asked about the giving of the manna and the quails, and these were also explained in a naturalistic way. A further inquiry was raised about the dividing and crossing of the Jordan. The teacher replied that the dividing of the Jordan was doubtless due to a landslide up the river, which caused the cessation of the stream and the appearance of the dry ground. The breaking forth of the water over the dam caused by the landslide explained the return of the river.

The bright pupils pushed on, and inquired about the standing still of the sun and moon in the days of Joshua. The answer came quick and fast, that was only a figure of speech. Thus aroused, the pupils inquired about Jonah, and were told that that was a fable, with a moral purpose.

Then they jumped to the New Testament, and asked about the raising of Lazarus, and the statement about Christ being God, and in the beginning with God, and they were informed that the whole book of John's Gospel was in question, and it probably contained not a record of facts, but of the feelings and ideas which some later First or early Second Century disciples entertained and wished to give out about Jesus.

All this stirred the pupils, who had been taught the contents of the Scriptures by their parents, and who had been taught to believe they were indeed the Word of God, given by inspiration. They pressed on with some eagerness, and inquired about the walking on the sea and the stilling of the waves by a command. In reply, they were told that this was but a fable to represent the forces of good overcoming the forces of evil in the course of life.

At last they turned to the resurrection of Christ, and they were told that the appearances recorded in the Gospel were but hallucinations in the minds of the disciples. These had been so excited over the crucifixion of Jesus, that they were worn and wearied, and in their physical exhaustion they imagined that they saw him at different times, but these appearances were not facts. Thus starting with the hypothesis that God never does anything in contravention of nature, the teacher ended with having swept away the entire supernatural element, and with it everything which was constructive of Christianity. All he had left for himself and his pupils was a mere skeleton of goodism common to the religions of cultured heathenism. It is no wonder that Christian parents should withdraw their children from such Sabbath schools when once they discern such things.

This teacher may believe in a personal God; but he is a chained God. He is able to act within and under the laws of nature, but no further. The laws of nature say to such a God, Hitherto shalt thou go, and no further. Such a God is not the Creator of heaven and earth, with all their laws and forces, or else if he be the Creator, he is subject to and limited by his own creation, which is impossible of belief, as much as the statement that a stream can rise higher than the fountain, or that the effect is greater than the cause.

Men make laws, and consider that they have the right and power to amend or abrogate them, but the supreme intelligent and perfectly holy Ruler is subject to the laws which he has made, and can never go above or beneath them, but must be subject to them! This modern naturalism not only robs the world of Christianity, with all its faith, hope and love, but it manufactures a God in which it is impossible morally or rationally to believe, and so, like many of the heathen speculations, it sinks to the miserable state of being without God and without hope in the world.

The parents, pastors and church officers who subject children and young people to such teachings are unfaithful to a considerable degree. Better have no Sabbath schools, than have such teachings propagated.

Nebuchadnezzar, the heathen of centuries since, gave a better idea of God when he said: "I blessed the Most High God, and I praised and honored him that liveth forever. His dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom is from generation to generation, and all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing; and he doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth; and none can stay his hand, or say unto him, What doest thou?"—The Presbyterian.

A LETTER FROM TEXAS.

My Dear Doctor Meek: While associated with Dr. Jas. Campbell some years ago upon the editorial staff of the Texas Christian Advocate, I read the New Orleans Christian Advocate, as they would say down in Eastern Texas, "a right smart." Several of the church papers have been coming to my desk since my return to the pastorate, their only "hope of fee or reward" being an occasional scribble from my pencil which, I am ashamed to say, has been "more often observed in the breach than in the performance."

But the New Orleans Christian Advocate has not been coming to me until recently, when two or three copies have found their way on regular schedule time. These copies I have read—especially the editorials—with a great deal of interest and pleasure. I do not claim myself "to have apprehended," nor am I in anywise near perfection as a connoisseur in newspaper criticism; but in my humble judgment, the present output of that paper compares favorably with that sent forth under any former administration.

And there have been some mighty men on that tripod down there. And some, as you know, have been from that place "kicked up into the episcopacy." The Methodist boot may get into action again and the New Orleans Advocate constituency may be put on the hunt for a new editor. In case of a calamity, there are several of us who perhaps might be pursuaded to immolate ourselves in that way upon the altars of the church.

I am glad, but not surprised to see the New Orleans Christian Advocate in line with our other church papers, and with all religious papers—Catholic and Protestant, as far as I know—anent the Kirkland-Carnegie conspiracy. I have delivered myself on this question in the Texas Christian Advocate and have paid what I believe to be a merited tribute to the alertness and loyalty of Bishop Hoss in this connection. One of our connectional officers, however, chides me for taking the position I did and affirms that what I said concerning Bishop Hoss' "eagle eye," was the merest "flub-dub"; and that Bishop Hoss was doing the church a great deal of harm, etc. Of course this brother is on "the other side," and his position in regard to the Bishop is perfectly natural. I have for him personally a very high regard, but unless I am absolutely in the dark, the time is not far distant when he will hear from the church in thunder tones, and that hearing will vindicate the action of Bishop Hoss.

You may or may not have heard about it, but the way was open for me to come to New Orleans two or three years ago, and Bishop Murrah was very anxious that I should do so. I appreciated the Bishop's interest and confidence in me, but felt very sensibly then, as I still feel, that when a man has passed his fiftieth mile post, to transfer is exceedingly risky. I would not object so much to being appointed to a place within the bounds of another Texas conference, (since I am about as well known in one part of the State as another); but to leave the State in which I was reared—to pull myself up after having been rooted so long—and undertake to plant myself out in another climate and in another soil, I thought, as Bishop Hoss would say, "was the supremest folly." Then, I don't like this giraffe business anyway. To get into a Bishop's pocket and be carried from Conference to Conference, forming no stable fraternal relations with any, and conscious all the while that I am an object of suspicion—this thing don't suit me a little bit. I am a sentimental old codger. I love men better than I do money and far prefer to bear the ills I have than "to fly to those I know not of." I am connectional to the core. I question neither the right nor the expediency of the transfer power of our episcopacy. But it is liable to abuse, and more than once we have had experience of this abuse over here in Texas.

The Southern Methodist University at Dallas is rapidly taking on shape. The administration building and the men's dormitory are nearing completion. These buildings are marvels of architectural beauty, commodiousness and strength. When the equipment is complete it will be unfellowed in all this Southland. And it will be a Methodist concern. We don't propose to compromise with anything for any cause. If we can't fill the several chairs with Methodist teachers and professors, we'll drape the vacant ones in mourning and pray the Lord to send more laborers into the harvest. We are tightening up our belt just now for a new race after some more dollars with which to equip our medical and theological departments. We must and we will have a Sanitarium at Dallas worthy of Texas Methodism; and the theological department ought to open synchronously with the opening of the other departments of the university. We need more money and our Methodist people have it in their pockets. Less than twenty-five per cent of Texas Methodists have contributed to the $500,000 we have just raised. The field is white unto the harvest and we mean to thrust in the sickle. Please be kind enough to watch the Southern Methodist University grow.

In the meantime, accept an invitation to visit our Conferences. We will board you, bed you, and preach you. Fraternally yours,

J. W. HILL.

Wichita Falls, Texas, Sept. 1, 1913.

SHALL WE MEET OUR OBLIGATIONS?

In the Advocate of September 4 appeared earnest exhortations from two of the presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference, urging a diligent effort to secure the missionary and benevolent assessments in full. I wish to second most heartily these timely suggestions. The fact that the Louisiana Conference last year paid barely half of its assessment for foreign missions, less than half for home and Conference missions, and a somewhat similar proportion on the other regular assessments, by no means reflects credit on the Conference, and would seem to indicate a lack of earnest and intelligent effort on the part of those charged with the duty of raising these assessments. This failure is so nearly general that one can scarcely criticise another. In fact less than one charge in six reported all the assessment in full, and one out of every sixteen reported absolutely nothing for missions, either home or foreign. If this unsavory record is to be wiped out, as we all devoutly hope it shall be, a general and determined effort must be made without further delay to secure the assessments for this year. There is evidence that some effort has already been made. In the direction of education, one presiding elder began the year by presenting to each pastor a live missionary book and a set of educative charts. Another elder is reported to have sowed down his district in missionary literature. A third reached practically every charge in his district by means of carefully arranged series of missionary institutes in different parts of the territory. A number of pastors have secured from the Conference Board supplies of literature for distribution among their people. Such work, judiciously done, is bound to produce fruit in increased collections, if followed up with a definite effort to secure contributions from all other members.

As to systematic efforts toward collecting assessments, it is difficult to get exact information as to what has already been done this year. Probably some half dozen charges, perhaps more, have adopted the duplex system, and have been getting good results in the collection of all assessments throughout the year. One live pastor has recently reported an every-member canvass in progress in his charge which will doubtless increase contributions. Some doubtless secured their collections in subscriptions early in the year. But in a majority of the charges, no definite provision has yet been made for meeting these sacred claims on the loyalty of our churches. Where this is the case, it would seem to be the clear and imperative duty of the pastor to arrange without further delay for securing his assessments in full. The cause ought, by sermon or otherwise, to be laid emphatically upon the consciences of the people. A liberal use of literature on missions and on the duty of giving—literature which can be secured free or almost so from the Board of Missions—will help in this presentation of the cause. And then every member, either by public collection or private solicitation, should be brought face to face with the duty of contributing. In this effort to reach every member, the live pastor will find that a missionary committee will not only help in the collection, but that the service rendered will be a means of grace to the members who serve on the committee.

By every token, these obligations ought to be raised in full. There has never been a time in the history of the Church when the demand for enlargement in our mission work at home and abroad was more imperative. The church extension work, though separate in our machinery, is in reality a part of our missionary effort, and makes the same demand for enlargement. Our educational work is missionary in spirit and purpose, and calls for great enlargement in the interest of self-preservation. The care of our veterans is a sacred debt of honor.

With these sacred obligations staring us in the face, it will be a shame if we do not meet our assessments in full. And the demand is emphasized by the fact that our State is enjoying a year of prosperitiy. Our 34,000 members are abundantly able to pay the total amount of all these claims, amounting to less than $60,000, or a total per capita of about $1.75. The question before us—a question that we must begin to answer now—is, shall Louisiana Methodism meet her obligations, or shall we go into bankruptcy and settle at less than 50 cents on the dollar, as we did last year? The answer to the question lies largely (though of course not altogether) in the hands of the pastors and presiding elders. Let us answer the question on our knees.

In conclusion, allow me to emphasize Brother Hoffpauir's earnest appeal for the work of our French Mission. It will be remembered by many that at our last Conference, on account of the lack of funds, it would have been impossible to provide for the work that seemed necessary there this year, but for the fact that the Conference Secretary was authorized to raise a special of $500 for this field. This special has not yet been raised in full, and I would like to suggest that any Sunday school, League, church, or individual who can do so without detriment to regular assessments, make a contribution to this special. There are numbers of charges in the Conference which ought to go beyond their assessments, and this is a profitable place to put the surplus.

La. Conf. Missionary Secretary.

"THE MISSION OF WOMAN."

By Mr. J. D. Barbee.

Mr. Editor:

It is presumed that you little dreamed of the sensation it would produce when you reproduced in your columns the brilliant essay of Dr. Albert Taylor Bledsoe on this subject and subsequently issued it in pamphlet form for general distribution. Nevertheless, it has had just that effect, and you are to be strongly commended for this fine piece of journalism, as, indeed, you are generally endorsed for your brilliant and courageous editorial career throughout the Connection.

Thinking it might interest your readers to know something of what has happened, I will undertake to give some account of the effect of this republication of Dr. Bledsoe's great paper.

In the course of events the late Senator Johnston of Alabama obtained a copy of the pamphlet, and it impressed him so strongly that he requested Senator Tillman of South Carolina to have it inserted in the Congressional Record and also printed as a Senate document. Complying with this request, Senator Tillman offered it for publication in the Senate, and it was printed in the Record of July 28. On the day following a number of senators, led by Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire, protested that the paper contained offensive references to the women of the North, and finally secured its expunction from the Record. But, fortunately, the Record containing the publication had already been mailed to its readers all over the world.

On Aug. 18 Senator Tillman, having given previous notice, made an elaborate address in the Senate on the subject of woman suffrage, in which he strongly defended Dr. Bledsoe, and he again requested the publication of the paper, with the "offensive" parts omitted, and its publication as a Senate document. This was agreed to, and it was again published in the Record of Aug. 26, thus giving it an additional circulation, and the document can now be had by application to any Senator.

On July 31 Senator Poindexter of Washington, D. C., born in Memphis, made some brief remarks in the Senate on woman suffrage and took occasion to speak offensively of Dr. Bledsoe. One could wish that L. Q. C. Lamar and J. Z. George, both ardent admirers of Bledsoe, might have got up out of their graves and appeared in the Senate for a brief hour on that occasion; the result would not be hard to guess could they have done so.

The Independent (New York) of Aug. 7 reprinted the "offensive" paragraphs, accompanied by brief editorial comment of a thoroughly characteristic sort, but it is strikingly noteworthy that no attempt is made to answer the argument of the great Southerner, and for the very simple reason, it is believed, that none is possible.

Now, the weekly journals, such as Harper's Weekly, have taken the matter up, but it is amusing to note that they devote their attention to Senator Tillman's address and undertake no answer to "The Mission of Woman."

So, my dear Doctor, if you had deliberately set about giving "The Mission of Woman" the widest circulation of which you were capable you could not have given it a tithe of the publicity which it has obtained from the hostility of the suffrsgists in the manner above indicated.

Greenville, Miss.

THINKS MORE DOCTRINAL TEACHING IS NEEDED.

Dear Dr. Meek: Many of our Methodist people seem to know very little about the doctrines of our great Church! I often hear members of the Methodist Church say, "One church is as good as another." I don't think so. For many substantial reasons I am a Methodist. In the first place, I am of a Methodist family. I trusted the members of that family for the doctrines so early taught me, and I believed in the Methodist preachers under whose tutorage I have been all my life, and now that I have studied the doctrines of our Church I am happy that I have always been a Methodist. I believe the doctrines of our Church and have faith in its government, and I want to see these principles embodied in the lives of all our people.

Other Churches preach and teach their doctrines, and we ought to preach and teach ours if we believe them. If ours are right, some of the teachings of the others are wrong. We should hasten to root up error and establish truth. Let us have a more sensitive doctrinal conscience and fight righteous doctrinal battles. Let us teach our people what the Bible says concerning our great and distinctive Church doctrines. I urge this in the face of the namby-pambyism that is afraid of committing some offense. My brother, human souls are at stake and the policy that brings about a visible prosperity is not always the best policy; nor is such prosperity always true prosperity. We don't mind if we offend the devil, and we should countenance no quarter for error.

I am persuaded that a doctrinal lesson should be introduced into each of our Sunday school quarterlies. Let us teach our Methodist children the wonderful doctrines of the great Methodist Church in order that the generation to come may be sound, loyal, and militant.

My dear Doctor, my experience is limited. I should like to read an editorial from your pen on this subject.

We take from the Memphis Commercial Appeal the following dispatch from Nashville, Tenn., bearing date of Sept. 8: "At a meeting of the Methodist ministers of this city to-day the action of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the minority of the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University in protesting against the acceptance of the $1,000,000 Carnegie offer to the University, was endorsed." This shows how erroneous the impression that the Methodists of Nashville are all in sympathy with the Trustees is. Unfortunately, the utterances of some who are loyal to the Church have given color to this mistaken view. And let it be carefully noted that this action of the Nashville preachers took place while Bishop Hoss, the great agitator and troubler of Israel, was in Missouri.

Harper's Weekly says: "Those who believe that 13 is an unlucky number should beware of the quarter dollar, for it has 13 stars, 13 letters in the scroll held in the eagle's beak, 13 marginal feathers on each wing, 13 lines in the shield, 13 horizontal bars, 13 arrow heads and 13 letters in the name 'Quarter Dollar.' The Department of Agriculture of the United States Government estimates the mortality among swine in this country during the year 1912 as 110 per thouand, and the total money loss from this source as $66,417,000. According to a Government report published about a year ago, the cost of a year's supply of food for an average workingman's family was at that time 62 per cent higher than it was in 1896. This advance in the expense of living is not confined to the United States, but has been world-wide. It is admitted by the Democratic leaders in Congress that, in spite of the redcction of the tariff, the price of many food products may continue to increase.

PERSONAL.

Mr. W. A. McKennon, the superintendent of the Sunday school of the First Methodist Church of Shreveport, is in great demand as speaker for special Sunday school occasions. He made a fine address at Ruston on Sunday, Sept. 7, on the "Church of the Future."

Rev. R. P. Goar, of Toccapola, Miss., sends us some subscriptions from his work, and adds, "I am having a good time for a boy." From the echoes that have reached our office concerning this youthful itinerant, we infer that he has indeed been giving a pretty good account of himself in his field. May the Heavenly Father continue to bless him and prosper the labor of his hands!

Mrs. Callie Allen, of Plantersville, Miss., in renewing her subscription for the tenth year, takes time to express her appreciation of our paper. We are grateful both for her patronage and generous words of commendation. The Advocate has not a few such loyal friends. Without them, we should find the work of our office monotonous and dreary, indeed.

Rev. A. W. Turner occupies the recently installed offices of the Anti-Saloon League in the First National Bank Building of Shreveport, from which place, with the co-operation of a strong central committee, he wages war upon the greatest foe of God and home and native land. The League, if only given the proper assistance, may be counted upon to wage an aggressive campaign in the future.

The Ida charge has had over 50 accessions to the Church during the recent revival season. The pastor, Rev. C. F. Staples, was assisted in these meetings by Rev. D. A. Morris and Rev. O. L. Posey, of Shreveport. Brother Staples is one of the best pastors in the Louisiana Conference, and his diligent pastoral work has had much to do with this ingathering of members. Sister Staples, whose health has not been good during the year, is reported as much improved, after a stay in the Shreveport Sanitarium.

While Shreveport Methodism will sorely miss Brother S. B. McCutchon, who recently was translated, it is comforting to know that Mr. M. A. McCutchon, his son, is prominently connected with our Church as superintendent of the Sunday school of the J. S. Noel, Jr., Memorial Church, while another son, S. B., Jr., and two daughters, Mrs. J. C. Foster and Miss Bessie, are active in the work of First Church. What a beautiful testimonial to the Christian character of the father and mother is the fact that all the Children are interested in the work of the Church that was so dear to the hearts of their parents!

We are in receipt of the following invitation sent from San Francisco, Cal.: "Colonel Hayden O. Grubbs Camp No. 55, Department California, Spanish War Veterans, invites you to be present at the Post Chapel, Sunday, Sept 7, at 7:30 p.m., at the celebration complimentary to Chaplain J. A. Randolph, Sixth Infantry, on the completion of his fifteenth year in the military service." Brother Randolph's many friends in Mississippi will be pleased to note that he was thus complimented by his associates in the Army and friends in the Far West. He has acquitted himself splendidly in his present important position, and well deserves all the honors which have been conferred upon him.

Rev. O. L. Savage continues to make an enviable record on the Belzoni (Miss.) charge. The assessment for the pastor was increased last year from $800 to $1160, and he was paid $1200. He built last year a beautiful church at Swiftown, which has been paid for, and has seated it with handsome pews on which he has paid $202, leaving a balance of $200 to be provided for later. He has not been content, however, to rest on his past laurels, and is now erecting on Four Mile Lake, in Sunflower County, another new house of worship which will be 30 by 50 feet in size, and which will cost approximately $1500. During his less than two years on his present work, Brother Savage has received 93 members into the Church. If there is any other pastor in the North Mississippi Conference who can make a better showing than this, we should be most happy to chronicle his achievements.

CALHOUN, LA.

I have just finished my revival meetings on the Calhoun Circuit. Brother W. L. Hunter was with me at Downsville, and did some good preaching. His preaching was practical and logical; and his pulpit work was above the average.

Rev. V. D. Skipper was with me at Douglass, Calhoun, and Beulah. Brother Skipper is one of the best speakers in the State of Louisiana. His preaching is strong, logical, and sublime. By his practical, effective preaching and amiable disposition he won the confidence of all who heard him.

The results in members received were as follows: Douglass, 2; Calhoun, 8; Beulah, 4; total, 24. All the churches were somewhat revived. Therefore, the outlook for the remainder of the year is good.—E. C. Grice, P. C.

LISBON, LA.

Dear Advocate: I began my revival meetings on the 26th of July at Arizona, assisted by Rev. J. C. Rousseaux, of Zwolle, La. The meeting was a grand success. There were a number of conversions and reclamations and the Church was wonderfully strengthened. The number of family altars was increased from one to eight. Brother Rousseaux came up to the full expectation of the people, and will be long remembered by them. Our Lisbon meeting began on August 2. It was by no means what it should have been, but we hope that some good was done......On Aug. 10 we started our meeting at Tulip, when Rev. W. W. Nicholson preached the first sermon. It continued until Aug. 14. It was a splendid meeting. There were some very bright conversions......On Aug. 14 we began an arbor meeting at what is known as the Atkins' place, and ran for ten days. The preaching was done by Rev. Briscoe Carter, Rev. T. J. Warlick, and the pastor. It was said to be the greatest meeting ever held in that section. In some respects it was one of the greatest revivals I ever witnessed. Our grove meetings were wonderful. The services were conducted in the grove in almost the usual manner. It was one of the best attended meetings I ever saw in a section like that......At the time of this meeting Rev. Thomas Morris, of Mansfield, was holding at Harmony Chapel what proved to be one of the best meetings that community ever had. Brother Morris came up to the full expectation of the people, and is kindly remembered by them all. Brother Morris concluded his work on Friday night, and Dr. R. H. Wynn came in and closed out the meeting, which he did most admirably. My people were delighted with Brother Wynn. The result of my revival campaign was 53 accessions to the Church: 23 by baptism, and 13 otherwise. Souls were made to rejoice in a deeper experience of salvation.—J. C. Price, P. C.

FOXWORTH, MISS.

On Aug. 8, at Hopewell we began, with the assistance of Brother H. J. Maddox, our annual revival. Brother Robert Selby was present on the 9th and 10th, preaching at 11 a. m. each day and presiding over our third quarterly conference on the afternoon of the 9th, which proved to be exceedingly interesting and instructive to those in attendance. We all regretted that he could not remain during the meeting. The Lord's Spirit was graciously poured out upon the people under the excellent preaching of Brother Maddox. We found it wise to have night services, in addition to those held in the day. Eleven persons presented themselves for membership on profession of faith; the Sunday school was revived, and quite a number were reclaimed and gave expression to their intention of living closer to God in the future......With the assistance of Brother W. W. Hopper, we began on Aug. 15 our meeting at Jamestown. The presence and power of the Holy Spirit was with the preacher and people, resulting in one accession to the church by certificate and the membership being greatly awakened to their duty and several conversions. The Sunday school was also stimulated to greater activity. Prospects point to substantial growth in the Church at this place, notwithstanding the difficulties......The writer held a successful meeting at Cheraw, a missionary point, embracing the fifth Sunday in August. Through the power of God and His Spirit, 8 professed conversion, and 4 joined the Hopewell Church by prefession of faith. The Sunday school there was re-organized with a firm resolution to continue in the name of the Lord. Mother J. H. Downer and her twin sister, Mrs. A. E. Barnes, attended each of our meetings, contributing greatly to the success of the services. ....Our meeting here will embrace the 3d Sunday in October. The work on our new church is progressing finely, and unless something prevents, we expect to worship and occupy it at the time mentioned. Pray for me, brethren, that God may use me to do his holy will.—Chas. E. Downer, P. C.

REVIVAL AT GEORGETOWN, MISS.

On August 3, we closed a great meeting at Georgetown, conducted by Evangelist Thos. J. Norsworthy. I must say that I have never had more efficient help in a revival. Brother Norsworthy is not only a strong, forceful preacher, but his preaching is effective. The Lord is blessing and using him. Never will the great themes that he discussed be forgotten. Especially will we always remember his sermon to men. He did not employ an expression that could not have been used in any parlor in the most refined home, but my, my, what a message he gave from the Lord, to fathers, husbands, and sons, and with what power and demonstration of the Spirit it was delivered! I'm sure everyone left determined to do better. I heard twenty or more men say, it was the greatest sermon they ever heard. May the Lord bless Brother Norsworthy! We are not able to estimate the good done; several were received into the Church on profession of faith and several by certificate. Any preacher needing help in his meetings will do well to secure the help of this man of God.

A REMARKABLE ANSWER TO PRAYER.

Dear Doctor Meek: It is my desire to give God the glory and ascribe praises unto his name for answered prayer. "The Lord hath done great things for us whereof we are glad." (Psalms 126:3.) On the eleventh day of June our little four-year old daughter, Louise, was taken suddenly and violently ill. For nearly a week the physicians labored faithfully, but said there was little chance for her recovery. Indeed, they said the case was hopeless; that they never knew one like it to recover, and had never seen one reported as having gotten well. She was paralyzed from the waist up and seemed to have the death rattle in her throat, and was apparently beyond human aid. A friend then remarked that, "man's extremity is God's opportunity."

Believing the Bible promise, that the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much, "and that the prayer of faith shall save the sick," my wife and I laid the case before our pastor, Brother W. H. Lewis, and he, Dr. J. W. Cooper, and Brother Robert Selby entered the pastor's study, stood upon the promise, and asked God to restore the child. While these godly men were thus engaged in faithful prayer, my wife and I, with several Christian friends, pleaded with our Heavenly Father for the child's life. While these earnest prayers were going up, we received assurance that God would raise her up. All glory and praise unto him, she was healed and restored to health! Her restoration was a great means of grace and strengthened the faith of many in this community. With the utmost simplicity, I wish to give public testimony to God's wonderful grace and saving power.

"Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto Him be glory in the Church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end." (Eph. iii, 21,22.)

DREAD OF AN OPERATION.

N Manchester, Ind.—Mrs. Eva Bashore, of this place, says: "I suffered female misery of every description. Two doctors attended me and advised an operation. I lost weight until I weighed only ninety pounds. I dreaded an operation, and, instead, began to take Cardui. In a short time I gained 25 pounds and feel as well as I ever did. Cardui, I am sure, saved my life." Cardui is to-day used in thousands of homes, where it relieves pain and brings back strength and ambition. It is a woman's medicine, for women's ailments, and you are urged to try it for your troubles. Ask your druggist. He will tell you about Cardui.

A MENTALLY CRIPPLED CHILD.

You would not think of requiring a crippled child to keep pace with healthy, vigorous children on a long journey. And yet there are parents, teachers and even some physicians who utterly fail to realize that a child crippled in mind cannot keep pace with normal children in the difficult journeys of the school room. The public schools are graded for the healthy child of normal mental development, and the pace set is a hundred times too fast for the feeble minded child. In the public schools, or under a private tutor, there is only one fate for the child of backward mental development, namely—failure! Why? Because the methods and even the principles which apply in the teaching of natural children are totally inadequate and ineffective in the teaching of the mentally crippled.

There is only one hope for the feeble-minded child—and that hope is no brighter than one might wish—namely: special physical and mental training at the hands of expert physicians and teachers who have made a life study of the subject and understand the nature of the infirmity, and have special facilities for developing the mind to the limit of its possibilities. The South is fortunate in possessing one high-class private institution of this character. Parents interested in the subject may obtain additional light from the annual catalogue of the Stewart Home and School, Dr. John P. Stewart, Supt., Box 19, Farmdale, Ky.

AN ANCIENT BALLAD.

By Louis I. Ana.

Sir Andy rode his dun gold mare.
  Frae East to West the land;
Her muscles built o' springs o' steel,
  He plunged through mud and sand.

His saddle pouches were abulge
  Wi' loads of books and schools;
All which you see he freely dropt,
  That folks might not be fools.

He dropt them left, he dropt them right,
  And scattered them fu' wide;
Yet not content wi' our ain land,
  He swam the ocean tide.

For Andy was a canny Scot—
  Yes, canny, sair, was he;
By tricks o' trade a fortune made
  Frae Pittsburg to Dundee.

His unco ideas sure were strange
  O' teachin lads and youth,
He thot he could it all arrange,
  Wi' Siller buy the Truth.

Since Mammon worship had such hold
  On Andy and his clan,
He measured all by Siller's rule,
  Unmindful of the man.

Not only would he drop his schools,
  But purchase them sae sly,
All thotless o' the Golden Rule
  God gave to guide man by.

Now Andy had his henchmen bold,
  Who lo'ed the Siller's clink;
These followed close his fearsome ride,
  And sneezed when he did wink.

These loyal squires would enter schools
  To get a hold therein;
And when Sir Andy hove in sight,
  They'd claim him kith and kin;—

For sure in Scotia's lovely Isle,
  No bond so close as this,
Save links o' Siller or o' Gold,
  Else Rumor's all amiss.

They'd sell the Institooshin out,
  From cellar base to dome,
That Andy's plans and purposes
  Might find a restful home.

But some, the Guardians o' the schools,
  Would scorn his proffered gold,
For Andy and his trenchant crew
  Did seem so spruce and bold.

Modern Moral.

Now Andy, if you'r in the game
  Of training lads and men,
For life and all life means, my friend,
  Let others work their end.

Sure money's but a trifling thing,
  When manly trust's at stake,
And Truth and Worth do count for more
  That all your millions make.

For cornering fair learning's store
  Too big a job for you;
There're some things that yet can't be done
  By all your valiant crew.

THE SUCCESS OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Robert B. Eleazer.

Foreign missions is not only the greatest enterprise in the world to-day, but it is also one of the most successful. The Gospel is making rapid progress throughout the world at a rapidly increasing rate. Up to the year 1910 there were 2,223,000 converts out of heathenism, which is no bad testimonial in itself to the success of missions. But the really startling thing about this gain is in its rate. For the first half of the nineteenth century the average gain was 2,800 per year. During the next thirty years the average annual gain was 21,500; during the next twenty years it was 25,600 per year, and during the last ten years 85,200 per year. If this rapidly increasing rate can be maintained, (and there seems to be no reason why it should not) it foreshadows a most wonderful ingathering in the years just ahead and brings within the range of possibility the evangelization of the world within the lifetime of some of us.

It is unquestionably true that never were the opportunities so great for propagating the Christian faith, nor the response of the world so cordial. A few years ago we prayed that God would open the doors of heathen lands that the missionaries might go in. Nowadays nobody dares offer that prayer any more, for the reason that we are to-day passing by a hundred times as many open doors as we are entering. And yet, in spite of the inadequacy of our missionary force and equipment, marvelous results are being attained, much greater than can be shown in any numerical exhibit. The whole nation of China, for example, has been transformed politically by the spirit of missions and is rapidly being regenerated socially and morally. Opium smoking, but yesterday the vice of a hundred million Chinamen, has within ten years been almost eliminated. Woman has been set free from the social slavery of four thousand years. The educational system has undergone a complete revolution. In all these respects the ground is being made ready for a great harvest of individual Christian life.

On the whole, there is every reason why the Christian world should regard its missionary enterprise as a splendid success, and the outlook as encouraging in the highest degree. The one dark shadow in a picture otherwise bright with marvelous possibilities is the pitiful response of the churches of Christendom to the cry of the world's need. So long, for example, as the average per capita gifts of our Southern Methodists to Foreign missions is less than a penny a week, we cannot escape the charge of unfaithfulness to our Lord and indifference to our perishing fellow-men. When our people know the facts they will no longer be content to have their loyalty and love measured by any such standard.

DANCING HURTFUL TO SPIRITUALITY.

(The following earnest appeal to refrain from dancing was recently made to his young people, through a local paper, by Rev. J. H. Holder, our pastor at Okolona, Miss.)

There is an instinctive hesitancy in opposing our friends. We love them, we prize their love as few people do. But when there lurks a deadly peril we wish to deal candidly, fairly with them, though we may sacrifice their friendship. A town has no use for a minister who knows or cares nothing of its social perils. It has less use for one who sees these evils, but is too much a coward to warn against them. On the other hand, it seems worse to employ a minister whose judgment we do not trust and whose knowledge of things spiritual is discredited.

One of the greatest evils to the moral and spiritual welfare of any town is the dance hall. There is nothing so enervating to the moral life or that more quickly dries up the fountain of spiritual life than the modern round dance and the atmosphere of the ballroom. The spiritual leaders of all Churches unite in condemnation of the dance as a real peril. It is not in the class of the diversions, but of dissipations. Many good people are ensnared, many join innocently, but none escape without blunted or deadened spiritual power. It is supported by some so-called "high society" ("society is dying at the top"), but its greatest devotees are from the vicious class. Its chief attraction is the unlawful physical touch of opposite sexes. Force each sex to dance separately, even in the same hall, and the charm will vanish. These facts are disputed, but are facts nevertheless. How young men and young women of culture and refinement can so far forget themselves is hard to explain. How parents can acquiesce is more than the wise can know; how Christians can support or encourage the thing is unsolvable. I am told there are just a few Methodist young people in our town that patronize or encourage by their presence the dance. In humiliation, as your pastor, I stand with bowed head before God, and a deriding world that points its finger of scorn at you as "representatives" of Christianity. If you love or even respect your Lord, do not put yourself in the attitude of the enemy of Christ and righteousness. Do not destroy your own soul and block the way of life to some others. If the enemy of Christ will defy Him, will you not for your sake and others cut his acquaintance? Will you be gulled and duped into hell because it is popular among the godless? I plead with you as one who loves you; I plead with all the earnestness of my heart—be true, be faithful to your Lord; be honest with yourself; be considerate of the eternal welfare of your friends. Believe me, for I know what I speak: no one can patronize or even encourage with his presence the ballroom, and be true to his Lord or retain his own spiritual life.

FINE OPENING AT MANSFIELD.

Dear Dr. Meek: I had the pleasure of attending the opening exercises of the session of 1913-14 of Mansfield Female College yesterday. The prospect is for a full attendance of boarding students and a large increase in the patronage from the town. Pres. Bobbitt has been peculiarly fortunate in securing the services of a splendid faculty of trained and experienced teachers. After meeting the faculty and seeing their records and recommendations, I feel perfectly safe in saying that I do not believe that this corps of teachers can be surpassed anywhere in the South for the work which Mansfield claims to do.

Friends of the college will be pleased to learn that the lobby of the main building has been done over and refurnished by the College Improvement League, and is now a thing of beauty. Other improvements are under way and contemplated.

We feel safe in saying that in the near future there will not be the slightest justification—if there is any now, which we doubt—for the September exodus of the daughters of our Methodist people in Louisiana (alas! some of these are daughters of our preachers) to Mississippi and elsewhere.

If we can get the Methodist patronage that yearly leaves the State for Mansfield, it will be an easy thing to make Mansfield College second to no similar institution in the South. Brethren, shall we have it? PAUL M. BROWN,

AFTER VACATION.

The school-books are a-tiptoe,
  The slates and pencils, too.
The sponges are impatient,
  And don't know what to do.
Geographies are longing
  To tell the earth is round,
And they're fairly running over
  With cities to be found.

The readers are so happy!
  "Come, children, dear!" they call.
"We have such lovely words to spell,
  Such stories for you all!"
Of course the little scholars
  Won't loiter by the way,
When the school-books are so eager
  To meet them all to-day.

BE UNSELFISH.

"I will not give away my perfume," said the rosebud, holding its pink petals tightly wrapped in their tiny green case. The other roses bloomed, and people were made glad by their beauty, but the selfish bud withered away.

"No, no," said a little bird, "I don't want to sing." But when his brother soared aloft on joyful wings and sang with all his might, the little bird looked sorry and ashamed.

"If I give away all my wavelets, I shall not have enough myself, said the brook; and it kept all its waters in a hollow place, where it formed a filthy little pool.

A boy who loved a fresh, wide-awake rose, a singing bird, and a leaping brooklet, thought on these things and said: "If I would be loved, I must share with others all that I have."—Kind Words.

WHAT MADE THE DIFFERENCE.

The new boy was sitting on a big stone post at the foot of the driveway when Peter drove the cows to the pasture.

"Halloo!" drawled Peter as he walked slowly by.

"Halloo!" said the new boy pleasantly. "Come fishin', will you?"

"Can't," drawled Peter. "I've got to work. Wish I was you," he said enviously, "and didn't have nothin' to do but go fishin' and sit on a post and let my feet hang down."

The new boy laughed. "We have cows," he said shortly, "a whole dozen of them."

"But you don't have to drive them to pasture," declared Peter.

"Don't I?" said the new boy. "I take them away down to Mr. Lane's pasture every morning 'fore breakfast."

Peter eyed him curiously from top to toe. "Well, you're a queer one," he said. "Perhaps if I only had the cows to drive, I'd get up early too."

The new boy laughed again. "We've got hens," he said quickly, "and chickens and pigs and horses, same as you. I guess what makes the difference 'tween you and me is 'cause you don't do your work by my grandmother's rule. I've found it a good one."

"Seeing I never heard of it, I guess I don't," replied Peter with a grin. "Suppose you tell it to a fellow."

"I 'most know you've heard it," said the new boy, "only you've forgotten. It's 'Work while you work and play while you play!' And I tell you, it's a fine one."

"Ho, ho, ho! " laughed Peter. "That's a dandy rule, isn't it? Maybe it does for you, but when a poor fellow has to work all the time, same as I do, why then it's only 'work while you work,' and never any time to 'play while you play' at all."

"Are you working now?" said the new boy with a smile.

"Not 'zactly," answered Peter, becoming interested in the new boy.

"And you are not playing, are you?" he inquired.

"No," answered Peter.

"Then you're doing nothing," declared the new boy.

"Same as you are," said Peter crossly. He knew that he was lazy, but he didn't enjoy being told about it one single bit.

The new boy jumped down from the post in a hurry. "You're right," he said, with a laugh. "Suppose you let me drive your cows while you run home and do the rest of your work. And suppose you and I go into partnership and take my grandma's rule for our motto. And then every morning, after we get our chores done, suppose we go fishin'!"

Peter looked at him in surprise, and then he said: "Shake on it."

And, O dear me, weren't those fish sorry there was ever such a partnership formed!—Youth's Companion.

HON. JOHN C. KYLE.

(Remarks of Rev. W. W. Mitchell, of Oxford, Miss., made at the funeral of Hon. John C. Kyle, which was conducted from his late residence in Sardis, Miss., July 7, 1913.)

In coming to-day to bury the remains of our friend and fellow townsman, Hon. John C. Kyle, I feel that we have reason for genuine grief and profound sorrow. When he departed this life on yesterday afternoon, not only did the community lose one of its most eminent and useful citizens, but the State one of her most distinguished and honored sons. It is not my purpose, however, at this sad hour, to pronounce a eulogy or deliver a funeral oration, but merely for the comfort and solace of the bereaved relatives and friends to give expression to a few of the many thoughts that throb in my mind for utterance at this moment.

Mr. Kyle possessed many admirable traits of character. Indeed, summing up these traits in the briefest possible compass, we would say he was truly a man of unswerving integrity.

"He was a stanch member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and a citizen of high ideals and exemplary conduct. He was an able lawyer, and served two terms in the lower House of Congress, where he displayed conspicuous ability as a legislator;" and, had he been willing to yield his own mature convictions to the hasty demands of a fickle public sentiment, he could in all probability have continued to serve his State in that honorable and responsible position until he chose to surrender it.

Of no man I ever knew, would I be willing to say with less hesitation, he was intrinsically honest; it was the dominant trait of his character, and won for him in his business and political career the soubriquet of "Honest John Kyle." He loved right for right's sake, made it the governing principle of his life, and could look with no degree of allowance upon the slightest indication of dissembling. I am sure that no fair-minded man, living or dead, would be willing to stand forth to-day and say that he ever proved unfaithful to a trust reposed in him, professional, political, or financial. If ever by a single step or continued course the slightest thought of inconsistency was suggested, those who knew him never doubted the conscientiousness of his motives and the sincerity of his purpose. Surely Pope was right when he wrote, "An honest man is the noblest work of God."

He was a man of a deep religious nature. He believed in God, revered his name, and trusted implicitly in Jesus Christ as the meritorious medium of his salvation. He was singularly orthodox. In several years of intimate association, enjoying his confidence to a degree perhaps granted to few men, I never heard him express a skeptical opinion, or question the truth of a single Scriptural doctrine. He accepted the Bible with the confident faith of a little child and endeavored to fashion his life by its teachings and regulate his conduct by its principles.

His success in his chosen profession, in business, and in politics marked him as a man of varied talent and unusual mental ability, and this, supported by his sturdy moral principles and strong religious nature, admirably fitted him for life's loftiest positions and gravest responsibilities, giving him a confidence in his own powers that usually served him wisely and well in solving the most serious and difficult problems. He acknowledged no superior, bowed to the mandate of no person, party, or practice, but to his own conscience and judgment he was always content to go as the court of final appeal. Side by side in this sturdy, confident nature, and beautifully blended with it, was a tenderness as marked as was its strength. I have seen him under the gospel's pathetic presentation moved to the deepest emotion and weep—not as timid women and weaker men weep—but as only a strong man could weep. This beautiful and becoming trait was most conspicuous perhaps in his home life—in his marital and domestic relations. I never saw a more devoted husband, thoughtful and considerable brother, or fond father. I stood but a few years ago, where I stand to-day, assisting the now sainted Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan in the service that committed to the grave the body of his only son. Under that heavy stroke, I saw the strong man stagger like the giant oak in the embrace of the storm. Though poignant and permanent was his grief, no word of complaint ever escaped his lips; no spirit of resentment was ever detected, and while he never recovered, perhaps, from the effects of this severe blow, he was never heard to question the justice or wisdom of Providence, or doubt the goodness, mercy and love of God.

But has death no compensation? In the presence of your great loss—in this hour of your blinding sorrow, are there not sources of comfort? Yes, my dear friends, there are resources of strength—reasons why we should be reconciled. First, because for many months your loved one had been a great sufferer, from which relief could be found only in death. Secondly, because of the confident faith in which he had lived and the cheering hope with which he died. With the great apostle, "He knew whom he had believed and was persuaded that he was able to keep that which he had committed unto him against that day." Hence the future had no terrors for him. He met the last enemy bravely and triumphed grandly, leaving confident assurance that "all is well."

Thirdly, because of the glorious hope of immortality. That solemn question of Job that has rung down the centuries, "If a man die, shall he live again?" has been answered in Jesus Christ: "He brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel." He went down into the grave but came forth again and is alive forevermore; and to us is left the cheering promise and ever inspiring hope, "Because I live, ye shall live also." "This same shall comfort us." So to the weeping relatives and friends let me say, tenderly, though you bid farewell to your loved one to-day, it need not be forever—ere long you will meet him again.

Editorial.

THE GOOD EXAMPLE OF BRITISH ROYALTY.

In this day when the Christian Sabbath is in a thousand ways being so encroached upon, the following incident, which was recently narrated in the Living Church and reproduced in the New York Christian Advocate, is quite refreshing:

"The Dean of Canterbury, in a recent dinner speech mentioned that he had heard that the King made it a rule never to travel on Sundays unless it was absolutely necessary. The editor of the Church Family Newspaper wrote Lord Stamfordham asking for a confirmation of the report, and received the following reply:

'Buckingham Palace, June 9th, 1913.

'Dear Sir: The answer to the question contained in your letter of the 7th instant is in the affirmative. Yours very faithfully,

-STAMFORDHAM.'"

Not the least of Christianity's triumphs is that which has been won in bringing about a different state of things in the palaces of kings. What a difference there is in the rulers of the nations of this day and those prior to the nineteenth century! If one is disposed to be afflicted with pessimism as to the world's moral progress, a little inquiry into this phase of history would likely prove helpful to him.

We sincerely hope that this good example of King George (and Queen Mary, who is also said to be included) may exert a wholesome influence throughout the English-speaking world. Reformation as to the use of the Sabbath is certainly needed on this side of the Atlantic. The three things that are perhaps at present doing most toward breaking up the sanctity of the Lord's day are the Sunday excursion, the automobile, and the Sunday newspaper. It is now not unusual for Christian men to assist in the circulation of the Sunday daily by contributing articles to them, and such papers are in many places distributed almost on the steps of our houses of worship. The gospel seed sown by the preacher have a poor chance to take root and bring forth fruit in a mind that is freshly saturated with the sensationalism and filth of the average morning journal. It is high time that we were having a quickening of the consciences of our church people as to these things.

MR. BRYAN'S IDEAL PULPIT MESSAGE.

Of all the eminent public men now living, William J. Bryan appears to us to be the most like Gladstone in his unswerving loyalty to Christianity and in his deep interest in its successful promotion. Never have we read of any utterance that he made or any action that he performed that was incompatible with the orthodox teaching of the Scriptures. So far as we know, he has everywhere and at all times borne himself in a manner worthy of a true disciple of the great Galilean. And certainly no layman of this generation has said so many striking and impressive things concerning religious matters as has this distinguished son of Nebraska. His eloquent references to the Bible as the word of God, to the resurrection and human immortality, and to Christian missions will live long after he has passed from this earthly stage of action.

The latest notable utterance of this character that we have seen from Mr. Bryan is his description of what he conceives to be the ideal type of preaching, which we quote, since we think it is well worth meditating upon:

"I desire my minister to preach every Sunday the simple gospel. The 'old, old story' never wearies the average congregation, if it comes from a devout mind with preparation in the message. My ideal sermon is one which has an appeal to the unconverted, and a spiritual uplift for the Christian. I want my minister to be abreast of the times on all new theological questions and research, but I do not want him to bring them into the pulpit. I have formed certain fixed views of Christ, his gospel, and the inspiration of the Bible from a careful reading of that Book of books, and it will not make me a better Christian or profit my spiritual life to unsettle these views by a discussion in the pulpit of new theories of Christ and the Holy Scriptures. Finally, I want my minister to act upon the belief that Christ's gospel is the surest cure for all social and political evils, and that his best method of promoting temperance, social morality and good citizenship is to bring men into the Church."

PAY THE PASTOR IN FULL.

The presiding elders in our patronizing territory are starting their fourth rounds, and the last quarterly conferences of the year are being held. It is to be hoped that the stewards in every charge will do their utmost to see that their pastor is paid his full assessment. They should be satisfied with nothing less than this. The preacher has perhaps been depending upon what was promised him to meet obligations that he was forced to incur, and to disappoint him in the end is to leave him without means and probably embarassed by debt.

The Bureau of Labor of the United States Government, after a careful investigation, issued a statement a few days since in which was affirmed that the cost of living in this country has increased sixty per cent since 1900, and fifteen per cent since 1911. Scarcely any class of persons feel this more than preachers, since most of them have pretty nearly everything to buy. This is an additional reason why no deficits should be allowed on their too meager salaries.

It is by no means creditable for a church membership of several hundred to allow a shortage of $100 or $200 on their minister's assessment to stand unprovided for, when they could easily wipe it out if each would only give a trifle more. They would not miss the additional amount contributed, and it would help the pastor immensely. Let every official who reads this resolve that his preacher shall be paid every dollar that is due him before he starts to the Annual Conference. And the sooner this is done the better

See what Bishop Candler has to say about the importance of circulating the church paper on Page 2. We have no wiser leader in Southern Methodism than our great Georgia Chief Pastor. The time when you may offer your people the Advocate six months for 50 cents is rapidly passing. This proposition will not be in force after Nov. 10.

Notice on Page 5 the list of contributors to the fund being raised for the maintenance of the Sunday school work of the North Mississippi Conference. Do you want our brilliant Field Secretary to discontinue her service after next December? If not, send in your contribution to this cause at once, or have your Sunday school to do so. This is a most important matter.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

In a business letter to this office, dated McComb, Miss., Sept. 12, Rev. O. S. Lewis writes: "We are having a great meeting in East McComb. The house was crowded last night."

After a pleasant stay at Monteagle, Tenn., Rev. J. M. Wyatt is again at his "loved employ" on the Ackerman (Miss.) charge. As a tactful and helpful pastor, he ranks with the best to be found anywhere.

Rev. C. C. Miller, pastor of our First Church at Monroe, La., received 25 members on Sunday, Sept. 7. Eighteen of these were Sunday school pupils who joined on profession of faith, and 7 were received by certificate.

Rev. Thos. L. Porter, of Hickory Flat, Miss., has recently closed a profitable meeting, in which he had the valuable assistance of Rev. W. A. Bowlin. Among his many other pressing duties, Brother Porter does not forget to take care of the interests of the Conference organ.

Rev. H. R. Singleton, pastor of the Parker Memorial Church of this city, is giving on Friday nights a series of stereopticon lectures on his travels abroad. The offerings taken on these occasions will go toward paying for the beautiful pipe organ recently purchased by this congregation.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, Agent of the Memphis Methodist Hospital, has lately been presenting the claims of that worthy project to the people of the Mississippi Gulf Coast. On Sunday, Sept. 7, he occupied the pulpit of Rev. W. L. Linfield at Biloxi, and delivered an able and impressive sermon.

Bishop W. A. Candler, who has charge of the Louisiana Conference, is expected to come to New Orleans on Thursday, October 16, and remain over the succeeding Sabbath. He will probably occupy the pulpit of the First Methodist Church at 11 o'clock a. m. on the Sunday that he is here. Bishop Candler is a favorite in these parts, and will be given a hearty reception in the Crescent City.

In forwarding some subscribers a few days since, our long-time friend, Rev. J. A. Poe, adds: "We have some good meetings in the Guntown charge this year, and have had up to date about 70 accessions, most of them on profession of faith. The work moves on very well. The work of repairing our building has gone on rather slowly, but we are gradually bringing things to pass. Our Sunday schools were never so good."

A letter from Rev. C. C. Bush to the Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate, written on Aug. 22, state that our missionaries to Africa had arrived safe in London. Brother and Mrs. J. A. Stockwell, of Lake Charles, La., were in the party. These workers will spend September and October in language study in Belgium. Until Nov. 1, they may be communicated with through White, Ridsdale & Co., Houndsditch, London, England.

On a postal card bearing date of Sept. 13, Rev. J. O. Ware writes as follows: "We are having a good meeting at McNair, Miss., on the Hamburg charge. Brother Yeager is conducting the singing and I am striving to do the preaching. I find that Brother Yeager has strong faith in God and is an excellent man to work with. We also have with us that worthy and venerable soldier of the cross, Rev. Ira B. Robertson, who is rendering us valuable assistance."

Among those who made addresses at the recent opening of Mansfield Female College were Rev. Paul M. Brown, Rev. K. W. Dodson, and Prof. P. C. Fair, Principal of the Mansfield High School. This worthy institution has made a fine start, and its outlook is very bright. Let the pastors in the State at once send the names of young ladies who are contemplating going off to school to President Bobbitt. Though the attendance is good, there is yet room for more pupils.

Rev. E. L. Whiddon writes: "I am just winding up a second meeting at Tiger, Miss. Mr. J. M. Griffin, who operates a saw mill there, has guaranteed a parsonage, a place to preach in, and $200 toward the payment of a minister next year. I am now preaching at this place once a month. This is missionary territory and needs a good man to develop it. I expect to organize for the presiding elder a circuit in this section between now and the meeting of the Annual Conference."

From the Kosciusko (Miss.) Courier of Sept. 11, we take the following items: "Rev. David Wasson will preach at Bethel Church next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, and his sister, Miss Julia (lately returned from China) will lecture in the afternoon. . . . Rev. V. C. Curtis, assisted by Mr. C. F. Evans, conducted a meeting at West Union Schoolhouse, about four miles south of Kosciusko, last week and organized a church there with 20 members. The church was named Liberty, and its friends are very enthusiastic over the start made."

The Bluff Creek Camp Meeting, on the Clinton (La.) charge, which began on August 15 and continued ten days, is reported to have had the most satisfactory series of services held there in many years. The attendance was large and the interest grew until the last. This camp meeting is under the direction of Rev. J. B. Williams, pastor of the Clinton work. Rev. J. G. Snelling, Rev. W. H. Coleman, Rev. W. W. Drake, and other ministers whose names we have not learned were also present and contributed to the success of the occasion.

Rev. W. H. Lewis will begin a revival campaign in Brookhaven, Miss., next Sunday. He will have with him Evangelist J. B. Andrews, of Siloam Springs, Ark., and the music will be under the direction of Rev. and Mrs. L. C. Smith. The services will be held in the Mary Lampton Auditorium of Whitworth College. Brother Andrews is one of the foremost revivalists of the South, and we are pleased to note that the brethren are opening the way for him to work in our section. They are making no mistake in doing this.

Rev. Thos. J. Norsworthy writes as follows from Lawrence, Miss.: "We are closing to-day a most gracious meeting at Lawrence. The results are most gratifying. The Church has been wonderfully stirred and more than 60 persons have professed conversion. Fourteen have been received into our Church on profession of faith and one by certificate. Quite a large number of infants have been baptized during the meeting. Brother Graves, the pastor, is highly appreciated by this good people and is doing an excellent work here. From here I go to Conchatta." As he usually does where he conducts a revival, Brother Norsworthy secured and sent in a nice list of subscribers to the Advocate, with a check to correspond. For this we extend him our hearty thanks.

Rev. P. H. Howse, in a business note to the office, states that things are moving on nicely in the Seminary Charge (Mississippi Conference). He has had some very profitable meetings, and thinks the general outlook is encouraging.

An Educational Anniversary will be held during the session of the North Mississippi Annual Conference on Friday evening, Nov. 28. Bishop James Atkins has kindly consented to speak on that occasion, and Dr. A. F. Watkins and Bishop W. B. Murrah, if he returns in time, will also likely have something to say.

Just as we are closing our forms the following dispatch comes from President J. R. Countiss: "Tell the North Mississippi Conference that Grenada College is full, and that we must have more room." This is, indeed, good news. By every token, the time has come for a great forward movement in the interest of Grenada College.

We acknowledge ourselves indebted to Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson, of Scooba, Miss., for some good work recently done for the Advocate. Brother Ferguson, in his business letter, says: "We are having a good year. The Lord is wonderfully blessing us." We are pleased to be informed of the prosperity prevailing within the bounds of this worthy pastor's work.

The Nashville Christian Advocate states that owing to the ill health of his wife, Rev. J. L. Gerdine, of Korea, is on his way to the United States, and that he and Mrs. Gerdine are expected to reach New York this month. Mrs. Gerdine was Miss Eleanor Dye, a daughter of Rev. T. W. Dye, of Senatobia, Miss. We greatly regret to learn of the illness of this most gifted and consecrated woman.

Rev. R. T. Pickett reports four good meetings on the Carthage (Miss.) circuit, two of which were gracious revivals. He was assisted by Rev. Rolfe Hunt, of Philadelphia, Miss., and Rev. J. T. Abney, of Morton. There were 14 accessions to the Church, most of which were at Singleton. Considerable material improvements are being made on the charge, and work upon the erection of a new church will soon begin.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of Mendenhall, Miss., sends us the following good news: "I have just closed a fine meeting for Rev. J. T. Abney, at Morton, Miss., which resulted in 22 accessions to the Methodist Church and two to the Baptist Church, making a total of 24. Our pastor at Morton is much loved by his people, and will soon begin the erection of a new church at that place, which has long been needed."

We are indebted to Rev. Chas. T. Stepp, of McComb City, Miss., for the following item of interest: "Rev. T. B. Clifford, pastor of Centenary Church of this city, has been granted a two weeks' leave of absence, and I will fill his Sunday morning appointments while he is away. Centenary is growing. Our pipe organ is now at the depot ready to be installed as soon as the expert workmen arrive. This organ was presented to the church by Sister Kimball in memory of her departed husband, Brother A. N. Kimball."

Rev. W. W. Woollard, the pastor of our First Church at Columbus, Miss., who has been seriously ill with a protracted spell of fever, was able to sit up last Sunday, though his temperature was still slightly above normal. Brother Woollard states that the people showered their kindnesses upon him during his attack of illness in a manner for which he will never cease to be grateful. Especially did Dr. J. W. Lipscomb by his unwearying attention and skillful treatment merit the title of the "beloved physician" in this anxious household.

President C. M. Chapman kindly sends us the following note concerning the opening of Port Gibson Female College: "The College opened on the 10th inst. with all the rooms taken and every one in fine spirits. The speakers of the day were all highly pleased with the beginning. Those making addresses were Dr. M. E. Melvin, Dr. T. B. Holloman, Dr. Cresin, Hon. H. H. Crisler, and Major Martin. The musical program rendered was greatly enjoyed. The opening sermon was preached in the Methodist Church by Dr. Holloman."

Rev. S. L. Riggs, of Oakdale, La., is achieving things worth while in his present field. In a letter bringing us a number of subscribers, he says: "My work is growing on all lines. I have received 69 members into the Church this year. I hope to break ground for two new churches in a short while. One will be built at Elizabeth by the Industrial Lumber Company, and the people will furnish it. The other will be constructed at Oakdale, the money for this purpose being raised by popular subscription. These two houses of worship will cost about $3,500."

President Woodrow Wilson has appointed Dr. James Cannon, Jr., of the Virginia Conference, as a delegate from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to the Fourteenth International Congress on Alcoholism, which will be held at Milan, Italy, Sept. 22-29. Dr. and Mrs. Cannon sailed from New York on the steamer Olympic on Sept. 13, and will remain in Europe only a few days after the Conference is over, returning by the middle of October. Twelve delegates were appointed by the President to represent the United States, and Congress appropriated $4500 for their expenses.

The following was the announced program for the opening of Millsaps College, which took place Wednesday of this week: Hymn, "America;" Prayer, Rev. P. D. Hardin. Scripture lesson, Rev. T. B. Holloman, D. D.; Hymn, "Coronation." Introductory remarks, President Watkins. Addresses—representing the trustees, Hon. W. H. Watkins; representing the law school, Judge R. F. Reed; representing the city, Hon. S. J. Taylor. Hymn, "Stand Up, Stand Up, for Jesus." Brief remarks by city pastors and other distinguished visitors. Announcements; Doxology; Benediction.

Rev. W. W. Perry, our stirring pastor on the Haynesville (La.) charge, reports a fine protracted meeting at Dykesville, about eight miles from Haynesville. Referring to the results, Brother Perry says: "There were 7 additions to the Church, 12 new subscribers to the Advocate were secured, and new life is shown in all departments of the work." This brings Brother Perry's list of subscribers for the year up to 72. And as a consequence, so far as we are capable of judging from a distance, there does not seem to be a liver pastorate in our patronizing territory than the Haynesville Circuit.

In a note to the Editor, Rev. J. A. Bowen of Birmingham, Ala., says: "The meeting which I held not long since at Buntyn, Tenn., was quite a success in every way. I am now engaged in a series of revival services in Viola, Tenn., the home of our beloved brother, Rev. Joe M. Ramsey. He has not been well of late, but is now improving physically. My own health is very good. This is my fifteenth good meeting in five States this year, and there are more to follow." We are pleased to know that the Lord is blessing the labors of Brother Bowen so abundantly. He is one of the most efficient evangelists in Southern Methodism.

In a letter written a few days ago, Dr. T. C. Wier, of Starkville, Miss., among other things, says: "I heartily endorse your position and that of the Bishops and the minority of the Trustees in the Vanderbilt controversy." We know of no one whose approval we had rather have than that of this esteemed veteran of the North Mississippi Conference. Dr. Wier was on the stage of action when Vanderbilt University was launched, and is well informed as to the attending circumstances. We have yet to see the first man, clerical or lay, who witnessed the cradling of the University who has any sympathy with the contentions of Chancellor Kirkland and his partisans.

We make grateful acknowledgement to the following brethren for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days, of which no mention has been made elsewhere: Rev. Jasper L. Smith, Gallman, Miss., 7; Rev. F. N. Sweeney, Wilson, La., 5; Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, Yazoo City, Miss., (from sundry places), 14; W. T. Bazzel, Iuka, Miss., 8; Rev. W. L. Blackwell, Hermanville, Miss., 3; Rev. A. L. Davenport, Walnut, Miss., 10; Rev. W. B. Waldrop (Millsaps Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss.), 9; Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., Carriere, Miss., 9; Rev. C. F. Emery, Vicksburg, Miss., 10; Rev. J. L. Neill, Laurel, Miss., 5; Rev. Chas. E. Downer, Foxworth, Miss., 15, Rev. T. V. Peters, Waldheim, La., 3.

We clip the following from the Winnsboro (La.) Rising Star of Sept. 12: "Our fellow townsman, A. D. O. Moore, was elected Sunday school superintendent of the Winnsboro M. E. Church, South, on April 13, 1884, and after a continuous service in that capacity for 29 years and four months, in consequence of age and failing health, resigned on Sept. 6, 1913. As a token of appreciation of his long and faithful service and as a commendation of his Christian character, the Sunday school last Christmas made up a nice purse and presented him with a beautiful rocking-chair." This, indeed, is a fine record—one which deserves high praise and which, we dare say, the Master will not overlook when he comes to reward those who spend their strength for him.

We greatly regret to learn that Bishop James Atkins has lately been ill at his home in Waynesville, N. C., having been confined to his bed for more than a week. In a note to the Editor, the Bishop states that the recent campaign to raise $65,000 for Stamford College in Texas (in which he took an active part) was brought to a successful termination. The Bishop was hoping, when he wrote, to be able to start again to the Lone Star State on Monday of this week to lend a helping hand in launching a similar movement to raise $100,000 for the Polytechnic College at Fort Worth. Truly, the Methodists of Texas are given to doing things! And Dr. Rankin, the editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, states that Bishop Atkins' wise and tactful leadership has contributed largely to the recent great achievements of our Church in that commonwealth.

A note from Rev. B. F. Lewis, of Crystal Springs, Miss., bearing date of Sept. 12, reads as follows: "We are just closing the greatest meeting that Crystal Springs has had in several years. It has been conducted by Rev. J. B. Andrews, of Siloam Springs, Ark., and the singing has been led by Rev. L. C. Smith, of Chicago. We built a tabernacle with a seating capacity of 1,000, and except on rainy nights, it has held the audience only two or three times. From 1,200 to 1,400 has been our usual attendance. People came eight or ten miles to the services. Up to date, about 200 persons have made a profession of faith in Christ. The meeting has been in progress three weeks and was preceded by a ten days' meeting at the Hennington Camp Ground, in which about 150 professed salvation. We are looking for still greater things within the next two days."

OPENING AT MONTROSE.

By Rev. H. Walter Featberstun, D.D.

On Wednesday, Sept. 3, with a splendid sermon by Rev. C. W. Crisler of Main Street, Hattiesburg, and a great dinner under the oaks, the work for the current term of Montrose College began most auspiciously. Six days thereafter the enrollment had reached 234. Fifty-two of these are boarding pupils—14 of them are preparing for the Methodist itinerancy. There are others still to come. It is quite probable that the enrollment will reach or approximate 300 for the term.

That the day of the small college has not passed is thus strongly indicated—certainly so in this section. That 234 young people, many of whom would otherwise attend some public school, are to be under the tutelage and religious influence of such splendid Methodists as President O'Neil and his assistants at Montrose is a matter of tremendous importance. That some of these young men, looking to the itinerancy, could not get to college at all were it not for Montrose is personally and well-known to this writer. We must have Montrose.

Brother O'Neil is demonstrating his eminent fitness for his place at its head. Times are not favorable to full colleges; but O'Neil is succeeding against odds. What will he do when the times become favorable? Let the Methodists, of this eastern part of our Conference especially, rally to this fine, strong man at the head of Montrose College!

I have never known a finer body of young men than this group of young preachers. We want the fourteen to become quickly half a hundred—others are coming in.

CHURCH TO BE OPENED.

Dear Dr. Meek: It is with great pleasure that we are able to announce to the readers of your paper that the new First Methodist Church of Shreveport is now being furnished, and that the opening services will be held on Sept. 28th. Bishop Henry Clay Morrison, of Leesburg, Fla., will be the preacher of the occasion. We also take great pleasure in extending to the former pastors of this historic Church, and any of the brethren who care to come, an invitation to be present and worship with our people on this happy occasion. With due allowance for the sense of gratification that the pastor and congregation usually feel in regard to their own achievement, we yet believe that you and the Methodists of Louisiana will concur in the statement that this is one of the greatest church plants in Southern Methodism, and in many respects, perhaps, the most modernly equipped.

Yours sincerely,
G. E. CAMERON.

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1913. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

Mrs. KATHERINE E. JONES, daughter of Rev. C. and Mrs. E. A. McDonald, was born near Morton, Miss., on April 14, 1872, and died July 25, 1913, in Memphis, Tenn. When Katie was only a few weeks old, her mother died. In early girlhood she gave her heart to God, and joined the Methodist Church. She was a faithful member, and was a worker wherever she went. She was married to R. S. Jones in Forest, Miss., and moved to Jackson, where she resided till May, 1912; then she moved to Memphis, Tenn. Four children blessed this union, two of whom preceded her to the better world. Two boys and her husband, with a host of loved ones and friends are left to mourn their loss. But we mourn not as those who have no hope. We know she will be waiting on "the other shore" to greet us when we come. She was buried at Elmwood Cemetery, in Memphis, Tenn., on July 26, 1913, the funeral service being conducted by her pastor. May God bless the bereaved ones, and may they be so consecrated to his service that they will meet their departed loved one on the banks of that river where no parting words are spoken.

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

J. W. HATHAWAY. It is a great loss for a good man to be taken from the Church and community; and such was our experience in the death of Brother Hathaway. He was born Oct. 6, 1848, and died July 25, 1913. Thus it was given to him to live longer than the average man, and nearly the whole of his life was given to the service of God. He joined the Methodist Church early in life and was ever faithful to its interests. How he loved the Church and how jealous he was of her good name and standing in the community! He loved his pastor whoever he might be, and no one ever had a more loyal friend than the writer had in Brother Hathaway. He was one of those bright, sunny souls in whose presence one finds special delight, for you could not be sad when he was near, and because of the rugged strength of his noble character, you were loath to go away. He made you feel that there was something worth living for. His influence was always on the side of the right, and he was uncompromising in his opposition to the wrong. We miss him in the home, in the Church, in business circles, and in the whole life of the community. May the God of all grace comfort and bless the lonely wife and daughter whom he leaves to mourn his death.

F. M. FREEMAN, Pastor.

MRS. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

God in his infinite wisdom has called Sister Hunnicutt from her earthly home to that home eternal, not made with hands, thus leaving a vacant chair in our midst. It is with special sadness that we bow in humble submission to His divine will. She was a faithful friend, fervent in her love and devotion to her Church and its teachings, and heroic in her suffering. While we mingle our tears with those of her loved ones and deplore her absence from our midst, we know all is well with her. Be it resolved:

1. We saw in her a human body, even in its infirmity, perfected and made useful and beautiful by Christlike virtues; wisdom tempered with gentleness, love and mercy, and one who, by her presence among us, quietly shed an untold influence for good. May her gentle spirit hover over our gatherings, and the memory of her wonderful strength and courage always be with us, and aid us in our mission work.

2. That we, the Woman's Missionary Society of the Capitol Street Methodist Church, have sustained a great loss in the passing of the soul of our dear sister from this world into the world beyond the skies, where there is no sorrow, but all is peace and happiness. May her mantle not only fall on one but on us all, as we are all desirous of imitating the life of this noble Christian woman who walked so humbly with her God. A character so sweet, so pure, and so true, when we think of her, we think of her as gone to receive a crown of glory. Religion is the life of God in the soul of man, which was truly exemplified in the life of our dear sister.

3. That we extend to the beloved family our sincere and heart-felt sympathy in their sad bereavement, and point them to the Heavenly Father who doeth all things well.

Signed: Miss Mary Lee Farish, Mrs. Joe Ford, and Mrs. M. M. Edwards.

ANOTHER INSTANCE.

Dear Editor: I have just read with much interest Mrs. L. M. Lipscomb's account of the great meeting at New Albany, in which she speaks of a very unusual service at the Baptist Church, where a union service was held, after which two Methodist members were immersed by the Methodist pastor, and states, "I don't suppose it ever happened before in Mississippi."

In 1908, while pastor at Utica, Miss., after a meeting held for me by Rev. W. G. Hardin and Rev. C. N. Guice, 45 members were received by the Methodist pastor, and 18 by the Baptist pastor. At the closing service, held in the Baptist Church, by the Methodist pastor, this pastor tried his hand at administering baptism by immersion. In justice to the good people of Utica, where this beautiful spirit of brotherliness prevails, I write of this.

Fraternally,
C. M. CROSSLEY.

Tidings From the Field

McCool, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have just finished my summer's work, and will send a short report of the same. I have had some gracious revivals on my charge. The Lord has poured out his Spirit upon us. I have received 43 into the Church on profession of faith and baptized 20 children and infants.

I am indebted to the following brethren for assistance: Revs. T. L. Oakes, J. D. Simpson, J. A. Goad, and W. M. Langley. Each of these brethren rendered us faithful service.—C. Wesley Baley, P. C.

Fannin, Miss.

With the assistance of Brother J. W. Ramsey we have just closed one of the best revivals at Goshen Springs, on this work, that was ever held there. The work in this charge is in fine shape. We are building one church and have the painter on hand to paint another, and the money to pay him; also have some money to go toward the painting of a third church. We have two fine Teacher-training classes and three organized Wesley Bible Classes, in spite of the fact that we are away out in the country. May God bless you. Pray for us.—Hugh K. McKee.

Booneville Charge (North Miss.)

I have just closed out two good meetings, in which I was assisted by Brothers H. M. Young and J. B. Randolph. Any brother needing help would make no mistake in getting either of these brethren. Brother Young was with me at Blythe Chapel; he preached the unadulterated truth. As a result, a young men's prayer meeting was organized, and one joined the Church. Nearly all in that community belong to some Church......Brother Randolph was with me at Blackland. We had a number of conversions and 17 additions to our Church. Brother Randolph preached ably on practical Christianity. We also organized at this place a young men's prayer meeting. Pray for us.—B. P. Fullilove.

Topisaw Charge (Miss. Conf.)

I have been so busy since our third quarterly meeting I have not had time to send a report of it to your columns. It convened at the Sartinsville Church on Aug. 16, and those who are in a position to know said it was better attended than any that had been held at that church in the past sixteen years, and that more interest generally was shown in it. The spiritual state of the church, as seen by pastor and officials, was encouraging, especially at Topisaw and Sartinsville. Good meetings had been held at these places. But the conditions at Holmesville, however, were not so good. We are confidently expecting a change for the better there during the meeting that will likely be closed before this appears in your columns.

Brother Selby gave us three good sermons during the two days of the meeting. Especially was his sermon on the "Nature and Mission of the Church" good, and on Sunday afternoon he commented on "John Wesley's Definition of a Methodist." To take this quarterly meeting as a whole, it was one of the best in every respect that I have ever attended, due mainly to the following things: (1) The influence of that godly man, Rev. J. W. Thompson; (2) the prayers of the prayer circle over the charge; (3) the unique and interesting way in which Brother Selby conducts a quarterly meeting; and (4) the good revivals that had been held at the Sartinsville Church, the Sartinsville Tabernacle, and the Topisaw Camp Ground. The preachers holding these meetings ranked with the best in our Conference. The pastor's and presiding elder's salaries are coming along all right, but most of the benevolent claims are yet to be raised. We are now going at this part of the work, however, in the name of Him who said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Readers, pray for me.—J. A. Wells.

Hermanville, Miss.

My first meeting for the season began on August 31, with Rev. J. W. Campbell, of Raymond, Miss., to do the preaching, and I am glad to say it was done acceptably to all who heard him He gave forth no uncertain sound, but was clear in his presentation of the gospel. Results? There were 9 additions on profession of faith, about a dozen conversions, four infants were baptized, the church was graciously blessed, and all seemed to be benefited......My next meeting begins on Sept. 14, with Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Vicksburg, Miss., to do the preaching. On the 24th of September, and continuing for a week or ten days, our meeting here at Hermanville, Miss., will begin with Rev. D. E. Kelley, Conference Evangelist, to conduct it. We are praying for the presence of the Holy Spirit to convict and save men from sin. Any one desiring to come and attend these services is most cordially invited. Come praying and prepared to work. Any of the brethren of the ministry who want to attend will be cordially received and cheerfully entertained. If you cannot come, pray for us......Our third quarterly conference will embrace the 23rd of September, and all the officials of the churches of the Hermanville charge are urged to be on hand. Come, brethren, and discharge the Christian duties with which you have been entrusted.—W. L. Blackwell, Pastor.

Pelahatchie, Miss.

I have just closed a very fine meeting at the Lodabar Church on the Shiloh Circuit. The congregations were large from the beginning and the interest was fine. All denominations took part. It is said that it was the best meeting held at that place in a number of years. We have held a meeting at every church on the charge: Shiloh, John's, Clear Creek, Lodabar, and Cross Roads. They were all good meetings. I was assisted at Shiloh, John's, and Clear Creek by my son, Rev. H. H. Griffin of the Arkansas Conference. In the others I had no ministerial help except that of Brother Amos Kendal, a local preacher. He was present and rendered assistance.

We have yet to hold the Shiloh Camp Meeting, which will begin on Friday before the first Sunday in October. We are to have our conference evangelist, Brother D. E. Kelley with us. We are expecting a great meeting—not entirely because of those that are to work in the meeting, but because of the promises of God. It is said that there is already more interest being taken in the camp meeting than for a long time. More tents are wanted this year than can be furnished. There will, however, be room. The new building is done. We have made arrangements for good leaders in the singing, which will have special attention.—C. C. Griffin, P. C.

POTATOES AND PIANOS.

You wouldn't think that there is anything in common between potatoes and pianos, would you? But there is.

For example, the Mayor of Indianapolis, Ind., found that the produce dealers were forcing the people of his city to pay about three times as much for potatoes as they cost on the farm. They were simply fleecing the public. As the poor people of his city almost live on potatoes he decided to stop it. He went to the farmers and bought potatoes in carload lots, shipped them to the city and sold them from wagons on the streets. He saved the citizens thousands of dollars and yet the farmers got just as much for their potatoes as before. The Mayor became very popular with the people, but not with the produce dealers.

It is the same way with pianos, for the New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club works on identically the same principle. Instead of going to the farm for carload lots of potatoes we go to the factory for eight carload lots (100) of pianos. If you see the point write for your copy of the Club catalogue, which explains how you can join with ninety-nine other subscribers and benefit by the big wholesale transaction. The Club will save you over one hundred dollars on your piano or self-player piano and give you better quality, stronger guarantees and easier terms. MIGHT BE DEAD TO-DAY.

Garden City, Kas.—In a letter from Mrs. James Hamner, of this city, she says: "I firmly believe that I would not be alive to-day if it were not for Cardui. I had been a sufferer from womanly troubles all my life until I found that great remedy. I feel that I can't praise it too highly." Are you a woman suffering from some of the troubles to which a woman is peculiarly liable? If so, why not try Cardui, the woman's tonic? You can rely on Cardui. It is purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, and acts gently but surely, without bad after-effects. 'Twill help you. Ask your druggist.

VARICOSE VEINS.

"Varicose Veins" is the name that has been given to veins that have become permanently and pathologically dilated. Varicosities are not confined to any particular part of the body, but when referred to as "varicose veins" most commonly occur in the lower limbs. They manifest themselves as irregular protuberances on the surface, soft to the touch, and causing a bluish appearance in the surrounding skin. They become extremely painful, especially to those constantly on their feet. The cause is an obstructed circulation of the blood causing undue pressure on the walls of the veins, which give way and dilate. Unless relieved, obstinate ulcers are liable to form; and in some cases the veins and skin burst and serious hemorrhages occur.

The treatment of varicose veins is quite difficult. A prominent physician has said, "The difficulty of treating ordinary ulcers or varicose veins has always been the source of much irritation to the physician and surgeon, and especially so when the leg is the part involved." Absolute rest is demanded, in order to relieve the blood pressure, and the use of elastic bands or stockings to support the walls of the blood vessels.

In the last few years Absorbine, Jr., which is an analgesic, germicidal, stimulant linament and discutient, has been found very efficient in the treatment of even vicious cases of varicose veins of long standing. It relieves the pain stimulates the circulation, and disperses the morbid matter which has accumulated. Being composed of vegetable extracts and essential oils non-destructive of tissue, it may be applied without danger even if ulcers have formed; and because of its germicidal and healing properties, will prove beneficial.

Absorbine, Jr., is manufactured by W. F. Young, P. D. F., of 466 Temple Street, Springfield, Mass., who will on request send descriptive booklet and, if you enclose 10c in stamps, a liberal trial bottle.

Sold by leading druggists at $1.00 for 4 oz. bottle and $2.00 for 12 oz. bottle; or delivered to you by the manufacturer, all charges paid and safe delivery guaranteed, at these prices.

THE HORSE'S TEN COMMANDMENTS.

Thou shalt give me plenty of pure water to drink.

Thou shalt supply me with plenty of wholesome food.

Thou shalt keep me clean and well-groomed, for though a beast of burden, I am not without pride.

Thou shalt provide me with a straw bed, that I may rest well at night after my arduous labor of the day.

Thou shalt not over-load or over-drive me, for there is a limit to my strength and endurance.

Thou shalt not covet above thy horse, thy automobile, thy motorcycle, or anything else which is around thy place, for thy horse is a jealous animal.

Thou shalt look carefully after my health and welfare, that my days may be many and useful in thy service.

Thou shalt not use me for mere pleasure on Sunday after my strenuous week's work, for verily, thy horse needs rest.

Thou shalt not inflict any punishment upon me that thou wouldst not be willing to bear thyself, for God made me as well as you sensitive to the feeling of punishment.

Thou shalt not mix bitter medicine with my feed when I am run down in health, destroying my already weakened appetite, but O merciful master place Blackman's Medicated Salt Brick, in my feed-box where I may lick it as nature directs and my system requires, that I may be made well and enabled to serve thee with every particle of my strength.
